

Anno 1778.

PHILLIPS ACADEMY

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES LIBRARY

Gift of Lester S. Morse, Jr. in honor of
Thomas T. Lyons

CASES ARGUED AND DECIDED IN THE
SUPREME COURT
OF THE
UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERMS, 1903, 1904, IN
195 196 197 198 U. S.

BOOK 49,

LAWYERS' EDITION,

COMPLETE WITH HEADLINES, HEADNOTES, STATEMENTS OF CASES, POINTS AND AUTHORITIES OF COUNSEL, FOOTNOTES AND PARALLEL REFERENCES,

BY

THE PUBLISHERS' EDITORIAL STAFF.

THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY, ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

1905.

COPYRIGHT 1904 BY
THE LAWYERS CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.

R
348.73
UN35
V. 195-198
20052

JUSTICES
OF THE
SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

DURING THE TIME OF THESE REPORTS.

CHIEF JUSTICE,

HON. MELVILLE WESTON FULLER.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICES,

HON. JOHN MARSHALL HARLAN,

HON. RUFUS W. PECKHAM,

HON. DAVID JOSIAH BREWER,

HON. JOSEPH MCKENNA,

HON. HENRY BILLINGS BROWN,

HON. OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES,

HON. EDWARD DOUGLASS WHITE,

HON. WILLIAM R. DAY.

ATTORNEY GENERALS,

HON. PHILANDER CHASE KNOX.

HON. WILLIAM HENRY MOODY.¹

SOLICITOR GENERAL,

HON. HENRY M. HOYT.

CLERK,

JAMES HALL MCKENNEY, Esq.

REPORTER,

HON. CHARLES HENRY BUTLER.

MARSHAL,

JOHN MONTGOMERY WRIGHT, Esq.

ALLOTMENT, ETC., OF THE JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

March 9, 1903.

TOGETHER WITH THE DATES OF THEIR COMMISSIONS AND COMMENCEMENT OF SERVICE, RESPECTIVELY.

For Order of Court Making Allotment, see 47 L. ed., Appendix IX. p. 1201.

NAMES OF JUSTICES, AND WHENCE APPOINTED.	BY WHOM APPOINTED.	CIRCUITS. 1902-1903.	COMMI- SIONED.	SWORN IN.
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, Massachusetts.	President ROOSEVELT.	FIRST. ME., N. H., MASS., R. I.	1902. (Dec. 4.)	1902. (Dec. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE RUFUS W. PECKHAM, New York.	President CLEVELAND.	SECOND. VERMONT, CONN., NEW YORK.	1895. (Dec. 9.)	1896. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE HENRY B. BROWN, Michigan.	President HARRISON.	THIRD. NEW JERSEY, PA., DEL.	1890. (Dec. 29.)	1891. (Jan. 6.)
CHIEF JUSTICE MELVILLE W. FULLER, Illinois.	President CLEVELAND.	FOURTH. MD., VA., N. C., W. VA., S. C.	1888. (July 20.)	1888. (Oct. 8.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE EDWARD D. WHITE, Louisiana.	President CLEVELAND.	FIFTH. GA., ALA., FLA., MISS., LA., TEX.	1894. (Feb. 19.)	1894. (Mar. 12.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOHN M. HARLAN, Kentucky.	President HAYES.	SIXTH. KY., TENN., OHIO, MICH.	1877. (Nov. 29.)	1877. (Dec. 10.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WILLIAM R. DAY, Ohio.	President ROOSEVELT.	SEVENTH. IND., ILL., WIS.	1903. (Feb. 23.)	1903. (Mar. 2.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE DAVID J. BREWER, Kansas.	President HARRISON.	EIGHTH. MINN., IOWA, MO., KAN., ARK., NEB., COLO., N. D., S. D., UTAH, WYO., NEW MEX.,* OKLA.*	1889. (Dec. 18.)	1890. (Jan. 6.)
ASSOCIATE JUSTICE JOSEPH MCKENNA, California.	President MCKINLEY.	NINTH. CAL., OR., NEV., MONT., WASH., IDAHO, ALASKA,* ARIZONA,* HAWAII.*	1898. (Jan. 21.)	1898. (Jan. 26.)

*Territories assigned to circuits by order of the Supreme Court.

GENERAL TABLE OF CASES REPORTED IN THIS BOOK.

VOLUMES 195, 196, 197, 198.

A.

Abbeville Electric Light & P. Co., Western Electrical Supply Co. v.	765
A. Booth & Co., Davis v. (Mem.)	355
Adams Express Co. v. Iowa (196 U. S. 147)	424
Ætna Ins. Co. v. Lewis (Mem.) (195 U. S. 629)	352
Ah Sin v. Wittman (198 U. S. 500) ..	1142
Aikens v. Wisconsin (195 U. S. 194) ..	154
Aitken, Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v.	610
Alabama & G. Mfg. Co., Riverdale Cot- ton Mills v.	1008
Alleghany Co., Allen v.	551
Allen v. Alleghany Co. (196 U. S. 458) v. Arguimbau (198 U. S. 149) ..	990
Davenport v. (Mem.)	630
Amado v. United States (195 U. S. 172)	145
American Alkali Co. v. Salom (Mem.) (196 U. S. 641)	631
American Automatic Loom Co., Ken- dall v.	1133
American Bonding & T. Co. v. Bowland (Mem.) (197 U. S. 626) ..	912
American Cotton Co., Rembert Roller Compress Co. v. (Mem.) ..	910
American Express Co. v. Iowa (196 U. S. 133)	417
American Fur Ref. Co., Cimiotti Un- hairing Co. v.	1100
American Soda Fountain Co., McPhar- son v. (Mem.)	1175
Sample v. (Mem.)	354
American Sugar Ref. Co. v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 635)	354
American Surety Co. v. Bowland (Mem.) (197 U. S. 636) ..	912
Shelton v. (Mem.)	354
American Trading Co., Northern P. R. Co. v.	269
Anderson v. Morton (Mem.) (195 U. S. 639)	356
Andrews v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 628) ..	351

U. S., Book 49.

Anglo-American Land Mortg. & Agency Co., Lombard v. (Mem.) ..	630
Arguimbau, Allen v.	990
Armour Packing Co. v. Metropolitan Water Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634)	354
Astrich v. German-American Ins. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 583) ..	1173
Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. Southern R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634)	354
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Wilson v. (Mem.)	1173
Atlantic Lumber Co. v. L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 588)	1175
Avery, Humbird v.	286

B.

Baker, Butte City Water Co. v.	409
New Mexico ex rel. Caledonian Coal Co. v.	540
Balk, Harris v.	1023
Baltimore, Baltimore Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v.	242
Corry v.	556
Baltimore & O. Coal Co. v. Colonial Trust Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634)	354
Baltimore Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. v. Baltimore (195 U. S. 375)	242
Bank, Boatmen's, Fritzlen v. (Mem.) ..	1174
Citizens' Nat., v. Donnell (195 U. S. 369)	238
Columbia, Birkett v.	231
Eureka County, v. Clarke (Mem.) (195 U. S. 631) ..	353
First Nat., Brown v. (Mem.) ..	631
First Nat., Buckingham v. (Mem.)	352
First Nat., v. Chicago Title & T. Co. (198 U. S. 280)	1051
First Nat., v. Covington (198 U. S. 100)	963
First Nat., Covington v.	963

CASES REPORTED.

Bank, First Nat., v. Lasater (196 U. S. 115)	408	Boston Water & Light Co. v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 622)	910
First Nat., v. Staaake (Mem.) (197 U. S. 622)	910	Bowland, American Bonding & T. Co. v. (Mem.)	912
First Nat., Zartman v. (Mem.)	910	American Surety Co. v. (Mem.) ..	912
Keene Five Cent Sav., v. Ramsden (Mem.) (196 U. S. 638)	630	Fidelity & C. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	912
Leathers Mfrs.' Nat., v. Treat (Mem.) (198 U. S. 584) ..	1173	Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v.	619
Middletown Nat., v. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. (197 U. S. 394)	803	v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. (196 U. S. 611)	619
National Exch., v. Wiley (195 U. S. 257)	184	Bradford v. Southern R. Co. (195 U. S. 243) ..	178
of Le Roy, MacNabb v. (Mem.) ..	1173	Bradley v. Lightcap (195 U. S. 1) ...	65
People's Nat., Van Reed v.	1161	v. Lightcap (195 U. S. 24)	75
San Francisco Nat., v. Dodge (197 U. S. 70)	669	v. Lightcap (195 U. S. 25)	76
Tiffin Sav., Keppel v.	790	Brennan & Co. S. W. Agricultural Works v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 630)	352
Baquero v. Rauschenplat (Mem.) (196 U. S. 642)	632	British & F. M. Ins. Co., Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. (Mem.)	352
Barber v. Lazarus (Mem.) (198 U. S. 585)	1174	Broadnax, United Engineering & Contracting Co. v. (Mem.) ...	911
Barber Asphalt Paving Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v.	819	Broadwell v. United States (195 U. S. 65)	99
Barnes, District of Columbia v.	699	Brockman, Grand Canal Co. v. (Mem.) ..	356
Barrett, Ex parte (Mem.) (196 U. S. 636)	629	Brooks v. United States (Mem.) (196 U. S. 642)	632
Bartlett v. United States (197 U. S. 230)	735	Brown v. First Nat. Bank (Mem.) (196 U. S. 641)	631
Bartram v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 635)	354	Schweer v.	144
Bay Mfg. Co., Orrell v. (Mem.)	1172	Tennessee Oil, Gas & Mineral Co. v. (Mem.)	910
Beavers v. Haubert (198 U. S. 77)	950	Western Tie & Timber Co. v. ...	571
Belden v. Midway Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 638)	356	Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. v. Klumpp (Mem.) (198 U. S. 587)	1174
Benner, Lane v. (Mem.)	1171	Bryan v. Dupoyster (Mem.) (198 U. S. 585)	1174
Benson v. Henkel (198 U. S. 1)	919	Buckingham v. First Nat. Bank (Mem.) (195 U. S. 630) ..	352
Bessette, Ex parte (Mem.) (196 U. S. 635)	629	Buffalo Tin Can Co. v. E. W. Bliss Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 630) ..	352
v. W. B. Conkey Co. (Mem.) (196 U. S. 638)	630	Bullis v. O'Beirne (195 U. S. 606) ..	340
Beltendorf Patents Co. v. J. R. Little Metal Wheel Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 628)	351	Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Concentrating Co. v. Jones (Mem.) (195 U. S. 629)	352
Binyon v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 623)	349	Burke, Crawford v.	147
Birkett v. Columbia Bank (195 U. S. 345)	231	Burrill v. Crossman (Mem.) (195 U. S. 628)	351
Birrell v. New York & H. R. Co. (198 U. S. 390)	1096	Burton v. United States (196 U. S. 283)	482
Bishop v. United States (197 U. S. 334)	780	Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co., Heinze v. (Mem.)	353
Black Hills & N. W. R. Co., Tacoma Mill Co. v. (Mem.)	351	Butte City Water Co. v. Baker (196 U. S. 119)	409
Blair, Thomas v. (Mem.)	630
Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. Portner (Mem.) (195 U. S. 636)	355
Boatmen's Bank, Fritzlen v. (Mem.) ..	1174
Bong Meng, United States v. (Mem.) ..	629
Bonin v. Gulf Co. (198 U. S. 115)	970

C.

Cadarr, United States v.	842
United States v. (Mem.)	355

CASES REPORTED.

Cahill v. Norris & C. Dredging Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 582) ..	1172	Cliff v. United States (195 U. S. 159)	139
v. Olsen (Mem.) (198 U. S. 582)	1172	Clough, Munsey v.	515
Caledonian Coal Co., New Mexico ex rel., v. Baker (196 U. S. 432)	540	Clyatt v. United States (197 U. S. 207)	726
California, Lee Look v. (Mem.)	349	Coburn, Moulton v. (Mem.)	631
Cannel Coal Co. v. Seattle & L. W. Waterway Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 624)	350	Colombia, Ex parte (195 U. S. 604) ..	338
Carew, Scott v.	403	Colonial Trust Co., Baltimore & O. Coal Co. v. (Mem.)	354
Caro v. Davidson (197 U. S. 197)	723	Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co., Dawson v.	713
Carter v. Gear (197 U. S. 348)	787	Columbia Bank, Birkett v.	231
Castillo v. Corton (Mem.) (198 U. S. 588)	1175	Combe, Stillman v.	822
Cawthon-Coleman Co., Lucius v.	425	Comstock v. S. Eagleton (196 U. S. 99)	402
Central Commercial Co. v. Chicago Title & T. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 622)	910	Consumers' Gas Trust Co. v. Quinby (Mem.) (198 U. S. 585) ..	1174
Central of Ga. R. Co. v. Murphey (196 U. S. 194)	444	Cook v. Marshall County (196 U. S. 261)	471
Central P. R. Co., Remington v.	959	Copper King v. Johnson (Mem.) (195 U. S. 627)	351
Charalambis v. Williams (Mem.) (196 U. S. 643)	632	Cornell S. B. Co., United States v. (Mem.)	1173
Cheshire Provident Inst. v. Ramsden (Mem.) (196 U. S. 638) ..	630	Corry v. Baltimore (196 U. S. 466) ..	556
Chicago, Elkins v. (Mem.)	355	Corton, Castillo v. (Mem.)	1175
Chicago & N. W. R. Co., Andrews v. (Mem.)	351	Coulter v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (196 U. S. 599)	615
Warner v. (Mem.)	355	Courtney v. Pradt (196 U. S. 89) ..	398
Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Newell (Mem.) (198 U. S. 579) ..	1171	Covington, First Nat. Bank v.	963
Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co., Union Stock Yards Co. v.	453	v. First Nat. Bank (198 U. S. 100)	963
Chicago Bd. of Trade v. Christie Grain & Stock Co. (198 U. S. 236)	1031	Cramer v. Wilson (195 U. S. 408)	256
v. Hammond Elevator Co. (198 U. S. 424)	1111	Crawford v. Burke (195 U. S. 176) ..	147
L. A. Kinsey Co. v.	1031	Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. (196 U. S. 337)	501
Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire (196 U. S. 128)	413	Crenshaw, Pabst Brewing Co. v.	925
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., Gunnison v. (Mem.)	911	Crosley, United States v.	497
v. United States (198 U. S. 385)	1094	Crossman, Burrill v. (Mem.)	351
United States v.	306	Crown Cork & Seal Co., Ideal Stopper Co. v. (Mem.)	354
Chicago Title & T. Co., Central Com- mercial Co. v. (Mem.)	910	Cueli v. Rodriguez (Mem.) (198 U. S. 581)	1172
First Nat. Bank v.	1051	Cunnius v. Reading School Dist. (198 U. S. 458)	1125
Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co., Kilpatrick v. (Mem.)	349	Curley v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 628)	351
Chrisman v. Miller (197 U. S. 313) ..	770	Currie, Jaster v.	988
Christian, Dennison v. (Mem.)	630	Curtis, Scherf v. (Mem.)	1175
Christie Grain & Stock Co., Chicago Bd. of Trade v.	1031
Cimiotti Unhairing Co. v. American Fur Ref. Co. (198 U. S. 399)	1100	D.
Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Dnnnell (195 U. S. 369)	238	Dallemagne v. Moisan (197 U. S. 169)	709
Clark v. Nash (198 U. S. 361)	1085	Daly v. Elton (195 U. S. 242)	177
Clarke, Eureka County Bank v. (Mem.)	353	Darden, Thompson v.	1064
		Darnal v. United States (Mem.) (198 U. S. 586)	1174
		Dashiell, Texas & P. R. Co. v.	1150
		Davenport v. Allen (Mem.) (196 U. S. 639)	630
		Davidson, Caro v.	723
		Davis v. A. Booth & Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 636)	355
		Dawson v. Columbia Ave. Sav. Fund, S. D. Title & T. Co. (197 U. S. 178)	713

CASES REPORTED.

Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylv-
vania (198 U. S. 341)	1077
Dennison v. Christian (Mem.) (196
U. S. 637)	630
De Wolfe, Oklahoma ex rel. Oklahoma
Gas & Electric Co. v.
(Mem.)	632
Diamond Drill & Mach. Co., Kelley v.
(Mem.)	1173
Dieckerhoff, United States v. (Mem.)	1173
Dillon v. Mares (Mem.) (196 U. S.
644)	632
Dines, Stratton's Independence v.
(Mem.)	911
Direct Nav. Co., Heineken v. (Mem.)	1174
Ralli v. (Mem.)	1174
District of Columbia v. Barnes (197
U. S. 146)	699
Duehay v. (Mem.)	1174
v. Eslin (Mem.) (197 U. S.
625)	912
Eslin v. (Mem.)	912
Gordon v. (Mem.)	912
v. Lee (Mem.) (198 U. S. 584)	1173
Ritchie v. (Mem.)	912
Wolff v.	426
Dobbins v. Los Angeles (195 U. S. 223)	169
Doctor v. Harrington (196 U. S. 579)	606
Dodge v. Ellis (Mem.) (195 U. S. 626)	350
San Francisco Nat. Bank v....	669
v. United States (Mem.) (195
U. S. 632)	353
Dodwell & Co., Munich Assur. Co. v.
(Mem.)	352
Dolan, Ex parte (Mem.) (196 U. S.
636)	629
Donnell, Citizens' Nat. Bank v.	238
Dorr v. United States (195 U. S. 138)	128
Dowagiac Mfg. Co., Brennan & Co. S.
W. Agricultural Works v.
(Mem.)	352
Minnesota Moline Plow Co. v.
(Mem.)	352
Duehay v. District of Columbia
(Mem.) (198 U. S. 586) ..	1174
Dunbar v. Green (198 U. S. 166)	998
Dupoyster, Bryan v. (Mem.)	1174

E.

Eagleton, Comstock v.	402
Edison, Lubin v. (Mem.)	349
Edwards, United States ex rel., v. Taft
(Mem.) (195 U. S. 626) ..	350
Eidman, Vanderbilt v.	563
Elkins v. Chicago (Mem.) (195 U. S.
637)	355
Ellis, Dodge v. (Mem.)	350
Elton, Daly v.	177
Ely, Northern P. R. Co. v.	639
Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing
Co. v. Hanley (198 U. S.
292)	1056

Engard, United States v.	575
Eslin v. District of Columbia (Mem.)
(197 U. S. 625)	912
District of Columbia v. (Mem.)	912
Eureka County Bank v. Clarke (Mem.)
(195 U. S. 631)	353
Evans, United States v.	236
E. W. Bliss Co., Buffalo Tin Can Co.
v. (Mem.)	352
Ex parte Barrett (Mem.) (196 U. S.
636)	629
Bessette (Mem.) (196 U. S. 635)	629
Colombia (195 U. S. 604)	338
Dolan (Mem.) (196 U. S. 636)	629
Garrett (Mem.) (196 U. S. 636)	629
Glaser (198 U. S. 171)	1000
Oli Nifou (Mem.) (198 U. S.
581)	1172
McCaully (Mem.) (198 U. S.
582)	1172
Massachusetts (197 U. S. 482)	845
Miller (Mem.) (197 U. S. 619)	909

F.

Fain, Stevenson v.	142
Fairbanks, Thompson v.	577
Farmers' Loan & T. Co., Boston Water
& Light Co. v. (Mem.)	910
v. Lake Street Elev. R. Co.
(Mem.) (195 U. S. 638) ..	356
New England Waterworks Co. v.
(Mem.)	910
Fayerweather v. Ritch (195 U. S. 276)	193
Felici v. Whitehead (Mem.) (195 U.
S. 639)	356
Ferrum Min. Co., McMillen v.	784
Fidelity & C. Co. v. Bowland (Mem.)
(197 U. S. 626)	912
First Nat. Bank, Brown v. (Mem.)	631
Buckingham v. (Mem.)	352
v. Chicago Title & T. Co. (198
U. S. 280)	1051
Covington v.	963
v. Covington (198 U. S. 100) ..	963
v. Lasater (196 U. S. 115)	408
v. Staake (Mem.) (197 U. S.
622)	910
Zartman v. (Mem.)	910
Flanigan v. Sierra County (196 U. S.
553)	597
Flannery v. Lewis (Mem.) (195 U. S.
628)	351
Fowler, Great Northern R. Co. v.
(Mem.)	911
Frauenhar, Russia Cement Co. v.
(Mem.)	631
Friend, Talcott v. (Mem.)	909
Fritzlen v. Boatmen's Bank (Mem.)
(198 U. S. 586)	1174
Fullerton v. Texas (196 U. S. 192) ...	443

CASES REPORTED.

G.

Garrett, Ex parte (Mem.) (196 U. S. 636)	629
Gastonia Cotton Mfg. Co., W. L. Wells Co. v.	1003
Gear, Carter v.	787
Gerald, Lytle v. (Mem.)	632
German-American Ins. Co., Astrich v. (Mem.)	1173
Germania Iron Co., James v. (Mem.)	356
Glaser, Ex parte (198 U. S. 171)	1000
Goldenberg Bros. & Co. v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634)	354
Gordon v. District of Columbia (Mem.) (197 U. S. 625)	912
Gould, Maricopa Canal Co. v. (Mem.)	356
Grand Canal Co. v. Brockman (Mem.) (195 U. S. 639)	356
Great Northern R. Co. v. Fowler (Mem.) (197 U. S. 624) ..	911
Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Harris (198 U. S. 561)	1163
Green, Dunbar v.	998
Greer County v. Texas (197 U. S. 235) ..	736
Gregg v. Metropolitan Trust Co. (197 U. S. 183)	717
Grube, Hamburg American S. S. Co. v.	529
Gulf Co., Bonin v.	970
Gunnison v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 623) ..	911
Gurvich v. United States (Mem.) (198 U. S. 581)	1172
Guthrie, Sparks v. (Mem.)	353
Guyon, Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. (Mem.)	353

H.

Hackfeld v. United States (197 U. S. 442)	826
Hamburg American S. S. Co. v. Grube (196 U. S. 407)	529
Hammond Elevator Co., Chicago Bd. of Trade v.	1111
Hanley, Empire State-Idaho Min. & Developing Co. v.	1056
Hanselmann, Western Electric Co. v. (Mem.)	911
Harding v. Harding (198 U. S. 317) ..	1066
v. Illinois (196 U. S. 78)	394
Harley v. United States (198 U. S. 229)	1029
Harriman v. Northern Securities Co. (Mem.) (196 U. S. 641) ..	631
v. Northern Securities Co. (197 U. S. 244)	739
Harrington, Doctor v.	606
Harris v. Balk (198 U. S. 215)	1023
Great Western Min. & Mfg. Co. v.	1163

Harrison, Perea v. (Mem.)	349
Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Perkins (Mem.) (196 U. S. 643)	632
Hartigan v. United States (196 U. S. 169)	434
Hartwell v. Havighorst (Mem.) (196 U. S. 635)	629
Harvey Steel Co., United States v.	492
Hasse, Northern P. R. Co. v.	642
Hatch v. Ketcham (Mem.) (198 U. S. 580)	1172
Haubert, Beavers v.	950
Havighorst, Hartwell v. (Mem.)	629
Heff, Re (197 U. S. 488)	848
Heineken v. Direct Nav. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 586)	1174
Heinze v. Butte & B. Consol. Min. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 631) ..	353
Helena, Helena Waterworks Co. v.	245
Helena Waterworks Co. v. Helena (195 U. S. 383)	245
Hemphill, Schlosser v.	1000
Henkel, Benson v.	919
Hernan v. Texas (Mem.) (198 U. S. 579)	1171
Hewitt, Patterson v.	214
Hill v. McCord (195 U. S. 395)	251
H. Meyer Boot & Shoe Mfg. Co., Shoemaker v. (Mem.)	1172
Hodge v. Muscatine County (196 U. S. 276)	477
Holden v. Stratton (198 U. S. 202) ...	1018
v. United States (Mem.) (196 U. S. 639)	631
Hough, Schubach v. (Mem.)	632
Howell v. United States (Mem.) (195 U. S. 635)	354
Howe Scale Co. v. Wyckoff, Seamen & Benedict (198 U. S. 118) ..	972
Hoyt v. Wisconsin (195 U. S. 194) ...	154
Huegin v. Wisconsin (195 U. S. 194) .	154
Humbird v. Avery (195 U. S. 480) ..	286
Humphrey v. Tatman (198 U. S. 91) ..	956
Hunsaker v. Toltec Ranch Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 640)	356
v. Toltec Ranch Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 625)	912
Hunt v. Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. (196 U. S. 47)	381

I.

I. B. Kleinert Rubber Co. v. Stein (Mem.) (196 U. S. 641) ..	631
Ideal Stopper Co. v. Crown Cork & Seal Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 633)	354
Illinois, Harding v.	394
Paulsen v. (Mem.)	356
Insurance Co., Aetna, v. Lewis (Mem.) (195 U. S. 629)	352
British & F. M., Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. (Mem.) ...	352

CASES REPORTED.

Insurance Co., German-American, As- trich v. (Mem.) 1173	Kehrer v. Stewart (197 U. S. 60) ... 663
Hartford F., v. Perkins (Mem.) (196 U. S. 643) 632	Kelleher, Seattle v. 232
Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Mut. F., v. Meyer (197 U. S. 407) 810	Kelley v. Diamond Drill & Mach. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 584) .. 1173
Scottish Union & Nat., v. Bow- land (196 U. S. 611) 619	Kendall v. American Automatic Loom Co. (198 U. S. 477) 1133
Scottish Union & Nat., Bow- land v. 619	Kenney v. Louie (Mem.) (195 U. S. 632) 353
Springfield F. & M., Hunt v. 381	Kentucky, Sanders v. (Mem.) 632
United States L., v. McMahon (Mem.) (197 U. S. 621) .. 910	Kepner v. United States (195 U. S. 100) 114
Interstate Commerce Commission v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 638) 356	Keppel v. Tiffin Sav. Bank (197 U. S. 356) 790
v. Southern R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 639) 356	Kerr v. United States (Mem.) (198 U. S. 589) 1175
Ionia Transp. Co. v. J. I. Case Thresh- ing Mach. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 622) 910	Ketcham, Hatch v. (Mem.) 1172
Iowa, Adams Express Co. v. 424	Kierns v. New York & H. R. Co. (198 U. S. 390) 1096
American Express Co. v. 417	Kilpatrick v. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 624) .. 349
Iron Cliffs Co. v. Negaunee Iron Co. (197 U. S. 463) 836	Kinsey Co. v. Chicago Bd. of Trade (198 U. S. 236) 1031
	Klump, Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. v. (Mem.) 1174
	Knapp, United States ex rel., v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. (197 U. S. 536) 870
	Knott v. Louisville Trust Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 631) 353

J.

Jacobson v. Massachusetts (197 U. S. 11) 643
James v. Germania Iron Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 638) 356
Jaster v. Currie (198 U. S. 144) 988
Jessup v. Southampton (Mem.) (195 U. S. 624) 349
Jewell v. Superior (Mem.) (198 U. S. 583) 1173
J. I. Case Threshing Mach. Co., Ionia Transp. Co. v. (Mem.) 910
Jock Coe, United States v. (Mem.) ... 629
Johnson, Copper King v. (Mem.) 351
v. Southern P. Co. (196 U. S. 1) 363
v. Thomas (Mem.) (197 U. S. 619) 909
Jones, Bunker Hill & S. Min. & Con- centrating Co. v. (Mem.) 352
J. R. Little Metal Wheel Co., Betten- dorf Patents Co. v. (Mem.) 351
Ju Toy, United States v. 1040

K.

Kansas, Smiley v. 546
Kansas City S. R. Co. v. Prunty (Mem.) (197 U. S. 623) .. 911
Kaufman v. Tredway (195 U. S. 271) 190
Keely v. Moore (196 U. S. 38) 376
Keene Five Cent Sav. Bank v. Rams- den (Mem.) (196 U. S. 638) 630

L.

Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co., United States ex rel. Knapp v. 870
Lake Street Elev. R. Co., Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. (Mem.) 356
L. A. Kinsey Co. v. Chicago Bd. of Trade (198 U. S. 236) 1031
Lane v. Benner (Mem.) (198 U. S. 579) 1171
Lasater, First Nat. Bank v. 408
Laugenour, Smalley v. 400
Lavagnino v. Uhlig (198 U. S. 443) .. 1119
Lazarus, Barber v. (Mem.) 1174
L. Bucki & Son Lumber Co., Atlantic Lumber Co. v. (Mem.) 1175
Leather Mfrs., Nat. Bank v. Treat (Mem.) (198 U. S. 584) .. 1173
Lee, District of Columbia v. (Mem.) .. 1173
v. Robinson (196 U. S. 64) ... 388
Leeds, Lockhart v. 263
Lee Look v. California (Mem.) (195 U. S. 623) 349
v. Ross (Mem.) (198 U. S. 579) 1171
Leonard, Ludington Novelty Co. v. (Mem.) 909
v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. (198 U. S. 416) 1108
Letson, Memphis Consol. Gas & Elec- tric Co. v. (Mem.) 911
Lewis, Aetna Ins. Co. v. (Mem.) 352
Flannery v. (Mem.) 351

CASES REPORTED.

Lightcap, Bradley v.	65	McMillen v. Ferrum Min. Co. (197 U. S. 343)	784
Bradley v.	75	MacNabb v. Bank of Le Roy (Mem.) (198 U. S. 583)	1173
Bradley v.	76	Macon, Toney v. (Mem.)	350
Lincoln v. United States (197 U. S. 419)	816	McPherson v. American Soda Fountain Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 587)	1175
Lindsay, Wulff v. (Mem.)	632	McQuesten, Steigleder v.	986
Lochner v. New York (198 U. S. 45) ..	937	Madisonville Traction Co. v. Saint Bernard Min. Co. (196 U. S. 239)	462
Lockhart v. Leeds (195 U. S. 427)	263	Manogue, McCaffrey v.	600
Lombard v. Anglo-American Land Mortg. & Agency Co. (Mem.) (196 U. S. 638) ..	630	Marande v. Texas & P. R. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 626)	912
Loomis, Warder v. (Mem.)	909	Mares, Dillon v. (Mem.)	632
Lorenz v. United States (Mem.) (196 U. S. 640)	631	Maricopa Canal Co. v. Gould (Mem.) (195 U. S. 639)	356
Los Angeles, Dobbins v.	169	Markoe, Wetmore v.	390
Louie, Kenney v. (Mem.)	353	Marshall County, Cook v.	471
Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. (197 U. S. 430)	819	Martinez, United States v.	282
Coulter v.	615	Massachusetts, Ex parte (197 U. S. 482)	845
v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. (198 U. S. 483)	1135	Jacobson v.	643
Wright v.	167	Maxwell, Sage v. (Mem.)	911
Louisville Trust Co., Knott v. (Mem.)	353	Meffert v. Packer (Mem.) (195 U. S. 625)	350
Lubin v. Edison (Mem.) (195 U. S. 624)	349	Memphis Consol. Gas & Electric Co. v. Letson (Mem.) (197 U. S. 623)	911
Lucius v. Cawthon-Coleman Co. (196 U. S. 149)	425	Mendezona v. United States (195 U. S. 158)	136
Ludington Novelty Co. v. Leonard (Mem.) (197 U. S. 620)	909	Merchants' & M. Transp. Co. v. The Thornhill (Mem.) (197 U. S. 620)	909
Lytle v. Gerald (Mem.) (196 U. S. 643)	632	Merchants' Bkg. Co., Shewan Tomes & Co. v. (Mem.)	630
M.		Metropolitan R. Co. v. Macfarland (195 U. S. 322)	219
McBride, Whitaker v.	857	Metropolitan Trust Co., Gregg v.	717
McCaffrey v. Manogue (196 U. S. 563)	600	Metropolitan Water Co., Armour Packing Co. v. (Mem.)	354
McCahan Sugar Ref. Co. v. The Wildcroft (Mem.) (195 U. S. 635)	355	Meyer, Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Mut. F. Ins. Co. v.	810
McCaully, Ex parte (Mem.) (198 U. S. 582)	1172	Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v.	1146
v. United States (Mem.) (198 U. S. 586)	1174	Middletown Nat. Bank v. Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. (197 U. S. 394)	803
McClaine v. Rankin (197 U. S. 154) ..	702	Midway Co., Belden v. (Mem.)	356
McClure v. United States Mortg. & T. Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 624) ..	911	Miller, Ex parte (Mem.) (197 U. S. 619)	909
McCord, Hill v.	251	Chrisman v.	770
McCray v. United States (195 U. S. 27)	78	Mills, United States v.	732
McDaniel v. Traylor (196 U. S. 415) ..	533	Mineral Development Co. v. Scott (Mem.) (196 U. S. 640) ..	631
Macfarland, Metropolitan R. Co. v. ...	219	Minnesota Moline Plow Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 630)	352
McGraw v. Woods (Mem.) (197 U. S. 621)	910	Minnesota S. S. Co., Western Transit Co. v. (Mem.)	355
McGuire, Chicago, I. & L. R. Co. v. ...	413	Missouri v. Nebraska (196 U. S. 23) ..	372
McHarg v. Staake (Mem.) (197 U. S. 622)	910	v. Nebraska (197 U. S. 577) ..	881
McMahon, United States L. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	910	Nebraska v.	372
McMaster, Oklahoma City v.	587	Moar, Walp v. (Mem.)	1175
McMichael v. Murphy (197 U. S. 304) ..	766

CASES REPORTED.

8

CASES REPORTED.

People's Nat. Bank, Van Reed v.	1161	Railroad Co., New York & H., Muhler v.	872
Perea v. Harrison (Mem.) (195 U. S. 623)	349	Pennsylvania, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	312
Perkins, Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. (Mem.)	632	Pennsylvania, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	332
Petty, Moore v. (Mem.)	911	Vicksburg, S. & P., Leonard v.	1108
Pennsylvania, Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v.	1077	Yazoo & M. Valley, v. Truman (Mem.) (195 U. S. 625) ..	350
Pennsylvania Lumbermen's Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Meyer (197 U. S. 407)	810	Railway Co., Atlanta, K. & N., v. Southern R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634)	354
Pennsylvania R. Co., Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	312	Black Hills & N. W., Tacoma Mill Co. v. (Mem.)	351
Western U. Teleg. Co. v.	332	Central of Ga., v. Murphey (196 U. S. 194)	444
Persons, Wirgman v. (Mem.)	629	Chicago & N. W., Andrews v. (Mem.)	351
Philpot v. O'Brien (Mem.) (196 U. S. 643)	632	Chicago & N. W., Warner v. (Mem.)	355
Pitch Pine Lumber Co. v. Rosasco (Mem.) (198 U. S. 587) ..	1174	Chicago, I. & L., v. McGuire (196 U. S. 128)	413
Plumas County, Wheeler v.	599	Chicago, M. & St. P., Gunnison v. (Mem.)	911
Plymouth Cordage Co. v. Smith (Mem.) (198 U. S. 588) ..	1175	Chicago, M. & St. P., v. United States (198 U. S. 385) ...	1094
Portland Flouring Mills Co. v. British & F. M. Ins. Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 629)	352	Chicago, M. & St. P., United States v.	306
Portner, Blue Mountain Iron & Steel Co. v. (Mem.)	355	Great Northern, v. Fowler (Mem.) (197 U. S. 624) ..	911
Pradt, Courtney v.	398	Kansas City S., v. Prunty (Mem.) (197 U. S. 623) ..	911
Prunty, Kansas City S. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	911	Lake Shore & M. S., United States ex rel. Knapp v.	870
Q.		Nashville, C. & St. L., Interstate Commerce Commission v. (Mem.)	356
Quinby, Consumers' Gas Trust Co. v. (Mem.)	1174	Northern P., v. American Trading Co. (195 U. S. 439) ...	269
R.		Northern P., v. Ely (197 U. S. 1)	639
Railroad Co., Atlantic Coast Line, Wilson v. (Mem.)	1173	Northern P., v. Hasse (197 U. S. 9)	642
Central P., Remington v.	959	Rio Grande W., Raphael v. (Mem.)	1175
Chicago & W. I., v. Newell (Mem.) (198 U. S. 579) ..	1171	Savannah, T. & I. of H., v. Savannah (198 U. S. 392) ...	1097
Chicago, B. & Q., Union Stock Yards Co. v.	453	Southern, Atlanta, K. & N. R. Co. v. (Mem.)	354
Choctaw, O. & G., Kilpatrick v. (Mem.)	349	Southern, Bradford v.	178
Delaware, L. & W., v. Pennsylvania (198 U. S. 341)	1077	Southern, Interstate Commerce Commission v. (Mem.)	356
Lake Street Elev., Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. (Mem.) ..	356	Texas & P., v. Dashiell (198 U. S. 521)	1150
Louisville & N., v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. (197 U. S. 430)	819	Texas & P., Marande v. (Mem.)	912
Louisville & N., Coulter v.	615	Texas & P., v. Swearingen (196 U. S. 51)	382
Louisville & N., v. West Coast Naval Stores Co. (198 U. S. 483)	1135	Toledo, A. A. & N. M., Middle-town Nat. Bank v.	803
Louisville & N., Wright v.	167	Worcester Consol. Street, Worcester v.	591
Metropolitan, v. Macfarland (195 U. S. 322)	219	Rakestraw, Small v.	527
New York & H., Birrell v.	1096	Ralli v. Direct Nav. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 586)	1174
New York & H., Kierns v.	1096

CASES REPORTED.

Ramsden, Cheshire Provident Inst. v. (Mem.).....	630	St. Louis Expanded Metal Fireproofing Co. v. Standard Fireproofing Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 627).....	351
Keene Five Cent Sav. Bank v. (Mem.).....	630	Salom, American Alkali Co. v. (Mem.)	631
Ramsey v. Tacoma Land Co. (196 U. S. 360).....	513	Salt River Valley Canal Co. v. Slosser (Mem.) (195 U. S. 639).....	356
Rankin, McClaine v.....	702	Sample v. American Soda Fountain Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 634).....	354
Raphael v. Rio Grande W. R. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 587) ..	1175	Sanders v. Kentucky (Mem.) (196 U. S. 644).....	632
Rassinussen v. United States (197 U. S. 516).....	862	San Francisco Nat. Bank v. Dodge (197 U. S. 70).....	669
Rauschenplat, Baquero v. (Mem.)	632	San Juan v. St. John's Gas Co. (195 U. S. 510).....	299
Re Heff (197 U. S. 488).....	848	Sarria, Sixto v.....	436
Strauss (197 U. S. 324).....	774	Savannah, Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v.....	1097
Reading Co., Morse v. (Mem.).....	630	Savannah, T. & I. of H. R. Co. v. Sa- vannah (198 U. S. 392) ...	1097
Reading School Dist., Cunnius v.....	1125	Scherf v. Curtis (Mem.) (198 U. S. 589).....	1175
Rembert Roller Compress Co. v. Amer- ican Cotton Co. (Mem.) (197 U. S. 620).....	910	Schiek v. United States (195 U. S. 65)	99
Remington v. Central P. R. Co. (198 U. S. 95).....	959	Schlosser v. Hemphill (198 U. S. 173)	1000
Reynolds v. Ritch (195 U. S. 276)	193	Schubach v. Hough (Mem.) (196 U. S. 644).....	632
R. F. Downing & Co., United States v. (Mem.)	352	Schweer v. Brown (195 U. S. 171)....	144
Rio Grande W. R. Co., Raphael v. (Mem.)	1175	Scott v. Carew (196 U. S. 100).....	403
Ritch, Fayerweather v.....	193	Mineral Development Co. v. (Mem.).....	631
Reynolds v.....	193	Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Bow- land (196 U. S. 611).....	619
Ritchie v. District of Columbia (Mem.) (197 U. S. 625).....	912	Bowland v.	619
Riverdale Cotton Mills v. Alabama & G. Mfg. Co. (198 U. S. 188)	1008	Seattle v. Kelleher (195 U. S. 351) ..	232
Riverside County v. Thompson (Mem.) (196 U. S. 637).....	630	Seattle & L. W. Waterway Co., Cannel Coal Co. v. (Mem.).....	350
Robinson, Lee v.....	388	Seattle Dock Co. v. (Mem.)	350
v. Wingate (Mem.) (198 U. S. 580).....	1171	Seattle Dock Co. v. Seattle & L. W. Waterway Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 624).....	350
Rodriguez, Cueli v. (Mem.).....	1172	Shaffer v. United States (Mem.) (196 U. S. 639).....	631
v. United States (198 U. S. 156)	994	Shelton v. American Surety Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 633) ..	354
Rooney v. North Dakota (196 U. S. 319).....	494	Shewan Tones & Co. v. Merchants' Bkg. Co. (Mem.) (196 U. S. 639).....	630
Rosasco, Pitch Pine Lumber Co. v. (Mem.).....	1174	Shoesmith v. H. Meyer Boot & Shoe Mfg. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 582).....	1172
Ross, Lee Look v. (Mem.).....	1171	Sierra County, Flanigan v.....	597
Rumford Chemical Works, New York Baking Powder Co. v. (Mem.).....	354	Sixto v. Sarria (196 U. S. 175).....	436
Russell v. Russell (Mem.) (198 U. S. 584).....	1173	Skillin, Thompson v. (Mem.).....	631
Russia Cement Co. v. Frauenhar (Mem.) (196 U. S. 640) ..	631	Slavens v. United States (196 U. S. 229).....	457
S.		Slosser, Salt River Valley Canal Co. v. (Mem.).....	356
Sage v. Maxwell (Mem.) (197 U. S. 625).....	911	Small v. Rakestraw (196 U. S. 403) ..	527
v. Munsterman (Mem.) (197 U. S. 625).....	911	Smalley v. Laugenour (196 U. S. 93)	400
Saint Bernard Min. Co., Madisonville Traction Co. v.....	462	Smiley v. Kansas (196 U. S. 447)	546
St. John's Gas Co., San Juan v.....	299

CASES REPORTED.

Smith, Olsen v.....	224	Texas, Fullerton v.....	443
Plymouth Cordage Co. v.		Greer County v.....	736
(Mem.).....	1175	Hernan v. (Mem.).....	1171
United States v.....	801	National Cotton Oil Co. v.....	689
Southampton Jessup v. (Mem.).....	349	Southern Cotton Oil Co. v.....	696
Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Texas (197		Texas & P. R. Co. v. Dashiell (198 U.
U. S. 134).....	696	S. 521).....	1150
Southern P. Co., Johnson v.....	363	Marande v. (Mem.).....	912
Southern R. Co., Atlanta, K. & N. R.		v. Swearingen (196 U. S. 51) ..	382
Co. v. (Mem.).....	354	Thomas v. Blair (Mem.) (196 U. S.
Bradford v.....	178	637).....	630
Interstate Commerce Commis-		Johnson v. (Mem.).....	909
sion v. (Mem.).....	356	v. Ohio State University Trus-
Sparks v. Guthrie (Mem.) (195 U. S.		tees (195 U. S. 207).....	160
633).....	353	v. United States (195 U. S. 418)	259
Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co., Hunt v..	381	United States v.....	259
S. P. Shotter Co., United States v.		Thompson v. Darden (198 U. S. 310)	1064
(Mem.).....	355	v. Fairbanks (196 U. S. 516) ..	577
Staaake, First Nat. Bank v. (Mem.) ..	910	Riverside County v. (Mem.) ..	630
McHarg v. (Mem.).....	910	v. Skillin (Mem.) (196 U. S.
v. Watts (Mem.) (198 U. S.		642).....	631
587) ..	1175	Thornhill, The, Merchants' & M.
Standard Fireproofing Co., St. Louis		Transp. Co. v. (Mem.)	909
Expanded Metal Fireproof-		Thornton v. Natchez (Mem.) (197 U.
ing Co. v. (Mem.).....	351	S. 620).....	909
Stanley Instrument Co. v. Westing-		Tiffin Sav. Bank, Keppel v.....	790 house Electric & Mfg. Co.		Toledo, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.
(Mem.) (195 U. S. 633) ..	354	(Mem.).....	355
Steigleder v. McQuesten (198 U. S.		Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co., Middle-
141).....	986	town Nat. Bank v.....	803
Stein, I. B. Kleinert Rubber Co. v.		Toltec Ranch Co., Hunsaker v. (Mem.)	356
(Mem.).....	631	Hunsaker v. (Mem.).....	912
Steyenson v. Fain (195 U. S. 165) ..	142	Toney v. Macon (Mem.) (195 U. S.
Stewart, Kehrler v.....	663	625) ..	350
Stillman v. Combe (197 U. S. 436) ..	822	Travis v. United States (196 U. S.
Stinson, United States v.....	724	239).....	461
Stratton, Holden v.....	1018	Traylor, McDaniel v.....	533
Stratton's Independence v. Dines		Treat, Leather Mfrs.' Nat. Bank v.
(Mem.) (197 U. S. 623) ..	911	(Mem.).....	1173
Strauss, Re (197 U. S. 324).....	774	New York Teleph. Co. v.
Superior, Jewell v. (Mem.).....	1173	(Mem.).....	1173
Supreme Lodge, K. of P. v. Meyer (198		Tredway, Kaufman v.....	190
U. S. 508).....	1146	Truman, Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v.
Swan, Western U. Teleg. Co. v.		(Mem.).....	350
(Mem.).....	351
Swearingen, Texas & P. R. Co. v.....	382
Swift & Co. v. United States (196 U.
S. 375).....	518

U.

T

Tacoma Land Co., Ramsey v.....	513	Uhlig, Lavagnino v.	1119
Tacoma Mill Co. v. Black Hills & N.		Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co.,
W. R. Co. (Mem.) (195 U.		Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill.
S. 627).....	351	Co. v.....	501
Taft, United States ex rel. Edwards		Union Stock Yards Co. v. Chicago, B.
v. (Mem.).....	350	& Q. R. Co. (196 U. S. 217)	453
Talcott v. Friend (Mem.) (197 U. S.		Union Trust Co. v. Wilson (198 U. S.
620).....	909	530).....	1154
Tatman, Humphrey v.....	956	United Engineering & Contracting Co.
Tennessee Oil, Gas & Mineral Co. v.		v. Broadnax (Mem.) (197
Brown (Mem.) (197 U. S.		U. S. 624).....	911
621) ..	910	United States, Amado v.....	145
		American Sugar Ref. Co. v.
		(Mem.).....	354
		Bartlett v.....	735
		Bartram v. (Mem.).....	354

CASES REPORTED.

United States Binyon v. (Mem.)....	349	United States v. Stinson (197 U. S. .
Bishop v.	780	200)	724
v. Bong Meng (Mem.) (196 U.		Swift & Co. v.	518
S. 635)	629	v. Thomas (195 U. S. 418)....	259
Broadwell v.	99	Thomas v.	259
Brooks v. (Mem.)	632	Travis v.	461
Burton v.	482	v. United Verde Copper Co. (196
v. Cadarr (Mem.) (195 U. S.		U. S. 207)	449
635)	355	Warner, B. & Co. v.	816
v. Cadarr (197 U. S. 475)....	842	v. Whitridge (Mem.) (195 U.
v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.		S. 633)	353
(195 U. S. 524)	306	v. Whitridge (197 U. S. 135) ..	696
Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. .	1094	v. Winans (198 U. S. 371)....	1089
Cliff v.	139	v. Woo Joe (Mem.) (196 U. S.
Clyatt v.	726	635)	629
v. Cornell S. B. Co. (Mem.)		United States ex rel. Knapp v. Lake
(193 U. S. 583)	1173	Shore & M. S. R. Co. (197
v. Crosley (196 U. S. 327)....	497	U. S. 536)	870
Curley v. (Mem.)	351	Edwards v. Taft (Mem.) (195
Darnal v. (Mem.)	1174	U. S. 626)	350
v. Dieckerhoff (Mem.) (198 U.		United States L. Ins. Co. v. McMahon
S. 583)	1173	(Mem.) (197 U. S. 621) ..	910
Dodge v. (Mem.)	353	United States Mortg. & T. Co., Mc-
Dorr v.	128	Clure v. (Mem.)	911
v. Engard (196 U. S. 511)....	575	United Verde Copper Co., United
v. Evans (195 U. S. 361)....	236	States v.	449
Goldenberg Bros. & Co. v.		Utermehle v. Norment (197 U. S. 40) .	655
(Mem.)	354
Gurvich v. (Mem.)	1172
Hackfeld v.	826
Harley v.	1029
Hartigan v.	434
v. Harvey Steel Co. (196 U. S.
310)	492
Holden v. (Mem.)	631
Howell v. (Mem.)	354
v. Jock Coe (Mem.) (196 U. S.
635)	629
v. Ju Toy (198 U. S. 253)....	1040
Kepner v.	114
Kerr v. (Mem.)	1175
Lincoln v.	816
Lorenz v. (Mem.)	631
McCaully v. (Mem.)	1174
McCray v.	78
v. Martinez (195 U. S. 469)....	282
Mendezona v.	136
v. Mills (197 U. S. 223)	732
v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co.
(196 U. S. 573)	604
Moore v.	428
Moses v. (Mem.)	353
Ng Hong Li v. (Mem.)	629
Peacock v. (Mem.)	356
Rasmussen v.	862
v. R. F. Downing & Co. (Mem.)
(195 U. S. 631)	352
Rodriguez v.	994
Schick v.	99
Shaffer v. (Mem.)	631
Slavens v.	457
v. Smith (197 U. S. 386)	801
v. S. P. Shotter Co. (Mem.)
(195 U. S. 636)	355

V.

Vanderbilt v. Eidman (196 U. S. 480)	563
Van Reed v. People's Nat. Bank (198
U. S. 554)	1161
Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co., Leonard v. .	1108
Virginia, Old Dominion S. S. Co. v.	1059

W.

Walp v. Moar (Mem.) (198 U. S.
588)	1175
Warder v. Loomis (Mem.) (197 U. S.
619)	909
Warner v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co.
(Mem.) (195 U. S. 637) ..	355
Warner, B. & Co. v. United States
(197 U. S. 419)	816
Watts, Staake v. (Mem.)	1175
W. B. Conkey Co., Bessette v. (Mem.)	630
Wells Co. v. Gastonia Cotton Mfg. Co.
(198 U. S. 177)	1003
Wenman, Whitney v.	1157
West Coast Naval Stores Co., Louisville & N. R. Co. v.	1135
Western Electrical Supply Co. v. Abbeville Electric Light & P.
Co. (197 U. S. 299)	765
Western Electric Co. v. Hanselmann
(Mem.) (197 U. S. 624) ..	911
Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown
(196 U. S. 502)	571
Western Transit Co. v. Minnesota S. S.
Co. (Mem.) (195 U. S. 636)	355

CASES REPORTED.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (195 U. S. 540).... 312 v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (195 U. S. 594)..... 332 v. Swan (Mem.) (195 U. S. 628)..... 351 v. Toledo (Mem.) (195 U. S. 637)..... 355 Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co., Stanley Instrument Co. v. (Mem.)..... 354 Wetmore v. Markoe (196 U. S. 68).. 390 Whceler v. Plumas County (196 U. S. 562)..... 599 Whitaker v. McBride (197 U. S. 510) 857 Whitehead, Felici v. (Mem.)..... 356 Whitney v. Wenman (198 U. S. 539). 1157 Whitridge, United States v..... 696 United States v. (Mem.)..... 353 Wilderoft, The, W. J. McCahan Sugar Ref. Co. v. (Mem.)..... 355 Wiley, National Exch. Bank v..... 184 Williams, Charalambis v. (Mem.).... 632 Pearson v. (Mem.)..... 1174 Zarccone v. (Mem.)..... 355 Wilson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. (Mem.) (198 U. S. 585).. 1173 Cramer v..... 256 Union Trust Co. v..... 1154 Winans, United States v..... 1089 Wingate, Robinson v. (Mem.)..... 1171 Wirgman v. Persons (Mem.) (196 U. S. 636)..... 629 Wisconsin, Aikens v..... 154 Hoyt v..... 154 Huegin v..... 154	Wittman, Ah Sin v..... 1142 W. J. McCahan Sugar Ref. Co. v. The Wilderoft (Mem.) (195 U. S. 635)..... 355 W. L. Wells Co. v. Gastonia Cotton Mfg. Co. (198 U. S. 177).. 1003 Wolff v. District of Columbia (196 U. S. 152)..... 426 Woods, McGraw v. (Mem.)'..... 910 Woo Joe, United States v. (Mem.).. 629 Worcester v. Worcester Consol. Street R. Co. (196 U. S. 539).... 591 Worcester Consol. Street R. Co., Worcester v..... 591 Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (195 U. S. 219)..... 167 Wulff v. Lindsay (Mem.) (196 U. S. 642)..... 632 Wyckoff, Seamans, & Benedict, Howe Scale Co. v..... 972 Y. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Truman (Mem.) (195 U. S. 625).. 350 Z. Zarccone v. Williams (Mem.) (195 U. S. 637)..... 355 Zartman v. First Nat. Bank (Mem.) (197 U. S. 621)..... 910
--	--

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1903.

Vol. 195.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
 DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
 OCTOBER TERMS, 1903, 1904,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 195,

 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
1-2	Bradley v. Lightcap No. 1	65	110-112	Kepner v. United States	114
2-4	" "	66	112-115	" "	118
4-6	" "	67	115-117	" "	119
16-17	" "	72	118-120	" "	120
17-20	" "	73	120-123	" "	121
20-22	" "	74	123-125	" "	122
22-24	" "	75	125-127	" "	123
24-25	Bradley v. Lightcap No. 2	75	127-130	" "	124
25	Bradley v. Lightcap No. 3	76	130-132	" "	125
25-26	" "	77	132-135	" "	126
26	" "	78	135-137	" "	127
27	McCray v. United States	78	137	" "	128
28-30	" "	79	138	Dorr v. United States	128
30	" "	80	139-141	" "	129
43	" "	90	141-144	" "	130
43-46	" "	91	144-146	" "	131
46-48	" "	92	146-148	" "	132
48-51	" "	93	148-151	" "	133
51-53	" "	94	151-154	" "	134
53-56	" "	95	154-156	" "	135
56-58	" "	96	156-158	" "	136
58-61	" "	97	158	Secundino Mendezona y Men-
61-63	" "	98		dezona v. United States	136
63-64	" "	99	159	Cliff v. United States	139
65	{ Schich v. United States		159-161	" "	140
	{ Broadwell v. United States	99	161-164	" "	141
66-68	" "	101	164-165	" "	142
68-71	" "	102	165-166	Stevenson v. Fain	142
71-73	" "	103	166-168	" "	143
73-76	" "	104	168-170	" "	144
76-78	" "	105	171	Schweer v. Brown	144
78-81	" "	106	171-172	" "	145
81-83	" "	107	172-173	Amado v. United States	145
83-86	" "	108	173-175	" "	146
86-88	" "	109	175-176	" "	147
88-91	" "	110	176-177	Crawford v. Burke	147
91-93	" "	111	177-178	" "	148
93-96	" "	112	185-186	" "	150
96-98	" "	113	186-188	" "	151
98-100	" "	114	188-190	" "	152
100	Kepner v. United States	114	190-193	" "	153

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here in.	Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here in.
193-194	Crawford v. Burke	154	312	Patterson v. Hewitt	216
194	{ Aikens v. Wisconsin		317	" "	217
	{ Huegin v. Wisconsin		317-320	" "	218
	{ Hoyt v. Wisconsin	154	320-322	" "	219
201-203	" "	158	322	Metropolitan R. Co. v. Dis-
203-205	" "	159		trict of Columbia
205-207	" "	160		("Metropolitan R. Co. v.
207	Thomas v. Ohio State Univer-			Macfarland")	219
	sity	160	322-324	" "	220
208-210	" "	163	324-327	" "	221
210-212	" "	164	327-329	" "	222
212-215	" "	165	329-332	" "	223
215-217	" "	166	332	" "	224
217-218	" "	167	332	Olsen v. Smith	224
219-220	Wright v. Louisville & N. R.		338-340	" "	228
	Co.	167	340-342	" "	229
220-222	" "	168	342-345	" "	230
222-223	" "	169	345	" "	231
223-224	Dobbins v. Los Angeles	169	345-346	Birkett v. Columbia Bank	231
224	" "	170	349	" "	231
224-226	" "	171	349-351	" "	232
234-235	" "	174	351	Seattle v. Kelleher	232
235-237	" "	175	355-357	" "	234
237-240	" "	176	357-360	" "	235
240-242	" "	177	360	" "	236
242	Daly v. Elton	177	361	The Blackheath
242-243	" "	178		("United States v. Evans")	236
243	Bradford v. Southern R. Co.	178	364	" "	236
243-245	" "	179	364-367	" "	237
247-248	" "	180	367-369	" "	238
248-251	" "	181	369	Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Don-
251-252	" "	182		nell	238
252-253	New v. Oklahoma	182	372-374	" "	241
253-256	" "	183	374	" "	242
256	" "	184	375	Baltimore Shipbuilding & Dry
257	National Exchange Bank v.			Dock Co. v. Baltimore	242
	Wiley	184	380-382	" "	244
259-261	" "	186	382	" "	245
261-263	" "	187	383	Helena Waterworks Co. v.
263-266	" "	188		Helena	245
266-268	" "	189	383-384	" "	246
268-270	" "	190	387-389	" "	248
271	Kaufman v. Tredway	190	389-391	" "	249
271-273	" "	191	391-394	" "	250
273-275	" "	192	394	" "	251
275-276	" "	193	395	Hill v. McCord	251
276-277	{ Fayerweather v. Ritch		395-398	" "	252
	{ Reynolds v. Ritch	193	398-400	" "	253
277-280	" "	194	400-403	" "	254
280-282	" "	195	403-406	" "	255
282-285	" "	196	406-408	" "	256
285-287	" "	197	408	Cramer v. Wilson	256
287-288	" "	198	408-410	" "	257
297-298	" "	209	414-416	" "	258
298-300	" "	210	416-417	" "	259
300-303	" "	211	418	{ United States v. Thomas
303-305	" "	212		{ Thomas v. United States	259
305-307	" "	213	418-421	" "	260
307-309	" "	214	421-423	" "	261
309-310	Patterson v. Hewitt	214	423-426	" "	262
310-312	" "	215	426-427	" "	263

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 195 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
427	Lockhart v. Leeds	263	527-530	United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.	308
427-430	" "	264
430-431	" "	265	530	" "	309
432-434	" "	267	534-535	" "	310
434-436	" "	268	535-537	" "	311
436-438	" "	269	537-539	" "	312
439	Northern P. R. Co. v. Ameri- can Trading Co.	269	540	Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Penn- sylvania R. Co.	312
440-441	" "	270	540-542	" "	313
441-443	" "	271	542-545	" "	314
443-446	" "	272	545-547	" "	315
446-449	" "	273	547	" "	316
449-451	" "	274	557-559	" "	318
451-453	" "	275	559-562	" "	319
457	" "	277	562-565	" "	320
457-460	" "	278	565-567	" "	321
460-463	" "	279	567-569	" "	322
463-465	" "	280	569-572	" "	323
465-468	" "	281	572-575	" "	324
468-469	" "	282	575-577	" "	325
469-470	United States v. Martinez	282	577-580	" "	326
470	" "	283	580-582	" "	327
472-473	" "	283	582-584	" "	328
473-475	" "	284	584-587	" "	329
475-478	" "	285	587-589	" "	330
478-480	" "	286	589-592	" "	331
480	Humbird v. Avery	286	592-594	" "	332
481-483	" "	291	594	Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Penn- sylvania R. Co.	332
483-486	" "	292
486-488	" "	293	595-597	" "	335
488-491	" "	294	597-599	" "	336
498	" "	294	599-602	" "	337
498-500	" "	295	602-604	" "	338
501-503	" "	296	604	Ex parte Republic of Colom- bia	338
503-505	" "	297
505-508	" "	298	604-605	" "	339
508-510	" "	299	605-606	" "	340
510	San Juan v. St. John's Gas Co.	299	606-607	Bullis v. O'Beirne	340
511-512	" "	300	607-609	" "	341
512-514	" "	301	609-612	" "	342
514-515	" "	302	612	" "	343
515-518	" "	303	615	" "	344
518-520	" "	304	615-617	" "	345
520-523	" "	305	617-620	" "	346
523	" "	306	620-621	" "	347
524-525	United States v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co.	306	623-640	Memorandum Cases	349-356
525-527	" "	307
195 U. S.

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States
AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1903.

[1]*LYDIA BRADLEY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

H. W. LIGHTCAP.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-24.)

Constitutional law—impairment of contract obligations—due process of law—destruction of rights of mortgagee in possession.

1. The obligation of the contract of a mortgagee in possession after condition broken, who afterwards bld in the property for less than the mortgage debt on the sale in foreclosure proceedings initiated by her before Ill. act of March 22, 1872, § 30, went into effect, is impaired by the change in the law made by the requirement of that section that the master's deed be taken out within a specified time after the expiration of the time for redemption, where failure to comply with this requirement is held by the highest state court to destroy the right of possession taken under the mortgage, to avoid the certificate of sale, and to entitle the mortgagor, without payment of the mortgage debt, to recover possession in ejectment, on the strength of a perfect title.
2. Due process of law is denied by the requirement of Ill. act of March 22, 1872, § 30, that the master's deed be taken out by the purchaser on a foreclosure sale within a specified time after the expiration of the time for redemption, where failure to comply with such requirement is held by the highest state court to destroy the rights of a mortgagee in possession after condition broken, to avoid the certificate of sale issued to her on her purchase for less than the amount of the mortgage debt at a sale in foreclosure proceedings initiated by her before such statute went into effect, and to entitle the mortgagor, without payment of his debt, to recover possession in ejectment, on the strength of a perfect title.

[No. 243.]

Argued April 21, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Mason County, in that state, in favor of plaintiff in ejectment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

*Five ejectment suits were brought by [2] Lightcap against tenants of Mrs. Bradley, July 13, 1895, in the circuit court of Mason county, Illinois, and taken on change of venue to Fulton county, where they were consolidated; Mrs. Bradley was let in to defend, and the case went to judgment in her favor. This judgment was reversed by the supreme court of Illinois, after several hearings, and the case remanded to the circuit court. 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221. On the retrial, judgment was recovered by Lightcap, which was affirmed by the supreme court (201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546), and this writ of error prosecuted.

On the disposition of the case when brought to the supreme court the second time the division of opinion among the sev-

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; M'Canna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; and Montana Ore-Purchasing Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

That impairing the remedy impairs the obligation of contract—see notes to Best v. Baumgardner, 1 L. R. A. 356; Louisiana ex rel. 195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Ranger v. New Orleans, 26 L. ed. U. S. 132; and Phinney v. Phinney, 4 L. R. A. 348.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Uiman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; and Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; and Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

en members of the court found expression. Mr. Chief Justice Magruder, Mr. Justice Carter, and Mr. Justice Ricks concurred in the opinion of Mr. Justice Cartwright in affirmation of the judgment. Mr. Justice Wilkin and Mr. Justice Boggs filed dissents, and Mr. Justice Hand, while agreeing that the legal title was in Lightcap, was of opinion that the full beneficial interest was in Mrs. Bradley, and that she, being in possession, a court of chancery might protect her equitable interest and possession by enjoining the prosecution of the ejectment suit.

The facts are in substance these:

Tobias S. Bradley loaned T. B. Breedlove, June 3, 1867, $19,616, evidenced by notes payable in one, two, three, four, and five years, respectively, and secured by a trust deed on 1,200 acres of land in Mason county, Illinois. On Bradley's death, Lydia, his widow, became the sole owner of the trust deed and notes. October 8, 1867, Breedlove conveyed the 1,200 acres to Prettyman, subject to the mortgage to Bradley. August 13, 1868, Prettyman conveyed 680 acres to McCune, and McCune gave a trust deed thereon to E. G. Johnson, trustee, to secure the payment of $15,000, evidenced by three notes, to the order of Lydia Bradley, and due in one, two, and three years after date. Mrs. Bradley, through her agent, accepted these notes and trust deed as part payment [3] of the *Breedlove notes, and Prettyman paid the difference, and the 1,200 acres were released from the Breedlove trust deed or mortgage.

November 13, 1868, McCune conveyed the 680 acres to Prettyman, subject to the trust deed to Johnson. No taxes were paid by McCune or by Prettyman, and no part of the mortgage debt was ever paid.

May 24, 1871, Mrs. Bradley redeemed from the tax sales for taxes of 1868 and 1869, and in 1872 for the taxes of 1871, and she has paid all other taxes assessed on the land since the trust deed or mortgage was given.

Early in the summer of 1871, Austin Johnson, whom Mrs. Bradley, in July, 1870, had appointed her business agent, went on the land on her behalf, and, in 1872, Mrs. Bradley and Austin Johnson together went upon the land, and she took personal and exclusive possession of it, which, by herself and her tenants, she has retained ever since.

February 22, 1872, Mrs. Bradley filed a bill in the circuit court of Mason county to set aside the release of the Breedlove trust deed or mortgage, on the ground of fraud, and for the foreclosure of that mortgage on the 1,200 acres for the payment of the balance of the original debt. McCune was a party, but seems to have left the state, and was brought in by publication. The bill was contested, and on August 22, 1879, the Mason circuit court entered a decree of foreclosure and sale on the McCune trust deed, finding the amount due Mrs. Bradley to be $31,500. The 680 acres were sold by the master in chancery, October 27, 1879, bid in for Mrs. Bradley for $10,000, and a certificate was issued to her.

Mrs. Bradley proceeded to develop and improve the 680 acres, drained the tract, erected farm buildings, laid tiles, reduced the land to cultivation, and has maintained exclusive possession to this date.

September 4, 1893, Prettyman gave a quitclaim deed of the land to Lightcap, which was recorded November 30, 1894. July 13, 1895, these actions in ejectment were commenced.

*The McCune trust deed or mortgage was [4] executed August 13, 1868, and at that time chapter 57 of the Revised Statutes of Illinois contained these sections:

"Sec. 12. Whenever any lands or tenements shall be sold by virtue of any execution, it shall be the duty of the sheriff or other officer, instead of executing a deed for the premises sold, to give to the purchaser or purchasers of such land or tenements a certificate in writing, describing the lands or tenements purchased, and the sum paid therefor, or, if purchased by the plaintiff in the execution, the amount of his bid, and the time when the purchaser will be entitled to a deed for such lands or tenements, unless the same shall be redeemed, as is provided in this chapter, and such sheriff or other officer shall, within ten days from such sale, file in the office of the recorder of the county, a duplicate of such certificate, signed by him; and such certificate, or a certified copy thereof, shall be taken and deemed evidence of the facts therein contained.

"Sec. 13. It shall be lawful for any defendant, his heirs, executors, administrators, or grantees, whose lands or tenements shall be sold by virtue of any execution, within twelve months from such sale, to redeem such lands or tenements, by paying to the purchaser thereof, his executors, administrators, or assigns, or to the sheriff or other officer who sold the same, for the benefit of such purchaser, the sum of money which may have been paid on the purchase thereof, or the amount given or bid, if purchased by the plaintiff in the execution, together with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per centum from the time of such sale, and on such sum being made as aforesaid, the said sale and the certificate thereupon granted shall be null and void."

"Sec. 22. If such lands or tenements so sold shall not be redeemed as aforesaid, either by the defendant or by such creditor as aforesaid, within fifteen months from the time of such sale, it shall be the duty of the sheriff or other officer, who sold the same, or his successor in office, or his ex-[5]ecutors *or administrators, to complete such sale, by executing a deed to the purchaser;

.. ."

"Sec. 24. In all cases hereafter, where lands shall be sold under and by virtue of any decree of a court of equity, for the sale of mortgaged lands, it shall be lawful for the mortgagor of such lands, his heirs, executors, administrators, or grantees to redeem the same in the manner prescribed in this chapter for the redemption of lands sold by virtue of executions issued upon judgments at common law, and judgment creditors may redeem lands sold under any such decree in the same manner as is prescribed for the redemption of lands in like manner sold upon executions issued upon judgments at common law."

The statutes contained no limitation of time within which a sheriff's or master's deed must be taken after the period for redemption had expired, and prescribed no penalty or loss of right to the purchaser by reason of delay or failure in taking out such deed.

In Rucker v. Dooley, 49 Ill. 377, 95 Am. Dec. 614, the supreme court of Illinois, at its September term, 1868, reasoning by analogy, held in an equity suit, as against a purchaser of real estate at an execution sale, who was never in its possession, and had no claim to it, except under his judgment and sale, and who had taken out a sheriff's deed twenty-nine years after the sale, and in favor of a bona fide purchaser, in possession, claiming by mesne conveyances from the judgment debtor, that, for the protection of purchasers for a valuable consideration, without notice, from the judgment debtor and those claiming under him, a sheriff's deed ought not to be issued after the lapse of twenty years, and that application for a deed made after the lapse of seven years, during which the judgment was a lien, and fifteen months, the time given for redemption, and within twenty years, should be made to the proper court by rule on the sheriff and notice to the parties interested.

March 22, 1872, an act of the general assembly of Illinois was approved, entitled, "An Act in Regard to Judgments and Decrees, and the Manner of Enforcing the [6]Same by Execution, *and to Provide for the Redemption of Real Estate Sold Under Execution or Decree," which went into force July 1, 1872, the provisions of which were not materially different from those above quoted, but § 30 was as follows, the additions to former acts being indicated by italics:

195 U. S.

"§ 30. When the premises mentioned in any such certificate shall not be redeemed in pursuance of law, the legal holder of such certificate shall be entitled to a deed therefor at any time within five years from the expiration of the time of redemption. The deed shall be executed by the sheriff, master in chancery, or other officer who made such sale, or by his successor in office, or by some person specially appointed by the court for the purpose. If the time of redemption shall have elapsed before the taking effect of this act, a deed may be given within two years from the time this act shall take effect. When such deed is not taken within the time limited by this act, the certificate of purchase shall be null and void; but if such deed is wrongfully withheld by the officer whose duty it is to execute the same, or if the execution of such deed is restrained by injunction or order of a court or judge, the time during which the deed is so withheld or the execution thereof restrained shall not be taken as any part of the five years within which said holder shall take a deed."

Mr. John S. Miller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Merritt Starr and W. W. Hammond, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The law of the land, as recognized and enforced by the courts, providing means of enforcement of contracts, becomes a part of the contract the same as though included in its terms; and a change in such law, after a contract has been made or title vested thereunder, by which change the obligation of such contract is impaired or such title is divested, impairs the obligation of contracts, and, if accomplished by a statute of a state, is obnoxious to the Federal Constitution.

Tennessee v. Sneed, 96 U. S. 69, 24 L. ed. 610; Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793; Louisiana v. New Orleans, 102 U. S. 203, 26 L. ed. 132; Walker v. Whitehead, 16 Wall. 314, 21 L. ed. 357; Field v. Brokaw, 148 Ill. 654, 37 N. E. 80; Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. ed. 93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1042; Seibert v. Lewis, 122 U. S. 284, 30 L. ed. 1161, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1206; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 319, 11 L. ed. 143, 146; Gunn v. Barry, 15 Wall. 610, 21 L. ed. 212; Shapleigh v. San Angelo, 167 U. S. 646, 657, 42 L. ed. 310, 314, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 957; Ogden v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 257, 6 L. ed. 606, 621; McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 617, 11 L. ed. 397, 401.

The English law of mortgages was adopted in Illinois. A mortgage is a conditional conveyance of the fee. The legal title passes to the mortgagee. After condition broken, the title at law becomes absolute in the mortgagee, who may recover possession as against the mortgagor. The mortgagee is held, in law, the owner of the fee, having the jus in rem, as well as the jus ad rem. This ejectment suit was one at law, and it did not matter that the rule was different in a court of equity, as the court at law could not consider that rule.

Esler v. Heffernan, 159 Ill. 38, 41 N. E. 1113.

After condition broken, the mortgagor has only an equity of redemption. By the redemption statute in force when this mortgage was given, that equitable estate or right was continued for twelve months after a foreclosure.

Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 318, 11 L. ed. 143, 147.

Such was the law of the state as promulgated by the courts of last resort at and before the date of the mortgage contract in question in this case.

Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 318, 11 L. ed. 143, 145; Carroll v. Ballance, 26 Ill. 9, 79 Am. Dec. 354; Chickering v. Failes, 26 Ill. 507; Nelson v. Pinegar, 30 Ill. 473; Griffin v. Marine Co. 52 Ill. 130; Kenyon v. Shreck, 52 Ill. 382; Kelgour v. Wood, 64 Ill. 345; Williams v. Bruntton, 8 Ill. 600; Longwith v. Butler, 8 Ill. 32; Kruse v. Scripps, 11 Ill. 98.

The right of the mortgagor, or his grantees, to redeem after condition broken, is a purely equitable right,—the creation of courts of chancery,—and can be asserted only in a court of equity. It could not be recognized in a court of law in an ejectment suit, as is done in the case at bar.

Kenyon v. Shreck, 52 Ill. 382; Bracken v. Cooper, 80 Ill. 221; Mulvey v. Gibbons, 87 Ill. 367.

His right of redemption after sale and under the statute was only upon the absolute condition of making full payment, within a prescribed time, of the bid, interest, and costs.

And so the law of Illinois remained after said date, and still remains; and is enforced in cases where the statute of 1872 does not apply to change it.

Kelgour v. Wood, 64 Ill. 345; Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632; Harper v. Ely, 70 Ill. 581; Oldham v. Pfleger, 84 Ill. 102; Davis v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 84 Ill. 508; Mulvey v. Gibbons, 87 Ill. 367; Fitch v. Wetherbee, 110 Ill. 475; Smith v. Mace, 137 Ill. 68, 26 N. E. 1092; Esler v. Heffernan, 159 Ill. 38, 41 N. E. 1113; Walker v. Warner, 179 Ill. 16, 70 Am. St. Rep. 85, 53 N. E. 594; Ware v. Schintz, 190 Ill. 189, 60 N. E. 67; Farrar v. Payne, 73 Ill. 83; Stone v. Tyler, 173 Ill. 147, 50 N. E. 688.

By the law of Illinois as promulgated and enforced by the courts of last resort at and prior to the date of said mortgage contract, if the mortgagor and his grantees failed to redeem the mortgaged premises from foreclosure sale within the time limited by the statute and the decree of foreclosure, his equity of redemption was barred and foreclosed, and thereafter he had no further right, title, or claim in or to the premises.

Burgett v. Osborne, 172 Ill. 227, 50 N. E. 206; Bozarth v. Largent, 128 Ill. 95, 21 N. E. 218; Smith v. Mace, 137 Ill. 68, 26 N. E. 1002; Stephens v. Illinois Mut. F. Ins. Co. 43 Ill. 327; 2 Jones, Mortg. § 1661; Mulvey v. Gibbons, 87 Ill. 367; Massey v. Westcott, 40 Ill. 160; Herdman v. Cooper, 138 Ill. 583, 28 N. E. 1094; Lucas v. Nichols, 66 Ill. 41; McLagan v. Brown, 11 Ill. 519; Fitch v. Wetherbee, 110 Ill. 475.

Defendant in error could only recover in this ejectment suit on the strength of his own title.

Hague v. Porter, 45 Ill. 318; Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632; Hammond v. Shepard, 186 Ill. 235, 78 Am. St. Rep. 274, 57 N. E. 867.

And this must be a legal, and not a mere equitable, title.

Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632.

But, on the other hand, defendant in error could not recover, even if he had the legal title, while plaintiff in error rightfully held the possession of the land under a complete equitable title.

Stow v. Russell, 36 Ill. 18; Staley v. Murphy, 47 Ill. 241; Kilgour v. Gockley, 83 Ill. 109; Sands v. Wacaser, 149 Ill. 530, 36 N. E. 960.

As construed by the supreme court of Illinois in the case at bar, the statute of 1872 has so changed the law that, notwithstanding the mortgagor and those claiming under him did not redeem said premises from said sale according to law, when the certificate of purchase became void, the title to said premises must, in order to give practical effect to said statute, be still in the mortgagor or in the defendant in error claiming under him.

Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221.

For the purpose of determining whether it infringes the Constitution, as claimed, said statute must be understood to mean what the courts of last resort of the state have construed it to mean.

Bell v. Morrison, 1 Pet. 351, 7 L. ed. 174; D'Wolf v. Rabaud, 1 Pet. 476, 7 L. ed. 227; Van Rensselaer v. Kearney, 11 How. 297, 13 L. ed. 703; Tioga R. Co. v. Blossburg & C. R. Co. 20 Wall. 137, 22 L. ed. 331; Townsend v. Todd, 91 U. S. 452, 23 L. ed. 413; Scipio v. Wright, 101 U. S. 665, 25 L. ed.

1037; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

A statutory bar does not satisfy a debt, annul a contract, or deprive the holder of security.

Keener v. Crull, 19 Ill. 189; Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 376; McCagg v. Heacock, 42 Ill. 153; Brockman v. Sieverling, 6 Ill. App. 512; Hancock v. Franklin Ins. Co. 114 Mass. 155; Moses v. St. Paul, 67 Ala. 168; Whelan v. Kinsley, 26 Ohio St. 131; Waterman v. Brown, 31 Pa. 161; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. Sr. 278.

If plaintiff in error had a right of entry as against the mortgagor in 1872, when condition was broken and she made her peaceable entry, the statute of 1872, which the supreme court of Illinois says is merely a statute of limitation, cannot have destroyed or changed that right of possession without invading the Constitution; for laches will not be imputed to one in the peaceable possession of land.

Mills v. Lockwood, 42 Ill. 111; Dorman v. Dorman, 187 Ill. 154, 79 Am. St. Rep. 210, 58 N. E. 235; Wilson v. Byers, 77 Ill. 76; Boyd v. Boyd, 163 Ill. 611, 45 N. E. 118; A. R. Beck Lumber Co. v. Rupp, 188 Ill. 562, 80 Am. St. Rep. 190, 59 N. E. 429; Parker v. Shannon, 137 Ill. 376, 27 N. E. 525; Bush v. Stanley, 122 Ill. 406, 13 N. E. 249.

A constitutional statute of limitations does not run against or affect a possessor of real estate, but one out of possession. This was the law of Illinois when this mortgage deed was made.

Mills v. Lockwood, 42 Ill. 111; Parker v. Shannon, 137 Ill. 376, 27 N. E. 525.

By the repeated decisions of the court of last resort of Illinois it had become a fixed rule of property at and prior to the date of said mortgage, that the mortgage conveyed the fee, subject to conditional defeasance; that after condition broken the title became absolute in the mortgagee, who was entitled to recover possession of the premises; and that such legal title remained in the mortgagee, unaffected by the equitable proceedings and decree of foreclosure and sale, until by the master's deed it should pass to the purchaser at such sale. Such subsequent proceedings were in aid, and not in extinguishment, of the original title of the mortgagee.

Williams v. Brunton, 8 Ill. 600; Kruse v. Scripps, 11 Ill. 98; Farrar v. Payne, 73 Ill. 82.

Such a change in the law, as here applied, deprives plaintiff in error of the right, title, and interest vested in her under the laws of the state as they existed at the date of her mortgage and when condition was broken and when she took possession, and violates the prohibition of the 14th Amendment of the Federal Constitution.
195 U. S.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 38 L. ed. 896, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 44 L. ed. 1187, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009; Tindal v. Wesley, 167 U. S. 204, 42 L. ed. 137, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

If the constitutional guaranties referred to protect plaintiff in error from the divestiture of her title, either by the statute of 1872 or by the decision of the supreme court of Illinois, she has such an equitable title as is contemplated by the statute of 1835; and having been in possession, by actual residence thereon by her tenants, since 1872, and paid all the taxes, and for more than seven successive years from and after the expiration of the period of redemption (when her equitable title became complete),—she is protected by said statute from the action of defendant in error.

Irving v. Brownell, 11 Ill. 402; Collins v. Smith, 18 Ill. 160; Martin v. Judd, 81 Ill. 488; Dolton v. Cain, 14 Wall. 472, 20 L. ed. 830; Gregg v. Tesson, 1 Black, 150, 17 L. ed. 74; Dredge v. Forsyth, 2 Black, 563, 17 L. ed. 253.

Messrs. E. A. Wallace and George W. Wall argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lyman Lucey, Jr., filed a brief for defendant in error:

The Illinois statute complained of is a statute of limitation, and is held to be such by the supreme court of Illinois.

Ryhiner v. Frank, 105 Ill. 326; Peterson v. Emmerson, 135 Ill. 55, 25 N. E. 842; Seiberger v. Weinberg, 151 Ill. 369, 37 N. E. 1033; Brown v. Ridenhower, 161 Ill. 239, 43 N. E. 976; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221; Bradley v. Lightcap, 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546.

The legislature of a state has the right to enact statutes of limitation; and it is no objection to their validity that they are made to apply to existing rights, provided a reasonable time be given in the future for complying with the statute.

Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 255, 34 L. ed. 659, 663, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 632, 24 L. ed. 365, 366; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 674, 26 L. ed. 886, 888; Jackson ex dem. Hart v. Lamphire, 3 Pet. 280, 290, 7 L. ed. 679, 683; Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 316, 11 L. ed. 143, 145; Ross v. Duval, 13 Pet. 45, 64, 10 L. ed. 51, 60; Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. ed. 808, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854.

In Illinois, the title to land mortgaged is not out of the mortgagor, except as between him and the mortgagee, and then only as an incident of the mortgage debt, for the sole purpose of obtaining satisfaction. As to all other persons, and for all other purposes, the mortgagor is the legal owner of the mortgaged premises; and in the case at bar, the supreme court of Illinois merely adheres to the law of the state as it always has existed therein.

Fitch v. Pinckard, 5 Ill. 69; Ryan v. Dunlap, 17 Ill. 40, 63 Am. Dec. 334; Sargent v. Howe, 21 Ill. 149; Vansant v. Allmon, 23 Ill. 30; Hall v. Lance, 25 Ill. 280; Harris v. Mills, 28 Ill. 44, 81 Am. Dec. 259; Pollock v. Maison, 41 Ill. 516; Emory v. Keighan, 88 Ill. 482; Delano v. Bennett, 90 Ill. 533; Barrett v. Hinckley, 124 Ill. 32, 7 Am. St. Rep. 331, 14 N. E. 863; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 518, 58 N. E. 221; Ware v. Schintz, 190 Ill. 189, 60 N. E. 67; Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. 497, 500, 6 L. ed. 144, 145; Hutchins v. King, 1 Wall. 53, 17 L. ed. 544.

While the mortgage conveys to the mortgagee a legal title, it is only a limited or qualified legal title; and neither before nor after condition broken does the mortgagee have the "absolute legal title" under the law of Illinois. On the contrary, it is only a base or determinable fee. Independent of the debt which the mortgage is given to secure, he has no title whatever. When the debt is paid, released, discharged, or barred by the statute of limitations, or in any way satisfied, the mortgagee's title is extinguished by operation of law.

Barrett v. Hinckley, 124 Ill. 32, 7 Am. St. Rep. 331, 14 N. E. 863; Delano v. Bennett, 90 Ill. 533; Waughop v. Bartlett, 165 Ill. 124, 46 N. E. 197; Speer v. Haddock, 31 Ill. 439; Bogardus v. Moses, 181 Ill. 554, 54 N. E. 984; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221; Ware v. Schintz, 190 Ill. 189, 60 N. E. 67.

The title which the mortgagee gets by the mortgage can be used by him for one, and only one, purpose, viz., as a means for the collection of the debt secured, or so much thereof as the mortgaged premises, when resorted to for that purpose, will satisfy. A valid foreclosure of the mortgage by a decree of a court of equity in a foreclosure suit, followed by a valid sale in pursuance of the decree, extinguishes the mortgage lien and satisfies the debt, so far as the mortgage and land is concerned.

Smith v. Smith, 32 Ill. 198; Seligman v. Laubheimer, 58 Ill. 124; Ogle v. Koerner, 140 Ill. 170, 29 N. E. 563; Rains v. Mann, 68 Ill. 264; Robins v. Swain, 68 Ill. 197; Finley v. Thayer, 42 Ill. 350; School Trustees v. Love, 34 Ill. App. 418; People v. Beebe, 1 Barb. 379.

The land, having been once applied by sale under a valid foreclosure towards satisfying the debt which was a charge upon it, could not again be sold or applied to the payment of the same charge.

State Bank v. Wilson, 9 Ill. 57; Whitenack v. Agartt, 56 Ill. App. 72; Smith v. Smith, 32 Ill. 198; Hughes v. Frisby, 81 Ill. 188; Ogle v. Koerner, 140 Ill. 170, 29 N. E. 563; Smith v. Vandyke, 17 Wis. 208; Smith v. Ludington, 17 Wis. 335; Warrick v. Hull, 102 Ill. 280.

The authorities already cited show that a mortgagee, or cestui que trust, who becomes the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, thereafter sustains the same relation to the property that any stranger would sustain if such stranger had been purchaser.

And see Davis v. Dale, 150 Ill. 239, 37 N. E. 215.

In Illinois, a certificate of purchase is only a lien. No title passes to the holder of it, and there is none vested in him until the deed is made. Until the deed is made, he is not even entitled to the possession of the premises.

Bennett v. Matson, 41 Ill. 332; O'Brian v. Fry, 82 Ill. 274; Rockwell v. Servant, 63 Ill. 425; Vaughn v. Ely, 4 Barb. 159; Evertson v. Sawyer, 2 Wend. 507; Aldrich v. Sharp, 4 Ill. 261; Kihlholz v. Wolff, 8 Ill. App. 371; Johnson v. Baker, 38 Ill. 98, 87 Am. Dec. 293; Hays v. Cassell, 70 Ill. 669; Stephens v. Illinois Mut. F. Ins. Co. 43 Ill. 327; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221; Bowman v. People, 82 Ill. 246, 25 Am. Rep. 316; Roberts v. Clelland, 82 Ill. 538; Smith v. Colvin, 17 Barb. 161.

The statute complained of, at most, only operates upon the remedy, and not even upon that until after all contract rights, obligations, and duties given by or growing out of the McCune trust deed had been enforced, and the trust deed itself extinguished by the foreclosure and sale. From and after the sale, all rights and interests of plaintiff in error in or to the land were measured by the certificate of purchase.

Davis v. Dale, 150 Ill. 239, 37 N. E. 215; Ogle v. Koerner, 140 Ill. 170, 29 N. E. 563; Seligman v. Laubheimer, 58 Ill. 124; Scheberger v. Weinberg, 151 Ill. 369, 37 N. E. 1033; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221; Peterson v. Emmerson, 135 Ill. 55, 25 N. E. 842; Ryhiner v. Frank, 105 Ill. 326; Smith v. Smith, 32 Ill. 198; Rains v. Mann, 68 Ill. 264; Wayman v. Cochrane, 35 Ill. 152; Leslie v. Bontel, 130 Ill. 501, 6 L. R. A. 62, 22 N. E. 594.

A legislative act is not in conflict with the Federal Constitution, prohibiting the impairment of the obligation of a contract, unless it operates directly on the contract and impairs it.

Hanford v. Davies, 163 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 157, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051; Turner v.

Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 109, 40 L. ed. 93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Von Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. 535, 18 L. ed. 403.

The conclusions of the supreme court of Illinois as to the respective rights, title, and interest of the mortgagor and mortgagee; the effect of the foreclosure proceedings and the sale of the mortgaged premises by the master in chancery; the relation which the plaintiff in error sustained to the property by bidding the same off at the sale; the rights or interest acquired by the certificate of purchase; the rights, title, and estate still remaining in the mortgagor or his grantee, Prettyman, after the sale; the necessity of a deed, after redemption expired, in order to divest the title and estate of the mortgagor or his grantee, and vest the same in the holder of the certificate,—being predicated on the general local law of the state governing the same, are not reviewable by this court on a writ of error to the supreme court of the state.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana Sugar Ref. Co. 125 U. S. 18, 31 L. ed. 607, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 741; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 109, 40 L. ed. 94, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Abraham v. Casey, 179 U. S. 210, 45 L. ed. 156, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557.

A certificate of purchase is not even color of title, much less does it confer title.

Bride v. Watt, 23 Ill. 507; Rigor v. Frye, 62 Ill. 507; Shackleford v. Bailey, 35 Ill. 387; Perry v. Burton, 111 Ill. 138.

The title which is required by Starr & C. (Ill.) Ann. Stat. chap. 83, § 4, must be at least a prima facie good title, either in law or equity, and must continue in the party setting up the bar, for seven years,—as well as possession for seven years.

Elston v. Kennicott, 46 Ill. 207; Moore v. Brown, 11 How. 414, 13 L. ed. 751; Skyles v. King, 2 A. K. Marsh. 385.

The supreme court of Illinois has expressly decided that there is no title in the holder of the certificate of purchase, either legal or equitable, and especially after the certificate is barred by the statute.

Ryhiner v. Frank, 105 Ill. 326; Peterson v. Emmerson, 135 Ill. 55, 25 N. E. 842; Seeberger v. Weinberg, 151 Ill. 369, 37 N. E. 1033; Brown v. Ridenhower, 161 Ill. 239, 43 N. E. 976; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221; Bradley v. Lightcap, 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546; Bradley v. Lightcap, 202 Ill. 154, 67 N. E. 45; Heacock v. Lubuke, 107 Ill. 396.

It is not only a statutory provision, but an elementary rule, strictly adhered to by this court, that the construction of a state law upon questions affecting the title to real property, by the highest court of the state where the land is located, is binding upon this court, and the same is true respecting the construction of statutes of limitation.

De Vaughn v. Hutchinson, 165 U. S. 566, 41 L. ed. 827, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 461; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 44 L. ed. 1029, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Brine v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 627, 24 L. ed. 858; Clark v. Graham, 6 Wheat. 577, 5 L. ed. 334; Abraham v. Casey, 179 U. S. 210, 45 L. ed. 156, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Williams v. Kirtland, 13 Wall. 306, 20 L. ed. 683; Turner v. Wilkes County, 173 U. S. 461, 43 L. ed. 768, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 464; Arndt v. Griggs, 134 U. S. 316, 33 L. ed. 918, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 557; Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 518, 41 L. ed. 1100, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Percy v. Cockrill, 4 C. C. A. 73, 10 U. S. App. 574, 53 Fed. 872; Brunswick Terminal Co. v. National Bank, 48 L. R. A. 625, 40 C. C. A. 22, 99 Fed. 635; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Board of Liquidation v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 622, 45 L. ed. 347, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263.

The decision of the supreme court of Illinois complained of rests on independent grounds not involving a Federal question, and broad enough to maintain its judgment, viz., the application of the doctrine of res judicata; and, under repeated decisions of this court, the writ of error should be dismissed or the judgment be affirmed without considering any other question.

California Powder Works v. Davis, 151 U. S. 389, 38 L. ed. 206, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350; Hale v. Akers, 132 U. S. 554, 33 L. ed. 442, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Jenkins v. Loewenthal, 110 U. S. 222, 28 L. ed. 129, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 638; Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 622, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Eustis v. Bolles, 150 U. S. 361, 37 L. ed. 1111, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131.

The statute complained of is not inconsistent with the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution, or § 1979 of the Revised Statutes.

Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 34 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 628, 24 L. ed. 365; Saranac Land & Timber Co. v. Roberts, 177 U. S. 318, 44 L. ed. 786, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Re Brown, 135 U. S. 705, 707, 34 L. ed. 317, 318, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.

It is well settled by the decisions of this court that the 14th Amendment was not designed to limit, and does not limit, what is known as the police power of the states, a familiar instance of the exercise of which is the enactment of statutes of limitation, and there is no constitutional objection to their validity, provided a reasonable time, taking into consideration the nature of the case, is allowed for bringing an action or performing an act after its passage and before the bar takes effect.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 434; Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 255, 34 L. ed. 663, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76; Turner v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 94, 42 L. ed. 392, 393, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 102, 24 L. ed. 616, 619; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 236, 44 L. ed. 747, 750, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 393, 40 L. ed. 467, 469, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Leeper v. Texas, 139 U. S. 462, 35 L. ed. 225, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Humes, 115 U. S. 512, 518, 29 L. ed. 463, 465, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110; Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Beckwith, 129 U. S. 26, 29, 32 L. ed. 585, 586, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 697, 34 L. ed. 816, 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 134, 24 L. ed. 77, 87; Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 661, 37 L. ed. 599, 601, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721; Stearns v. Gettings, 23 Ill. 387; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

The decision of the supreme court of Illinois which this court is asked to review proceeds not only upon the general jurisprudence of the state, but is also based upon rules of property fully established in a series of adjudications by the highest court of the state, long acquiesced in by its citizens, and firmly implanted in its jurisprudence, as is well shown by the decisions of the state supreme court hereinbefore cited. And under repeated decisions, this court will apply the rules adopted in the state to the determination of the controversy.

Suydam v. Williamson, 24 How. 427, 16 L. ed. 742; Chicago v. Robbins, 2 Black, 418, 17 L. ed. 298; Gage v. Pumpelly, 115 U. S. 454, 29 L. ed. 449, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Lanc v. Vick, 3 How. 464, 11 L. ed. 681; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 402.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Among the defenses it is stated Mrs. Bradley relied on were that "under § 6 of chapter 83 of the Revised Statutes, in regard to limitations, the trust deed from McCune to Johnson, the decree of sale, and certificate of purchase constituted color of title which, coupled with her possession and payment of taxes for seven successive years, made her the legal owner of the lands to the extent and according to the purport of her paper title;" that "under § 4 of the same act her possession and actual residence, through her tenants, for seven successive years, having a connected title in law or equity deducible of record from the United States, by virtue of the same trust deed, decree and sale, barred the action of plaintiff;" and "that she was mortgagee in possession after condition broken, and entitled to possession as such." The supreme court of Illinois overruled all these defenses, and held *that[17] when the sale was made under the decree, and the mortgagee purchased at the sale, the mortgage was satisfied as to the land, and all rights of the mortgagee were represented by the certificate of purchase; and that, by force of the act of 1872, the mortgagee having failed to take the deed within the time limited by the statute, the certificate became null and void, her title terminated as it would on redemption, and she ceased to have any interest whatever in the premises, so that the mortgagor or his grantees, without any payment of the mortgage debt, was entitled to recover the possession from the mortgagee, in ejectment, on the strength of a perfect title.

Before and when the trust deed to Johnson, which may be treated as if a mortgage to Mrs. Bradley, was given, the legal title passed to the mortgagee according to the law of Illinois in respect of mortgages.

After condition broken the mortgagee became entitled to possession of the mortgaged premises, and could maintain an action of ejectment. The mortgagor had only an equity of redemption, and, in case of sale on foreclosure, had, by statute, the right to redeem within twelve months by making full payment.

The law in general as it is to-day was thus declared in Ware v. Schintz, 190 Ill. 189, 193, 60 N. E. 67, 69:

"Under the repeated rulings of this court a mortgagee, as against the mortgagor, is held, as in England, in law, to be the owner of the fee, having the jus in re as well as ad rem, and entitled to all the rights and remedies which the law gives to such owner, and may, after condition broken, maintain ejectment against the mortgagor. The mortgagor or his assignee, however, is the legal owner of the mortgaged estate as against all persons, excepting the mortgagee or his assignees. Delahay v. Clement, 4 Ill. 201; Vansant v. Allmon, 23 Ill. 30; Carroll v. Ballance, 26 Ill. 9, 79 Am. Dec. 354; Oldham v. Pfleger, 84 Ill. 102; Fountain v. Bookstaver, 141 Ill. 461, 31 N. E. 17; Esler v. Heffernan, 159 Ill. 38, 41 N. E. 1113.

The fee title held by the mortgagee is in the nature of a base or determinable fee. [18] The term of its *existence is measured by that of the mortgage debt. When the latter is paid or becomes barred by the statute of limitations the mortgagee's title is extinguished by operation of law. Pollock v. Maison, 41 Ill. 516; Harris v. Mills, 28 Ill. 44, 81 Am. Dec. 259; Gibson v. Rees, 50 Ill. 383; Barrett v. Hinckley, 124 Ill. 32, 7 Am. St. Rep. 331, 14 N. E. 863; Lightcap v. Bradley, 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221. Until it is extinguished the legal title is in the mortgagee for the purpose of obtaining satisfaction of his debt."

The condition of the McCune mortgage was broken as soon as made by failure to pay taxes previously and then due, and again by failure to pay the notes maturing in 1869, 1870, and 1871, and Mrs. Bradley entered into peaceable possession of the tract of 680 acres before the act of 1872 took effect. If the assent of the mortgagor was necessary, which we do not hold it was, it should be implied in the circumstances. Her possession was that of mortgagee in possession, and she could defend, as against the owner of the equity of redemption, any action except for an accounting of the rents and profits, and to redeem. And, as she could pursue concurrent remedies, the character of her possession was not affected by the filing and pendency of the bill to set aside the release of the Breedlove mortgage. But that bill went to decree in 1879 of foreclosure of the McCune mortgage by sale, and sale was had. There was no independent purchaser, nor was the whole amount of the mortgage debt bid, but Mrs. Bradley, the mortgagee in possession, bid about one third of the amount due. By the statute the right of redemption of McCune and his grantee was barred and determined October 27, 1880, at the expiration of twelve months from the date of sale, and so it was by the express provision of the decree of foreclosure.

The certificate of purchase was issued to Mrs. Bradley, but it does not appear that she obtained a deed. It is assumed, and we assume, that she did not, although it is suggested that after the lapse of so many years, and under the circumstances, in an action at law by the original mortgagor [19] against the *mortgagee in possession, an irrebuttable presumption of a deed arises on grounds of public policy.

The supreme court of Illinois in the present case decides that the act of 1872 applies to mortgagees in possession, and that it operates not simply as a statute of limitations on the right to obtain a deed, but in effect as a statute forfeiting, by the nullification of the certificate, the mortgagee's estate and right of possession by reason of laches, and means that if a deed be not taken out within the time specified, the mortgagee has lost his debt, and the mortgagor has been reinstated in his former title by operation of law, and without having paid anything in redemption. Accepting the construction of the act by the state court, and its conclusion that it applies to Mrs. Bradley, then the question is whether such a statute so applied does not impair the obligation of the contract previously existing between the mortgagee and the mortgagor, or deprive the mortgagee of property rights without due process. That question was raised in the supreme court of Illinois, and the court held that it did not. 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546.

Confessedly, subsequent laws which, in their operation, amount to the denial of rights accruing by a prior contract, are obnoxious to constitutional objection.

In Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. ed. 143, the statute objected to gave the mortgagor twelve months to redeem after the sale, and Mr. Chief Justice Taney said:

"It declares that, although the mortgaged premises should be sold under the decree of the court of chancery, yet that the equitable estate of the mortgagor shall not be extinguished, but shall continue for twelve months after the sale; and it moreover gives a new and like estate, which before had no existence, to the judgment creditor, to continue for fifteen months. If such rights may be added to the original contract by subsequent legislation, it would be difficult to say at what point they must stop. . . . Any such modification of a contract by subsequent legislation, against the consent of *one of the parties, unquestionably impairs [20] its obligations, and is prohibited by the Constitution."

In Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. ed. 93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1042, it was held that a state statute which authorized redemption of property sold in foreclosure of a mortgage, where no such right previously existed, or extended the period of redemption beyond the time previously allowed, could not apply to a sale under a mortgage executed before its passage, and Mr. Justice Shiras, referring to Brine v. Hartford P. Ins. Co. 96 U. S. 627, 637, 24 L. ed. 858, 862, said:

"But this court held, through Mr. Justice Miller, that all the laws of a state existing at the time a mortgage or any other contract is made, which affect the rights of the parties to the contract, enter into and become a part of it, and are obligatory on all courts which assume to give a remedy on such contracts, . . . that it is therefore said that these laws enter into and become a part of the contract"—and that "the remedy subsisting in a state when and where a contract is made and is to be performed is a part of the obligation." . . .

"What we are now considering is, whether the change of remedy was detrimental to such a degree as to amount to an impairment of the plaintiff's right; and, as this record discloses that the sale left a portion of the plaintiff's judgment unpaid, it may be fairly argued that this provision of the act [which provided that the land 'shall not again be liable for sale for any balance'] does deprive the plaintiff of a right inherent in her contract.

"When we are asked to put this case within the rule of those cases in which we have held that it is competent for the states to change the form of the remedy, or to modify it otherwise, as they may see fit, provided no substantial right secured by the contract is thereby impaired, we are bound to consider the entire scheme of the new statute, and to have regard to its probable effect on the rights of the parties."

In Hooker v. Burr, 194 U. S. 415, 48 L. ed. 1046, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706, these and many [21] other cases were considered, and the distinction was pointed out between a purchase by the mortgagee and by an independent purchaser, having no connection whatever with the original contract between the mortgagor and mortgagee, and whose contract was made under the law as then existing; as well as the distinction where the mortgagee bids the whole amount of the mortgage debt, as in Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Cushman, 108 U. S. 51, 27 L. ed. 648, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 236, which was cited with approval. There the company bid enough to pay the full amount of the mortgage debt, principal and interest, and on redemption contended that it was entitled to interest at the rate existing at the time of the execution of the mortgage, which had been reduced before the sale, though subsequent to the mortgage. Barnitz v. Beverly was distinguished. In that case the sum bid at the foreclosure sale did not equal the amount due on the mortgage, the debt of the mortgagor was not thereby paid, and it was the mortgagee's rights under her contract as contained in the mortgage, and not her rights as a purchaser, that were in controversy. In the Cushman Case, on the contrary, the amount bid at the foreclosure sale paid the mortgage debt, and the subsequent position of the mortgagee was as a purchaser only.

And we said: "If the mortgage had been foreclosed, and the mortgagee had thereby realized his debt, principal and interest in full, upon the sale, there can be no doubt that he would not have been heard to assert the invalidity of the subsequent legislation, nor would an independent purchaser at the sale have been heard to make the same complaint. Of course, this does not include the case of a mortgagee who purchases at the foreclosure sale, and bids a price sufficient to pay his mortgage debt in full with interest, and an action thereafter commenced against him to set aside the sale because it was made in violation of legislation subsequent to the mortgage. In such case we suppose there can be no doubt of the right of the mortgagee to assert, as a defense to the action, the unconstitutionality of the subsequent legislation "as an impairment of [22] his contract contained in the mortgage."

In Illinois the legal title vests in the mortgagee; but in equity that title is regarded as a trust estate to secure the payment of the money; and where the mortgaged premises are bid off by the mortgagee, at foreclosure sale, for the full amount of the decree, interest and costs, the mortgage may be held to have expended its force; but where the bid is for less than the full amount, a different rule would be applicable. Bogardus v. Moses, 181 Ill. 554, 559, 560, 54 N. E. 984.

Entitled to pursue different remedies to collect the mortgage debt or to free the mortgaged premises of the right of redemption, foreclosure and sale, purchase and deed are in aid of the original title, and not inconsistent with it. Williams v. Brunton, 8 Ill. 600. If the right of redemption is determined by the efflux of time, which must be before a deed can issue, failure to take out the deed either has no effect, so far as the mortgagor is concerned, because he is not injured, or the right of redemption still remains, and all the mortgagor can claim is that the relation between the parties is unchanged.

In the present case there was no independent purchaser; the bid of the mortgagee was less than one third of the amount found due; there was no redemption, and the right of redemption was cut off; the mortgagee was in possession before and at the time of foreclosure and sale, and when ejectment was brought, sixteen years thereafter; and the mortgage debt had never in fact been paid; so that the original mortgagor as plaintiff in ejectment could not recover, unless, by the subsequent law, the mortgagee had been subjected to the loss of all her rights, as against him, by laches in obtaining a deed, although, as a general rule, laches are not imputable to a party in possession to the loss of the right thereto.

And if the operation of the subsequent law is to impair the obligation of Mrs. Bradley's mortgage contract, or to deprive her of rights protected by the Constitution, we cannot decline jurisdiction because of a construction that we deem untenable. [23] Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gaslight Co.* 115 U. S. 683, 697, 29 L. ed. 510, 515, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 265; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. Indiana ex rel. Ketchum, 194 U. S. 579, 48 L. ed. 1124, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 767.

By the judgment in this case Lightcap had been held clothed with the legal title and the immediate right of possession. And this on the ground that the certificate of purchase discharged the McCune mortgage, and that the act of 1872 nullified the certificate after the lapse of five years. This gave to the limitation of time for taking out the deed the effect of destroying the right of possession taken under the mortgage, wiping out the mortgage with the certificate, and allowing the mortgagor to assert the legal title and right of possession as against the mortgagee as a wrongdoer. That is to say, though Mrs. Bradley was rightfully in possession, and though the mortgage debt had not in fact been paid, the bar of the statute as to the deed is held to be efficacious in turning Mrs. Bradley into a trespasser as respects the mortgagor, who, not having in fact paid anything, is treated as having made payment by the mortgagee's bid, and being at the same time entitled to assert the failure of the purchase by reason of laches in taking out the deed.

And yet, because a statute may take away the sword which a deed would give a mortgagee out of possession, it does not follow that it can lawfully operate on prior transactions so as to take away the shield afforded by possession. Rightful possession is a defense in ejectment (Sands v. Wacaser, 149 Ill. 530, 533, 36 N. E. 960, and cases cited), and Mrs. Bradley's possession could only be treated as wrongful as against the original mortgagor by the application of the subsequent law.

As we have said, when Mrs. Bradley took this mortgage there was no statutory limitation as to the time within which a master's deed must be taken out, and no loss of right by reason of failure to do so was prescribed. After she had filed her bill, and while she was in possession, the act of 1872 went into effect, and, it may be conceded, limited Mrs. Bradley's right to obtain a deed on foreclosure sale, and so far affected *any remedy through a deed she might have had. But, reading the act, as the view of the supreme court compels us to do, as taking away her right to maintain her possession, we are of opinion that it materially impairs the obligation of her contract, and deprives her of property without due process.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

195 U. S.

Leave to file a petition for rehearing denied on October 17, 1904.

LYDIA BRADLEY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

H. W. LIGHTCAP.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 24, 25.)

Constitutional law—impairment of contract obligations—due process of law—destruction of rights of mortgagee in possession.

This case is governed by the decision in Bradley v. Lightcap, ante, 65.

[No. 306.]

Argued April 21, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of Illinois to review an affirmance of the dismissal of a bill to quiet title. Reversed.

See same case below, 202 Ill. 154, 67 N. E. 45.

Mr. John S. Miller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Merritt Starr and W. W. Hammond, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. E. A. Wallace and George W. Wall argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lyman Lacey, Jr., filed a brief for defendant in error.

For contentions of counsel see their briefs as reported in Bradley v. Lightcap, ante 65.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

After the decision reported 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221, Mrs. Bradley filed her bill in equity in the circuit court of Fulton county, Illinois, to quiet her title to the land in controversy in the action in ejectment, and for appropriate relief. The bill was dismissed on demurrer, and Mrs. Bradley carried the case to the supreme court of Illinois, which affirmed the decree below. Bradley v. Light-* [25] cap, 202 Ill. 154, 67 N. E. 45, April 24, 1903. Three of the members of the court dissented. The opinion of the supreme court proceeded on the strength of the decisions in 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221, and 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546.

As we have reversed the judgment in the prior case, this case must take the same course.

Decree reversed, and cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with our opinion in No. 243.

Leave to file a petition for rehearing denied on October 17, 1904.

LYDIA BRADLEY, Appt.,

v.

H. W. LIGHTCAP.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 25, 26.)

*Appeal—dismissal for want of jurisdiction
—when affirmed on appeal.*

A decree of a Federal circuit court, dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a bill to quiet title, on the theory that either complainant's rights as mortgagee in possession had not been held by a decision of the highest state court, in a prior ejectment suit between the same parties, to have been destroyed by a subsequent state statute, and hence no constitutional question was involved, or that, if the state court so held, the remedy was by writ of error from the Federal Supreme Court will be affirmed on appeal, where the judgment of the state court, on a second appeal in the ejectment suit, and in a subsequent suit to quiet title, has been reversed by the Federal Supreme Court for error in deciding the Federal questions involved.

[No. 343.]

Argued April 21, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a bill to quiet title. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John S. Miller argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Merritt Starr and W. W. Hammond, filed a brief for appellant:

This suit seeks to establish and protect appellant's contract rights and her estate in land acquired thereunder, and her possession and right of possession of such land against impairment and deprivation by force of a statute of a state in violation of the Federal Constitution. It therefore arises under the Constitution.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 26, 45 L. ed. 395, 408, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240, 282; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

A case calling for the exercise of such jurisdiction is one arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States.

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; Buncombe County v. Tommey, 115 U. S. 122, 127, 29 L. ed. 305, 306, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 626, 1186; Pana v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 541, 27 L. ed.

429, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704; Johnson County v. Thayer, 94 U. S. 631, 642, 24 L. ed. 133, 135; Clark v. Bever, 139 U. S. 96, 117, 35 L. ed. 88, 97, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468; Folsom v. Township Ninety Six, 159 U. S. 611, 625, 40 L. ed. 278, 283, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 35, 36, 45 L. ed. 410, 413, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Rowan v. Runnels, 5 How. 134, 12 L. ed. 85; Piqua Branch of State Bank v. Knoop, 16 How. 369, 14 L. ed. 977; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 416, 432, 14 L. ed. 997, 1003; Pease v. Peck, 18 How. 595, 15 L. ed. 518; Jefferson Branch Bank v. Skelly, 1 Black, 436, 17 L. ed. 173.

This jurisdiction distinguishes this bill from that filed in the state court.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80.

Diversity of citizenship is not necessary to confer Federal jurisdiction, where the bill shows that, by legislation and judicial decision of the state subsequent to the vesting of complainant's contract rights, such contract rights will be divested or impaired, in breach of the Federal Constitution.

City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 557, 41 L. ed. 1114, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 26, 45 L. ed. 395, 408, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240, 282; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 28, 45 L. ed. 410, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 251; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 516, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Riverside & A. R. Co. v. Riverside, 118 Fed. 736.

The jurisdiction vested upon this ground extended to every question in the case.

Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Nashville v. Cooper, 6 Wall. 247, 18 L. ed. 851; Tennessee v. Davis, 100 U. S. 257, 25 L. ed. 648; Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 685, 42 L. ed. 626, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Gregory v. Van Ee, 160 U. S. 643, 646, 40 L. ed. 566, 567, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 102 U. S. 135, 140, 141, 26 L. ed. 96, 98.

The Federal jurisdiction of a bill to remove a cloud, to quiet the title, and to compel a conveyance, is indisputable.

Alexander v. Pendleton, 8 Cranch, 462, 3 L. ed. 624; Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 32 L. ed. 728, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Mills v. Lockwood, 42 Ill. 111; Wilson v. Byers, 77 Ill. 76; Wehrman v. Conklin, 155 U. S. 314, 39 L. ed. 167, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 129; Clark v. Smith, 13 Pet. 195, 10 L. ed. 123; Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15, 28 L. ed. 52, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Reynolds v. First

195 U. S.

Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 405, 28 L. ed. 733, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 213; Chapman v. Brewer, 114 U. S. 158, 29 L. ed. 83, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed. 909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Sharon v. Tucker, 144 U. S. 533, 36 L. ed. 532, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; Roberts v. Northern P. R. Co. 158 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 873, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 756.

If appellant has an equitable title, a court of equity will enjoin proceedings at law, and direct the cause to proceed in equity for settlement of the title.

Ruckman v. Cory, 129 U. S. 387, 32 L. ed. 728, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 316; Mills v. Lockwood, 42 Ill. 111; Wilson v. Byers, 77 Ill. 76; Smith v. Spencer, 73 Ala. 299; McKibbin v. Bristol, 50 Mich. 319, 15 N. W. 491; Pollock v. Gilbert, 16 Ga. 398, 60 Am. Dec. 732; Pierson v. Ryerson, 5 N. J. Eq. 196; Carpentier v. Montgomery, 13 Wall. 480, 20 L. ed. 698; Barnett v. Cline, 60 Ill. 205; Reed v. Reber, 62 Ill. 240.

Messrs. E. A. Wallace and George W. Wall argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lyman Lacey, Jr., filed a brief for appellee.

The Federal circuit court in which the bill in this case was filed had no right, power, or authority to enjoin the proceedings in the ejectment suit of Lightcap v. Bradley, then pending for trial in the state court.

Haines v. Carpenter, 91 U. S. 254, 256, 23 L. ed. 345, 346; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 624, 12 L. ed. 841, 846; Dial v. Reynolds, 96 U. S. 340, 24 L. ed. 644; United States v. Parkhurst-Davis Mercantile Co. 176 U. S. 317, 320, 44 L. ed. 485, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Sargent v. Helton, 115 U. S. 348, 29 L. ed. 412, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 78; Harkrader v. Wadley, 172 U. S. 148, 164, 43 L. ed. 399, 404, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119.

Independent of the statutory prohibition upon the Federal courts from enjoining proceedings in a state court, it is a settled rule that, between courts of concurrent jurisdiction, the court first acquiring jurisdiction will retain it, and will not be interfered with by another court.

Central Nat. Bank v. Stevens, 169 U. S. 432, 459, 460, 42 L. ed. 807, 817, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 403; Ward v. Todd, 103 U. S. 327, 26 L. ed. 339; Porter v. Sabin, 149 U. S. 473, 480, 37 L. ed. 815, 818, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1008; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 900.

The presumption is that the cause is without the jurisdiction of the Federal circuit court unless the contrary affirmatively appears, and the facts alleged must compel the legal inference that the complainant's cause arises under the Constitution, or under a law or treaty of the United States.

Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 278, 283, 27 L. ed. 932, 934, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 207; Ex parte Smith, 94 U. S. 455, 195 U. S.

24 L. ed. 165; Peper v. Fordyce, 119 U. S. 469, 30 L. ed. 435, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287.

A Federal circuit court cannot reverse or set aside a judgment or decree of a state court which had complete jurisdiction over the parties and subject-matter; neither has it jurisdiction to entertain a bill seeking the rehearing of a cause in a state court, or to correct supposed errors in the proceedings in a state court.

Nougue v. Clapp, 101 U. S. 551, 554, 25 L. ed. 1026, 1027; Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S. 506, 516, 518, 41 L. ed. 1095, 1099, 1100, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665; Peck v. Jenness, 7 How. 612, 624, 12 L. ed. 841, 846; Graver v. Faurot, 64 Fed. 241.

The bill shows on its face that complainant had an adequate remedy at law. If the statute referred to in the bill is unconstitutional, or if it is rendered unconstitutional by the construction which the supreme court of the state gave it, or if complainant by this statute or court, or by both combined, has been deprived of property or rights in the proceedings in the ejectment suit in the state courts, in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States, she has a plain, adequate and complete remedy by writ of error from this court to the supreme court of Illinois.

If the statute violates the Federal Constitution, the state court, in the ejectment suit, had as perfect and full authority to so declare as a court of equity, and it is the duty of a court of law to so declare. While, on the other hand, if the statute is valid, it is as binding on a court of equity as on a court of law.

Baker v. Cummings, 169 U. S. 189, 206, 42 L. ed. 711, 718, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367; Balkman v. Woodstock Iron Co. 154 U. S. 177, 188, 38 L. ed. 953, 957, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1010; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. St. Louis Despatch Co. 149 U. S. 436, 448, 37 L. ed. 799, 803, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 944; Harding v. Durand, 138 Ill. 515, 516, 28 N. E. 948; Quayle v. Guild, 91 Ill. 378; Hancock v. Harper, 86 Ill. 445; Bradley v. Lightcap, 202 Ill. 154, 67 N. E. 45.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a bill filed by Mrs. Bradley, to quiet her title to the premises in controversy in No. 243, and for appropriate relief, in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, and was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, May 22, 1902.

*The circuit court, Grosscup, J., was of [26] opinion that the statute of 1872 was not one of limitation in the same sense as a statute limiting the time within which foreclosure proceedings must be brought; that the failure to take out the deed within five years raised no presumption that the mortgage debt had been paid; and that the act was, in effect, simply a limitation on the time within which the foreclosure decree could be availed of, and did not operate to forfeit the mortgagee's title to the mortgagor if the deed were not taken out. But he thought that Mrs. Bradley's title by possession as mortgagee had not been held by the state court to have been cut off by the statute of 1872, as the record in that court stood, as reported in 186 Ill. 510, 58 N. E. 221, and that, therefore, the constitutional question did not arise. If, however, the supreme court had ruled that her title as mortgagee in possession had been so destroyed, the remedy was by writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision in 201 Ill. 511, 66 N. E. 546, was rendered February 18, 1903. Taking into view the controversy as presented in the two other cases, and that the judgments in those cases are now directed to be reversed, and bearing in mind that a case does not necessarily arise under the Constitution or laws of the United States every time a writ of error would lie to the judgment of the state court, the decree of the Circuit Court will be affirmed.

[27] *LEO W. McCRAY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 27-64.)

Excises—tax on artificially colored oleomargarine—constitutionality of tax—motive or purpose as test of validity of statute—validity as affected by oppressive effect—due process of law—destruction of fundamental rights.

1. Oleomargarine whose yellow color is produced by the employment, as an ingredient, of butter which itself is artificially colored, is not "free from artificial coloration" within the meaning of the proviso to the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, prescribing a lower rate of taxation for oleomargarine not so colored, although the statute treats butter, whether artificially colored or not, as an authorized ingredient of oleomargarine.
2. Artificially colored oleomargarine, whose color is imparted in its manufacture by the use of an artificially colored and authorized ingredient, is not within the proviso to the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, imposing, instead of the general tax on oleomargarine prescribed by that section, a lower rate when "free from artificial coloration," because of the provision of § 2 of the amendatory act that persons adding to, or mixing with, oleomargarine any artificial coloration shall be held to be manufacturers of oleomargarine.

3. The motives or purposes of Congress in enacting the tax imposed by the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, on artificially colored oleomargarine, are not open to judicial inquiry in considering the power of that body to enact such legislation.
4. The congressional power to levy excises was not exceeded by the enactment of the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, imposing a tax on artificially colored oleomargarine, because the enforcement of such tax will destroy or restrict the manufacture of that article.
5. An excise which does not conflict with any express limitation of the Federal Constitution cannot be held invalid because the court may deem the rate of taxation too high.
6. Due process of law is not denied by the enactment by Congress of the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, imposing an excise on artificially colored oleomargarine, because that body has not chosen to tax natural butter artificially colored.
7. Any implied constitutional prohibition which may prevent the destruction by Congress of fundamental rights which it is the duty of every free government to safeguard cannot be invoked to invalidate the excise imposed on artificially colored oleomargarine by the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, because the effect of the tax may be to suppress the manufacture of the article.
8. The excise on artificially colored oleomargarine, imposed by the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784), § 3, does not infringe the constitutional guaranty of due process of law because the effect of the tax may be to suppress the manufacture of that article.

[No. 301.]

NOTE.—On regulation of traffic in oleomargarine—see notes to State v. Marshall, 1 L. R. A. 52; Com. v. Miller, 6 L. R. A. 633; Com. v. Weiss, 11 L. R. A. 532.

As to constitutionality of statutes restricting contracts and business—see note to State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789.

As to what constitutes due process of law—

see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

Argued December 2, 1903. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Ohio to review a judgment in favor of the United States in an action to recover the statutory penalty for purchasing for resale oleomargarine alleged to have been artificially colored in its manufacture, upon which there had only been paid the excise imposed when oleomargarine is free from artificial coloration. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The United States sued McCray for a statutory penalty of \$50, alleging that, being a licensed retail dealer in oleomargarine, he had, in violation of the acts of Congress, knowingly purchased for resale a fifty-pound package of oleomargarine, artificially colored to look like butter, to which there was affixed internal revenue stamps at the rate of $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent a pound, upon which the law required stamps at the rate of 10 cents per pound. The answer of McCray, whilst admitting the purchase of the package stamped as alleged, set up two defenses.

First. It was averred that the oleomargarine in question was made by a duly licensed manufacturer, the Ohio Butterine Company, from a formula used by it in making a high grade oleomargarine composed of "the following ingredients and none other, in these proportions; oleo oil, 20 pounds; natural lard, 30 pounds; creamery butter, 50 pounds; milk and cream, 30 pounds; common salt, 7 pounds." It was asserted that whilst it was true that the oleomargarine made from the ingredients in question was of a yellow color, that this result was not caused by artificial coloration, but was solely occasioned by the fact that the butter, which was bought in open market, and used in making the oleomargarine, had a deep yellow color imparted to it (the butter) by a substance known as Wells-Richardson's improved butter color. This preparation, it was averred, was not injurious to health, and was constantly used in the United States in the manufacture of butter made from pure milk or cream, for the purpose of imparting to it a deep yellow color. Averring that a yellow color produced in oleomargarine by the employment of butter, as an ingredient, which was artificially colored, did not amount to an artificial coloration of the oleomargarine within the meaning of the statute, it was asserted that the tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent per pound was a compliance with the law.

[29] *Second. If the act of Congress imposing the tax, when rightly construed, required stamps at the rate of 10 cents per pound upon oleomargarine, colored as described in the first defense, the act levying such tax was charged to be repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. As a foundation for this defense the answer contained the following averments:

Whilst butter made from pure milk and cream in the spring season was of a deep yellow color, such butter when made at all other seasons was of a pale yellow; that the taste of consumers of butter in the United States required all butter to possess the deep color naturally belonging to butter made in the spring season, and hence it had come to pass that substantially all butter manufactured for sale in the United States, not made in the spring season, and not naturally of a deep yellow, was colored artificially so as to cause it to have the deep yellow of spring butter. It was alleged that this deep yellow coloration of natural butter was universally produced by the use of either Wells-Richardson's compound or some other coloring ingredient, which did not change the taste of the butter, none of which were injurious to health. Oleomargarine, it was alleged, derived its chief value as an article of food as a substitute for butter, and that growing out of the taste of the consumers, unless the oleomargarine which was naturally white could be colored yellow, to present the appearance of butter artificially colored, there was no demand for it, and its manufacture and sale would be commercially impossible. It was then averred that to impose upon the colored oleomargarine a tax of 10 cents per pound would burden it with such a charge as to render it impossible to make and sell it in competition with butter, and therefore the result of imposing a tax of 10 cents a pound on oleomargarine when artificially colored would destroy the oleomargarine industry. From these averments it was charged that if the law imposed the tax of 10 cents upon the oleomargarine in question, the statute was repugnant *to the Constitution, because [30] it deprived the defendant of his property without due process of law; because the levy of such a burden was beyond the constitutional power of Congress, since it was an unwarranted interference by Congress "with the police powers reserved to the several states and to the people of the United States by the Constitution of the United States;" and further, that said acts of Congress were repugnant to the Constitution, since they finally lodged in an executive officer the power to determine what constituted artificial coloration of oleomargarine, and therefore invested such officer with judicial authority; and, finally, because the attempt by Congress to levy a tax at the rate of 10 cents a pound arbitrarily discriminated against oleomargarine in favor of butter, to the extent of destroying the oleomargarine industry for the benefit of the butter industry, and was, therefore, violative of "those fundamental principles of equality and justice which are inherent in the Constitution of the United States."

The government demurred to the answer on the ground that it stated no defense. The demurrer was sustained, and McCray electing to plead no further, the court found the facts alleged in the petition to be true, and adjudged that the government recover "the sum of $50 as a penalty and costs." Because of the questions arising under the Constitution, the case was then brought directly to this court.

Mr. Miller Outcalt argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles E. Prior, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In the construction of the statutory or local laws of a state, it is frequently necessary to recur to the history and situation of the country in order to ascertain the reason, as well as the meaning, of many of the provisions in them, to enable a court to apply, with propriety, the different rules for construing statutes.

Preston v. Browder, 1 Wheat. 121, 4 L. ed. 51.

We must gather the intention from the language used, comparing it, when any ambiguity exists, with the laws upon the same subject, and looking, if necessary, to the public history of the times in which it was passed.

Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 24, 11 L. ed. 475.

In construing an act of Congress, the court may recur to the history of the time when it was passed, in order to ascertain the reason for, as well as the meaning of, particular provisions in it; but the views of individual members in debate, or the motives which induced them to vote for or against its passage, cannot be considered.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 23 L. ed. 224.

In endeavoring to ascertain what Congress intended, we must, as far as possible, place ourselves in the light that Congress enjoyed, look at things as they appeared to it, and discover its purpose from the language used, in connection with the attending circumstances.

Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48, 64, 25 L. ed. 424, 429; Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 494, 495, 37 L. ed. 533, 535, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Tennessee, 153 U. S. 502, 38 L. ed. 799, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 968.

Even in construing the terms of a statute, courts must take notice of the history of legislation, and out of different possible constructions select and apply the one that best comports with the genius of our institutions, and therefore is most likely to have been the construction intended by the law-making power.

Texas & P. R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, 162 U. S. 218, 40 L. ed. 947, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 405, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 666.

The only proper way to construe a legislative act is from the language used in the act, and, upon occasion, by a resort to the history of the times when it was passed.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 318, 41 L. ed. 1019, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

When, therefore, Congress undertakes to enact a law which can only be valid as a regulation of commerce, it is reasonable to expect to find on the face of the law, or from its essential nature, that it is a regulation of commerce with foreign nations, or among the several states, or with the Indian tribes. If not so limited, it is in excess of the power of Congress.

Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) -100 U. S. 82, 96, 25 L. ed. 550, 552.

The presumption that a statute was enacted in good faith, for the purpose expressed in the title, cannot control the determination of the question whether it is or is not repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

Minnesota v. Barber, 136 U. S. 313, 34 L. ed. 455, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 185, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862.

It is not out of place to advert to an overflowing treasury, and the expediency which this same Congress felt in reducing the revenue derived, under the Spanish War acts, in this same year, by an amount equal to seventy millions of dollars. The law was avowedly not a revenue measure, but a police regulation.

Congressional Record, 57th Cong. 1st Sess.: Senator Dolliver, pp. 3273-3277; Senator Spooner, pp. 3505, 3506, 3560, 3563, 3601, 3606; Senator Hoar, pp. 3280, 3281.

It is vital that the independence of the commercial power and of the police power, and the delimitation between them, however sometimes perplexing, should always be recognized and observed; for, while the one furnishes the strongest bond of union, the other is essential to the preservation of the autonomy of the states, as required by our dual form of government; and acknowledged evils, however grave and urgent they may appear to be, had better be borne than the risk to be run, in an effort to suppress them, of more serious consequences by resort to expedients of even doubtful constitutional-ity.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 12, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The power of a state to protect the lives, health, and property of its citizens, and to preserve good order and the public morals; the power to govern men and things within the limit of its dominion,—is a power originally and always belonging to the states, not surrendered to the general government, nor directly restrained by the Constitution of the United States, and is essentially exclusive.

Patterson v. Kentucky, 97 U. S. 503, 24 L. ed. 1116; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 504, 12 L. ed. 256; Gilman v. Philadelphia, 3 Wall. 713, 18 L. ed. 96; Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 23 L. ed. 543; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 24 L. ed. 527; Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25, 24 L. ed. 989.

The tax upon oleomargarine is distinctly within the definition of the term "excise."

Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 440, 19 L. ed. 95, 97; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 23 L. ed. 99; Springer v. United States, 102 U. S. 586, 26 L. ed. 253.

The words of the clause of the Constitution, "to pay the debts and provide for the common defense and general welfare of the United States," declare only the object of the taxing power preceeding.

Story, Const. §§ 907, 908, 926.

Congress is not empowered to tax for any purposes which are within the exclusive province of the states.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

If the Constitution in its grant of powers is to be so construed as to carry into full effect the powers granted, it is equally imperative that, where prohibition or limitation is placed upon the power of Congress, that prohibition or limitation should be enforced in its spirit and to its entirety.

Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 312, 45 L. ed. 874, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

A power granted as a means of raising revenue cannot lawfully be diverted from its legitimate purpose by the indirect use of it to do what Congress has no power to do by direction. The end is not legitimate.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579.

It is true that, where the law merely imposes the tax without disclosing the indirect purpose of its imposition, the courts might hesitate to declare the law unconstitutional; but we insist that, by equal authority, if the purpose be disclosed on the face of the act, the courts should not hesitate to do so.

Cooley, Const. pp. 56-60; Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257.

It would seem to follow, as a natural and reasonable argument, that Congress is not empowered to tax so as to suppress that which is within the exclusive province of the states. If fraud exists, the remedy is with the states themselves. If, upon the face of this act, it is manifest that the taxing power of the United States is sought to accomplish that which is clearly within the police power of the states to regulate by appropriate state legislation, and is without the power of Congress to so regulate, it becomes at once, under every rule of construction, interpretation, and intendment, an invalid and unconstitutional law.

It may well be doubted whether the nature of society and of government does not prescribe some limits to the legislative power. And if any be prescribed, where are they to be found, if the property of an individual, fairly and honestly acquired, may be seized without compensation?

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 135, 3 L. ed. 177.

And if the property of an individual cannot be transferred to the public, how much less to another individual.

Legal Tender Cases (Knox v. Lee) 12 Wall. 581, 20 L. ed. 322.

To lay with one hand the power of the government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms.

Citizens' Sav. & L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 22 L. ed. 455.

Butter has always been a proper ingredient in the manufacture of oleomargarine, adding; as it does, to the quality and flavor of the product.

Congress having recognized colored butter as a legitimate ingredient, we claim that it clearly comes within the class of other proper products used in the manufacture of oleomargarine, and that it is not in any sense an additional substance used for the purpose of artificially changing or altering the character of the finished product.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie, Miller Outcalt, Charles E. Prior, Francis J. Kearful, Delavan B. Cole, and Charles C. Carnahan, also filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The supposed exigencies which led to the passage of the act, and the reasons for fixing the duty at this amount, may be ascertained by examining the congressional debates.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 474, 35 L. ed. 821, 824, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 9, 24, 11 L. ed. 469, 475; Jennison v. Kirk, 98 U. S. 453, 459, 25 L. ed. 240, 243; Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48, 64, 25 L. ed. 424, 429. See also Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 463, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 459, 472, 40 L. ed. 771, 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 65, 75, 43 L. ed. 616, 620, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 318, 360, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1019, 1034, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

If the court shall reach the conclusion that it will consult these evidences of legislative intent and purpose, the following references may be of convenience:

§ 35 Congressional Record, 57th Cong. 1st Sess. pt. 2, pp. 1251 et seq.; pt. 3, pp. 3192 et seq.

It was particularly objected by the opponents of the Constitution that Congress was given power to pass any law which it thought necessary and proper in aid of the powers granted to it. The answer of Hamilton, in The Federalist, was that Congress could not, by its mere declaration, make necessary and proper to the execution of its powers that which, in its essence, was not necessary and proper.

The Federalist, No. 78, Ford's ed. p. 521.

Notwithstanding this assurance, destined as it was to become an elemental feature of our constitutional jurisprudence, it is well known that the consent of the people in the necessary number of states was secured only upon the pledge that Amendments recognizing the reserved powers of the states, and protecting the individual against the abuse of the powers granted to the national government, would be forthwith submitted.

Barron v. Baltimore, 7 Pet. 243, 250, 8 L. ed. 672, 675; Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 176-179, 2 L. ed. 60, 73, 74; McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605; Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 614, 615, 19 L. ed. 513, 523, 524; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 527, 42 L. ed. 819, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636.

These Amendments are clearly to be regarded of equal force and validity with the provisions of the Constitution itself.

Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 543, 544, 47 L. ed. 584, 587, 588, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

Although the Constitution has been in operation for one hundred and fourteen years, this court has not yet adjudged whether there are any qualifications of the power of Congress to levy taxes, other than the rules of apportionment and geographical uniformity, except in so far as the instrumentalities of the state governments are concerned.

The Collector v. Day (Buffington v. Day) 11 Wall. 113, 124, 20 L. ed. 122, 126; United States v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 17 Wall. 322, 327, 21 L. ed. 597, 599; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 178, 29 L. ed. 845, 854, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Mercantile Nat. Bank v. New York, 121 U. S. 138, 162, 30 L. ed. 895, 904, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826; Income Tax Cases (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co.) 157 U. S. 429, 584, 39 L. ed. 759, 820, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Plummer v. Coler, 178 U. S. 115, 117, 44 L. ed. 998, 1001, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Ambrosini v. United States, 187 U. S. 1, 7, 47 L. ed. 49, 52, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 253, 47 L. ed. 1035, 1037, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803.

Congress was not delegated any power whatever to regulate the internal commerce of the states; the regulation of such commerce was expressly reserved to the states by the 10th Amendment.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 194, 203, 6 L. ed. 23, 69, 71; License Cases (Thurlow v. Massachusetts) 5 How. 504, 574, 599, 12 L. ed. 256, 287, 299; Passenger Cases (Smith v. Turner) 7 How. 283, 400, 12 L. ed. 702, 751; License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 470, 471, 18 L. ed. 497, 500, 501; United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 44, 19 L. ed. 593, 594; Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) 100 U. S. 82, 96, 97, 25 L. ed. 550, 552, 553; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 12, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

The police power never was surrendered by the states.

New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 661, 29 L. ed. 516, 521, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Re Kahrer (Wilkerson v. Kahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 554, 556, 35 L. ed. 572, 574, 575, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 472, 39 L. ed. 223, 227, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 11, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 328, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

The act now before the court, if grounded upon the attempt to regulate the manufacture of dairy products and oleomargarine, and their sale in the internal commerce of the states, would be clearly beyond the powers of Congress, and unconstitutional.

United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 45,

19 L. ed. 593, 594; United States v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315, 320, 24 L. ed. 192, 193; Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) 100 U. S. 82, 96, 25 L. ed. 550, 553; Covington & C. Bridge Co. v. Kentucky, 154 U. S. 204, 210, 38 L. ed. 962, 965, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 649, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1087; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 12, 13, 39 L. ed. 325, 328, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; United States v. Boyer, 85 Fed. 425.

The power of Congress to regulate commerce among the states, although plenary, cannot be deemed arbitrary, since it is subject to such limitations or restrictions as are prescribed by the Constitution. This power, therefore, may not be exercised so as to infringe rights secured or protected by that instrument. It would not be difficult to imagine legislation that would be justly liable to such an objection as that stated, and hostile to the objects for the accomplishment of which Congress was invested with the general power to regulate commerce among the several states.

Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 362, 363, 47 L. ed. 504, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The grant of a power to tax does not authorize the imposition of a burden in its nature and purpose prohibitory.

Cooley, Taxn. pp. 11-13.

In the cases at bar the court is called upon to consider what purports on its face to be a tax law, but which, it is contended, constitutes the imposition of a burden in its nature and purpose prohibitory of the internal commerce of the states in a recognized article of commerce.

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 8, 43 L. ed. 49, 52, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

There can be no reasonable doubt that any statute of Congress which purported on its face to prohibit internal commerce in oleomargarine would be declared by this court to be unconstitutional and void on the ground that it sought to accomplish an object not intrusted to Congress, and invaded the powers reserved to the states.

United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 43-45, 19 L. ed. 593, 594; Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) 100 U. S. 82, 96, 25 L. ed. 550, 552; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 11-13, 39 L. ed. 325, 328, 329, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

If the object of the act be legitimate taxation, the excise in question is concededly within the constitutional powers of Congress; but if, under the pretext of laying an excise on manufactures, the object sought to be accomplished is to prohibit or destroy the manufactures and internal commerce of the states, then it is submitted that the legislation is not a legitimate taxation at all, and is beyond the authority delegated to Congress, and conflicts with the powers expressly reserved to the states.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 421, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605.

Whatever may be the motive or pretext or guise of a statute, or in whatever language it may have been framed, its purpose and its validity must be determined by its natural and reasonable effect, to be ascertained from the practical operation of its provisions.

Henderson v. New York (Henderson v. Wickham) 92 U. S. 259, 268, 23 L. ed. 543, 547; Morgan's, L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Bd. of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 462, 30 L. ed. 237, 241, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 33, 34, 43 L. ed. 60, 61, 62, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 294, 295, 300, 45 L. ed. 862, 867, 868, 869, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 698, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Income Tax Cases (Pollock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co.) 157 U. S. 429, 581, 39 L. ed. 759, 819, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 283, 42 L. ed. 740, 747, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Smith v. St. Louis & S. W. R. Co. 181 U. S. 248, 257, 45 L. ed. 847, 850, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603.

The amount of a tax or license fee, or regulation of rates, frequently forms the basis of judicial action and determines the validity of legislation. The court has found no insuperable difficulty in determining the difference between a tax and a reasonable fee covering expenses to protect the government against fraud (Pace v. Burgess, 92 U. S. 372, 374, 375, 23 L. ed. 657, 658, 659); between a tax on exports and a mere stamp duty on a document (Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 290, 45 L. ed. 862, 865, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648); between a tax and a penalty (Helwig v. United States, 188 U. S. 605, 611, 47 L. ed. 614, 616, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427); between a tax and a covert regulation of interstate commerce (Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 162, 47 L. ed. 995, 999, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817); between a legitimate regulation of rates and a regulation which is confiscatory (Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 527, 42 L. ed. 819, 842, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418).

The instance of a license tax upon persons or corporations engaged in foreign or interstate commerce is a common one. In such a case the only object which may constitutionally be accomplished by a state is compensation for reasonable governmental inspection or supervision. If the amount of the tax be materially in excess of what is necessary for that object, there is an indication of a purpose to regulate foreign or interstate commerce, and it is therefore necessary for the court to draw the line in each case according to the amount, and adjudge what amount will constitute taxation for a proper purpose, and what amount will constitute a regulation of commerce.

Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 164, 47 L. ed. 995, 1000, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.

While a state may impose a license fee upon foreign corporations engaged in interstate commerce, and indirectly tax their franchises (Maine v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 142 U. S. 217, 228, 35 L. ed. 994, 995, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 807, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 121, 163; Fieklen v. Shelby County Taxing Dist. 145 U. S. 1, 23, 36 L. ed. 601, 607, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 79, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 810; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 697, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360), it cannot for a moment be doubted that if the state should impose a prohibitory tax it would be unconstitutional, and that the question of constitutionality in such a case would depend entirely upon degree.

If, for example, a state should impose a property tax upon an express company (Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 220, 41 L. ed. 683, 695, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Adams Exp. Co. v. Kentucky, 166 U. S. 171, 180, 41 L. ed. 960, 963, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 166 U. S. 185, 221, 41 L. ed. 965, 977, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 604), the effect of which was practical prohibition, no doubt the court would hold that it was not a legitimate tax at all, but a roundabout way of prohibiting indirectly what the state could not prohibit directly, namely, interstate commerce.

So, whenever it is claimed that the amount of a state inspection charge upon articles of foreign or interstate commerce is so much in excess of what is reasonably necessary to accomplish that object as to evince a purpose to interfere by taxation with foreign or interstate commerce, the court must decide when the amount in the particular case becomes unconstitutional.

Patapseo Guano Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 171 U. S. 345, 351, 43 L. ed. 191, 193, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862 et seq.

The same principle applies in those cases where the amount of compensation for the use of property affected by a public interest is drawn in question as being confiscation in the guise of police regulation.

Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Manning, 186 U. S. 238, 250, 46 L. ed. 1144, 1149, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 881; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183

U. S. 79, 85, 46 L. ed. 92, 99, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

At the last term, in Helwig v. United States, 188 U. S. 605, 611, 47 L. ed. 614, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427, Mr. Justice Peckham said: "Whether called a 'further sum' or an 'additional duty,' or by some other name, the amount imposed was so large in proportion to the value of the merchandise imported as to show beyond doubt that it was a sum imposed not in fact as a duty upon an imported article, but as a penalty, and nothing else."

So, with regard to the tax in question, the amount of the tax is so large in proportion to the value of the merchandise as to show beyond doubt that it was a sum imposed not in fact as an excise for revenue, but as a prohibition, and nothing else.

Let us take, for the purpose of concrete illustration, the case of oleomargarine. It has been held that a state, under the power to regulate its internal commerce, could prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine (Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 686, 32 L. ed. 253, 257, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 467, 39 L. ed. 223, 225, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154, and Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 246, 46 L. ed. 171, 175, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120), but that it could not prohibit the sale of oleomargarine manufactured in other states, and offered for sale in the course of interstate commerce.

Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 21, 25, 43 L. ed. 49, 56, 58, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

Is it conceivable that, nevertheless, a state could indirectly do what this court has said it could not directly do, that is, practically prohibit interstate commerce in oleomargarine by taxing it to death. Surely this court would not entertain an argument attempting to uphold such legislation upon the ground that on its face it was impartial and applied alike to internal and interstate commerce, and that the power to tax involved the power to destroy.

Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 131, 140, 19 L. ed. 382, 384, 387; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 634, 29 L. ed. 257, 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Cooley, Taxn. pp. 27, 28.

If a state should impose a tax upon a commercial commodity as property (Woodruff v. Parham, 8 Wall. 123, 131, 140, 19 L. ed. 382, 384, 387; Hinson v. Lott, 8 Wall. 148, 152, 19 L. ed. 387, 388; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622, 632, 634, 29 L. ed. 257, 260, 261, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1091; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 697, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360. American Refrig- erator Transit Co. v. Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 74, 43 L. ed. 899, 901, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Reymann Brewing Co. v. Brister, 179 U. S. 445, 453, 45 L. ed. 269, 273, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201), and the effect of such a tax as to articles brought from other states was to destroy all opportunity to sell the commodity, it cannot be doubted that the law would be declared unconstitutional as interfering with interstate commerce, even though the same amount of tax should be laid on domestic manufactures as property, and even though such a tax would only apply after the original package of importation had been broken and the contents exposed for sale.

May v. New Orleans, 178 U. S. 496, 508, 44 L. ed. 1165, 1169, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 976.

There would be prima facie no discrimination in the law; on its face it would apply impartially to home and foreign manufactures alike. Nevertheless such a tax law would be held unconstitutional; for, if allowed to operate, it could as effectually bar the products and manufactures of other states as if the law directly enacted that such articles should not be sold.

Leloup v. Mobile, 127 U. S. 640, 647, 32 L. ed. 311, 314, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 134, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1380; Brennan v. Titusville, 153 U. S. 289, 303, 38 L. ed. 719, 723, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 658, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829.

The products of one or more states could thus, by taxation, be excluded from any state. Fortunately, such efforts have been heretofore rendered fruitless by the supervising action of this court.

Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 633, 47 L. ed. 336, 341, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

In the supposed case it would undoubtedly be held that, in whatever language the statute was framed, its purpose might be determined from its natural and reasonable effect. The court would brush aside the form and the pretext, and hold that the tax in its practical effect was prohibitory, that the purpose of the legislation was legally to be determined by such prohibitory effect, and that prohibition was beyond the constitutional power of a state.

American Fertilizing Co. v. Board of Agriculture, 11 L. R. A. 179, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 532, 43 Fed. 609.

If the tax was not prohibitive, but a proportional and reasonable charge for the maintenance of the state government, levied upon all similar property, entirely different considerations would be presented, and it would then be for the courts to determine whether such a law was in its purpose, operation, or effect a proper and reasonable tax law, which did not unduly interfere with the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

195 U. S.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 683, 697, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268.

In such a case, too, would it not be relevant to show that the amount of the tax was such as not to operate as a practical prohibition of sales in competition with the products of the taxing state? Or, if it were in the guise of an inspection or license fee, would it not be relevant to show that it was not large enough to operate as a prohibition or penalty?

Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. 418, 425, 429, 20 L. ed. 449, 451, 452; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275, 278, 23 L. ed. 347, 348; New York v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, 107 U. S. 59, 60, 27 L. ed. 383, 384, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; Moran v. New Orleans, 112 U. S. 69, 73, 28 L. ed. 653, 655, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446, 461, 29 L. ed. 691, 696, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 454; Emert v. Missouri, 156 U. S. 296, 311, 39 L. ed. 430, 434, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 367.

Are not these all cases of degree, and does not the extent and effect of the tax determine its constitutionality?

The fact that the act of Congress applies also to interstate commerce does not affect the question, for it is the settled law of this court that the power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce does not uphold any act which operates directly upon internal commerce and invades the domain of the states.

Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) 100 U. S. 82, 95, 96, 25 L. ed. 550, 552, 553.

Though the destruction of the oleomargarine industry by a repressive state tax might be supported under the police power by all those familiar arguments which have been advanced in this court during the past sixteen years (Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120), a similar repressive tax by Congress must be supported, if at all, on other grounds.

Cooley, Taxn. pp. 12, 13.

Congress has no power to tax the instrumentalities of a state (Snyder v. Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, 253, 47 L. ed. 1035, 1037, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 803), unless it be necessary and proper to carry into execution some power given to Congress, other than the power of taxation.

Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482, is not authority for an unlimited and arbitrary power to tax.

Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 636, 19 L. ed. 513, 530; Merchants' Nat. Bank v.

United States, 101 U. S. 1, 25 L. ed. 979; Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 580, 596, 28 L. ed. 798, 803, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

The ratio decidendi of the cases upon this point is summed up by Mr. Justice Miller in Citizens' Sav. L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 655, 663, 22 L. ed. 455, 461; namely, given a purpose or object for which taxation may be lawfully used, and the extent of its exercise is, in its very nature, unlimited. And the tax involved in that case was condemned because the object of the statute was found to be the encouragement and benefit of certain private industries.

To the same effect see Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487, 500, 27 L. ed. 238, 243, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 442; Cole v. La Grange, 113 U. S. 1, 6, 28 L. ed. 896, 897, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 416; State ex rel. Griffith v. Osawkee Twp. 14 Kan. 418, 19 Am. Rep. 99; Lowell v. Boston, 111 Mass. 454, 15 Am. Rep. 39; Mead v. Acton, 139 Mass. 341, 1 N. E. 413; Allen v. Jay, 60 Me. 124, 11 Am. Rep. 185; Michigan Sugar Co. v. Auditor General (Michigan Sugar Co. v. Dix) 124 Mich. 674, 56 L. R. A. 329, 83 Am. St. Rep. 354, 83 N. W. 625; State ex rel. Wheeler v. Foley, 30 Minn. 350, 15 N. W. 375; Weismer v. Douglas, 64 N. Y. 91, 21 Am. Rep. 586; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. 147, 59 Am. Dec. 759; Burroughs, Taxn. pp. 6, 506.

If, therefore, the courts, looking beyond form and considering substance in the cases at bar, shall be persuaded that the purpose and necessary operation of this legislation be to accomplish an end or object not intrusted to this government, the legislation may and should be declared unconstitutional.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605.

The argument that the prohibitive tax of 10 cents per pound was laid to facilitate the collection of the tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ cent on other colors of oleomargarine cannot uphold the law. Such a purpose is too remote and uncertain.

United States v. Dewitt, 9 Wall. 41, 44, 19 L. ed. 593, 594.

Even if the abuse of the taxing power was not in the minds of the people at the time the first Amendments to the Constitution were adopted, and the framers perceived and apprehended no danger from the abuse of that power, this fact would not tend to limit the scope of the Amendments, if the case now presented be fairly within their spirit and letter.

Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. 518, 644, 4 L. ed. 629, 661. See also Slaughter-House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 72, 21

L. ed. 394, 407; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 347, 361, 25 L. ed. 676, 679, 684; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 382, 385, 42 L. ed. 780, 787, 788, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 676, 42 L. ed. 890, 900, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

If it be now held that the requirement of due process of law, in the Constitution of the United States, imposes no prohibition or limitation upon the taxing power of Congress, then the result must be that the 5th Amendment, intended to constitute part of a bill of rights protecting the people in their individual liberties as against the majority wielding the power of government, must now be construed as if it read "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, except it be in the form of taxation; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation, except in cases of taxation."

Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 18 Fed. 385, Affirmed in 118 U. S. 394, 30 L. ed. 118, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1132.

The phrase "due process of law" has and imports exactly the same meaning as the words "the law of the land," in Magna Charta.

Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 521, 527, 543, 28 L. ed. 232, 234, 235, 241, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292.

No statement of the general meaning of these equivalent phrases is more often quoted than that from Mr. Webster's argument in the famous Dartmouth College Case, 4 Wheat. 581, 4 L. ed. 645, viz.: The meaning is that every citizen shall hold his life, liberty, property, and immunities under the protection of the general rules which govern society. Everything which may pass under the form of an enactment is not, therefore, to be considered the law of the land.

"Due process of law" in each particular case means such an exertion of the powers of government as the settled maxims of law permit and sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one being dealt with belongs.

Story, Const. 5th ed. § 1945.

While every man has a right to require that his own controversies shall be judged by the same rules which are applied in the controversies of his neighbors, the whole community is also entitled at all times to demand the protection of the ancient principles which shield private right against arbitrary interference, even though such interference may be under a rule impartial in its operation. It is not the partial nature of the rule, so much as its arbitrary and unusual character, that condemns it as unknown to the law of the land.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 433.

The first exposition of these phrases by this court will be found in the case of Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 235, 244, 4 L. ed. 559, 561, where Mr. Justice Johnson, among other things, said: "As to the words from Magna Charta, incorporated into the Constitution of Maryland, after volumes spoken and written with a view to their exposition, the good sense of mankind has at length settled down to this: That they were intended to secure the individual from the arbitrary exercise of the powers of government unrestrained by the established principles of private rights and distributive justice."

This statement as to the meaning and scope of the famous phrase has been repeatedly quoted with approval by this court.

United States v. Craikshank, 92 U. S. 542, 554, 23 L. ed. 588, 592; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 527, 28 L. ed. 232, 235, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 697, 34 L. ed. 816, 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 34, 45; 38 L. ed. 896, 901, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; Taylor v. Beckham, 178 U. S. 548, 592, 44 L. ed. 1187, 1206, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 890, 1009.

Due process of law is secured if the laws operate on all alike, and do not subject the individual to an arbitrary exercise of the powers of government.

Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 662, 37 L. ed. 599, 601, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721. See also Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 382, 38 L. ed. 485, 487, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Thomas v. Gay, 169 U. S. 264, 283, 42 L. ed. 740, 747, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 279, 43 L. ed. 443, 447, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

This court has never attempted to define with precision the words "due process of law," nor is it necessary to do so in this case. It is sufficient to say that there are certain immutable principles of justice which inhere in the very idea of free government, which no member of the Union may disregard.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 389, 42 L. ed. 780, 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

No reason can be perceived why the very same provision in the Constitution should have one meaning when applied to the state governments, and a narrower meaning and more limited scope when applied to the national government.

Sinking Fund Cases (Union P. R. Co. v. United States) 99 U. S. 700, 718, 25 L. ed. 496, 501.

Logically, if there could be, in reason and justice, any difference, it should be against the national government, which is indisputably one of limited and enumerated powers.
195 U. S.

Cooley, Taxn. p. 12.

The only sound principle must be that the provision is the same in both cases.

French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 355, 45 L. ed. 879, 894, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

A statute under the police power, which prevented all sales in a legitimate article of commerce, would not be valid.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 685, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 467, 39 L. ed. 223, 225, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

In the exercise of the power to regulate commerce among the several states, Congress could not act arbitrarily, but was subject to the limitations imposed by the Constitution upon the exercise of the powers granted.

Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 363, 47 L. ed. 504, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The power given to Congress to regulate interstate commerce does not carry with it any power to destroy or impair those limitations.

Interstate Commerce Commission v. Brimson, 154 U. S. 447, 479, 38 L. ed. 1047, 1058, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 545, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125.

Assuming that the restrictive clause of the 5th Amendment applies to the exercise of the taxing power, then its prohibition or limitation should be enforced in its spirit and to its entirety, as fully as if it were part of the very article conferring the taxing power.

Prout v. Starr, 188 U. S. 537, 543, 47 L. ed. 584, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398; Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 288, 45 L. ed. 862, 865, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648.

The act of Congress of May 9, 1902, purports to levy what is strictly and technically an excise upon the manufacture and sale of an article of food.

Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 618, 46 L. ed. 713, 718, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

An excise is generally included in the term "tax," which, in its most enlarged sense, embraces all the regular impositions made by government upon the person, property, privileges, occupations, and enjoyments of the people, for the purpose of raising public revenue. Taxes are distinguished from arbitrary levies in that they are laid according to some rule, which apportions the burden between the subjects thereof. An exaction which is made without regard to any rule of apportionment is therefore not a tax, and is not within the constitutional authority of the government.

Cooley, Principles of Const. Law, 3d ed. p. 56.

Chief Justice Marshall defined taxation to be the simple operation of taking small proportions from a perpetually accumulating mass susceptible of almost infinite division.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 199, 6 L. ed. 23, 70.

What would he have said of an alleged tax which took all?

There is undoubtedly a difference between a land or property tax, and an excise upon a business, or upon the manufacture and sale of a commodity. An excise may be upon the article, or its value, or its quality, or its quantity, or its weight; but, however the amount be determined, whether by specific or ad valorem taxes or duties, or both methods, although it need not be inherently equal, it must operate alike on all persons within the class selected, or who exercise the same privilege.

Oliver v. Washington Mills, 11 Allen, 268; 15 Ops. Atty. Gen. 219.

No power to suppress the oleomargarine industry for the benefit of the butter industry was intrusted to Congress by the Constitution. It is not legitimate classification, but mere arbitrary selection, which deprives of liberty and property one body of individuals for the benefit of another.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 563, 46 L. ed. 679, 691, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 154, 41 L. ed. 666, 667, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789, 22 S. W. 356.

The right to earn one's livelihood by any lawful calling constitutes the liberty and property of the individual, and one of the inalienable privileges and immunities of every citizen of the United States, which are secured by the Constitution.

Butchers' Union, S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City, L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 757, 764, 28 L. ed. 585, 589, 591, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 684, 32 L. ed. 253, 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 589, 41 L. ed. 832, 835, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343.

The act in question is subject to the additional objection that the power to decide finally what articles are to be taxed cannot be conferred upon the commissioner of internal revenue, who is only an administrative officer.

United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677,

688, 36 L. ed. 591, 594, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; United States v. Maid, 116 Fed. 650; United States v. Blasingame, 116 Fed. 654.

The intention to tax in a particular manner must be expressed in clear and unambiguous language, else it cannot be enforced; and words of exception are to receive a liberal, rather than a restricted, construction, to the end that the burdens imposed upon individuals may be confined, rather than extended.

Adams v. Baneroff, 3 Sumn. 384, Fed. Cas. No. 44; Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Schoenemann v. United States, 56 C. C. A. 104, 119 Fed. 584; Re Southern P. Co. 82 Fed. 311; Wise v. Southern P. Co. 31 C. C. A. 263, 59 U. S. App. 496, 87 Fed. 863; Matheson v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 143, 38 U. S. App. 25, 71 Fed. 394; Rice v. United States, 4 C. C. A. 104, 10 U. S. App. 670, 53 Fed. 910; Dean v. Charlton, 27 Wis. 522.

Although an unconstitutional statute cannot, by mere implication alone, operate to repeal a prior enactment, still, an expression of such an intention may as well be contained in an unconstitutional statute as any other.

Tims v. State, 26 Ala. 165; Orange County v. Harris, 97 Cal. 600, 32 Pac. 594; People ex rel. Kellogg v. Fleming, 7 Colo. 230, 3 Pac. 70; Meshmeier v. State, 11 Ind. 482; Childs v. Shower, 18 Iowa, 261; Ely v. Thompson, 3 A. K. Marsh. 70; Sullivan v. Adams, 3 Gray, 476; Campau v. Detroit, 14 Mich. 276; Devoy v. New York, 35 Barb. 264, 36 N. Y. 449; Portland v. Schmidt, 13 Or. 17, 6 Pac. 221; Shepardson v. Milwaukee & B. R. Co. 6 Wis. 605; State ex rel. Rogers v. Burton, 11 Wis. 51.

And a declaration that a prior statute is amended so as to read in the language of the amendatory statute amounts to an unequivocal expression of an intention to repeal the original act, so far as concerns any vital distinction from the amendatory act.

People v. Wilmerding, 136 N. Y. 363, 32 N. E. 1099; Re Prime, 136 N. Y. 347, 18 L. R. A. 713, 32 N. E. 1091; Goodno v. Oshkosh, 31 Wis. 127.

Congress cannot be held to have intended to prohibit oleomargarine, provided the Constitution will permit it to do so, and by the same act to tax it in case the prohibition were held unconstitutional. To so hold would be judicial legislation.

Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 94, 30 L. ed. 115, 116, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; James v. Bowman, 190 U. S. 127, 141, 47 L. ed. 979, 983, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 678.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The tax is an excise.

Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 619, 46 L. ed. 719, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

And the act is to be deemed a revenue measure.

Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 536, 41 L. ed. 816, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444.

In imposing the tax in question, Congress has not encroached upon, or in any manner interfered with, the power of the states to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleo-margarine.

Nicol v. Amcs, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

The tax imposed by this law is not open to the objection that it is not uniform in its operation.

Head Money Cases (Edye v. Robertson) 112 U. S. 594, 28 L. ed. 802, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

Congress in imposing taxes may classify property for taxation.

Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522.

The constitutional prohibition against taking private property for public use without just compensation refers only to a direct appropriation of property for public purposes, and not to a so-called "taking" as the effect of taxation, or under the prohibitive result of state police laws.

Legal Tender Cases (Knox v. Lee) 12 Wall. 551, 20 L. ed. 312; Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 642, 25 L. ed. 338; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 668, 31 L. ed. 212, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

Due notice is given by the law itself as to the liability to the tax; an appeal is provided from the decision of the collector to the commissioner in case of a dispute respecting the taxability of the article; and a further appeal is allowed from the decision of the commissioner where the article is claimed to be deleterious to health. So here is due notice, an opportunity for hearing, and for an appeal,—in short, due process. The court has, in a recent case, broadly sustained executive proceedings as due process.

The Japanese Immigrant Case (Yamatoya v. Fisher) 189 U. S. 86, 47 L. ed. 721, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

The power to tax is the power to destroy.

McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579.

This power, like all others vested in Congress, is complete in itself, may be exercised to its utmost extent, and acknowledges no limitations other than are prescribed in the Constitution.

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23.

If the power be exercised oppressively, the appeal lies alone to the people, and not to the courts.

License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 462, 18 L. ed. 497; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Dooley v. United States, 183 U. S. 151, 166, 46 L. ed. 128, 135, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 19 L. ed. 95; Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224; Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 355, 31 L. ed. 767, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921.

Congress, having acted clearly within the scope of its undoubted power in imposing this excise, this court is not invested with authority to review the discretion reposed in that body by the people, and to declare the tax invalid if perchance, in its opinion, the tax may seem to be oppressive.

Hayburn's Case, 2 Dall. 410, 1 L. ed. 436; Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 386, 1 L. ed. 648; Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 603, 19 L. ed. 513; Legal Tender Cases (Knox v. Lee) 12 Wall. 457, 20 L. ed. 287; Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 190, 26 L. ed. 377, 386; Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 45 L. ed. 853, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 46 L. ed. 713, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Lottery Case (Champion v. Ames) 188 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321.

The statute is not invalid as an attempt to confer judicial power upon the commissioner of internal revenue.

Martin v. Mott, 12 Wheat. 19, 29, 31, 6 L. ed. 537, 540, 541; Philadelphia & T. R. Co. v. Stimpson, 14 Pet. 448, 458, 10 L. ed. 535, 540; Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv Co. 18 How. 272, 15 L. ed. 372; Craig v. Leicensdorfer (Downs v. Hubbard) 123 U. S. 189, 31 L. ed. 114, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 85; Bushnell v. Leland, 164 U. S. 684, 41 L. ed. 598, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209; Kennedy v. Gibson, 8 Wall. 498, 19 L. ed. 476; United States v. Knox, 102 U. S. 422, 26 L. ed. 216; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 698, 714, 37 L. ed. 905, 913, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Lem Moon Sing v. United States, 158 U. S. 538, 544, 39 L. ed. 1082, 1084, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 967; Nishimura Ekiu v. United States, 142 U. S. 651, 660, 35 L. ed. 1146, 1149, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 336; Chin Bak Kan v. United States, 186 U. S. 193, 46 L. ed. 1121, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 891; United States v. Moline, 82 Fed. 592; E. A. Chatfield Co. v. New Haven, 110 Fed. 788; Grady v. United States, 39 C. C. A. 42, 98 Fed. 238; Dastervignes v. United States, 58 C. C. A. 346, 122 Fed. 30; Weimer v. Bunbury, 30 Mich. 201; State v. Harmon, 31 Ohio St.

250; Musser v. Adair, 55 Ohio St. 466, 45 N. E. 903; State ex rel. Anderson v. Timme, 60 Wis. 344, 18 N. W. 837; Donahue v. Will County, 100 Ill. 107; Casey v. Galli, 94 U. S. 673, 24 L. ed. 168.

Extracts from congressional debates, which show only the views of those quoted as to the purpose of the tax, this court will not consider.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 79, 23 L. ed. 228; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 710, 28 L. ed. 1145, 1147, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 685, 686, 32 L. ed. 256, 257, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 318, 41 L. ed. 1019, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Camfield v. United States, 167 U. S. 523, 42 L. ed. 261, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 864; Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 75, 43 L. ed. 619, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 601, 44 L. ed. 604, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 72, 44 L. ed. 982, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 139 Cal. 179, 96 Am. St. Rep. 95, 72 Pac. 971; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 231.

The court will, however, notice well-known facts and situations in the life and business of the times.

Brown v. Piper, 91 U. S. 42, 43, 23 L. ed. 201, 202; Brown v. Spilman, 155 U. S. 670, 39 L. ed. 305, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; Mills v. Green, 159 U. S. 657, 40 L. ed. 295, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 517, 43 L. ed. 792, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co. 93 U. S. 185, 23 L. ed. 876; The Delaware, 161 U. S. 472, 40 L. ed. 776, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 516; United States v. Rio Grande Dam & Irrig. Co. 174 U. S. 698, 43 L. ed. 1139, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 590, 591, 10 L. ed. 308, 309; New York Indians v. United States, 170 U. S. 32, 42 L. ed. 938, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 5, 6.

Congress, in imposing the different rates of tax, does not arbitrarily create the classification; it finds it already existing, created by the states, and recognized by the courts, and lays the tax accordingly.

Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Schollenberger v. Pennsylvania, 171 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 49, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Collins v. New Hampshire, 171 U. S. 30, 43 L. ed. 60, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 768; Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Wilkins v. United States, 37 C. C. A. 588, 96 Fed. 837; United States

v. Dougherty, 101 Fed. 439; Dougherty v. United States, 47 C. C. A. 195, 108 Fed. 56.

It is within the power of Congress to say what regulations are necessary or proper for the purpose of preventing frauds upon any branch of its revenue.

United States v. 132 Packages of Spirituous Liquors & Wines, 22 C. C. A. 228, 40 U. S. App. 333, 76 Fed. 364; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 517, 43 L. ed. 792, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Felsenheld v. United States, 186 U. S. 126, 46 L. ed. 1085, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 740; United States v. Singer, 15 Wall. 111, 21 L. ed. 49; United States v. Three Packages of Distilled Spirits, 125 Fed. 52.

May not the government legislate to this end by the amount of a certain tax, as well as by prescribing certain incidental regulations?

The tax is not prohibitive of the manufacture and sale of colored oleomargarine.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Capital City Dairy Co. 62 Ohio St. 350, 57 L. R. A. 181, 57 N. E. 62, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120.

Legislation may affect commerce in many ways without constituting a regulation of it within the meaning of the Constitution, when the legislation is not directed against commerce, and only indirectly and remotely affects it.

Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 39 L. ed. 223, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 677, 40 L. ed. 849, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

As the controversy in every aspect involves the acts of Congress concerning the taxation of oleomargarine, a summary of those acts becomes essential.

The original act was passed in 1886. (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228.) The 1st section provided:

"That for the purposes of this act the word 'butter' shall be understood to mean the food product usually known as butter, and which is made exclusively from milk or cream, or both, with or without common salt, and with or without additional coloring matter."

The 2d thus defined oleomargarine:

"That for the purposes of this act certain manufactured substances, certain extracts, and certain mixtures and compounds, including such mixtures and compounds with butter, shall be known and designated as 'oleomargarine,' namely: All substances heretofore known as oleomargarine, oleo, oleomargarine oil, butterine, lardine, suine, and neutral; all mixtures and compounds of oleomargarine, oleo, oleomargarine oil, butterine, lardine, suine, and neutral; all lard extracts and tallow extracts; and all mixtures and compounds of tallow, beef fat, suet, lard, lard oil, vegetable oil, and annatto, and other coloring matter; intestinal fat and offal fat made in imitation or semblance of butter, or, when so made, calculated or intended to be sold as butter or for butter."

[44] The 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th sections imposed *a license on manufacturers and dealers in oleomargarine, and contained many requirements controlling the packing, marketing, and supervision of the manufacture and sale of the taxed article. The 8th section provided as follows:

"That upon oleomargarine which shall be manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or use, there shall be assessed and collected a tax of two cents per pound, to be paid by the manufacturer thereof; . . . The tax levied by this section shall be represented by coupon stamps, and the provisions of existing laws governing the engraving, issue, sale, accountability, effacement, and destruction of stamps relating to tobacco and snuff, as far as applicable, are hereby made to apply to stamps provided for by this section."

The other provisions of the statute, not necessary to be noticed, contained many regulations looking to the enforcement and collection of the licenses and taxes which the act imposed. In 1902 further provisions were made on the subject, and the act of 1886 was, in many respects, expressly amended. (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784.) The title of the act is—

"An Act to Make Oleomargarine and Other Imitation Dairy Products Subject to the Laws of Any State or Territory or the District of Columbia into Which They Are Transported, and to Change the Tax on Oleomargarine, and to Impose a Tax, Provide for the Inspection, and Regulate the Manufacture and Sale of Certain Dairy Products, and to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act Defining Butter, Also Imposing a Tax Upon and Regulating the Manufacture, Sale, Importation, and Exportation of Oleomargarine,' Approved August 2, 1886."

The 1st section provides that all—"oleomargarine, butterine, imitation, process, renovated, or adulterated butter, or imitation cheese, or any substance in the semblance of butter or cheese, not the usual product of the dairy, and not made exclusively of pure and unadulterated milk or cream, transported into any state or territory *or the District of Columbia, and re-[45] maining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon the arrival within the limits of such state or territory or the District of Columbia, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state or territory or the District of Columbia . . . to the same extent and in the same manner as though such article or substances had been produced in such state or territory or the District of Columbia, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise."

Section 2 amends § 3 of the act of 1886 in particulars not necessary for the purposes of this case to be considered. Section 3 amends § 8 of the act of 1886 by increasing the tax on oleomargarine from two (2) to ten (10) cents per pound, with this proviso: "Provided, When oleomargarine is free from artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow, said tax shall be one fourth of one cent per pound. The tax levied by this section shall be represented by coupon stamps; and the provisions of existing laws governing the engraving, issue, sale, accountability, effacement, and destruction of stamps relating to tobacco and snuff, as far as applicable, are hereby made to apply to stamps provided for in this section."

Section 4 reiterates the definition of butter contained in the 1st section of the act of 1886, and besides gives a definition of "adulterated butter," "process butter," or "renovated butter," and imposes taxes upon the manufacture and sale of these articles, the tax upon adulterated butter being at the rate of 10 cents a pound.

The section in question, as well as those following it, contains many administrative provisions for the enforcement of the taxes levied by the act, and concerning interstate and foreign commerce in the articles referred to. Bearing, then, the statutes in mind, we come to consider the assignments of error, which are as follows:

*"The district court erred in sustaining [46] the demurrer of the United States to the answer of plaintiff in error (defendant below).

"The district court erred in refusing to hold that the act of Congress approved August 2, 1886, as amended by the act of Congress approved May 9, 1902, is in contravention of the Constitution of the United States of America, and of the amendments thereto, and is illegal and void, for the reasons:

"(a) The act deprives the defendant of his property without due process of law.

"(b) The act is an unwarranted encroachment upon, and an interference with, the police powers reserved to the several states and to the people of the United States.

"(c) The act so arbitrarily discriminates against oleomargarine in favor of butter as to destroy the oleomargarine industry for the benefit of the butter industry of the United States, and is thus repugnant to those fundamental principles which are inherent in the Constitution of the United States.

"The district court erred in holding, if said act be not in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, that oleomargarine, which contains no artificial coloration than that imparted to it by the use of butter which itself contains coloring matter, and which therefore causes said oleomargarine to look like butter of a shade of yellow, is subject to a tax of 10 cents per pound instead of a tax of $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 cent per pound."

It is to be observed that in the errors thus assigned no reference is made to the contention in the answer that the acts of Congress were void because conferring upon administrative officers the power to finally decide what constituted artificial coloration; such contention, therefore, may be put out of view. The errors relied upon embrace not only the contention that the act of Congress imposing the tax is repugnant to the Constitution, but also that the penalty was wrongfully enforced, because the one quarter of a cent per pound which [47] had been *paid on the oleomargarine was the only tax to which it was liable under the act of Congress when rightly construed. As the presence of the constitutional question imposes upon us the duty of considering also the construction of the statute, we shall invert the order in which the errors have been assigned, and come to consider, first, whether the act of Congress, as properly construed, required on the oleomargarine in question a tax of 10 cents a pound; and, second, if it did, whether such act is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States.

1st. The construction of the statute.

Leaving out of view the proviso to the 8th section of the act of 1886 as amended and re-enacted by the 3d section of the act of 1902, it is beyond question that a tax of 10 cents a pound is imposed upon oleomargarine. As the product was admitted by the answer to be oleomargarine, it follows that it was subject to the tax of 10 cents a pound, unless, by the proviso, the oleomargarine was of such a character as to entitle it to the benefits of a lower rate of taxation. Now the proviso reads: "Provided, When oleomargarine is free from artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow, said tax shall be one-fourth of one cent per pound." As it was admitted that the oleomargarine was of a shade of yellow causing it to look like butter, and as it was also admitted that this shade of yellow had been imparted by an artificial coloring matter used to color the butter which formed one of the ingredients from which the oleomargarine was manufactured, it results, if the text of the statute be applied, that the oleomargarine was not within the proviso, because it was not free from artificial coloring matter causing it to look like butter. This necessarily follows, since the right to enjoy the lower rate of tax is made by the proviso to depend upon whether, as a matter of fact, the oleomargarine was free from artificial coloring matter, and not upon the mere method adopted for imparting the artificial color. As the oleomargarine in question was in fact not free from artificial coloration, *we think that a con-[48] struction which would take it out of the general rule imposing the 10 cent tax upon all oleomargarine, and bring it within the exception embracing only oleomargarine free from artificial coloration, would be not an interpretation of the statute, but a disregard of its unambiguous provisions.

But it is contended that, as § 2 of the act of 1886 defined oleomargarine, for the purposes of that act, to be "certain manufactured substances, certain extracts, and certain mixtures and compounds, including such mixtures and compounds with butter," and as not only the act of 1886, but the act of 1902, defined butter, for the purposes of those acts, to mean "the food product usually known as butter, and which is made exclusively from milk or cream, or both, with or without common salt, and with or without additional coloring matter," therefore colored oleomargarine produced by using, as one of the ingredients of its manufacture, butter artificially colored, must be treated as free from artificial coloration within the meaning of the act of 1902, and the deduction made is that, as the statute treats butter, both with or without artificial coloration, as a legitimate ingredient of oleomargarine, the use of an authorized ingredient did not cause the manufactured product to be other than oleomargarine within the statute. But the proposition goes further, and asserts that because butter, whether artificially colored or not, was an authorized ingredient of oleomargarine, therefore the finished product, in which either of these ingredients was used, was not only oleomargarine, but necessarily also was oleomargarine free from artificial coloration. This is an obvious non sequitur. As the benefit of the lower tax depended upon the absence from the manufactured product of artificial coloration, it follows that if, in the manufacture, an authorized ingredient, which was artificially colored, was used so as to artificially color the product, whilst that product would be oleomargarine, it could not be oleomargarine free from artificial coloration within the intendment of the proviso. Nor is there force in the contention that the *plain meaning of the statute is overcome by an amendment to which it was subjected. Before the amendment relied on, the proviso read as follows: "Provided, When oleomargarine is free from coloration or ingredient that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow, said tax shall be one fourth of one cent per pound." By the amendment the word ingredient was stricken out, thus leaving the proviso in the form in which it was enacted. The proposition is that the elimination of the word "ingredient" compels to the conclusion that wherever artificial coloration in the finished product of oleomargarine was produced by artificial coloration used in an authorized ingredient, that such coloration was not artificial within the statute. But this disregards the fact that butter, both when artificially colored and when not so colored, was made an authorized ingredient of oleomargarine. If, then, the word "ingredient" had not been stricken out, it might have given rise to the contention that the imparting of a yellow color to the finished product of oleomargarine by the use in its manufacture of spring butter of a natural yellow color would have caused the product oleomargarine to be artificially colored within the statute. As the manufacturer of oleomargarine was permitted to use either butter not artificially colored or butter so colored, the effect of striking out the word "ingredient" operated simply to render it certain that the finished product, even although of a yellow color, would be within the proviso where the color was imparted by an authorized ingredient not artificially colored. This overthrows the contention that the finished product, when not free from artificial coloration, must be treated as free from such coloration, because the color was derived from an artificially colored, though authorized, ingredient. We think, whilst the statute recognized the right of a manufacturer to use any or all of the authorized ingredients so as to make oleomargarine, and also authorized, as one of the ingredients, butter artificially colored, if the manufacturer elected to use such ingredient last mentioned, and thereby gave to *his manufactured product artificial coloration, such product so colored, although being oleomargarine, was not within the exception created by the proviso, and therefore came under the general rule subjecting oleomargarine to the tax of 10 cents a pound.

[49]

[50]

195 U. S.

Nor do the other provisions of the act of 1902, as it is asserted, sustain the contention that artificially colored oleomargarine is to be treated as free from such coloration, because such color was imparted in its manufacture by the use of an artificially colored and authorized ingredient. The provision principally depended upon is § 2 of the act of 1902, which provides that any person who "sells, vends, or furnishes oleomargarine for the use and consumption of others, except to his own family table, without compensation, who shall add to or mix with such oleomargarine any artificial coloration, . . . shall also be held to be a manufacturer of oleomargarine . . ." But this section relates only to the adding to or mixing artificial coloration with oleomargarine after its manufacture, and therefore does not even remotely support the proposition that where, in the process of manufacture, oleomargarine becomes artificially colored, it must be held not to be what it in fact is,—that is, must be treated as free from artificial coloration, although such in fact is not the case.

Indeed, the context of the statutes, particularly the provisions as to adulterated and renovated butter in the act of 1902, harmonize with and thus add cogency to the construction which we have given to the provision concerning artificial coloration.

2d. Did Congress, in passing the acts which are assailed, exert a power not conferred by the Constitution?

That the acts in question on their face impose excise taxes which Congress had the power to levy is so completely established as to require only statement. Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 619, 46 L. ed. 719, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Nicol v. Ames, 173 U. S. 509, 43 L. ed. 786, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 522; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 536, 41 L. ed. 816, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444.

*The last case referred to (Re Kollock) [51] involved the act of 1886, and the court, speaking through Mr. Chief Justice Fuller, said (p. 536, L. ed. p. 816, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 447): "The act before us is, on its face, an act for levying taxes, and although it may operate in so doing to prevent deception in the sale of oleomargarine as and for butter, its primary object must be assumed to be the raising of revenue."

We might rest the answer to the contention as to the want of power in Congress to enact the laws in question upon the foregoing cases. But in view of the earnestness with which the validity of the acts are assailed in argument, and the assertion that the necessary effect of the amendment to the act of 1886 by the act of 1902 is to make both of the laws in question so peculiar as to cause them to be beyond the reach of the previous rulings of this court, we propose to review and dispose of the propositions pressed upon us at bar as indubitably demonstrating that the acts in question were beyond the power of Congress to adopt.

The summary which follows embodies the propositions contained in the assignments of error, and the substance of the elaborate argument by which those assignments are deemed to be sustained. Not denying the general power of Congress to impose excise taxes, and conceding that the acts in question, on their face, purport to levy taxes of that character, the propositions are these:

(a) That the power of internal taxation which the Constitution confers on Congress is given to that body for the purpose of raising revenue, and that the tax on artificially colored oleomargarine is void because it is of such an onerous character as to make it manifest that the purpose of Congress in levying it was not to raise revenue, but to suppress the manufacture of the taxed article.

(b) The power to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine being solely reserved to the several states, it follows that the acts in question, enacted by Congress for the purpose of suppressing the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, [52]*when artificially colored, are void, because usurping the reserved power of the states, and therefore exerting an authority not delegated to Congress by the Constitution.

(c) Whilst it is true—so the argument proceeds—that Congress, in exerting the taxing power conferred upon it, may use all means appropriate to the exercise of such power, a tax which is fixed at such a high rate as to suppress the production of the article taxed is not a legitimate means to the lawful end, and is therefore beyond the scope of the taxing power.

(d) As the tax levied by the acts which are assailed discriminates against oleomargarine artificially colored, and in favor of butter so colored, and creates an unwarranted and unreasonable distinction between the oleomargarine which is artificially colored and that which is not, and as the necessary operation and effect of the tax is to suppress the manufacture of artificially colored oleomargarine, and to aid the butter industry, therefore the acts are void. And with this proposition in mind it is insisted that wherever the judiciary is called upon to determine whether a power which Congress has exerted is within the authority conferred by the Constitution, the duty is to test the validity of the act, not merely by its face, or, to use the words of the argument, “by the label placed upon it by Congress,” but by the necessary scope and effect of the assailed enactment.

(e) Admitting that the power to tax, as delegated to Congress by the Constitution as originally adopted, was subject to no limitation except as expressed in that instrument, the amendments to the Constitution, it is urged, have imposed limitations on the taxing power not expressed in the original Constitution. Under this assumption it is insisted that the acts in question are void, because the burdens which they impose are repugnant to both the 5th and 10th Amendments. To the 5th Amendment, because the amount of the tax is so out of proportion to the value of the property taxed as to destroy that property, and thus amount to a taking *thereof without due process of law. [53] To the 10th Amendment, because the necessary operation and effect of the acts is to destroy the oleomargarine industry, and thus exert a power not delegated to Congress, but reserved to the several states.

(f) Although, as a general rule, it be true that the power of Congress to tax, conferred by the Constitution, is unlimited, except as otherwise expressed in that instrument, and conceding, for the sake of the argument, that there is no express limitation either in the original Constitution or in the amendments thereto, by which the acts may be decided to be unconstitutional, nevertheless, it is urged that, as the burdens which the acts impose are so onerous and so unjust as to be confiscatory, the acts are void, because they amount to a violation of those fundamental rights which it is the duty of every free government to protect.

It is clear that these propositions in many respects not only reiterate in different forms of expression the same contention, but that they also so intermingle *considerations which require separate analysis as to cause it to be difficult to precisely determine their import. For instance, all of the propositions obviously rest not only on inferences drawn from the face of the acts, but also on deductions made from what it is assumed must have been the motives or purposes of Congress in passing them. To avoid confusion and repetition we shall consider these distinct contentions separately, and we hence come, first, to ascertain how far, if at all, the motives or purposes of Congress are open to judicial inquiry in considering the power of that body to enact the laws in question. Having determined the question of our right to consider motive or purpose, we shall then approach the propositions relied on by the light of the correct rule on the subject of purpose or motive.

Whilst, as a result of our written Constitution, it is axiomatic that the judicial department of the government is charged with the solemn duty of enforcing the Constitution, *and therefore, in cases properly presented, of determining whether a given manifestation of authority has exceeded the power conferred by that instrument, no instance is afforded from the foundation of the government where an act which was within a power conferred, was declared to be repugnant to the Constitution, because it appeared to the judicial mind that the particular exertion of constitutional power was either unwise or unjust. To announce such a principle would amount to declaring that, in our constitutional system, the judiciary was not only charged with the duty of upholding the Constitution, but also with the responsibility of correcting every possible abuse arising from the exercise by the other departments of their conceded authority. So to hold would be to overthrow the entire distinction between the legislative, judicial, and executive departments of the government, upon which our system is founded, and would be a mere act of judicial usurpation.

It is, however, argued, if a lawful power may be exerted for an unlawful purpose, and thus, by abusing the power, it may be made to accomplish a result not intended by the Constitution, all limitations of power must disappear, and the grave function lodged in the judiciary, to confine all the departments within the authority conferred by the Constitution, will be of no avail. This, when reduced to its last analysis, comes to this: that, because a particular department of the government may exert its lawful powers with the object or motive of reaching an end not justified, therefore it becomes the duty of the judiciary to restrain the exercise of a lawful power wherever it seems to the judicial mind that such lawful power has been abused. But this reduces itself to the contention that, under our constitutional system, the abuse by one department of the government of its lawful powers is to be corrected by the abuse of its powers by another department.

The proposition, if sustained, would destroy all distinction between the powers of the respective departments of the government, *would put an end to that confidence and respect for each other which it was the purpose of the Constitution to uphold, and would thus be full of danger to the permanence of our institutions. As aptly said by the court, speaking through Mr. Justice Miller, in Kilborn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 190, 26 L. ed. 377, 386:

"It is believed to be one of the chief merits of the American system of written constitutional law, that all the powers intrusted to governments, whether state or national, are divided into the three grand departments,—the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. That the functions appropriate to each of these branches of government shall be vested in a separate body of public servants, and that the perfection of the system requires that the lines which separate and divide these departments shall be broadly and clearly defined. It is also essential to the successful working of this system that the persons intrusted with power in any one of these branches shall not be permitted to encroach upon the powers confided to the others, but that each shall, by the law of its creation, be limited to the exercise of the powers appropriate to its own department, and no other."

It is, of course, true, as suggested, that if there be no authority in the judiciary to restrain a lawful exercise of power by another department of the government, where a wrong motive or purpose has impelled to the exertion of the power, that abuses of a power conferred may be temporarily effectual. The remedy for this, however, lies, not in the abuse by the judicial authority of its functions, but in the people, upon whom, after all, under our institutions, reliance must be placed for the correction of abuses committed in the exercise of a lawful power. This was aptly pointed out in Champion v. Ames, 186 U. S. 321, 47 L. ed. 492, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 321, where, speaking through Mr. Justice Harlan, it was said (p. 363, L. ed. p. 504, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 329):

"But if what Congress does is within the limits of its power, and is simply unwise or injurious, the remedy is that suggested by Chief Justice Marshall in Gibbons v. Ogden [9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23], when *he said: [56] "The wisdom and the discretion of Congress, their identity with the people, and the influence which their constituents possess at elections, are, in this, as in many other instances, as that, for example, of declaring war, the sole restraints on which they have relied, to secure them from its abuse. They are the restraints on which the people must often rely solely, in all representative governments.'"

The decisions of this court from the beginning lend no support whatever to the assumption that the judiciary may restrain the exercise of lawful power on the assumption that a wrongful purpose or motive has caused the power to be exerted. As we have previously said: from the beginning no case can be found announcing such a doctrine, and, on the contrary, the doctrine of a number of cases is inconsistent with its existence. As quite recently pointed out by this court in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 60, 44 L. ed. 969, 977, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, the often quoted statement of Chief Justice Marshall in M'Culloch v. Maryland [4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579], that the power to tax is the power to destroy, affords no support whatever to the proposition that where there is a lawful power to impose a tax its imposition may be treated as without the power because of the destructive effect of the exertion of the authority. And this view was clearly pointed out by Mr. Chief Justice Marshall in the passage from Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23, which was repeated in the passage from the opinion in Champion v. Ames, previously cited.

And the same doctrine has been again and again expounded. In the License Tax Cases, 5 Wall. 463, 18 L. ed. 497, referring to the extensive power of taxation possessed by Congress, and the express limitations found in the Constitution, it was said (p. 471, L. ed. p. 500):

"It is true that the power of Congress to tax is a very extensive power. It is given in the Constitution, with only one exception, and only two qualifications. Congress cannot tax exports, and it must impose direct taxes by the rule of apportionment, and indirect taxes by the rule of uniformity. Thus limited, and thus only, it reaches every subject, and may be exercised at discretion."

[57] *In Pacific Ins. Co. v. Soule, 7 Wall. 433, 19 L. ed. 95, referring to the unlimited nature of the power of taxation conferred upon Congress, it was observed (p. 443, L. ed. p. 98):

"Congress may prescribe the basis, fix the rates, and require payment as it may deem proper. Within the limits of the Constitution it is supreme in its action. No power of supervision or control is lodged in either of the other departments of the government."

And after referring to the express limitations as to uniformity and articles exported from any state, it was remarked (p. 446, L. ed. p. 98):

"With these exceptions, the exercise of the power is, in all respects, unfettered."

In Austin v. Boston, 7 Wall. 694, 19 L. ed. 224, it was again declared (p. 699, L. ed. p. 226) "that the right of taxation, where it exists, is necessarily unlimited in its nature. It carries with it inherently the power to embarrass and destroy."

Yet again, in Veazie Bank v. Fenno, 8 Wall. 533, 19 L. ed. 482, where a tax levied by Congress on the circulating notes of state banks was assailed on the ground that the tax was intended to destroy the circulation of such notes, and was, besides, the exercise of a power to tax a subject not conferred upon Congress, it was said, as to the first contention (p. 548, L. ed. p. 487):

"It is insisted, however, that the tax in the case before us is excessive, and so excessive as to indicate a purpose on the part of Congress to destroy the franchise of the bank, and is, therefore, beyond the constitutional power of Congress."

"The first answer to this is that the judicial cannot prescribe to the legislative department of the government limitations upon the exercise of its acknowledged powers. The power to tax may be exercised oppressively upon persons, but the responsibility of the legislature is not to the courts, but to the people by whom its members are elected. So, if a particular tax bears heavily upon a corporation, or a class of corporations, it cannot, for that reason only, be pronounced contrary to the Constitution."

"True it is, as argued, that the opinion in [58] that case rested the conclusion not alone upon the doctrine just quoted, but also upon the principle that Congress possessed the power to suppress the circulation of the notes of state banks as an incident to the authority concerning the currency delegated to Congress by the Constitution. But whilst this argument may weaken the authoritative force of the statement made in the case in question as to the want of power in the judiciary to examine into motive, it does not affect the persuasive and inherent force of the reasoning by which that view was sustained. Besides, the doctrine has since been affirmed."

In Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 355, 31 L. ed. 767, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 926, speaking through Mr. Justice Gray, it was said:

"In the words of Chief Justice Chase, condensing what had been said long before by Chief Justice Marshall, 'The judicial department cannot prescribe to the legislative department limitations upon the exercise of its acknowledged powers. The power to tax may be exercised oppressively upon persons; but the responsibility of the legislature is not to the courts, but to the people by whom its members are elected.'"

In Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, the cases which have been referred to were approvingly cited, and the doctrine which they expressed was restated.

In Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 45 L. ed. 853, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611, referring to a stamp duty levied by Congress, it was observed (p. 268, L. ed. p. 855, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 613):

"The power of Congress in this direction is unlimited. It does not come within the province of this court to consider why agreements to sell shall be subject to the stamp duty, and agreements to buy not. It is enough that Congress, in this legislation, has imposed a stamp duty upon the one, and not upon the other."

In Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 46 L. ed. 713, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493, considering another stamp duty levied by Congress, it was again said (p. 623, L. ed. p. 720, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 499):

"That it is no part of the function of a court to inquire into the reasonableness of the excise, either as respects the amount, or the property upon which it is imposed."

[59] *It being thus demonstrated that the motive or purpose of Congress in adopting the acts in question may not be inquired into, we are brought to consider the contention's relied upon to show that the acts assailed were beyond the power of Congress, putting entirely out of view all considerations based upon purpose or motive.

1. Undoubtedly, in determining whether a particular act is within a granted power, its scope and effect is to be considered. Applying this rule to the acts assailed, it is self-evident that on their face they levy an excise tax. That being their necessary scope and operation, it follows that the acts are within the grant of power. The argument to the contrary rests on the proposition that, although the tax be within the power, as enforcing it will destroy or restrict the manufacture of artificially colored oleomargarine, therefore the power to levy the tax did not obtain. This, however, is but to say that the question of power depends, not upon the authority conferred by the Constitution, but upon what may be the consequence arising from the exercise of the lawful authority.

Since, as pointed out in all the decisions referred to, the taxing power conferred by the Constitution knows no limits except those expressly stated in that instrument, it must follow, if a tax be within the lawful power, the exertion of that power may not be judicially restrained because of the results to arise from its exercise. The proposition now relied upon was urged in Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 44 L. ed. 969, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747, and was overruled. In that case it was insisted that, although death duties were within the power to levy excise taxation, as the effect of their extreme enforcement would involve the power to destroy the right to the passage or receipt of property on the occasion of death, —a subject within the exclusive control of the states,—therefore death duties, when imposed by Congress, must be held to be unconstitutional. In considering this contention, after referring to the statement of Mr. Chief Justice Marshall, in McCulloch v. Maryland, that the power to tax involves the power to destroy, it was observed (p. 60, L. ed. p. 977, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 755):

"This principle is pertinent only when [60] there is no power to tax a particular subject, and has no relation to a case where such right exists. In other words, the power to destroy, which may be the consequence of taxation, is a reason why the right to tax should be confined to subjects which may be lawfully embraced therein, even although it happens that in some particular instance no great harm may be caused by the exercise of the taxing authority as to a subject which is beyond its scope. But this reasoning has no application to a lawful tax, for if it had there would be an end of all taxation; that is to say, if a lawful tax can be defeated because the power which is manifested by its imposition may, when further exercised, be destructive, it would follow that every lawful tax would become unlawful, and therefore no taxation whatever could be levied."

Of course, where a state law is assailed as repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and on its face such act was seemingly within the power of the state to adopt, but its necessary effect and operation is to usurp a power granted by the Constitution to the government of the United States, it must follow, from the paramount nature of the Constitution of the United States, that the act is void. In such a case the result of the test of necessary operation and effect is to demonstrate the want of power, because of the controlling nature of the limitations imposed by the Constitution of the United States on the states.

And without attempting to review the numerous authorities cited in the argument, it suffices to say that we think it is apparent that they fall within one or the other of the categories just previously stated.

2. The proposition that where a tax is imposed which is within the grant of powers, and which does not conflict with any express constitutional limitation, the courts may hold the tax to be void because it is deemed that the tax is too high, is absolutely disposed of by the opinions in the cases hitherto cited, and which expressly hold, to repeat again the language *of one of the cases [61] (Spencer v. Merchant) that "The judicial department cannot prescribe to the legislative department limitations upon the exercise of its acknowledged powers. The power to tax may be exercised oppressively upon persons; but the responsibility of the legislature is not to the courts, but to the people by whom its members are elected."

3. Whilst undoubtedly both the 5th and 10th Amendments qualify, in so far as they are applicable, all the provisions of the Constitution, nothing in those amendments operates to take away the grant of power to tax conferred by the Constitution upon Congress. The contention on this subject rests upon the theory that the purpose and motive of Congress in exercising its undoubted powers may be inquired into by the courts, and the proposition is therefore disposed of by what has been said on that subject.

The right of Congress to tax within its delegated power being unrestrained, except as limited by the Constitution, it was within the authority conferred on Congress to select the objects upon which an excise should be laid. It therefore follows that, in exerting its power, no want of due process of law could possibly result, because that body chose to impose an excise on artificially colored oleomargarine, and not upon natural butter artificially colored. The judicial power may not usurp the functions of the legislative in order to control that branch of the government in the performance of its lawful duties. This was aptly pointed out in the extract heretofore made from the opinion in Treat v. White, 181 U. S. 264, 45 L. ed. 853, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611.

But it is urged that artificially colored oleomargarine and artificially colored natural butter are in substance and in effect one and the same thing, and from this it is deduced that to lay an excise tax only on oleomargarine artificially colored, and not on butter so colored, is violative of the due process clause of the 5th Amendment, because, as there is no possible distinction between the two, the act of Congress was a mere arbitrary imposition of an excise on the one article, and not on the other, although essentially of the same class. Conceding, merely for *the sake of argument, that the due process clause of the 5th Amendment would avoid an exertion of the taxing power which, without any basis for classification, arbitrarily taxed one article and excluded an article of the same class, such concession would be wholly inapposite to the case in hand. The distinction between natural butter artificially colored, and oleomargarine artificially colored so as to cause it to look like butter, has been pointed out in previous adjudications of this court. Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238, 46 L. ed. 171, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120, and authorities there cited. Indeed, in the cases referred to, the distinction between the two products was held to be so marked, and the aptitude of oleomargarine when artificially colored, to deceive the public into believing it to be butter, was decided to be so great, that it was held no violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment was occasioned by state legislation absolutely forbidding the manufacture, within the state, of oleomargarine artificially colored. As it has been thus decided that the distinction between the two products is so great as to justify the absolute prohibition of the manufacture of oleomargarine artificially colored, there is no foundation for the proposition that the difference between the two was not sufficient, under the extremest view, to justify a classification distinguishing between them.

4. Lastly we come to consider the argument that, even though as a general rule a tax of the nature of the one in question would be within the power of Congress, in this case the tax should be held not to be within such power, because of its effect. This is based on the contention that, as the tax is so large as to destroy the business of manufacturing oleomargarine artificially colored to look like butter, it thus deprives the manufacturers of that article of their freedom to engage in a lawful pursuit, and hence, irrespective of the distribution of powers made by the Constitution, the taxing laws are void, because they violate those fundamental rights which it is the duty of every free government to safeguard, and which, therefore, should be held to be embraced by implied, *though none the less potential, guaranties, or, in any event, to be within the protection of the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. [63]

Let us concede, for the sake of argument only, the premise of fact upon which the proposition is based. Moreover, concede, for the sake of argument only, that even although a particular exertion of power by Congress was not restrained by any express limitation of the Constitution, if, by the perverted exercise of such power, so great an abuse was manifested as to destroy fundamental rights which no free government could consistently violate, that it would be the duty of the judiciary to hold such acts to be void upon the assumption that the Constitution, by necessary implication, forbade them.

Such concession, however, is not controlling in this case. This follows when the nature of oleomargarine, artificially colored to look like butter, is recalled. As we have said, it has been conclusively settled by this court that the tendency of that article to deceive the public into buying it for butter is such that the states may, in the exertion of their police powers, without violating the due process clause of the 14th Amendment, absolutely prohibit the manufacture of the article. It hence results, that, even although it be true that the effect of the tax in question is to repress the manufacture of artificially colored oleomargarine, it cannot be said that such repression destroys rights which no free government could destroy, and, therefore, no ground exists to sustain the proposition that the judiciary may invoke an implied prohibition, upon the theory that to do so is essential to save such rights from destruction. And the same considerations dispose of the contention based upon the due process clause of the 5th Amendment. That provision, as we have previously said, does not withdraw or expressly limit the grant of power to tax conferred upon Congress by the Constitution. From this it follows, as we have also previously declared, that the judiciary is without authority to avoid an act of Congress exerting the taxing power, even in a case [64] where, to the judicial mind, *it seems that Congress had, in putting such power in motion, abused its lawful authority by levying a tax which was unwise or oppressive, or the result of the enforcement of which might be to indirectly affect subjects not within the powers delegated to Congress.

Let us concede that if a case was presented where the abuse of the taxing power was so extreme as to be beyond the principles which we have previously stated, and where it was plain to the judicial mind that the power had been called into play, not for revenue, but solely for the purpose of destroying rights which could not be rightfully destroyed consistently with the principles of freedom and justice upon which the Constitution rests, that it would be the duty of the courts to say that such an arbitrary act was not merely an abuse of a delegated power, but was the exercise of an authority not conferred. This concession, however, like the one previously made, must be without influence upon the decision of this cause for the reasons previously stated; that is, that the manufacture of artificially colored oleomargarine may be prohibited by a free government without a violation of fundamental rights.

Affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brown, and Mr. Justice Peckham dissent.

[65] *FREDERICK J. SCHICK, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 222.)

WILLIAM BROADWELL, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 223.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 65-100.)

Waiver—of jury trial for petty offense.

Persons prosecuted by information in a Federal district court, under the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 11, imposing a penalty of $50 for the knowing purchase or receipt for sale of oleomargarine which has not been branded or stamped according to law, may waive the jury to which they are entitled by U. S. Const. Amend. VI., since the mandate of art. 3, § 2, cl. 3, that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury," does not include such petty offenses, and there is no congressional legislation or rule of public policy requiring a jury in such cases.

NOTE.—On the right to waive jury trial—see note to King v. State, 3 L. R. A. 210.

195 U. S.

[Nos. 222, 223.]

Argued December 2, 1903. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois, to review judgments in favor of the United States in prosecutions by information, under a statute imposing a penalty for the knowing purchase or receipt for sale of oleomargarine which has not been branded or stamped according to law. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause, and, with Mr. Francis J. Kearful, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Re Henderson's Distilled Spirits (United States v. 100 Barrels Distilled Spirits) 14 Wall. 44, 53, 20 L. ed. 815, 816, was the case of an information to enforce a forfeiture, and it was held that the defendant could waive a jury and agree to a trial before the judge upon an agreed statement of facts, irrespective of any legislative provision upon the subject.

In Re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 258, 38 L. ed. 149, 152, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323, in speaking of the necessity of a trial by jury of an indictment or information, the court clearly has reference to that class of serious offenses involving, or which may involve, the liberty of the citizen, as defined in Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 549, 552-555, 32 L. ed. 223, 226-228, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301; and in Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 353, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620, Mr. Justice Harlan emphasized the fact that the case was one of felony.

On the other hand, in Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580, this court recognized that there have always been trials without juries, in prosecutions for petty offenses and actions to recover small amounts, without impairing the constitutional right of trial by jury.

See also Natal v. Louisiana, 139 U. S. 621, 624, 35 L. ed. 288, 289, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; 4 Bl. Com. 280; 1 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, Eng. p. 123; Williams

v. Augusta, 4 Ga. 509; Byers v. Com. 42 Pa. 89; People ex rel. Booth v. Fisher, 20 Barb. 652; Brewster v. People, 183 Ill. 143, 55 N. E. 640.

If the court be satisfied that tax legislation is colorable merely, and is not in its nature strictly a tax law, there is no reason why the court should decline to adjudge according to the truth.

Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283, 294, 295, 300, 45 L. ed. 862, 867, 868, 870, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 423, 4 L. ed. 579, 605; Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 278, 43 L. ed. 443, 447, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 695, 705; Patton v. Brady, 184 U. S. 608, 621, 46 L. ed. 713, 719, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

The courts are at liberty—indeed, are under a solemn duty—to look at the substance of things whenever they enter upon the inquiry whether the legislature has transcended the limits of its authority.

Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 661, 31 L. ed. 205, 210, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

Since Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 178, 2 L. ed. 60, 73, it has been undisputed that this is of the very essence of judicial duty.

The Constitution of the United States protects the individual against the irresponsible or arbitrary exercise of power by any branch of the national government, and Congress is not above the law, or supreme in the exercise of any power.

Kilbourn v. Thompson, 103 U. S. 168, 199, 26 L. ed. 377, 389; United States v. Lee, 106 U. S. 196, 220, 27 L. ed. 171, 181, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock Yards Co. (Cotting v. Godard) 183 U. S. 79, 84, 46 L. ed. 92, 99, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie, Miller Outcalt, Charles E. Prior, Francis J. Kearful, Delavan B. Cole, and Charles C. Carnahan also filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions see their brief as reported in McCray v. United States, ante, 78.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

A penal action is defined to be the civil suit brought for the recovery of a statutory forfeiture when inflicted as a penalty for an offense against the public.

16 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 231.

In Atheson v. Everitt, 1 Cowp. 382, Lord Mansfield said: There is no distinction better known than the distinction between civil and criminal law; between criminal prosecutions and civil actions. Mr. Justice Blackstone and all modern and ancient writers upon the subject distinguished between them. Penal actions were never yet put under the head of criminal law or crimes. . . . It is as much a civil action as an action for money had and received.

Informations to recover penalties and forfeitures seem to have been recognized as civil proceedings by this court, although in Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935, the fact was noted that, in recent years, prosecutions by information have greatly increased.

In Clifton v. United States, 4 How. 242, 11 L. ed. 957, the court said that an information for a forfeiture is in the nature of a criminal proceeding, and for that reason held that one good count was sufficient to support a verdict and judgment upon all the counts, though some were bad.

In Snyder v. United States, 112 U. S. 216, 28 L. ed. 697, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118, it was held that while informations under the revenue laws are not strictly criminal cases, but are civil actions, yet they are so in the nature of criminal proceedings as to come within the rule that a general verdict upon several counts seeking in different forms one object must be upheld if one count be good.

See also Clifton v. United States, 4 How. 242, 250, 11 L. ed. 957, 961.

A distinction is thus indicated between such informations and those for the recovery of a penalty; in the one case the proceeding being in rem, and in the other in personam.

If an information to recover a penalty be a civil action, trial by jury in these cases could have been waived; but in the absence of an agreed statement of facts, how far are the judgments therein open to review?

Re Henderson's Distilled Spirits (United States v. 100 Barrels Distilled Spirits) 14 Wall. 53, 20 L. ed. 815.

Those misdemeanors of a serious character which were triable by jury at common law, and which involve a deprivation of the liberty of the citizen, must, as a matter of constitutional right, be tried by jury in courts of the United States.

Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. ed. 223, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301.

It is doubtless proper to observe that the practice in the district courts of the United States has been to try all criminal cases, whether felonies or misdemeanors, by jury.

It is also to be observed that Mr. Justice Story, in United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumn. 19, Fed. Cas. No. 15,204, was of the opinion that in the case of a misdemeanor there never could be any other trial than by jury. The charge in that case was robbery on the high seas.

In Re Bonner, 151 U. S. 242, 33 L. ed. 149, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 323, the view was expressed that the trial of a criminal case in a Federal court could be in no other way than by jury. The charge in that case was larceny.

It has been held that the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, guaranteed by the 6th Amendment, cannot be waived.

United States v. Shaw, 59 Fed. 110, distinctly asserts the right of an accused person to waive trial by jury.

The inference from Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620, is that, in cases of felony, trial by jury cannot be waived.

Is it not permissible, in dealing with a minor offense, as here, to waive the right, without contravening the general and imperative provision of the Constitution itself as to serious crimes?

Bank of Columbia v. Okely, 4 Wheat. 244, 4 L. ed. 561.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The constitutionality of the oleomargarine legislation having *been settled in McCray v. United States (just decided), 195 U. S. 27, ante, 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, there is in these two cases only a single question. The plaintiffs in error were severally prosecuted by information in the district court of the United States for the northern district of Illinois, under § 11 of the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), which reads: "That every person who knowingly purchases or receives for sale any oleomargarine which has not been branded or stamped according to law shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each such offense."

In each case the parties in writing waived a jury, and agreed to submit the issues to the court. Judgments were entered in favor of the United States, and their collection ordered by only the civil process of execution. That the defendants had failed to comply with the section was proved. Indeed, it was not seriously disputed; the defense resting only on the alleged unconstitutionality of the act. The waiver of a jury was not assigned as error, nor referred to by counsel at the hearing before us, either in brief or argument. The question of its effect upon the judgment was suggested by this court, and briefs were called for from the respective parties. Such briefs have been filed, and both agree that the waiver of a jury did not invalidate the proceedings. Notwithstanding this, the fact of the waiver appears in the record.

We entertain no doubt that the parties could rightfully make such a waiver and that the judgments are in no way invalidated thereby. It will be noticed that the section characterizes the act prohibited as an offense, and subjects the party to a penalty of $50. So small a penalty for violating a revenue statute indicates only a petty offense. It is not one necessarily involving any moral delinquency. The violation may have been the result of ignorance or thoughtlessness, and must be classed with such illegal acts as acting as an auctioneer or peddler without a license, or making a deed without affixing the proper stamp. That by other sections of this statute more serious offenses are described, and more grave punishments provided does not lift this one to the *dignity of a crime. Not infrequently a [68] single statute in its several sections provides for offenses of different grades, subject to different punishments, and to prosecution in different ways. In some states, in the same act are gathered all the various offenses against the person, ranging from simple assault to murder, and imposing punishments, from a mere fine to death. This very statute furnishes an illustration. By one clause the knowingly selling of adulterated butter in any other than the prescribed form subjects the party convicted thereof to a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment for not more than two years. An officer of customs, violating certain provisions of the act, is declared guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, and imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than three years. Obviously, these violations of certain provisions of the statute must be classed among serious criminal offenses, and can be prosecuted only by indictment, while the violations of the statute in the cases before us were prosecuted by information. The truth is, the nature of the offense, and the amount of punishment prescribed, rather than its place in the statutes, determine whether it is to be classed among serious or petty offenses,—whether among crimes or misdemeanors. Clearly, both indicate that this particular violation of the statute is only a petty offense.
195 U. S.

In such a case there is no constitutional requirement of a jury. In the 3d clause of § 2, article 3, of the Constitution, it is provided that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury;" and in article 6 of the Amendments, that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed." If there be any conflict between these two provisions, the one found in the Amendments must control, under the well-understood rule that the last expression of the will of the lawmaker prevails over an earlier *one. But that in the body of the Constitution does not include a petty offense like the present. It must be read in the light of the common law. "That," said Mr. Justice Bradley, in Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 23 L. ed. 346, 347, referring to the common law, "is the system from which our judicial ideas and legal definitions are derived. The language of the Constitution and of many acts of Congress could not be understood without reference to the common law." Again, in Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 478, 31 L. ed. 508, 512, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 809, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, 569, is this declaration by Mr. Justice Matthews: "The interpretation of the Constitution of the United States is necessarily influenced by the fact that its provisions are framed in the language of the English common law, and are to be read in the light of its history." In United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 654, 42 L. ed. 890, 892, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, 459, Mr. Justice Gray used this language:

"In this, as in other respects, it must be interpreted in the light of the common law, the principles and history of which were familiarly known to the framers of the Constitution. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 422, 29 L. ed. 89, 91, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 624, 625, 29 L. ed. 746, 748, 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564." See also Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, post, 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; 1 Kent Com. 336.

Blackstone's Commentaries are accepted as the most satisfactory exposition of the common law of England. At the time of the adoption of the Federal Constitution, it had been published about twenty years, and it has been said that more copies of the work had been sold in this country than in England; so that undoubtedly, the framers of the Constitution were familiar with it. In this treatise, vol. 4, p. 5, is given a definition of the word "crimes:"

"A crime, or misdemeanor, is an act committed, or omitted, in violation of a public law either forbidding or commanding it. This general definition comprehends both crimes and misdemeanors; which, properly speaking, are mere synonymous terms; though in common usage the word 'crimes' is made to denote such offenses as are of a [70] deeper and more atrocious *dye; while smaller faults and omissions of less consequence are comprised under the gentler name of 'misdemeanors' only."

In the light of this definition we can appreciate the action of the convention which framed the Constitution. In the draft of that instrument, as reported by the committee of five, the language was "the trial of all criminal offenses . . . shall be by jury," but by unanimous vote it was amended so as to read "the trial of all crimes." The significance of this change cannot be misunderstood. If the language had remained "criminal offenses," it might have been contended that it meant all offenses of a criminal nature, petty as well as serious; but when the change was made from "criminal offenses" to "crimes," and made in the light of the popular understanding of the meaning of the word "crimes," as stated by Blackstone, it is obvious that the intent was to exclude from the constitutional requirement of a jury the trial of petty criminal offenses. But we need not go beyond the express rulings of this court. In Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 32 L. ed. 223, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301, reference was made to many decisions of state courts, holding that the trial of petty offenses was not within any constitutional provision requiring a jury in the trial of crimes, and on page 557, L. ed. p. 228, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 1307, it was said:

"Except in that class or grade of offenses called petty offenses, which, according to the common law, may be proceeded against summarily in any tribunal legally constituted for that purpose, the guaranty of an impartial jury to the accused in a criminal prosecution, conducted either in the name, or by or under the authority, of the United States, secures to him the right to enjoy that mode of trial from the first moment, and in whatever court, he is put on trial for the offense charged."

By § 563, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 455) the district courts are given jurisdiction "of all crimes and offenses cognizable under the authority of the United States, committed within their respective districts, or upon the high seas, the punishment of which is not capital." There is no act of Congress requiring that *the trial [71] of all offenses shall be by jury, and a court is fully organized and competent for the transaction of business without the presence of a jury. There is no public policy which forbids the waiver of a jury in the trial of petty offenses. On the contrary, by § 44 of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, Congress provided, in respect to the police court, that—

"In all prosecutions within the jurisdiction of said court, in which, according to the Constitution of the United States, the accused would be entitled to a jury trial, the trial shall be by jury, unless the accused shall, in open court, expressly waive such trial by jury, and request to be tried by the judge, in which case the trial shall be by such judge, and the judgment and sentence shall have the same force and effect in all respects as if the same had been entered and pronounced upon the verdict of a jury. In all cases where the accused would not, by force of the Constitution of the United States, be entitled to trial by jury, the trial shall be by the court without a jury, unless in such of said last-named cases wherein the fine or penalty may be $50 or more, or imprisonment as punishment for the offense may be thirty days or more, the accused shall demand a trial by jury, in which case the trial shall be by jury."

And it is a well-known fact that in many territories organized by act of Congress the legislature has authorized the prosecution of petty offenses in the police courts of cities, without a jury.

But if there be no constitutional or statutory provision or public policy requiring a jury in the trial of petty offenses, upon what ground can it be contended that a defendant therein may not voluntarily waive a jury? Can it be that a defendant can plead guilty of the most serious, even a capital, offense, and thus dispense with all inquiry by a jury, and cannot, when informed against for a petty offense, waive a trial by jury? Article 6 of the Amendments, as we have seen, gives the accused a right to a trial by jury. But the same article [72] gives *him the further right "to be confronted with the witnesses against him . . . and to have the assistance of counsel." Is it possible that an accused cannot admit, and be bound by the admission, that a witness not present would testify to certain facts? Can it be that if he does not wish the assistance of counsel, and waives it, the trial is invalid? It seems only necessary to ask these questions to answer them. When there is no constitutional or statutory mandate, and no public policy prohibiting, an accused may waive any privilege which he is given the right to enjoy. Authorities in the state courts are in harmony with this thought. In Com. v. Dailey, 12 Cush. 80, the defendant in a misdemeanor case waived his right to a full panel, and consented to be tried by eleven jurors; and this action was sustained by the supreme court of Massachusetts. Chief Justice Shaw, delivering the opinion of the court, said (p. 83): "He may waive any matter of form or substance, excepting only what may relate to the jurisdiction of the court." The same doctrine was laid down in Murphy v. Com. 1 Met. (Ky.) 365; Tyra v. Com. 2 Met. (Ky.) 1, and in State v. Kaufman, 51 Iowa, 578, 33 Am. Rep. 148, 2 N. W. 275. In Connelly v. State, 60 Ala. 89, 31 Am. Rep. 195 U. S.

34, a statute authorizing the waiver of a jury was sustained. The same rule was made in State v. Worden, 46 Conn. 349, 33 Am. Rep. 27, which was a case of a felony. See also People v. Rathbun, 21 Wend. 509, 542.

We are of opinion that the waiver of a jury by the defendants in these cases, and the consent to trial by the court, was not in conflict with law, and the judgments are, therefore, affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Brown, and Mr. Justice Peckham concur in the views expressed in this opinion, although they dissent from the judgments on the ground of their dissent in No. 301.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissenting:

These are criminal prosecutions based on the act of Congress *of August 2d, 1886, en-[73] titled "An Act Defining Butter, Also Imposing a Tax Upon and Regulating the Manufacture, Sale, Importation, and Exportation of Oleomargarine," supplemented by the act of October 1st, 1890, and amended by the act of May 9th, 1902. 24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228); 26 Stat. at L. 621, chap. 1244, § 41 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2235); 32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784.

The informations against Schick and Broadwell were substantially of the same character. Each charged that the defendant, a retail dealer in oleomargarine, unlawfully and knowingly purchased and received for sale certain oleomargarine which had not been stamped according to law.

The parties, in writing, waived a jury, and agreed to submit the issues to the court. The accused, in each case, pleaded not guilty. Evidence having been introduced, the defendant in each case moved the court to render a verdict and judgment of not guilty, and that he be discharged, upon the ground that the above act of Congress, as amended, was in contravention of the Constitution of the United States in that it deprived the defendant and the oleomargarine manufacturers and dealers in the United States of their liberty and property without due process of law; was an unwarranted encroachment upon, and interference with, the police powers reserved to the several states and to the people of the United States; invested an inferior executive officer with the power finally and arbitrarily to determine judicial questions concerning property rights; and so arbitrarily discriminated against oleomargarine in favor of butter as to be repugnant to the fundamental principles of equality and justice that were inherent in the Constitution.

In each case the motion was overruled, the defendant excepting. Motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment having been severally overruled, the court, no jury having been impaneled, found the defendant, in each case, guilty, and adjudged that he pay a fine of $50 and costs, and that execution issue therefor. From those judgments the present writs of error were prosecuted.

[74] *The assignments of error here present the same questions of constitutional law that were raised on the motion to render judgment for the defendant; and, in addition, they question the action of the trial court in striking out and refusing to consider certain evidence.

Upon the face of the record the question arises whether the court below, without the aid of a jury, had jurisdiction to ascertain the facts, and, finding the defendants severally guilty of the offense charged, to impose upon each the fine prescribed by the statute.

I. That this is a criminal prosecution, and that the mode of procedure must be determined by the established rules governing the conduct of trials in criminal cases, is, in my judgment, not to be doubted. The record itself describes the information as a criminal information, and the case was tried as if it were a criminal prosecution. It never occurred to the trial court that it was a prosecution of any other kind. It is true that the act provides that all fines, penalties, and forfeitures imposed by it may be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction. § 19. But it is evident from the entire act that it makes all the violations of the provisions imposing a fine, or fine and imprisonment, or fine or imprisonment, criminal offenses, to be punished in such mode as was appropriate or allowable by the law of criminal procedure. Throughout the act, when a fine is imposed, the doing of the thing forbidden is described as an "offense." If a person carries on the business of a manufacturer of oleomargarine, without having paid the special tax, he is subject, besides being liable to pay the special tax, to be fined not less than $1,000, and not more than $5,000; if he carries on the business of a wholesale dealer in oleomargarine without having paid the special tax therefor he is subject, besides being liable for the special tax, to be fined not less than $500, nor more than $2,000; and if he carries on the business of a retail dealer in oleomargarine, without having paid the special tax, he may be fined not less than $50, nor more than $500 for each and every as described, or who packs in any package any oleomargarine in a manner contrary to law, or who falsely brands any package or affixes any stamp on any package denoting a less amount of tax than that required by law, "may be fined for each offense not more than $1,000, and be imprisoned not more than two years." § 6. Every manufacturer of oleomargarine who neglects to affix the required label to a package containing oleomargarine made by him, or sold or offered for sale by or for him, and every person who removes any label so affixed may be "fined $50 for each package in respect to which such offense is committed." § 7. Every officer of customs who permits imported oleomargarine "to pass out of his custody or control without compliance by the owner or importer thereof with the provisions of this section relating thereto, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be fined not less than $1,000, nor more than $5,000, and imprisoned not less than six months, nor more than two years." § 10. Any person who wilfully neglects or refuses, when emptying a stamped package containing oleomargarine, to utterly destroy such stamps, "shall for each such offense, be fined, not exceeding $50, and imprisoned not less than ten days, nor more than six months. And any person who fraudulently gives away or accepts from another, or who sells, buys, or uses for packing oleomargarine any such stamped package, shall, for each such offense, be fined not exceeding $100, and be imprisoned not more than one year." § 13. Any person who wilfully removes or defaces the stamps, marks, or brands on packages containing oleomargarine taxed as provided, is guilty "of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than two thousand dollars, and by imprisonment for not less than thirty days, nor more than six months." § 15. Whenever any person engaged in carrying on the business of manufacturing oleomargarine, defrauds, or attempts to defraud, *the United States of the [76] tax on oleomargarine produced by him, or any part thereof, he forfeits the factory and manufacturing apparatus used by him, and all oleomargarine and all raw material for the production of oleomargarine found in the factory and on the factory premises, and "shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars nor more than five thousand dollars, and be imprisoned not less than six months, nor more than three years." § 17.

[75] *offense. § 4. Every person who knowingly sells or offers for sale, or delivers or offers to deliver, any oleomargarine in any other form than in new wooden or paper packages,

These sections are to be looked at in connection with § 11, on which this prosecution is based. That section provides: "That every person who knowingly purchases or receives for sale any oleomargarine which has not been branded or stamped according to law, shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars for each such offense."

It is true that the word "penalty" is used in several sections of this act. But it is not to be conclusively inferred therefrom that the offense described was not a crime, within the strictest meaning of that word. Referring to the words "penalty," "liability," and "forfeiture," this court has said: "These words have been used by the great masters of Crown law and the elementary writers as synonymous with the word 'punishment,' in connection with crimes of the highest grade. Thus, Blackstone speaks of criminal law as that 'branch of jurisprudence which teaches of the nature, extent, and degrees of every crime, and adjusts to it its adequate and necessary penalty.' Alluding to the importance of this department of legal science, he says: 'The enacting of penalties to which a whole nation shall be subject should be calmly and maturely considered.' Referring to the unwise policy of inflicting capital punishment for certain comparatively slight offenses, he speaks of them as 'these outrageous penalties,' and frequently refers to laws that inflict the 'penalty of death.'" United States v. Reisinger, 128 U. S. 398, 402, 32 L. ed. 480, 481, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 99, 101. So, in Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657, 667, 36 L. ed. 1123, 1127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224, 227, after referring to the maxim of international law (The Antelope, 10 Wheat. 66, 123, 6 L. ed. 268, 282), that "the courts of no country execute the penal laws of another" and ob-

[77]serving "that there was great danger, when interpreting that maxim, of being misled by the different shades of meaning allowed to the word "penal" in our language, this court said: "In the municipal law of England and America the words 'penal' and 'penalty' have been used in various senses. Strictly and primarily, they denote punishment, whether corporal or pecuniary, imposed and enforced by the state for a crime or offense against its laws. . . . Penal laws, strictly and properly, are those imposing punishment for an offense committed against the state, and which, by the English and American Constitutions, the executive of the state has the power to pardon." Besides, the act throughout uses the words "fine," and "fined,"—words which, in their primary sense, import the punishment of a person convicted of crime.

I cannot doubt, after a scrutiny of the entire act, that every offense prescribed by it, and for which a fine is imposed, was intended to be made and is a criminal offense,—a crime against the United States,—to be punished as such. Certainly the offenses prescribed in §§ 4, 6, 7, 10, 13, 15, and 17 are crimes against the United States.

195 U. S.

If that be so, surely the offense prescribed in § 11 is a crime, and not a mere penalty, recoverable only by some form of proceeding of a civil nature. This view is substantially conceded by the Solicitor General when he says that "in view of the word 'offense' in § 11 of the oleomargarine act, there is ground for saying that the penalty which it provides was imposed as a fine for the violation of what is made a misdemeanor." If the United States could have proceeded in some form of civil action to recover the fine imposed by that section, it has not done so. It chose to proceed by criminal information, and the accused pleaded not guilty of the crime charged.

II. So far it has been my object only to show that the offense charged was a crime against the United States. I now inquire as to the mode in which it may be legally ascertained whether an accused, pleading not guilty, has committed the crime charged against him? Has the law [78] designated any particular tribunal, or prescribed any special mode, for trying the issue as to his guilt? The words of the Constitution upon this subject are clear and explicit. They leave no room for interpretation. Its express mandate is that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury." Const. art. 3. When the Constitution was placed before the people for adoption or rejection, many deemed those words, explicit as they were, inadequate to secure all the benefits of a jury trial as it existed at common law.

It is suggested that if any conflict exists between the absolute requirement in the original Constitution (art. 3, § 2), that the "trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury," and the provision in the 6th Amendment, that the accused, in every criminal prosecution, "shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury," etc., the latter, having been last adopted, must control. But there is no such conflict. Those who opposed the acceptance of the Constitution said, among other things, that the words of that instrument, strictly construed (art. 3, § 2), admitted of a secret trial, or of one that might be indefinitely postponed to suit the purposes of the government, or of one taking place in a state or district other than that in which the crime was committed. The framers of the Constitution disclaimed any such evil purposes; but in order to meet the objections of its opponents, and to remove all possible ground of uneasiness on the subject, the 6th Amendment was adopted, in which the essential features of the trial required by § 2 of article 3 are set forth. In other words, the trial required by that section is the trial referred to in the 6th Amendment. And the jury referred to in both the original Constitution and in the Amendments was, the authorities all agree, the historical jury of the common law, consisting of twelve persons, no more and no less, whose unanimous verdict was necessary to conviction. Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 349, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1066, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; 2 Hale P. C. part 2, [79] 161; 1 Chitty Crim. *Law, 505; King v. St. Michael, 2 W. Bl. 719; Olyncard's Case, Cro. Eliz. part 2, p. 654. Mr. Justice Story said: "The Constitution of the United States has exhibited great solicitude on the subject of the trial of crimes and has declared that the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by the jury; and has, in some cases, prescribed, and in others required Congress to prescribe, the place of trial. And certain amendments of the Constitution, in the nature of a Bill of Rights, have been adopted, which fortify and guard this inestimable right of trial by jury." United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumn. 19, 37, Fed. Cas. No. 15,204. See also Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, 174 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 873, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 580; Natal v. Louisiana, 139 U. S. 621, 624, 35 L. ed. 288, 289, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 636; 4 Bl. Com. 280; 1 Stephen's History of the Criminal Law, 123.

The contention in the present prosecutions is that, although the positive constitutional injunction that the trial of all crimes shall be by jury furnishes an inflexible rule that may not be ignored in cases of felony, that rule, even where the accused pleads not guilty, may be disregarded altogether in a trial for a misdemeanor, provided he consents to be tried by the court without a jury. Plainly, such an exception is unauthorized by the Constitution if its words be interpreted according to their ordinary meaning. Nor, in my opinion, is it consistent with the fundamental rules of criminal procedure, as established and enforced at common law. In determining the meaning and scope of the words "due process of law," as used in the Constitution, the established rule is that "we must examine the Constitution itself, to see whether this process be in conflict with any of its provisions. If not found to be so, we must look to those settled usages and modes of proceeding existing in the common and statute law of England before the emigration of our ancestors, and which are shown not to have been unsuited to their civil and political condition by having been acted on by them after the settlement of this country." Den ex dem. Murray v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 18 How. 272, 277, 15 L. ed. 372, 374. So, in ascertaining whether, under any circumstances, a criminal case may be tried in a Federal court *without a jury,—the accused [80] pleading not guilty,—we must inquire whether the Constitution forbids such an exercise of authority by the court, without a jury. If it does, that is the end of the matter; if it does not, then, and then only, may we look to such usages and modes of proceeding as existed at the common law for the trial of crimes before the adoption of the Constitution.

Proceeding on that basis, we have seen that the Constitution expressly requires that the trial of all crimes, except impeachment, shall be by jury; and I assert, with confidence, that no precedent can be found at common law for the trial by the court, without a jury, of any crimes except those described in adjudged cases and by elementary authorities as minor or petty offenses involved in the internal police of the state, and those could be tried summarily by some court or officer, without the intervention of a jury, only when thereunto authorized by an act of Parliament. Except in cases of contempt, the common law, Blackstone says, was a stranger to the summary proceedings authorized by acts of Parliament. Book 4, chap. 20, p. 280. I am not aware of, nor has there been cited, any case in England in which, after Magna Charta, and prior to the adoption of our Constitution, a court, tribunal, officer, or commissioner has, without a jury, even in the case of a petty offense, determined the question of crime or no crime, when the defendant pleaded not guilty, unless the authority to do so was expressly conferred by an act of Parliament. The exceptions to the rule at common law that all crimes must be tried by a jury were in the mind of this court when, in Callan v. Wilson, 127 U. S. 540, 557, 32 L. ed. 223, 228, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1301, 1307, it said: "Except in that class or grade of offenses called petty offenses, which, according to the common law, may be proceeded against summarily in any tribunal legally constituted for that purpose, the guaranty of an impartial jury to the accused in a criminal prosecution, conducted either in the name, or by or under the authority of the United States, secures to him the right to enjoy that mode of trial from the first moment, and in whatever *court, he [81] is put on trial for the offense charged. In such cases a judgment of conviction, not based upon a verdict of guilty by a jury, is void."

If, in analogy to the powers exercised by the Parliament of England prior to the adoption of our Constitution, it should be held that Congress could treat the particular crime here in question as a petty offense, triable by the court, without a jury, or with a jury of less than twelve persons, it is sufficient to say that Congress has not legislated to that effect in respect of the offense charged against these defendants, or of any other offense defined in the acts relating to oleomargarine. If it has the power to do so, Congress has not assumed, directly or indirectly, to withdraw such offenses from the operation of the constitutional provision that the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury. And the question is whether, in the face of that explicit provision, and in the absence of any statute authorizing it to be done, the court, a jury being waived, has jurisdiction to try the accused for the crime charged.

In this connection we are confronted with the broad statement, found in some adjudged cases as well as in elementary treatises, to the effect that a person is entitled to waive any constitutional right, of whatever nature, that he possesses, and thereby preclude himself from invoking the authority of the Constitution for the protection or enforcement of that right. It is suggested that even when charged with murder he may plead guilty, and that the court thereupon, without the intervention of a jury, may pronounce such judgment as the law permits or authorizes. And it is confidently asked by those who make that suggestion, Why may not one charged with a misdemeanor, and pleading not guilty, waive a jury altogether, and consent to be tried by the court? This argument will not stand the test of reason. It proceeds upon the ground that jurisdiction to try a criminal case may be given by consent of the accused and the prosecutor. But such consent could have no legal efficacy. Undoubtedly one accused of *murder may plead guilty. But in doing so he renders a trial unnecessary. The Constitution does not prohibit an accused from pleading guilty. His right to do so was recognized long before the adoption of that instrument; and it was never supposed that such a plea impaired the force of the requirement that a trial for crime, under a plea of not guilty, shall be by jury. It is not to be assumed that the Constitution intended, when preserving the right of trial by jury, to change any essential rule of criminal practice established at the common law, before the adoption of that instrument. When the accused pleads guilty before a lawful tribunal he admits every material fact well averred in the indictment or information, and there is no issue to be tried; no facts are to be found; no trial occurs. After such a plea nothing remains to be done except that the court shall pronounce judgment upon the facts voluntarily confessed by the accused. What the Constitution requires is that the trial of a crime shall be by jury. If the accused pleads not guilty, there must, of necessity, be a trial; for by that plea he puts "himself on his country, which country the jury are;" he contests, by that plea, every fact necessary to establish his guilt; he is presumed to be innocent; nothing is confessed; and the facts necessary to show guilt must be judicially ascertained, in the mode prescribed by law, before any judgment can be rendered. But the vital inquiry is, In what way, when the defendant pleads not guilty, are the facts to be ascertained, and the plea of not guilty overcome? Under the express words of the Constitution the answer must be: By trial before a jury of twelve persons, organized to determine whether the charge of guilt be true; the function of the court being simply to conduct the trial, and render a judgment in accordance with the verdict of the jury as to the facts. The court and the jury, not separately, but together, constitute the appointed tribunal which alone, under the law, can try the question of crime, the commission of which by the accused is put in issue by a plea of not guilty.

[82]

195 U. S.

There are some things so vital in their character that they *may not be legally done[83] or legally omitted in a criminal prosecution, even with the consent of the accused. This is abundantly established by authority. The grounds upon which the decisions rest are, upon principle, applicable alike in cases of felonies and misdemeanors, although the consequences to the accused may be more evident as well as more serious in the former than in the latter cases. Certain it is, that felonies and misdemeanors are equally crimes within the meaning of the constitutional provision that the trial of all crimes shall be by jury, and there is no warrant to construe that provision as if it read, "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment and in misdemeanors, shall be by jury."

Let us look at some of the authorities in cases both of felonies and misdemeanors, and ascertain whether the consent, express or implied, of the accused can have the effect to dispense with the mode of trial appointed by law for criminal cases. As the question here presented has never been decided by this court, and is of importance, a somewhat extended reference to authorities is justified.

The first case to which I call attention is Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 579, 28 L. ed. 262, 265, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202. That was a case of murder arising in Utah while a territory. It appeared that the trial, by triers appointed by the court, of challenges of proposed jurors, was not had in the presence of the accused. It was there argued that his presence at the trial of such an issue was a privilege which he was entitled to waive, and that the entire proceedings against him should not fail because he chose not to exercise that privilege. This court, however, held that the trial of challenges could not legally take place except in the actual presence of the accused. In dealing with the suggestion that the right of the accused to be present before the triers was waived by his failure to object to their retirement from the court room, or to the trial of the several challenges in his absence, it was said: "We are of opinion that it was not within the power of the accused or his counsel to dispense with the statutory requirement as to his personal [84] presence at the trial. *The argument to the contrary necessarily proceeds upon the ground that he alone is concerned as to the mode by which he may be deprived of his life or liberty, and that the chief object of the prosecution is to punish him for the crime charged. But this is a mistaken view as well of the relations which the accused holds to the public as of the end of human punishment. The natural life, says Blackstone, 'cannot legally be disposed of or destroyed by any individual, neither by the person himself, nor by any other of his fellow creatures, merely upon their own authority.' 1 Bl. Com. 133. The public has an interest in his life and liberty. Neither can be lawfully taken except in the mode prescribed by law. That which the law makes essential in proceedings involving the deprivation of life or liberty cannot be dispensed with or affected by the consent of the accused, much less by his mere failure, when on trial and in custody, to object to unauthorized methods." 4 Bl. Com. 11.

In Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 353, 42 L. ed. 1061, 1067, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620, 624, which was a case of grand larceny, charged to have been committed while Utah was a territory (the trial occurring after Utah became a state), one of the questions was whether the trial by a jury composed of eight jurors, as authorized by the statutes of the state, was a legal trial for a crime committed when Utah was a territory under the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. It was contended that, as the accused did not object, until after verdict, to a trial by a jury of eight persons, he should not be heard to say that the trial was in violation of his constitutional rights. This court overruled that contention, saying: "It is sufficient to say that it was not in the power of one accused of felony, by consent expressly given or by his silence, to authorize a jury of only eight persons to pass upon the question of his guilt. The law in force when this crime was committed did not permit any tribunal to deprive him of his liberty, except one constituted of a court and a jury of twelve persons." After referring to Hopt v. Utah, 110 U. S. 574, 579, 28 L. ed. 262, 265, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, the court proceeded: "If one under trial for a felony *the punishment of which is con-[85] finement in a penitentiary could not legally consent that the trial proceed in his absence, still less could he assent to be deprived of his liberty by a tribunal not authorized by law to determine his guilt."

"The infirmity," says Cooley, "in case of a trial by a jury of less than twelve, by consent, would be that the tribunal would be one unknown to the law, created by mere voluntary act of the parties; and it would in effect be an attempt to submit to a species of arbitration the question whether the accused has been guilty of an offense against the state." Const. Lim. 319.

A leading case is that of Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128, 136. Its doctrines have been widely accepted as based upon a sound interpretation of constitutional provisions relating to criminal prosecutions. The court of appeals of New York said: "These considerations make it apparent that the right of a defendant in a criminal prosecution to affect, by consent, the conduct of the case, should be much more limited than in civil actions. It should not be permitted to extend so far as to work radical changes in great and leading provisions as to the organization of the tribunals or the mode of proceeding prescribed by the Constitution and the laws. Effect may justly and safely be given to such consent in many particulars; and the law does, in respect to various matters, regard and act upon it as valid. Objections to jurors may be waived; the court may be substituted for triers to dispose of challenges to jurors; secondary in place of primary evidence may be received; admissions of facts are allowed; and in similar particulars, as well as in relation to mere formal proceedings generally, consent will render valid what without it would be erroneous. A plea of guilty to any indictment, whatever may be the grade of the crime, will be received and acted upon if it is made clearly to appear that the nature and effect of it are understood by the accused. In such a case the preliminary investigation of a grand jury, with the admission of the accusation in the indictment, is supposed *to be a sufficient safeguard to the [86] public interests. But when issue is joined upon an indictment, the trial must be by the tribunal and in the mode which the Constitution and laws provide, without any essential change. The public officer prosecuting for the people has no authority to consent to such a change, nor has the defend- ant. Applying the above reasoning to the present case, the conclusion necessarily follows that the consent of the plaintiff in error to the withdrawal of one juror, and that the remaining eleven might render a verdict, could not lawfully be recognized by the court, at the circuit, and was a nullity. If a deficiency of one juror might be waived, there appears to be no good reason why a deficiency of eleven might not be; and it is difficult to say why, upon the same principle, the entire panel might not be dispensed with, and the trial committed to the court alone. It would be a highly dangerous innovation, in reference to criminal cases, upon the ancient and invaluable institution of trial by jury, and the Constitution and laws establishing and securing that mode of trial, for the court to allow of any number short of a full panel of twelve jurors, and we think it ought not to be tolerated."

Upon the general question whether the consent or silence of the defendant can excuse the failure of the court at the trial to enforce such essential rules as are prescribed by law for the trial of criminal cases, the case of Hill v. People, 16 Mich. 351, 356-358, is instructive. That was a case of murder. The defendant was found guilty, and after the trial it was discovered that one of the jurors was disqualified under the statutes of Michigan. But that fact was unknown to the accused and his counsel until after the rendition of the verdict. It was contended by the state that by neglecting to challenge that juror, the accused lost the right to avail himself of the objection; and was to be deemed to have thereby waived all objections to the juror or to a trial by eleven qualified jurors. It should be here observed that the Constitution of [87] Michigan preserved the *right, in all criminal prosecutions, to "a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury, which may consist of less than twelve men in all courts not of record." Looking at the case as one in which the trial had been by eleven competent jurors only, the court considered the general question of waiver as applicable to criminal cases. Speaking by Judge Christiancy, and observing that under the state Constitution there could be no reasonable doubt of the competency of parties in civil cases to waive such an objection, or to stipulate for a trial by jury of less than twelve, the court said: "But a criminal prosecution, in which the people in their sovereign capacity prosecute for a crime against the laws of the whole society, and seek to subject the defendant to punishment, must, it seems to us, be considered as a proceeding in invitum, against the will of the defendant throughout, so far as relates to a question of this kind, or any question as to the legal constitution of the court or jury by which he is to be tried. It would be adding materially to the generally recognized force of the obligation of contracts to hold that a defendant charged with a crime might, without a trial, enter into a building contract with the prosecuting attorney (representing the state) to go to the penitentiary for a certain number of years in satisfaction for the offense. And yet it would approximate such a position, to hold that he might be bound by a contract providing for a trial before a court or jury unknown to the Constitution or the laws, the result of which trial might be to place him in the same penitentiary. The true theory, we think, is that the people, in their political or sovereign capacity, assume to provide by law the proper tribunals and modes of trial for offenses, without consulting the wishes of the defendant as such; and upon them, therefore, devolves the responsibility, not only of enacting such laws, but of carrying them into effect, by furnishing the tribunals, the panels of jurors, and other safeguards for his trial, in accordance with the Constitution, which secures his rights."

The court added some general observations which may well *be heeded by every one [88] charged with the administration of the criminal laws. It said: "But independent of all theories, and as a practical question, we think there would be great danger in holding it competent for a defendant in a criminal case, by waiver or stipulation, to give authority which it could not otherwise possess, to a jury of less than twelve men, for his trial and conviction; or to deprive himself in any way of the safeguards which the Constitution has provided him, in the unanimous agreement of twelve men qualified to serve as jurors by the general laws of the land. Let it once be settled that a defendant may thus waive this constitutional right, and no one can foresee the extent of the evils which might follow; but the whole judicial history of the past must admonish us that very serious evils should be apprehended, and that every step taken in that direction would tend to increase the danger. One act or neglect might be recognized as a waiver in one case, and another in another, until the constitutional safeguards might be substantially frittered away. The only safe course is to meet the danger in limine, and prevent the first step in the wrong direction. It is the duty of courts to see that the constitutional rights of a defendant in a criminal case shall not be violated, however negligent he may be in raising the objection. It is in such cases, emphatically, that consent should not be allowed to give jurisdiction."

In State v. Carman, 63 Iowa, 130, 131. 50

Am. Rep. 741, 742, 18 N. W. 691, which was the case of an assault with an attempt to commit murder, the supreme court of Iowa said: "In our Code of Civil Practice it is provided that 'issues of fact in an action in an ordinary proceeding must be tried by a jury, unless the the same is waived.' § 2740. In our Code of Criminal Procedure there is no provision for the waiver of a jury. On the other hand, it is provided that 'an issue of fact must be tried by a jury of the county in which the indictment is found, unless a change of venue has been awarded.' § 4350. We regard this provision as excluding the jurisdiction of the court, without a jury, to try such issues. The question presented is not as to the [89] waiver of *a mere statutory privilege, but an imperative provision, based, as we view it, upon the soundest conception of public policy. Life and liberty are too sacred to be placed at the disposal of any one man, and always will be, so long as man is fallible. The innocent person, unduly influenced by his consciousness of innocence, and placing undue confidence in his evidence, would, when charged with crime, be the one most easily induced to waive his safeguards. There is no resemblance between such a case and that of a person pleading guilty. In the latter case there is no trial, but mere judgment upon the plea. If the language of the statute were less imperative than it is, the adjudications would support us in reaching the same conclusion."

In State v. Mansfield, 41 Mo. 470, 476, which involved the question of the right of the accused in capital crimes and felonies to waive his right to a jury of twelve persons, after referring to Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128, the supreme court of Missouri, speaking by Judge Wagner, conceded that in cases of misdemeanor, created by statute, the legislature, under the laws of that state, might provide for their prosecution in a summary way, without the formality of an indictment, and that the accused could waive a jury, or agree on a certain number. But there was no such statute in Missouri, and the court, in respect of the general question of the waiver of a jury, said: "Another good and sufficient reason, it occurs to us, is, that the prisoner's consent cannot change the law. His right to be tried by a jury of twelve men is not a mere privilege; it is a positive requirement of the law. He can unquestionably waive many of his legal rights or privileges. He may agree to certain facts, and dispense with formal proofs; he may consent to the introduction of evidence not strictly legal, or forbear to interpose challenges to the jurors; but he has no power to consent to the creation of a new tribunal unknown to the law, to try his of- fense. The law, in its wisdom, has declared what shall be a legal jury in the trial of criminal cases; that it shall be composed of twelve; and a defendant; *when he is upon [90] trial, cannot be permitted to change the law, and substitute another and a different tribunal to pass upon his guilt or innocence. The law as to criminal trials should be based upon fixed standards, and should be clear, definite, and uniform, and absolute. If one juror can be withdrawn, there is no reason why six or eight may not be, and thus the accused, through persuasion or other causes, may have his life put in jeopardy, or be deprived of his liberty, through a body constituted in a manner unknown to the law. Aside from the illegality of such a procedure, public policy condemns it. The prisoner is not in a condition to exercise a free and independent choice without often creating prejudice against him."

In Wilson v. State, 16 Ark. 601, 608, which was a case of larceny, the supreme court of Arkansas said: "Hence there would seem to be no other mode for the trial of a criminal issue than that by jury. The difficulty is not obviated by any waiver of this mode of trial, because the legislature has provided no other mode, in lieu of it, in such an event, as it has in civil cases. Nothing short of a confession of the facts, or the finding of them by the verdict of the jury, can regularly authorize the judgment of the court. If the accused would not only waive his right to a trial by jury, but go further, and withdraw his plea, and then confess the facts charged against him in the indictment, the court would be authorized to render a judgment against him; but so long as his plea of not guilty is in, there is no mode by which the court can dispose of it, although the accused may waive a trial by jury, with all its attendant privileges, and desire ever so much that the issue may be disposed of by a reference of it to the judge, or any other referee or arbitrator, and the prosecuting attorney may desire the same, and act in concert with the accused; for the simple reason that the law makes no provision for any such referee or arbitrator in criminal cases. The only provision is for a confession of the facts, or a trial by jury to determine them."

A leading case upon the subject of trial by jury is that of Work v. State of Ohio*, 2 [91] Ohio St. 296, 302, 305, 59 Am. Dec. 671, 672, 674. That was an information charging the defendant with assault and battery. The trial took place under an act of the Ohio legislature, which permitted a trial in such a case by a jury of six men, notwithstanding the Constitution of Ohio provided that the right of trial by jury should be inviolate. The defendant pleaded not guilty, but was found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs. In discussing the history of trial by jury, the court, speaking by Judge Ranney, said: "In what does the privilege of this great bulwark of personal liberty consist? The Constitution furnishes no answer, nor was it necessary that it should. If ages of uninterrupted use can give significance to language, the right of jury trial and the habeas corpus stand as representatives of ideas as certain and definite as any other in the whole range of legal learning. The institution of the jury, referred to in our Constitution, and its benefits secured to every person accused of crime, is precisely the same in every substantial respect, as that recognized in the great charter, and its benefits secured to the freemen of England, and again and again acknowledged in fundamental compacts as the great safeguard of life, liberty, and property; the same, brought to this continent by our forefathers, and perseveringly claimed as their birthright, in every contest with arbitrary power, and finally, an invasion of its privileges prominently assigned as one of the causes which was to justify them in the eyes of mankind in waging the contest which resulted in independence.

. . . We are of opinion it was this very tribunal, thus constituted, that those who framed and adopted the Constitution of this state intended to perpetuate, and make the safeguard of innocence, by securing its benefits to every person accused of crime, in any of its courts. There is certainly nothing in our history which points to a different conclusion. For half a century before its adoption, similar provisions had been so considered and acted upon. Until the passage of this law, no person had ever [92] been convicted of crime, by less than the *concurring assent of twelve of his peers; and no law has ever attempted to authorize it to be done. If the power exists to diminish the number of the jury, it may be applied to all cases, and it may be reduced to two as well as to six. The same constitutional provision that secures the right in a charge involving the life of the accused, secures it also in every other criminal case. It is no answer to say that this would not likely be done. If it had been deemed safe to leave it to the discretion of the general assembly, no constitutional provision was needed; but, whether needed or not, it has been ordained by a power which both the general assembly and this court are bound to obey." Again: "But, without pursuing these considerations further, our opinion is, that the essential and distinguishing features of the trial by jury as known at common law, and generally, if not universally, adopted in this country, were intended to be preserved, and 195 U. S.

its benefits secured to the accused in all criminal cases, by the constitutional provisions referred to. That it is beyond the power of the general assembly to impair the right, or materially change its character; that the number of jurors cannot be diminished, or a verdict authorized, short of a unanimous concurrence of all the jurors. It follows that the act under which this conviction was obtained, in so far as it provides for a jury of six only, and authorizes a conviction upon their finding, is unconstitutional and void."

In United States v. Taylor, 3 McCrary, 500, 11 Fed. 470, which was a criminal prosecution by information for the offense of carrying on the business of a retail dealer in liquors without having paid the special taxes required by law, the main question was as to the authority of the court to direct a verdict of guilty under the evidence. It was held by Judge McCrary that no such power existed in the court. In the course of his opinion he said that the constitutional guaranty of a jury in a criminal case was a right that could not be waived, and that such a trial before the court, by the prisoner's consent, was erroneous. It appears from the report of that case that Mr. *Justice Miller was consulted by Judge Mc[93] Crary, and concurred in the latter's views.

Among the cases cited by Judge McCrary was State v. Maine, 27 Conn. 281, which was a criminal information for placing a nuisance in a highway. The defendant pleaded not guilty. The case, by agreement of the parties, was tried by the court, which found the facts, and reserved the questions of law arising thereon for the advice of the supreme court of errors. The judges of the latter court unanimously held that, "as no statute conferred on the superior court the power to try this or any other criminal charge, excepting through the intervention of a jury, the court below could not legally try the case in the manner in which it had done, and would not be able to render a legal judgment on the facts, if the advice of this court was given upon them. They therefore refused to entertain the case."

In Neales v. State, 10 Mo. 498, which is an indictment for unlawfully carrying on the business of a dram-shop keeper without having a license therefor, it appears that the defendant pleaded not guilty, and neither party requiring a jury, the case was submitted to the court, who found him guilty, and assessed a fine of $30 against him. The supreme court of Missouri, in which state there was a constitutional provision providing that the right of trial by jury should remain inviolate, said: "Another objection, equally fatal to the judgment, was the trial of the cause by the court, on the plea of not guilty. It has heretofore been virtually decided by this court, in two cases, that unless the defendant pleads guilty to the charge contained in the indictment, the court cannot try the issue and assess a fine against him. Thomas v. State, 6 Mo. 457; Ross v. State, 9 Mo. 687. It is exclusively the province of a jury to try the issue of not guilty and the consent of the defendant for the court to try the same cannot confer such power on the court."

A case directly in point is that of State v. Stewart, 89 N. C. 563, 564. That was an [94] indictment for an assault and battery. *The defendant pleaded not guilty. A jury trial was waived, the court found the facts, and adjudged the accused guilty. The judgment was arrested and the state appealed. The supreme court of North Carolina said: "It is a fundamental principle of the common law, declared in 'Magna Charta,' and again in our Bill of Rights, that 'no person shall be convicted of any crime but by the unanimous verdict of a jury of good and lawful men, in open court.' Art. 1, § 13. The only exception to this is where the legislature may provide other means of trial for petty misdemeanors, with the right of appeal,—proviso in same section. This is not one of the petty misdemeanors embraced in the proviso; and if it was, no such means of trial as that adopted in this case has been provided by the legislature. The court here has undertaken to serve in the double capacity of judge and jury, and try the defendant without a jury, which it had no authority to do, even with the consent of the prisoner."

Later, in State v. Holt, 90 N. C. 749, 754, 47 Am. Rep. 544, 548,—which was an indictment for cruelty to animals,—the same court, after observing that it was the province and duty of the judiciary to watch over and protect the fundamental rights, in all matters that come before them, said: "There was not the remotest purpose in this case, we are sure, to infringe the right of trial by jury in a criminal action, but for convenience sake and to save time (because the facts were not disputed) the facts of the case were agreed upon by the state and the defendant, and submitted to the judge, instead of letting a jury hear the evidence, and render a verdict upon the issue, or find a special verdict. In our judgment, this was not only irregular, but wholly without the sanction of law. There is no statute that authorizes such procedure, and the Constitution forbids it. 'No person shall be convicted of any crime but by the unanimous verdict of a jury of good and lawful men, in open court.' No jury was impaneled to try the issue; there was no verdict of a jury; there was no conviction. The judgment of the court had nothing to warrant it, and there was nothing upon which [95] it could properly rest. The defendant could not consent to a conviction by the court. It had no authority to try the issue of fact raised by the pleadings. The defendant did not plead guilty; he did not enter the plea of nolo contendere, or submit; he pleaded autrefois convict, and a jury must try the issue raised by that plea. State v. Stewart, 89 N. C. 563; State v. Moss, 47 N. C. (2 Jones L.) 66; 1 Bishop, Crim. Pl. § 759, and cases there cited; Cancemi v. People, 18 N. Y. 128. The legislature has not provided a means for the trial of cases like this, different from the ordinary method provided by law. The court erred in passing upon the facts agreed upon and submitted to it without the finding of a jury, and for such error the judgment must be reversed and the court proceed to dispose of the case according to law."

Running through the adjudged cases is the thought that the facts necessary to be proved in order to sustain the charge of crime, where the plea is not guilty, must be ascertained in the mode ordained by law for such purpose. "When, therefore," says Blackstone, "a prisoner on his arraignment hath pleaded not guilty, and for his trial hath put himself upon the country, which country the jury are, the sheriff of the county must return a panel of jurors, liberos et legales homines, de vicineto." Book 4, chap. 27, *350. Now, all will agree that when the crime charged is a felony, a trial in a circuit or district court of the United States, even with the consent of the accused, without a jury composed of twelve persons, would be unauthorized and unavailing for any legal purpose. Why? Because, and only because, the law, the supreme law of the land, has declared that the trial of all crimes shall be by jury. And, perhaps, all will agree that the constitutional injunction applies with like force to such misdemeanors as by statute are punishable with imprisonment, and that a circuit or district court of the United States is without jurisdiction, under a plea of not guilty, no jury being impaneled, to try any crime against the United States involving life or liberty. The consent of the accused in such a case certainly cannot confer upon the court *au- [96] thority to try the crime in a mode inconsistent with the one prescribed by the law.

In my judgment, the same principle must apply in the present case, although a fine only can be imposed. The case is embraced by the very words of the Constitution; for the offense charged is a crime,—none the less a crime because only a fine is involved,—and the constitutional mandate is that the trial of all crimes, except impeachment, shall be by jury. By what authority can a Federal court except from the operation of the constitutional mandate a crime punishable by fine? It is said that only the property of the accused can be affected, and, therefore, to his consent in this criminal case should be accorded the same effect as is given to his consent in a purely civil case to which he might be a party, and which involved no element of crime. In this view I cannot concur. Something more than property is involved in a criminal case, although the penalty imposed may be simply a fine. Whether the accused has violated the laws of his country, and whether he shall be branded by the judgment of a court as a criminal, are things of more consequence to the public than property the value of which is to be measured in money. What shall constitute a crime, how that crime shall be tried, and in what way the guilt of the accused shall be manifested when he pleads not guilty, are exclusively for the government to declare and regulate, and it is not for the accused and the prosecutor, by the device of an agreement between them, to evade the requirements of the Constitution and provide a tribunal for the determination of the issue of crime or no crime different from that designated by the law. Crime or no crime, if the plea be not guilty, can be established in a court of the United States only by the verdict of a jury.

Undoubtedly, as already indicated, there were petty or minor crimes which, at common law, could be tried without a jury, and it may be assumed for the purposes of this case, that the constitutional provision that [97] all crimes except impeachment *shall be tried by jury is to be interpreted in the light of that fact. But, it may be repeated, that the trial, even of such cases, without a jury, was contrary to the genius of the common law, and was allowed by the courts only in obedience to acts of Parliament, which was not bound by a written constitution, and whose authority in matters of legislation was omnipotent, and, therefore, not to be disputed by any English court. An enumeration of all crimes against the United States which may be reasonably declared to belong to the class known at the common law as petty offenses, punishable under legislative sanction without the intervention of a jury, need not here be attempted. Nor is it necessary to express any final judgment upon the question whether the particular crime here involved might, by statute, be placed in that class and tried without a jury. It is enough to say that, even if Congress could place it in that class, and authorize its trial by summary proceedings, without a jury, or with a jury of less than twelve, it has not done so. The case, therefore, is controlled by the express constitutional injunction that all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be tried by a jury. The agreement of the accused and the prosecutor cannot confer jurisdiction, much less have the effect to displace the mode of trial established by the fundamental law, and substitute for it one inconsistent with the principles of the common law, as unmodified by any valid statute.

It is said that the nature of the offense and the amount of punishment prescribed must determine whether it is to be classed among serious or petty offenses. This, I take it, means that it is for the court, in the exercise of its inherent powers, to determine whether the offense is a serious one, to be tried alone by a jury, or a petty one, which may be tried without a jury. But the judiciary had no such function at common law. No court at common law assumed, without a jury, to try any offense, however trivial or petty, except under the authority of a statute conferring authority to that end. If the offense is punishable only by a fine of $50, *as is the case here,—is it to be [98] deemed a petty offense? And yet is one punishable by a fine of $500 to be deemed a serious one? Must there not be some fixed rule or limit on the subject? In my judgment, the Constitution establishes a rule which must be respected by every branch of the government. Yet, under the principles now announced, an offense punishable by a fine of five or ten thousand dollars may be regarded—if the court so wills—as a petty offense, triable without a jury. I cannot understand where the judiciary derives its authority to prescribe any rule on the subject, in face of the absolute constitutional requirement that all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be tried by a jury, and in face of the further significant fact that no court at common law ever assumed to regard any crime, however trivial, as triable without a jury, except under express legislative sanction.

Again, it is said that in the original draft of the Constitution the words were “the trial of all criminal offenses . . . shall be by jury,” and that these words were changed in the Convention so as to read “the trial of all crimes.” Strangely enough, it is supposed that this change of words justifies the conclusion that the framers of the Constitution intended to dispense with a jury in such criminal offenses as the courts, uncontrolled by statute, deemed petty, as contrasted with those that they deemed serious. To say that “crimes” means something different from “criminal offenses” is something that I cannot comprehend. A crime is a criminal offense and a criminal offense is a crime. But the contention of the prosecution, even if sound, does not answer the suggestion that, at common law, it was never the province of a court, by any inherent power it possessed, to prescribe what criminal offenses or crimes were triable, and what need not be tried, by jury. My point is that no criminal offense or crime against the United States can be tried except by jury, if the plea be not guilty, unless it be a petty offense or crime, and unless the legislative department [99] declares that it may be so *tried. If the offense or crime be, in reality, in its essence, a petty one, then Congress may authorize it to be tried without a jury. But Congress has not so declared in respect of the offense or crime charged against the present defendant. The trial by jury is not one of form, but of the very substance of the mode prescribed for the trial of crimes. It may not be waived merely by the consent of the accused and the prosecutor. In the present case the court, as I think, entrenches upon the domain of the legislative department of the government. It assumes, without authority, to prescribe a rule of criminal procedure which Congress has not, in its wisdom, undertaken to prescribe. It has made, not declared, law. There is no tendency, in these latter days, more dangerous than the assumption by one department of the government of powers that belong to another department.

It is contended that this mode of trial, at least in misdemeanors involving only a fine, ought to be sanctioned,—indeed, encouraged,—as convenient both for the government and the accused. What was said by Blackstone when referring to summary proceedings authorized by acts of Parliament in particular cases may well be repeated, at this day, whenever it is proposed, upon grounds of convenience, to dispense with juries in criminal prosecutions, and thereby introduce a new mode for the trial of crimes. He said: “And, however convenient these may appear at first (as doubtless all arbitrary powers, well executed, are the most convenient), yet let it be again remembered, that delays and little inconveniences in the forms of justice are the price that all free nations must pay for their liberty in more substantial matters; that these inroads upon this sacred bulwark of the nation are fundamentally opposite to the spirit of our Constitution; and that, though begun in trifles, the precedent may gradually increase and spread, to the utter disuse of juries in questions of the most momentous concern.” Book 4, chap. 27, p. 350.

I insist that, as the offense charged in [100] each of these cases *was a crime against the United States; as the Constitution expressly declares, without qualification, that the trial of all crimes, except impeachment, shall be by jury; as Congress has not assumed to declare that this case and like ones may be tried without a jury, the parties assenting; and as the trial of these cases by the court alone, without a jury, has no other sanction than the consent of the accused and the District Attorney, the judgment in each case should be reversed, and each case remanded, with directions to set aside the judgment, grant a new trial, and take such further proceedings as may be in conformity with law.

THOMAS E. KEPNER, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 100-137.)

Criminal law—former jeopardy in Philippine Islands—appeal by government from acquittal.

So far as the right of the government to appeal from a judgment of acquittal in a court of first instance in the Philippine Islands was recognized by military order No. 58, as amended by the act of the Philippine Commission of August 10, 1901, it was taken away by the provision for immunity from second jeopardy for the same criminal offense, contained in the 5th section of the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), for the temporary civil government of the Philippine Islands, notwithstanding the recognition in the 9th section of that act of the established jurisdiction of the insular courts.

[No. 244.]

Argued April 21, 22, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of acquittal of the crime of embezzlement, in the court of first instance in the city of Manila, and found the accused guilty of that offense, and imposed punishment therefor. Reversed, and the prisoner discharged.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Aldrich argued the cause, and, with Mr. James Hamilton Lewis, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Those natural rights embraced in the Constitution by prohibitions against interference with them, which are peculiar to Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence, and which are safeguarded by the first ten Amendments to the Federal Constitution, appertain to persons not members of the military service residing in the Philippine Islands. These amendments operate as limitations upon the power of Congress everywhere, and prevent Congress or anyone acting under the authority of the United States from denying to citizens of the United States residing in the Philippine Islands the rights guaranteed thereby.

NOTE.—On the right of the state to appeal in a criminal case—see note to People ex rel. Hodson v. Miner, 19 L. R. A. 342.

On former jeopardy—see notes to Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 1 L. R. A. 451; Aitenburg v. Com. 4 L. R. A. 543; Ex parte Lange, 21 L. ed. U. S. 872; United States v. Perez, 6 L. ed. U. S. 165.

195 U. S.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 283, 294, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1104, 1109, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 18 L. ed. 281; Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 398, 450, 15 L. ed. 691, 719; Fong Yue Ting v. United States, 149 U. S. 716, 738, 37 L. ed. 914, 921, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1016; Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 212, 230, 11 L. ed. 565, 574; Leitensdorfer v. Webb, 20 How. 176, 15 L. ed. 891; Murphy v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 44, 45, 29 L. ed. 57, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

Under our system of jurisprudence the United States has no right of appeal in a criminal case, and the language of the Constitution, embodied in the President's instructions, and the act of Congress, must be so construed as to deny this right in the Philippine Islands.

United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 312, 36 L. ed. 445, 446, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Sparf v. United States, 156 U. S. 51, 87, 175, 176, 39 L. ed. 343, 356, 387, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 671, 41 L. ed. 300, 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192.

These cases and the following show that there cannot be a "double jeopardy" under any circumstances:

Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 172, 21 L. ed. 872, 877; Berkowitz v. United States, 35 C. C. A. 379, 93 Fed. 452; Re Belt, 159 U. S. 95, 98, 40 L. ed. 88, 89, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 987; Ex parte Mason, 105 U. S. 696, 699, 26 L. ed. 1213, 1214; Murphy v. Massachusetts, 177 U. S. 155, 44 L. ed. 711, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639; State v. Ward, 48 Ark. 36, 3 Am. St. Rep. 213, 2 S. W. 191; Black v. State, 36 Ga. 447, 91 Am. Dec. 772; Hilands v. Com. 111 Pa. 1, 56 Am. Rep. 235, 2 Atl. 70; State v. M'Kee, 1 Bail. L. 651, 21 Am. Dec. 499; Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 121 Pa. 109, 1 L. R. A. 451, 6 Am. St. Rep. 757, 15 Atl. 466; McDonald v. State, 79 Wis. 651, 24 Am. St. Rep. 740, 48 N. W. 863; O'Brian v. Com. 9 Bush, 333, 15 Am. Rep. 715; Durham v. State, 5 Ill. 172, 39 Am. Dec. 407; Kohlheimer v. State, 39 Miss. 548, 77 Am. Dec. 689.

The intervention of a jury is not important. It is sufficient if the court had jurisdiction. Nor is it true, as stated by the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, that "jeopardy is not the peril of more than one trial, but the peril of more than one punishment."

Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 24 L. ed. 1118; People v. Miner, 144 Ill. 308, 19 L. R. A. 342, 33 N. E. 40; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 300, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192.

It is conceded that, while a military government continues as an instrument of warfare, used to promote the objects of the invasion by weakening the enemy or strengthening the invader, its powers are practically boundless.

New Orleans v. New York Mail S. S. Co. 20 Wall. 387, 394, 22 L. ed. 354, 358.

But when the war is ended, and the military government ceases to be an instrument to promote actual warfare, and devotes itself simply to civil affairs, instead of military affairs, the limitations of the Constitution at once apply. This follows from the well-settled doctrine that a military government is the creature of necessity, and its acts must be justified by necessity.

Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. 2, 127, 18 L. ed. 281, 297; Raymond v. Thomas, 91 U. S. 712, 23 L. ed. 434.

It is also established that, upon the cession of the Philippine Islands to the United States, all of the laws of the former sovereignty which were incompatible with the character and institutions of our government became of no effect.

Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 546, 29 L. ed. 270, 271, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005; American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 542, 7 L. ed. 255; More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70, 80, 32 L. ed. 51, 55, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1067.

Mr. Lebbeus R. Wilfley argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

This court has recently held in the so-called Insular Cases that the provisions of the Constitution do not of their own force attach to newly acquired territory immediately upon the date of acquisition; that power to extend the provisions of the Constitution to the territories rests in Congress; that, notwithstanding the fact that there are certain prohibitions contained in the Constitution, relating to fundamental rights, which go to the very root of the power of Congress to act, at all times, in all places, and under all circumstances, yet there are other limitations contained in that instrument, not absolute in their nature, relating to such matters as methods of procedure and forms of judicial trials, which do not restrict Congress in the exercise of its power to create local governments and make needed rules and regulations for the territories of the United States.

This position is identical with that taken by Chief Justice Marshall, in American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 542, 7 L. ed. 255.

Congress may provide such modes of trial and methods of procedure as, in its judgment, are best adapted to the needs of the people of the territory.

Re Ross (Ross v. McIntyre) 140 U. S. 453, 35 L. ed. 581, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

The legislature is always presumed to have had former statutes before it, to have been acquainted with their judicial construction, and to have passed new statutes on the same subjects with reference thereto.

State v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 33 L. R. A. 313, 44 N. E. 469; Ailesbury v. Pattison, 1 Doug. 28; Steele v. Lineberger, 72 Pa. 241.

Every statute should be so interpreted and construed as to ascertain and carry into effect the meaning and intention of the legislative body by which it was enacted.

Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, § 24; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 234; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

If possible, a statute should be so interpreted and construed as to give effect to every provision therein.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 239; Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, § 232; Stougher's Case, 8 Coke, 169; State v. South Kingston, 18 R. I. 258, 22 L. R. A. 67, 27 Atl. 599; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Buckus, 133 Ind. 513, 18 L. R. A. 729, 33 N. E. 421; Storms v. Stevens, 104 Ind. 46, 3 N. E. 401; Hunt v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 112 Ind. 69, 13 N. E. 263.

There is a strong presumption against the repeal by a statute, by implication, of an existing law; there is a presumption against unnecessary change of laws.

Maxwell, Interpretation of Stat. 2d ed. 96; Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, § 52; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 217; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376, 41 Am. Rep. 239; Manuel v. Manuel, 13 Ohio St. 458; Bear v. Bear, 33 Pa. 525; Thompson v. Mylne, 4 La. Ann. 206; Childers v. Johnson, 6 La. Ann. 634; State v. Massey, 4 L. R. A. 309, note, 103 N. C. 356; Hunt v. Chicago Horse & Dummy R. Co. 121 Ill. 638, 13 N. E. 176; Plum v. Lugar, 49 N. J. L. 557, 9 Atl. 779; State ex rel. Hudspeth v. Cooper, 114 Ind. 12, 16 N. E. 518; Pacific R. Co. v. Cass County, 53 Mo. 17; McVey v. McVey, 51 Mo. 406.

If two provisions of a statute are inconsistent, the more particular provision will prevail over the more general one.

Black, Constr. & Interpretation of Laws, 140; State, Bartlett, Prosecutor, v. Trenton, 38 N. J. L. 64.

When a general intention is expressed, and also a particular intention which is incompatible with the general one, the particular intention shall be considered an exception to the general one.

State ex rel. Douglas County v. Cornell, 53 Neb. 556, 39 L. R. A. 513, 68 Am. St. Rep. 629, 74 N. W. 59.

Where two or more provisions contained in the same statute are directly in conflict with one another, and cannot be brought into harmony by any rule of construction, one or the other of the two following principles must be applied in the construction of said statute: (a) The provision latest in position will prevail; or (b) the contradictory provisions cancel each other, and both are void.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 220.

The proposition that the provision which is latest in position repeals the other has been laid down in a number of cases.

Packer v. Sunbury & E. R. Co. 19 Pa. 211; Harrington v. Rochester Trustees, 10 Wend. 547; Gibbons v. Brittenum, 56 Miss. 232; Ryan v. State, 5 Neb. 276.

A law permitting an appeal on the part of the state from a judgment of acquittal in the trial court, and requiring the final verdict of the court to be reached in accordance with the settled principles of law and justice before it can support a valid judgment, is not in derogation of any fundamental doctrine of the common law, or inconsistent with the principles found in all systems of jurisprudence, or of the Constitution, or in violation of any principle of original justice, that supports and enforces the conclusiveness of a valid final judgment.

State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 27 L. R. A. 499, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110; People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467; State v. Garvey, 42 Conn. 232.

Solicitor General Hoyt also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The identity of the law of jeopardy in the Roman, French, and Spanish systems is manifest. The thing forbidden in each system is the second accusation of a person for an offense of which he has already been acquitted. An appeal by the state being by no possible construction a second accusation, it follows that such an appeal is not a second putting in jeopardy.

Bouvier, Dict. Non bis in idem; 11 Merlin, Répertoire, p. 528; Justinian Code, lib. ix. title ii. l. 9; Napoleonic Code d'Instruction Criminelle, art. 360; Fuero Real (A.

D. 1255), lib. iv. title xxi. l. 13; Siete Partidas (A. D. 1263), Part vii. title i. l. xii: Arrazola, Enc. Spanish Law, ed. 1848: Tomo I. p. 511.

The provisions of the Constitution respecting trial by jury do not apply to the Philippine Islands.

Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 277, 282, 283, 294, 295, 45 L. ed. 1102, 1104, 1105. 1109, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. McGlinn, 114 U. S. 542, 29 L. ed. 270, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1005; Halleck, International Law, 1st ed. chap. 33, § 14: Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 217, 218, 47 L. ed. 1016, 1022, 1023, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 387, 42 L. ed. 780, 789, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 529, 530, 531, 28 L. ed. 236, 237, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 44 L. ed. 597, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494.

An appeal in a criminal case from a judgment of acquittal by a court of first instance in the Philippine Islands is valid; and such an appeal does not put a defendant twice in jeopardy, contrary to the Constitution and laws of the United States.

State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 27 L. R. A. 498, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

Thomas E. Kepner, a practising lawyer in the city of Manila, Philippine Islands, was charged with a violation of the law in the embezzlement of the funds of his client (estafa.) Upon trial, in November, 1901, in the court of first instance, without a jury, he was acquitted, it being the judgment of the court that he was not guilty of the offense charged. Upon appellate proceedings by the United States to the supreme court of the Philippine Islands, the judgment of the court of first instance, finding the accused not guilty, was reversed, and Kepner was found guilty, and sentenced to a term of [111] imprisonment of one year, eight months, and twenty-one days, suspended from any public office or place of trust, and deprived of the right of suffrage.

Error was assigned in the appellate court upon the ground that the accused had been put in jeopardy a second time by the appellate proceedings, in violation of the law against putting a person twice in jeopardy for the same offense, and contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

The appeal was taken by the United States on December 20, 1901. A motion to dismiss the appeal was made on January 1, 1902. The motion was finally overruled on October 11, 1902; the final decision in the case, finding 195 U. S. ing the accused guilty, and imposing the sentence, was rendered on December 3, 1902.

A proper consideration of the question herein made renders it necessary to notice some of the steps by which the jurisdiction of the courts in which the accused was tried was established.

The United States acquired the Philippine Islands by cession under the treaty of peace executed at Paris, between the United States and Spain, on December 10, 1898, the final ratifications being exchanged April 11, 1899 [30 Stat. at L. 1754].

The islands, after American occupation, had been under military rule prior to the creation of the Philippine Commission.

Under the control of the military government, orders had been issued, among others, military order number 58, dated April 23, 1900, which order was in part as follows:

"General Orders, No. 58.

Manila, P. I., April 23, 1900.

"In the interests of justice, and to safeguard the civil liberties of the inhabitants of these islands, the Criminal Code of Procedure now in force therein is hereby amended in certain of its important provisions as indicated in the following enumerated sections:

"Sec. 3. All public offenses triable in [112] courts of first instance or in courts of similar jurisdiction, now established or that hereafter may be established, must be prosecuted by complaint or information.

"Rights of accused at the trial.

"Sec. 15. In all criminal prosecutions the defendant shall be entitled:

"1. To appear and defend in person and by counsel at every stage of the proceedings.

"2. To be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation.

"3. To testify as a witness in his own behalf; but if a defendant offers himself as a witness, he may be cross-examined as any other witness. His neglect or refusal to be a witness shall not in any manner prejudice or be used against him.

"4. To be exempt from testifying against himself.

"5. To be confronted at the trial by and to cross-examine the witnesses against him. Where the testimony of a witness for the prosecution has previously been taken down by question and answers in the presence of the accused or his counsel, the defense having had an opportunity to cross-examine the witness, the deposition of the latter may be read, upon satisfactory proof to the court that he is dead or insane, or cannot with due diligence be found in the islands.

"6. To have compulsory process issue for obtaining witnesses in his own favor.

"7. To have a speedy and public trial.

"8. To have the right of appeal in all cases.

"Sec. 43. From all final judgments of the courts of first instance or courts of similar jurisdiction, and in all cases in which the law now provides for appeals from said courts, an appeal may be taken to the supreme court, as hereinafter prescribed.

[113] "Sec. 44. Either party may appeal from a final judgment, *or from an order made after judgment, affecting the substantial rights of the appellant, or in any case now permitted by law. The United States may also appeal from a judgment for the defendant, rendered on a demurrer to an information or complaint, and from an order dismissing a complaint or information.

"Sec. 50. It shall not be necessary to forward to the supreme court the record, or any part thereof, of any case in which there shall have been an acquittal, or in which the sentence imposed does not exceed confinement in prison for one year, or a fine of 250 pesos, exclusive of costs, unless such case shall have been duly appealed. But such sentences shall be executed upon the order of the court in which the trial was had. The record in cases in which the death penalty, or imprisonment exceeding one year, or a fine exceeding 250 pesos, exclusive of costs of trial, shall have been imposed, shall be forwarded to the clerk of the criminal branch of the supreme court within twenty days, but not earlier than fifteen days after the rendition of the sentence. All cases involving sentence of death, or of imprisonment exceeding six years, or of fine exceeding 1250 pesos, or in which an appeal shall have been taken, shall be submitted to the criminal branch of the supreme court, and shall thereafter take the same course as is now provided by law. Cases forwarded to the supreme court involving sentences less serious than those hereinbefore last mentioned, and not appealed, shall be referred by the clerk to the ministerio fiscal for consideration, and if the latter return the same, concurring in the sentence imposed, the record shall immediately be returned to the trial court for execution of sentence. If the ministerio fiscal shall not concur in the sentence, the case shall be submitted to the criminal branch of the supreme court, and shall thereafter take the same course as is now provided by law when that officer shall recommend a sentence in any respect more severe than that imposed by the trial judge, and for the consideration of the *court, without the necessity of a further defense or hearing, when that officer recommends a lighter sentence."

[114]

This order was amended by an act of the Commission (No. 194), passed August 10, 1901, and is as follows:

"(G) No. 194. An Act Conferring Jurisdiction on Justices of the Peace, etc.

"Sec. 1. Every justice of the peace in the Philippine Islands is hereby invested with authority to make preliminary investigation of any crime alleged to have been committed within his municipality, jurisdiction to hear and determine which is by law now vested in the judges of courts of first instance.

"Sec. 4. So much of § 50 of said general order No. 58 as requires courts of first instance, or clerks thereof, to forward to the supreme court or the ministerio fiscal the record of all criminal cases for revision or consideration, except where the death penalty is imposed as the judgment or part of the judgment of such court of first instance, is hereby repealed, and it shall not be necessary to forward to the supreme court or the ministerio fiscal the record, or any part thereof, of any case in which there shall have been an acquittal, or in which the penalty imposed is not death, unless such case shall have been duly appealed, as provided in such order. The records of all cases in which the death penalty shall have been imposed by any court of first instance, whether the defendant shall have appealed or not, shall be forwarded to the supreme court for investigation and judgment, as law and justice shall dictate."

Courts were established for the islands under an act passed by the Commission June 11, 1901:

"Sec. 2. The judicial power of the government of the Philippine Islands shall be vested in a supreme court, courts of first instance, and courts of justices of the peace, together with such special jurisdictions of municipal courts and other special tribunals as now are or hereafter may be authorized by law. The two courts first named shall be courts of record.

"Sec. 16. The jurisdiction of the supreme [115] court shall be of two kinds:

"1. Original; and

"2. Appellate.

"Sec. 17. The supreme court shall have original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, habeas corpus and quo warranto in the cases and in the manner prescribed in the Code of Civil Procedure, and to hear and determine the controversies thus brought before it, and in other cases provided by law.

"Sec. 18. The supreme court shall have appellate jurisdiction of all actions and special proceedings properly brought to it from courts of first instance, and from other tribunals from whose judgment the law shall specially provide an appeal to the supreme court.

"Sec. 19. The supreme court shall have power to issue writs of certiorari and all other auxiliary writs and process necessary to the complete exercise of its original or appellate jurisdiction.

"Sec. 39. The existing audiencia or supreme court is hereby abolished, and the supreme court provided by this act is substituted in place thereof.

"Sec. 55. The jurisdiction of courts of first instance shall be of two kinds:

"1. Original; and

"2. Appellate.

"Sec. 56. Courts of first instance shall have original jurisdiction. . . . 6. In all criminal cases in which a penalty of more than six months' imprisonment or a fine exceeding $100 may be imposed.

"Sec. 65. The existing courts of first instance are hereby abolished, and the courts of first instance provided by this act are substituted in place thereof.

[116] "Sec. 66. There shall be courts of justice of the peace as in this section provided:

"1. The existing courts of justices of the peace established by military orders since the 13th day of August, 1898, are hereby recognized and continued, and the justices of such courts shall continue to hold office during the pleasure of the Commission.

"2. In every province in which there now is, or shall hereafter be established, a court of first instance, courts of justice of the peace shall be established in every municipality thereof which shall be organized under the municipal code, or which has been organized and is being conducted as a municipality, when this act shall take effect, under and by virtue of the municipal code.

"Sec. 68. A justice of the peace shall have original jurisdiction for the trial of all misdemeanors and offenses arising within the municipality of which he is a justice, in all cases where the sentence might not by law exceed six months' imprisonment or a fine of $100. . . ."

On July 1, 1902, Congress passed an act (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369):

"Act of Congress of July 1, 1902, Temporarily to Provide for the Administration of the Affairs of Civil Government in the Philippine Islands, and for Other Purposes.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of 195 U. S.

America, in Congress assembled, That the action of the President of the United States in creating the Philippine Commission, and authorizing said Commission to exercise the powers of government to the extent, and in the manner and form, and subject to the regulation and control set forth in the instructions of the President to the Philippine Commission, dated April seventh, nineteen hundred, and in creating the offices of civil governor and vice governor of the Philippine Islands, and authorizing said civil governor and vice governor to exercise the powers of government to the extent and in the manner and form set forth in the executive order [117] dated June twenty-first, nineteen hundred and one, and in establishing four executive departments of government in said islands as set forth in the act of the Philippine Commission, entitled 'An Act Providing an Organization for the Departments of the Interior, of Commerce and Police, of Finance and Justice, and of Public Instruction,' enacted September sixth, nineteen hundred and one, is hereby approved, ratified, and confirmed, and until otherwise provided by law the said islands shall continue to be governed as thereby and herein provided, and all laws passed hereafter by the Philippine Commission shall have an enacting clause as follows: 'By authority of the United States, be it enacted by the Philippine Commission.' The provisions of section eighteen hundred and ninety-one of the Revised Statutes of eighteen hundred and seventy-eight shall not apply to the Philippine Islands.

"Future appointments of civil governor, vice governor, members of said Commission, and heads of executive departments shall be made by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

"Sec. 5. That no law shall be enacted in said islands which shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or deny to any person therein the equal protection of the laws.

"That in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses face to face, and to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf.

"That no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law; and no person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

"That all persons shall, before conviction, be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offenses.

[118] * "That no law impairing the obligation of contracts shall be enacted.

"That no person shall be imprisoned for debt.

"That the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless, when in cases of rebellion, insurrection, or invasion the public safety may require it, in either of which events the same may be suspended by the President, or by the governor, with the approval of the Philippine Commission, wherever, during such period, the necessity for such suspension shall exist.

"That no ex post facto law or bill of attainder shall be enacted.

"That no law granting a title of nobility shall be enacted, and no person holding any office of profit or trust in said islands shall, without the consent of the Congress of the United States, accept any present, emolument, office, or title of any kind whatever from any king, queen, prince, or foreign state.

"That excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted.

"That the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated.

"That neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist in said islands.

"That no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and petition the government for redress of grievances.

"That no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be allowed.

"That no money shall be paid out of the treasury except in pursuance of an appropriation by law.

"That the rule of taxation in said islands shall be uniform.

19] * "That no private or local bill which may be enacted into law shall embrace more than one subject, and that subject shall be expressed in the title of the bill.

"That no warrant shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized.

"That all money collected on any tax levied or assessed for a special purpose shall be treated as a special fund in the treasury, and paid out for such purpose only.

"Sec. 9. That the supreme court and the courts of first instance of the Philippine Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided, and such additional jurisdiction as shall hereafter be prescribed by the government of said islands, subject to the power of said government to change the practice and method of procedure. The municipal courts of said islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided by the Philippine Commission, subject in all matters to such alteration and amendment as may be hereafter enacted by law; and the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court shall hereafter be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall receive the compensation heretofore prescribed by the Commission until otherwise provided by Congress. The judges of the court of first instance shall be appointed by the civil governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Philippine Commission: Provided, That the admiralty jurisdiction of the supreme court and courts of first instance shall not be changed except by act of Congress.

"Sec. 10. That the Supreme Court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review, revise, reverse, modify, or affirm the final judgments and decrees of the supreme court of the Philippine Islands in all actions, cases, causes, and proceedings now pending therein or hereafter determined thereby in which the Constitution or any statute, treaty, title, right, or privilege of the United States is involved, or in causes in *which the value in controversy exceeds [120] twenty-five thousand dollars, or in which the title or possession of real estate exceeding in value the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, is involved or brought in question; and such final judgments or decrees may and can be reviewed, revised, reversed, modified, or affirmed by said Supreme Court of the United States on appeal or writ of error by the party aggrieved, in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure, as far as applicable, as the final judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of the United States."

The act just quoted became a law before the final conviction of the accused in the supreme court of the islands.

It is contended by the government that that part of the law under immediate consideration, which provides that no person, for the same offense, shall be twice put in jeopardy, must be construed in view of the system of laws prevailing in the islands before the same were ceded to the United States, and that the purpose of Congress was to make effectual the jurisprudence of the islands as known and established before American occupation, and that the provision against double jeopardy must be read in the light of the understanding of that expression in the civil law, or rather the Spanish law, as it was then in force.

The citations in the brief of the learned counsel for the government seem to establish that under the Spanish law, as theretofore administered, one who had been convicted by a judgment of the court of last resort could not again be prosecuted for the same offense. We notice some of these provisions:

In Spanish law the doctrine found expression in Fuero Real (A. D. 1255) and the Siete Partidas (A. D. 1263).

"After a man, accused of any crime, has been acquitted by the court, no one can afterwards accuse him of the same offense (except in certain specified cases). Fuero Real, lib. iv., title xxi., 1, 13.

[121] "If a man is acquitted by a valid judgment of any offense of which he has been accused, no other person can afterwards accuse him of the offense (except in certain cases). Siete Partidas, Part vii., title i, l. xii."

In the encyclopedia of Spanish law, published by Don Lorenzo Arrazola in 1848, it is said, in considering the persons who may be accused of crime:

"It is another of the general exceptions that a person cannot be accused who has formerly been accused and adjudged of the same crime, since the most essential effect of all judicial decisions upon which execution can issue is to constitute unalterable law. Tomo, I., pag. 511."

Under that system of law it seems that a person was not regarded as being in jeopardy in the legal sense until there had been a final judgment in the court of last resort. The lower courts were deemed examining courts, having preliminary jurisdiction, and the accused was not finally convicted or acquitted until the case had been passed upon in the audiencia, or supreme court, whose judgment was subject to review in the supreme court at Madrid for errors of law, with power to grant a new trial. The trial was regarded as one continuous proceeding, and the protection given was against a second conviction after this final trial had been concluded in due form of law. The change introduced under military order No. 58, as amended by act 194 of the Commission, made the judgment of the court of first instance final, in cases other than capital, whether the accused be convicted or acquitted, unless an appeal was prosecuted by the government or the accused in the manner pointed out.

In order to determine what Congress
195 U. S.

meant in the language used in the act under consideration, "No person for the same offense shall be twice put in jeopardy of punishment," we must look to the origin and source of the expression, and the judicial construction put upon it before the enactment in question was passed. A consideration of the events preceding this regulation makes evident the intention of Congress to *carry some, at least, of the essential principles of American constitutional jurisprudence to these islands, and to engraft them upon the law of this people, newly subject to our jurisdiction. [122]

That it was the intention of the President in the instructions to the Philippine Commission to adopt a well-known part of the fundamental law of the United States, and to give much of the beneficent protection of the Bill of Rights to the people of the Philippine Islands, is not left to inference; for in his instructions, dated April 7, 1900 (see Public Laws and Resolutions of Philippine Com., 6-9), he says:

"In all the forms of government and administrative provisions which they are authorized to prescribe the Commission should bear in mind that the government which they are establishing is designed not for our satisfaction or for the expression of our theoretical views, but for the happiness, peace, and prosperity of the people of the Philippine Islands, and the measures adopted should be made to conform to their customs, their habits, and even their prejudices, to the fullest extent consistent with the accomplishment of the indispensable requisites of just and effective government."

But he was careful to add:

"At the same time the Commission should bear in mind, and the people of the islands should be made plainly to understand, that there are certain great principles of government which have been made the basis of our governmental system, which we deem essential to the rule of law and the maintenance of individual freedom, and of which they have, unfortunately, been denied the experience possessed by us: that there are also certain practical rules of government which we have found to be essential to the preservation of these great principles of liberty and law, and that these principles and these rules of government must be established and maintained in their islands for the sake of their liberty and happiness, however much they may conflict with the customs of laws or procedure with which they are familiar. It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine Islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably, within a short time, command universal assent. Upon every division and branch [123] of the government of the Philippines, therefore, must be imposed these inviolable rules:

"That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense or be compelled, in any criminal case, to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainder or ex post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or of the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed."

[124] These words are not strange to the American lawyer or student of constitutional history. They are the familiar language of the Bill of Rights, slightly changed in form, but not in substance, as found in the first nine amendments to the Constitution of the United States, with the omission of the provision preserving the right to trial by jury and the right of the people to bear arms, and adding the prohibition of the 13th Amendment against slavery or involuntary servitude *except as a punishment for crime, and that of article 1, § 9, to the passage of bills of attainder and ex post facto laws. These principles were not taken from the Spanish law; they were carefully collated from our own Constitution, and embody almost verbatim the safeguards of that instrument for the protection of life and liberty.

When Congress came to pass the act of July 1, 1902, it enacted, almost in the language of the President's instructions, the Bill of Rights of our Constitution. In view of the expressed declaration of the President, followed by the action of Congress, both adopting, with little alteration, the provisions of the Bill of Rights, there would seem to be no room for argument that in this form it was intended to carry to the Philippine Islands those principles of our government which the President declared to be established as rules of law for the maintenance of individual freedom, at the same time expressing regret that the inhabitants of the islands had not theretofore enjoyed their benefit.

How can it be successfully maintained that these expressions of fundamental rights, which have been the subject of frequent adjudication in the courts of this country, and the maintenance of which has been ever deemed essential to our government, could be used by Congress in any other sense than that which has been placed upon them in construing the instrument from which they were taken?

It is a well-settled rule of construction that language used in a statute which has a settled and well-known meaning, sanctioned by judicial decision, is presumed to be used in that sense by the legislative body. The Abbotsford, 98 U. S. 440, 25 L. ed. 168.

It is not necessary to determine in this case whether the jeopardy provision in the Bill of Rights would have become part of the law of the islands without congressional legislation. The power of Congress to make rules and regulations for territory incorporated in or owned by the United States is settled by an unbroken line of decisions of this court, and is no longer open to question. American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 *Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 242; Murphy [125] v. Ramsey, 114 U. S. 15, 29 L. ed. 47, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 42, 43, 34 L. ed. 481, 491, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787. This case does not call for a discussion of the limitations of such power, nor require determination of the question whether the jeopardy clause became the law of the islands after the ratification of the treaty, without Congressional action, as the act of Congress made it the law of these possessions when the accused was tried and convicted.

It is argued that in the act of July 1, 1902, Congress recognized the jurisdiction of the Philippine courts in § 9 as follows:

"Sec. 9. That the supreme court and the courts of first instance of the Philippine Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided, and such additional jurisdiction as shall hereafter be prescribed by the government of said islands, subject to the power of said government to change the practice and method of procedure."

The argument is, that Congress intended to leave the right of appeal as provided by military order No. 58, as amended by the Commission, in full force.

But Congress, in § 5, had already specifically provided that no person should be put twice in jeopardy of punishment for the same offense. While § 9 recognizes the established jurisdiction of the courts of the islands, it was not intended to repeal the specific guaranty of § 5, which is direct legislation pertaining to the particular subject. It is a well-settled principle of construction that specific terms covering the given subject-matter will prevail over general language of the same or another statute which might otherwise prove controlling. Re Rouse, H. & Co. 33 C. C. A. 356, 63 U. S. App. 570, 91 Fed. 97-100, and cases therein cited; Townsend v. Little, 109 U. S. 504, 512, 27 L. ed. 1012, 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

In ascertaining the meaning of the phrase taken from the Bill of Rights it must be construed with reference to the common law from which it is taken. 1 Kent, Com. 336.

[126] United States v. Wong Kim Ark, 169 U. S. 649, 42 L. ed. 890, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456, in which this court said:

"In this, as in other respects, it [a constitutional provision] must be interpreted in the light of the common law, the principles and history of which were familiarly known to the framers of the Constitution. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. 162, 22 L. ed. 627; Ex parte Wilson, 114 U. S. 417, 29 L. ed. 89, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 616, 624, 625, 29 L. ed. 746, 749, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564. The language of the Constitution, as has been well said, could not be understood without reference to the common law. 1 Kent Com. 336; Bradley, J., in Moore v. United States, 91 U. S. 270, 274, 23 L. ed. 346, 347."

At the common law, protection from second jeopardy for the same offense clearly included immunity from second prosecution where the court having jurisdiction had acquitted the accused of the offense. The rule is thus stated by Hawkins, Pleas of the Crown, quoted by Mr. Justice Story in United States v. Gibert, 2 Sumn. 39 Fed. Cas. No. 15,204:

"The plea (says he) of autrefois acquit is grounded on this maxim, that a man shall not be brought into danger of his life for one and the same offense more than once. From whence it is generally taken by all our books, as an undoubted consequence, that where a man is once found not guilty, on an indictment or appeal, free from error, and well commenced before any court which hath jurisdiction of the cause, he may, by the common law, in all cases, plead such acquittal in bar of any subsequent indictment or appeal for the same crime."

In this court it was said by Mr. Justice Miller, in Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872:

"The common law not only prohibited a second punishment for the same offense, but went further, and forbid a second trial for the same offense, whether the accused had suffered punishment or not, and whether, in the former trial, he had been acquitted or convicted."

And in as late a case as Wemyss v. Hopkins, L. R. 10 Q. B. 378, it was held that a conviction before a court of competent jurisdiction, even without a jury, was a bar to a second prosecution. [127]

In that case the appellant had been summarily convicted before a magistrate for negligently, and by wilful misconduct, driving a carriage against a horse ridden by the respondent, and was afterwards convicted on the same facts for unlawful assault. It was held that the first conviction was a bar to the second. In the course of the opinion it was said by Blackburn, J.:

"I think the fact that the appellant had been convicted by justices under one act of Parliament for what amounted to an assault is a bar to a conviction under another act of Parliament for the same assault. The defense does not arise on a plea of autrefois convict, but on the well-established rule at common law, that where a person has been convicted and punished for an offense by a court of competent jurisdiction, Transit in rem judicatam; that is, the conviction shall be a bar to all further proceedings for the same offense, and he shall not be punished again for the same matter; otherwise there might be two different punishments for the same offense. The only point raised is whether a defense in the nature of a plea of autrefois convict would extend to a conviction before two justices whose jurisdiction is created by statute. I think the fact that the jurisdiction of the justices is created by statute makes no difference. Where the conviction is by a court of competent jurisdiction it matters not whether the conviction is by a summary proceeding before justices or by trial before a jury."

In the same case it was said by Lush, J.: "I am also of opinion that the second conviction should be quashed, upon the ground that it violated a fundamental principle of law, that no person shall be prosecuted twice for the same offense. The act charged against the appellant on the first occasion was an assault upon the respondent while she was riding a horse on the highway, and it therefore became an offense for which the appellant might be punished under ei-

[128]ther of two *statutes. The appellant was prosecuted for the assault, and convicted under one of the statutes, 3 and 4 Wm. iv., chap. 50, § 78, and fined, and he therefore cannot be afterwards convicted again for the same act under the other statute."

It is true that some of the definitions given by the text-book writers, and found in the reports, limit jeopardy to a second prosecution after verdict by a jury; but the weight of authority, as well as decisions of this court, have sanctioned the rule that a person has been in jeopardy when he is regularly charged with a crime before a tribunal properly organized and competent to try him; certainly so after acquittal. Coleman v. Tennessee, 97 U. S. 509, 24 L. ed. 1118. Undoubtedly in those jurisdictions where a trial of one accused of crime can only be to a jury, and a verdict of acquittal or conviction must be by a jury, no legal jeopardy can attach until a jury has been called and charged with the deliverance of the accused. But, protection being against a second trial for the same offense, it is obvious that where one has been tried before a competent tribunal having jurisdiction he has been in jeopardy as much as he could have been in those tribunals where a jury is alone competent to convict or acquit. People v. Miner, 144 Ill. 308, 19 L. R. A. 342, 33 N. E. 43; State v. Bowen, 45 Minn. 145, 47 N. W. 650; State v. Layne, 93 Tenn. 668, 36 S. W. 390.

In United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 445, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609, it was held that a writ of error did not lie in favor of the United States in a criminal case: Mr. Justice Gray said:

"From the time of Lord Hale to that of Chadwick's Case [11 Q. B. 173, 205], just cited, the text-books, with hardly an exception, either assume or assert that the defendant (or his representative) is the only party who can have either a new trial or a writ of error in a criminal case; and that a judgment in his favor is final and conclusive. See 2 Hawk. P. C. chap. 47, § 12; chap. 50, §§ 10 et seq.; Bacon Abr. Trial, L. 9, Error, B.; 1 Chitty, Crim. Law, 657, 747; Starkie, Crim. Pl. 2d ed. 357, 367, 371; Archbold, Crim. Pl. & Pl. 12th Eng. and 6th Am. ed. 177, 179.

"But whatever may have been, or may be, [129] the law of *England upon that question, it is settled by an overwhelming weight of American authority that the state has no right to sue out a writ of error upon a judgment in favor of the defendant in a criminal case, except under and in accordance with express statutes, whether that judgment was rendered upon a verdict of acquittal, or upon the determination by the court of a question of law."

124

In the course of the opinion Justice Gray cites, among other cases, Com. v. Cummings and Com. v. McGinnis, opinion by Chief Justice Shaw, 3 Cush. 212, '50 Am. Dec. 732. In Archbold, Crim. Pl. & Pr. Pomeroy's ed., 199, it was said: "There is no instance of error being brought upon a judgment for a defendant, after an acquittal."

That the learned justice could not have intended to intimate that a second prosecution could be allowed by statute after an acquittal of the offense is shown by the subsequent decision of this court in United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 300, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192, in which Mr. Justice Gray also delivered the opinion of the court. In that case an attempt was made to prosecute for the second time one Millard F. Ball, who had been acquitted upon a defective indictment, which had been held bad upon the proceedings in error prosecuted by others jointly indicted with Millard F. Ball, who had been convicted at the trial. The court below held Ball's plea of former jeopardy to be bad. But this court reversed the judgment, and in the course of the opinion it was said:

"The Constitution of the United States, in the 5th Amendment, declares, 'Nor shall any person be subject to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb.' The prohibition is not against being twice punished, but against being twice put in jeopardy; and the accused, whether convicted or acquitted, is equally put in jeopardy at the first trial. An acquittal before a court having no jurisdiction is, of course, like all the proceedings in the case, absolutely void, and therefore no bar to subsequent indictment and trial in a court which has jurisdiction of the offense. Com. v. Peters, 12 Met. 387; 2 Hawk. P. C. *chap. 35, § 3; 1 Bishop, Crim. [130] Law, § 1028. But although the indictment was fatally defective, yet, if the court had jurisdiction of the cause and of the party, its judgment is not void, but only voidable by writ of error; and, until so avoided, cannot be collaterally impeached. If the judgment is upon a verdict of guilty, and unreversed, it stands good and warrants the punishment of the defendant accordingly, and he could not be discharged by a writ of habeas corpus. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 18, 23 L. ed. 787. If the judgment is upon an acquittal, the defendant, indeed, will not seek to have it reversed, and the government cannot. United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 445, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609. But the fact that the judgment of a court having jurisdiction of the case is practically final affords no reason for allowing its validity and conclusiveness to be impugned in another case. . . . As to the defendant who had been acquitted by the verdict duly returned and received, the court could take no other action than to order his discharge. The verdict of acquittal was final, and could not be reviewed, on error or otherwise, without putting him twice in jeopardy, and thereby violating the Constitution. However it may be in England, in this country a verdict of acquittal, although not followed by any judgment, is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for the same offense. United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 310, 36 L. ed. 445, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Com. v. Tuck, 20 Pick. 356, 365; West v. State, 22 N. J. L. 212, 231; 1 Lead. Crim. Cas. 532."

195 U. S.

It is, then, the settled law of this court that former jeopardy includes one who has been acquitted by a verdict duly rendered, although no judgment be entered on the verdict, and it was found upon a defective indictment. The protection is not, as the court below held, against the peril of second punishment, but against being again tried for the same offense.

We are not here dealing with those statutes which give to the government a right of review upon the steps merely preliminary to a trial and before the accused is legally put in jeopardy, as where a discharge is had upon motion to quash, or a demurrer to the indictment is sustained before jeopardy *has attached. Such statutes have been quite generally sustained in jurisdictions which deny the right of second trial where a competent court has convicted or acquitted the accused. People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467. Mr. Bishop, in his work upon Criminal Law, sums up the scope and authority of such statutes as follows:

"A legislative provision for the rehearing of criminal causes cannot be interpreted—or, at least, it cannot have force—to violate the constitutional rule under consideration, whatever be the words in which the provision is expressed. When, therefore, a defendant has been once in jeopardy, the jeopardy cannot be repeated without his consent, whatever statute may exist on the subject. Such a statute will be interpreted with the Constitution, and be held to apply only to cases where it constitutionally may. And if it undertakes to give to the state the right of appeal, to retry the party charged, after acquittal, it is invalid. And so the writ of error, or the like, allowed to the state, can authorize the state to procure the reversal of erroneous proceedings and commence anew, only in those cases in which the first proceeding did not create legal jeopardy." 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 5th ed § 1026.

The author's conclusion has support in the case of People v. Miner, 144 Ill. 308, 19 L. R. A. 342, 33 N. E. 40, wherein a statute giving an appeal when the accused had been acquitted before a competent tribunal was held in violation of § 10, article 2, of the Constitution of that state, providing that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense. So in the case of People v. Webb, 38 Cal. 467, a statute undertaking to give the right of appeal to the people in criminal cases was held to be limited to the cases in which errors in the proceedings may occur before legal jeopardy has attached. In the course of a well-considered opinion it was said:

"The question thus presented is of most grave importance, and, so far as we are advised, has never been directly passed upon by this court; hence we have given it a most patient consideration, and after a careful examination of the authorities *as to the[132] construction of similar provisions in the Constitutions of other states, and the Constitution of the United States, we are entirely satisfied that this court has no authority in criminal cases, under our state Constitution, to order a new trial of a defendant at the instance of the prosecution for mere errors in the ruling of the court during the progress of the trial after the jury have been charged with the case, and have rendered a verdict of not guilty. No case has been called to our attention, and after a most diligent examination of authorities, we have not been able to find a single American case where a retrial has been ordered or sanctioned by an appellate court at the instance of the prosecution, after the defendant had been once put upon his trial for an alleged felony, upon a valid indictment before a competent court and jury, and acquitted by the verdict of such jury; but we find a vast number of adjudications of the highest judicial tribunals of the different states and many of the Federal courts to the effect that no such retrial is authorized by the common law, and is directly interdicted by the Constitution of the United States, and also of most of the several states. The universal maxim of the common law of England, as Sir William Blackstone expresses it, 'that no man is to be brought into jeopardy of his life more than once for the same offense,' is embraced in article 5 of amendments to the Constitution of the United States, and in the Constitutions of several states, in the following language: 'Nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb;' and in many other states the same principle is incorporated in the organic law, in language substantially the same as hereinbefore quoted from the Constitution of this state. While the Constitutions of some few states are destitute of this or any similar provision, other state Constitutions, such as of New Hampshire, Rhode Island, New Jersey, and Iowa, merely interdict a second trial for the same offense after acquittal."

The case of State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 27 L. R. A. 498, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110, in the reasoning of the court seems opposed to this view. But no reference [133] *is made in the course of the opinion to any constitutional requirement in Connecticut as to double jeopardy. An examination of the Constitution of that state and amendments as published in General Statutes of Connecticut, Revision of 1902, discloses no provision upon the subject of jeopardy, and we conclude there is none.

The exceptional character of the decision in State v. Lee is stated by the learned editor of American State Reports in a note to the case as reported in 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, in the following language:

"This case, in its view of former jeopardy, stands out in bold relief against the commonly understood meaning of what constitutes once in jeopardy."

And further:

"The law almost universally prevalent is that a verdict of acquittal in a criminal case is final and conclusive, and that there can be no new trial of a criminal prosecution after an acquittal in it. People v. Corning, 2 N. Y. 9, 49 Am. Dec. 364, and note," 48 Am. St. Rep. 213, 214.

The Ball Case, 163 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 300, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192, establishes that to try a man after a verdict of acquittal is to put him twice in jeopardy, although the verdict was not followed by judgment. That is practically the case under consideration, viewed in the most favorable aspect for the government. The court of first instance, having jurisdiction to try the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused, found Kepner not guilty; to try him again upon the merits, even in an appellate court, is to put him a second time in jeopardy for the same offense, if Congress used the terms as construed by this court in passing upon their meaning. We have no doubt that Congress must be held to have intended to have used these words in the well-settled sense, as declared and settled by the decisions of this court.

It follows that military order No. 58, as amended by act of the Philippine Commission No. 194, in so far as it undertakes to permit an appeal by the government after [134] acquittal, was *repealed by the act of Congress of July, 1902, providing immunity from second jeopardy for the same criminal offense.

This conclusion renders it unnecessary to consider, if the question was presented in this case, whether the accused was entitled to the right of a trial by jury.

Judgment reversed and prisoner discharged.

Mr. Justice Holmes, with whom concurred Mr. Justice White and Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

I regret that I am unable to agree with the decision of the majority of the court. The case is of great importance, not only in its immediate bearing upon the administration of justice in the Philippines, but, since the words used in the act of Congress are also in the Constitution, even more because the decision necessarily will carry with it an interpretation of the latter instrument. If, as is possible, the constitutional prohibition should be extended to misdemeanors (Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 173, 21 L. ed. 872, 877), we shall have fastened upon the country a doctrine covering the whole criminal law, which, it seems to me, will have serious and evil consequences. At the present time in this country there is more danger that criminals will escape justice than that they will be subjected to tyranny. But I do not stop to consider or to state the consequences in detail, as such considerations are not supposed to be entertained by judges, except as inclining them to one of two interpretations, or as a tacit last resort in case of doubt. It is more pertinent to observe that it seems to me that logically and rationally a man cannot be said to be more than once in jeopardy in the same cause, however often he may be tried. The jeopardy is one continuing jeopardy, from its beginning to the end of the cause. Everybody agrees that the principle in its origin was a rule forbidding a trial in a new and independent case where a man already had been tried once. But there is no rule that a man may not be tried twice in the same case. It has been decided by this court that he may be tried a second time, even for his life, if the jury *dis- [135] agree (United States v. Perez, 9 Wheat. 579, 6 L. ed. 165; see Simmons v. United States, 142 U. S. 148, 35 L. ed. 968, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 263, 36 L. ed. 429, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Thompson v. United States, 155 U. S. 271, 39 L. ed. 146, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73), or, notwithstanding their agreement and verdict, if the verdict is set aside on the prisoner's exceptions for error in the trial. Hopt v. Utah, 104 U. S. 631, 635, 26 L. ed. 873, 874, 110 U. S. 574, 28 L. ed. 262, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202, 114 U. S. 488, 492, 29 L. ed. 183, 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972, 120 U. S. 430, 442, 30 L. ed. 708, 712, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 614; United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 672, 41 L. ed. 300, 303, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192. He even may be tried on a new indictment if the judgment on the first is ar- 195 U. S.

rested upon motion. Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 174, 21 L. ed. 872, 878; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 5th ed. § 998. I may refer further to the opinions of Kent and Curtis, in People v. Olcott, 2 Johns. Cas. 301; 2 Day, 507, note; United States v. Morris, 1 Curt. C. C. 23, Fed. Cas. No. 15,815, and to the well-reasoned decision in State v. Lee, 65 Conn. 265, 27 L. R. A. 498, 48 Am. St. Rep. 202, 30 Atl. 1110.

If a statute should give the right to take exceptions to the government, I believe it would be impossible to maintain that the prisoner would be protected by the Constitution from being tried again. He no more would be put in jeopardy a second time when retried because of a mistake of law in his favor, than he would be when retried for a mistake that did him harm. It cannot matter that the prisoner procures the second trial. In a capital case, like Hopt v. Utah, a man cannot waive, and certainly will not be taken to waive without meaning it, fundamental constitutional rights. Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 353, 354, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620. Usually no such waiver is expressed or thought of. Moreover, it cannot be imagined that the law would deny to a prisoner the correction of a fatal error unless he should waive other rights so important as to be saved by an express clause in the Constitution of the United States.

It might be said that when the prisoner takes exceptions he only is trying to get rid of a jeopardy that already exists,—that so far as the verdict is in his favor, as when he is found guilty of manslaughter upon an indictment for murder, according to some decisions he will keep it, and can be retried only for the less offense, so that the [136] jeopardy only is continued *to the extent that it already has been determined against him, and is continued with a chance of escape. I believe the decisions referred to to be wrong, but, assuming them to be right, we must consider his position at the moment when his exceptions are sustained. The first verdict has been set aside. The jeopardy created by that is at an end, and the question is, What shall be done with the prisoner? Since at that moment he no longer is in jeopardy from the first verdict, if a second trial in the same case is a second jeopardy even as to the less offense, he has a right to go free. In view of these difficulties it has been argued that, on principle, he has that right if a mistake of law is committed at the first trial. 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, 5th ed. §§ 999, 1047. But even Mr. Bishop admits that the decisions are otherwise, and the point is settled in this court by the cases cited above. That fetish happily being destroyed, the necessary alternative is that the Constitution permits a second trial in the same case. The reason, however, is not the fiction that a man is not in jeopardy, in case of a misdirection, for it must be admitted that he is in jeopardy, even when the error is patent on the face of the record; as when he is tried on a defective indictment, if judgment is not arrested. United States v. Ball, 163 U. S. 662, 41 L. ed. 300, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1192. Moreover, if the fiction were true, it would be equally true when the misdirection was in favor of the prisoner. The reason, I submit, is that there can be but one jeopardy in one case. I have seen no other, except the suggestion of waiver, and that I think cannot stand.

If what I have said so far is correct, no additional argument is necessary to show that a statute may authorize an appeal by the government from the decision by a magistrate to a higher court, as well as an appeal by the prisoner. The latter is everyday practice, yet there is no doubt that the prisoner is in jeopardy at the trial before the magistrate, and that a conviction or acquittal not appealed from would be a bar to a second prosecution. That is what was decided, and it is all that was decided or intimated, relevant to this case, in *Wemyss v. Hopkins, L. R. 10 Q. B. 378. For the [137] reasons which I have stated already, a second trial in the same case must be regarded as only a continuation of the jeopardy which began with the trial below.

Mr. Justice Brown, dissenting:

Under our Anglo-Saxon system of jurisprudence I have always supposed that a verdict of acquittal upon a valid indictment terminated the jeopardy, that no further proceedings for a review could be taken either in the same or in an appellate court, and that it was extremely doubtful whether even Congress could constitutionally authorize such review.

Conceding all this, however, I think that in applying the principle to the Philippine Islands, Congress intended to use the words in the sense in which they had theretofore been understood in those islands. By that law, in which trial by jury was unknown, the jeopardy did not terminate, if appeal were taken to the audiencia or supreme court, until that body had acted upon the case. The proceedings before the court of first instance were, in all important cases, reviewable by the supreme court upon appeal which acted finally upon the case, and terminated the jeopardy. This was evidently the view, of the military commander in general order No. 58, and of the Philippine Commission in the act of August 10, 1901 (No. 194), in both of which an appeal to the supreme court was contemplated, even after a judgment of acquittal. I think this also must have been the intention of Congress, particularly in view of § 9 of the Philippine act of July 1, 1902, which provided that "the supreme court and the courts of first instance of the Philippine Islands shall possess and exercise jurisdiction as heretofore provided . . . subject to the power of said government to change the practice and modes of procedure." It seems to me impossible to suppose that Congress intended to place in the hands of a single judge the great and dangerous power of finally acquitting the most notorious criminals.

Leave to file a petition for rehearing denied on October 17, 1904.

[138]*FRED. L. DORR and Edward F. O'Brien.
Plffs. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 138-158.)

Power of Congress over the territories—trial by jury in Philippine Islands—libel—comments on privileged matter—legislative power of Philippine Commission.

1. Congress, under the power to govern territory of the United States, implied in the right to acquire it, and expressly conferred by U. S. Const. art. 4, § 3, was not bound to include the right of trial by jury in the system of laws enacted by the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), for the temporary civil government of the Philippine Islands, ceded to the United States by Spain, and not incorporated into the United States by congressional action.
2. The right of trial by jury was not extended by the Federal Constitution, without legislation, and of its own force, to the Philippine Islands, ceded to the United States by Spain, and not incorporated into the United States by congressional action.
3. Striking headlines prefixed to a newspaper report of a judicial proceeding, which held the prosecuting witness up to the public as "traitor, seducer, and perjurer," with the additional phrase "wife would have killed him," are not privileged, even if the report itself was privileged, under act No. 277 of the Philippine Commission, § 7, as a fair and true report of judicial proceedings,—especially in view of the provision of the following section of that act, that "libelous remarks or comments connected with matter privileged by the last section receive no privilege by reason of being so connected."

NOTE.—On the power of Congress over the territories—see note to First Nat. Bank v. Yankton County, 25 L. ed. U. S. 1046.

On the license of the press—see note to Morey v. Morning Journal Assn., 9 L. R. A. 621.

On privileged publications—see notes to Byam v. Collins, 2 L. R. A. 129; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Richmond, 4 L. R. A. 280; John W. Lovell Co. v. Houghton, 6 L. R. A. 363; White v. Nicholls, 11 L. ed. U. S. 591.

4. Congress could lawfully delegate, by the act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 910, chap. 803), to such persons as should be appointed by the President, the power to legislate for the Philippine Islands, including the power to enact the "libel law" passed on October 24, 1901.

[No. 583.]

Argued April 21, 22, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of libel in the court of first instance of the city of Manila. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

No brief or argument for plaintiff's in error.

Mr. Lebeus R. Willey argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The article over which the headlines in question appeared was not privileged.

Stackpole v. Hennen, 6 Mart. N. S. 481, 17 Am. Dec. 187; Com. v. Godshalk, 13 Phila. 575.

The headlines in question were libelous because they were "remarks or comments" within the meaning of the law.

Century Dict. Comment; Standard Dict. Remark; Webster Dict. Comment, Remark.

It is held in some states that, where there is no law with reference to comments and remarks, headlines may be used if they fairly and accurately forecast the article published, but they must be true and faithful epitomes of what is contained in the account of the court proceedings.

Lawyers' Co-op. Pub. Co. v. West Pub. Co. 32 App. Div. 585, 52 N. Y. Supp. 1120; Hayes v. Press Co. 127 Pa. 642, 5 L. R. A. 643, 14 Am. St. Rep. 874, 18 Atl. 331.

The headlines in question were libelous because they were not a fair epitome or index to the article itself.

Newell, Defamation, Slander & Libel, pp. 556, 557; Andrews v. Chapman, 3 Car. & K. 288.

The headlines in question were libelous because they were published with malice.

Newell, Slander & Libel, p. 554; Salisbury v. Union & Advertiser Co. 45 Hun, 120.

Congress in the exercise of its power to make needful rules and regulations for the territories has often delegated its powers as to the territorial governments.

The power to establish territorial government has been too long exercised by Congress and acquiesced in by the Supreme Court to be deemed an unsettled question.

De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 511, 7 L. ed. 242.

Solicitor General Hoyt also argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error. For his contentions see his brief as reported in Kepner v. United States, ante, 114.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

The case presents the question whether, in the absence of a statute of Congress expressly conferring the right, trial by jury is a necessary incident of judicial procedure in the Philippine Islands, where demand for trial by that method has been made by the accused, and denied by the courts established in the islands.

The recent consideration by this court, and the full discussion had in the opinions delivered in the so-called "Insular cases," renders superfluous any attempt to reconsider the constitutional relation of the powers of the government to territory acquired by a treaty cession to the United States. De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770. The opinions rendered in those cases cover every phase of the question, either legal or historical, and it would be useless to undertake to add to the elaborate consideration of the subject had therein. In the still more recent case of Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, the right to a jury trial in [140] outlying *territory of the United States was under consideration. For the present purpose it is only necessary to state certain conclusions which are deemed to be established by prior adjudications, and are decisive of this case.

It may be regarded as settled that the Constitution of the United States is the only source of power authorizing action by any branch of the Federal government. "The government of the United States was born of the Constitution, and all powers which it enjoys or may exercise must be either derived expressly or by implication from that instrument." Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244-288, 45 L. ed. 1088-1106, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, and cases cited. It is equally well settled that the United States may acquire territory in the exercise of the treaty-making power by direct cession as the result of war, and in making effectual the terms of peace; and for that purpose has the powers of other sovereign nations. This principle has been recognized by this court from its earliest decisions. The convention which framed the Constitution of the United States, in view of the territory already possessed and the possibility of acquiring more, inserted in that instrument, in article 4, § 3, a grant of express power to Congress "to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States."

As early as the February term, 1810, of this court, in the case of Sere v. Pitot, 6 Cranch, 332, 3 L. ed. 240, Chief Justice Marshall, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"The power of governing and of legislating for a territory is the inevitable consequence of the right to acquire and to hold territory. Could this position be contested, the Constitution of the United States declares that 'Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.' Accordingly we find Congress possessing and exercising the absolute and undisputed power of governing and legislating for the territory of Orleans. Congress has *given them [141] a legislative, an executive, and a judiciary, with such powers as it has been their will to assign to those departments respectively."

And later, the same eminent judge, delivering the opinion of the court in the leading case upon the subject (American Ins. Co. v. 356 Bales of Cotton, 1 Pet. 511, 542, 7 L. ed. 242, 255), says:

"The Constitution confers absolutely on the government of the Union the powers of making war and of making treaties; consequently that government possesses the power of acquiring territory, either by conquest or by treaty.

"The usage of the world is, if a nation be not entirely subdued, to consider the holding of conquered territory as a mere military occupation, until its fate shall be determined at the treaty of peace. If it be ceded by the treaty, the acquisition is confirmed, and the ceded territory becomes a part of the nation to which it is annexed, either on the terms stipulated in the treaty of cession, or on such as its new master shall impose. On such transfer of territory it has never been held that the relations of the inhabitants with each other undergo any change. Their relations with their former sovereign are dissolved, and new relations are created between them and the government which has acquired their territory. The same act which transfers their country transfers the allegiance of those who remain in it; and the law, which may be denominated political, is necessarily changed, although that which regulates the intercourse and general conduct of individuals remains in force until altered by the newly-created power of the state.

"On the 22d of February, 1819, Spain ceded Florida to the United States. The 6th article of the treaty of cession contains the following provision: 'The inhabitants of the territories which His Catholic Majesty cedes the United States by this treaty shall be incorporated in the Union of the United States as soon as may be consistent with the principles of the Federal Constitution, and admitted to the enjoyment of the privileges, rights, and immunities of the citizens of the United States.' [8 Stat. at L. 256.]

[142] "This treaty is the law of the land, and admits the inhabitants of Florida to the enjoyment of the privileges, rights, and immunities of the citizens of the United States. It is unnecessary to inquire whether this is not their condition, independent of stipulation. They do not, however, participate in political power; they do not share in the government till Florida shall become a state. In the meantime Florida continues to be a territory of the United States, governed by virtue of that clause in the Constitution which empowers Congress 'to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States.'"

While these cases, and others which are cited in the late case of Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244-288, 45 L. ed. 1088-1106, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, sustain the right of Congress to make laws for the government of territories, without being subject to all the restrictions which are imposed upon that body when passing laws for the United States, considered as a political body of states in union, the exercise of the power expressly granted to govern the territories is not without limitations. Speaking of this power, Mr. Justice Curtis, in the case of Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. 614, 15 L. ed. 787, said:

"If, then, this clause does contain a power to legislate respecting the territory, what are the limits of that power?"

"To this I answer that, in common with all the other legislative powers of Congress, it finds limits in the express prohibitions on Congress not to do certain things; that, in the exercise of the legislative power, Congress cannot pass an ex post facto law or bill of attainder; and so in respect to each of the other prohibitions contained in the Constitution."

In every case where Congress undertakes to legislate in the exercise of the power conferred by the Constitution, the question may arise as to how far the exercise of the power is limited by the "prohibitions" of that instrument. The limitations which are to be applied in any given case involving territorial government must depend upon the relation of the particular territory to the United States, concerning which Congress is exercising the power conferred by the Constitution. That *the United States [143] may have territory which is not incorporated into the United States as a body politic, we think was recognized by the framers of the Constitution in enacting the article already considered, giving power over the territories, and is sanctioned by the opinions of the justices concurring in the judgment in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244-288, 45 L. ed. 1088-1106, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

Until Congress shall see fit to incorporate territory ceded by treaty into the United States, we regard it as settled by that decision that the territory is to be governed under the power existing in Congress to make laws for such territories, and subject to such constitutional restrictions upon the powers of that body as are applicable to the situation.

For this case the practical question is, Must Congress, in establishing a system for trial of crimes and offenses committed in the Philippine Islands, carry to their people by proper affirmative legislation a system of trial by jury?

If the treaty-making power could incorporate territory into the United States without congressional action, it is apparent that the treaty with Spain, ceding the Philippines to the United States [30 Stat. at L. 1759], carefully refrained from so doing; for it is expressly provided that (article 9): "The civil rights and political status of the native inhabitants of the territories hereby ceded to the United States shall be determined by the Congress." In this language it is clear that it was the intention of the framers of the treaty to reserve to Congress, so far as it could be constitutionally done, a free hand in dealing with these newly-acquired possessions.

The legislation upon the subject shows that not only has Congress hitherto refrained from incorporating the Philippines into the United States, but in the act of 1902, providing for temporary civil government (32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), there is express provision that § 1891 of the Revised Statutes of 1878 shall not apply to the Philippine Islands. This is the section giving force and effect to the Constitution and laws of the United States, not locally inapplicable, within all the organized territories, and every *territory thereafter organ- [144] ized, as elsewhere within the United States.

The requirements of the Constitution as to a jury are found in article 3, § 2:

"The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the states where the said crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any state, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed."

And in article 6 of the amendments to the Constitution:

"In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury, of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

It was said in the Mankichi Case, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, that when the territory had not been incorporated into the United States these requirements were not limitations upon the power of Congress in providing a government for territory in execution of the powers conferred upon Congress. Opinion of Mr. Justice White, p. 220, citing Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 28 L. ed. 232, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Re Ross, 140 U. S. 453, 473, 35 L. ed. 581, 589, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897; Bolln v. Nebraska, 176 U. S. 83, 44 L. ed. 382, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 287, and cases cited on page 86, L. ed. p. 383, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 288; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 584, 44 L. ed. 597, 598, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

In the same case Mr. Justice Brown, in the course of his opinion, said:

"We would even go farther, and say that most, if not all, the privileges and immunities contained in the Bill of Rights of the Constitution were intended to apply from the moment of annexation; but we place our decision of this case upon the ground that the two rights alleged to be violated in this case [right to trial by jury and presentment by grand jury] are not fundamental in their [145] nature, but concern merely a method *of procedure which sixty years of practice had shown to be suited to the conditions of the islands, and well calculated to conserve the rights of their citizens to their lives, their property, and their well being."

As we have had occasion to see in the case of Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, ante, 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, the President, in his instructions to the Philippine Commission, while impressing the necessity of carrying into the new government the guaranties of the Bill of Rights securing those safeguards to life and liberty which are deemed essential to our government, was careful to reserve the right to trial by jury, 195 U. S.

which was doubtless due to the fact that the civilized portion of the islands had a system of jurisprudence founded upon the civil law, and the uncivilized parts of the archipelago were wholly unfitted to exercise the right of trial by jury. The Spanish system, in force in the Philippines, gave the right to the accused to be tried before judges, who acted in effect as a court of inquiry, and whose judgments were not final until passed in review before the audiencia, or superior court, with right of final review, and power to grant a new trial for errors of law, in the supreme court at Madrid. To this system the Philippine Commission, in executing the power conferred by the orders of the President, and sanctioned by act of Congress (act of July 1, 1902, 32 Stat. at L. 691, chap. 1369), has added a guaranty of the right of the accused to be heard by himself and counsel, to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him, to have a speedy and public trial, to meet the witnesses against him face to face, and to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf. And, further, that no person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense without due process of law, nor be put twice in jeopardy of punishment for the same offense, nor be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. As appears in the Kepner Case, 195 U. S. 100, ante, 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, the accused is given the right of appeal from the judgment of the court of first instance to the supreme court, and, in capital cases, the case goes to the latter court without appeal. *It cannot be [146] successfully maintained that this system does not give an adequate and efficient method of protecting the rights of the accused as well as executing the criminal law by judicial proceedings which give full opportunity to be heard by competent tribunals before judgment can be pronounced. Of course, it is a complete answer to this suggestion to say, if such be the fact, that the constitutional requirements as to a jury trial, either of their own force or as limitations upon the power of Congress in setting up a government, must control in all the territory, whether incorporated or not, of the United States. But is this a reasonable interpretation of the power conferred upon Congress to make rules and regulations for the territories?

The cases cited have firmly established the power of the United States, like other sovereign nations, to acquire, by the methods known to civilized peoples, additional territory. The framers of the Constitution, recognizing the possibility of future extension by acquiring territory outside the states, did not leave to implication alone the power to govern and control territory owned or to be acquired, but, in the article quoted, expressly conferred the needful powers to make regulations. Regulations in this sense must mean laws, for, as well as states, territories must be governed by laws. The limitations of this power were suggested by Mr. Justice Curtis in the Scott Case, above quoted, and Mr. Justice Bradley, in the Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. v. United States, 136 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 481, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 792, said:

"Doubtless Congress, in legislating for the territories, would be subject to those fundamental limitations in favor of personal rights which are formulated in the Constitution and its amendments; but these limitations would exist rather by inference and the general spirit of the Constitution from which Congress derives all its powers, than by any express and direct application of its provisions."

This language was quoted with approbation by Mr. Justice Brown in Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244-288, 45 L. ed. 1088-1106, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, and in the same [147] case Mr. Justice White said: "'Whilst, therefore, there is no express or implied limitation on Congress in exercising its power to create local governments for any and all of the territories, by which that body is restrained from the widest latitude of discretion, it does not follow that there may not be inherent, although unexpressed, principles which are the basis of all free government, which cannot be with impunity transcended. But this does not suggest that every express limitation of the Constitution which is applicable has not force, but only signifies that even in cases where there is no direct command of the Constitution which applies, there may nevertheless be restrictions of so fundamental a nature that they cannot be transgressed, although not expressed in so many words in the Constitution.'"

In treating of article 4, § 3, Judge Cooley, in his work on Constitutional Law, says:

"The peculiar wording of the provision [§ 3, article 4] has led some persons to suppose that it was intended Congress should exercise, in respect to the territory, the rights only of a proprietor of property, and that the people of the territories were to be left at liberty to institute governments for themselves. It is no doubt most consistent with the general theory of republican institutions that the people everywhere should be allowed self-government; but it has never been deemed a matter of right that a local community should be suffered to lay the foundations of institutions, and erect a structure of government thereon, without the guidance and restraint of a superior authority. Even in the older states, where society is most homogeneous and has fewest of the elements of disquiet and disorder, the state reserves to itself the right to shape municipal institutions; and towns and cities are only formed under its directions, and according to the rules and within the limits the state prescribes. With still less reason could the settlers in new territories be suffered to exercise sovereign powers. The practice of the government, originating before the adoption of the Constitution, has been for Congress to establish governments for the territories; and *whether the juris-[148] diction over the district has been acquired by grant from the states, or by treaty with a foreign power, Congress has unquestionably full power to govern it; and the people, except as Congress shall provide for, are not of right entitled to participate in political authority until the territory becomes a state. Meantime they are in a condition of temporary pupillage and dependence; and while Congress will be expected to recognize the principle of self-government to such extent as may seem wise, its discretion alone can constitute the measure by which the participation of the people can be determined." Cooley, Principles of Const. Law, 164.

If the right to trial by jury were a fundamental right which goes wherever the jurisdiction of the United States extends, or if Congress, in framing laws for outlying territory belonging to the United States, was obliged to establish that system by affirmative legislation, it would follow that, no matter what the needs or capacities of the people, trial by jury, and in no other way, must be forthwith established, although the result may be to work injustice and provoke disturbance rather than to aid the orderly administration of justice. If the United States, impelled by its duty or advantage, shall acquire territory peopled by savages, and of which it may dispose or not hold for ultimate admission to statehood, if this doctrine is sound, it must establish there the trial by jury. To state such a proposition demonstrates the impossibility of carrying it into practice. Again, if the United States shall acquire by treaty the cession of territory having an established system of jurisprudence, where jury trials are unknown, but a method of fair and orderly trial prevails under an acceptable and long-established code, the preference of the people must be disregarded, their established customs ignored, and they themselves coerced to accept, in advance of incorporation into the United States, a system of trial unknown to them and unsuited to their needs. We do not think it was intended, in giving power to Congress to make regulations for the territories, to hamper its exercise with this condition.

[149] *We conclude that the power to govern territory, implied in the right to acquire it, and given to Congress in the Constitution in article 4, § 3, to whatever other limitations it may be subject, the extent of which must be decided as questions arise, does not require that body to enact for ceded territory, not made a part of the United States by congressional action, a system of laws which shall include the right of trial by jury, and that the Constitution does not, without legislation, and of its own force, carry such right to territory so situated.

Other assignments of error bring further questions before the court which we will proceed to notice. The case was a prosecution for libel, brought at the instance of Don Benito Legarda, a member of the Philippine Commission, against the plaintiffs in error, Dorrr and O'Brien, who were proprietors and editors of a newspaper published in the city of Manila, known as the "Manila Freedom." It appears that Legarda was the prosecuting witness against one Valdez, editor of a certain Spanish newspaper called the "Miau." At the time of the trial of Valdez, under the Spanish law then in force in the islands, the truth could not be given in defense in a prosecution for criminal libel. Notwithstanding this fact, counsel for Valdez, in the form of an offer of proof, read a paper in court, making certain statements with reference to the libel charged, tending to show the truth thereof. In what purported to be a report of the proceeding, the Manila Freedom printed an article containing the matter set forth in the offer to prove, with headlines in large type, as follows:

"TRAITOR, SEDUCER, AND PERJURER.
SENSATIONAL ALLEGATIONS AGAINST COMMISSIONER LEGARDA.

MADE OF RECORD AND READ IN ENGLISH—SPANISH READING WAIVED.

Wife would have killed him.

Legarda pale and nervous."

The prosecution of the plaintiffs in error [150] was based upon the *publication of these headlines, which were charged to be a false and malicious libel, printed in the English language, of and concerning Don Benito Legarda. At the time Valdez was tried, in which case the occurrence undertaken to be reported took place, the Spanish law was in force, denying the right to put in evidence the truth of the alleged libelous matter. At the time of the trial of the plaintiffs in 195 U. S.

error the Philippine Commission had passed act No. 277, known as the libel law:

[No. 277.]

"An Act Defining the Law of Libel and Threats to Publish a Libel, Making Libel and Threats to Publish Libel Misdemeanors, Giving a Right of Civil Action Therefor, and Making Obscene or Indecent Publications Misdemeanors.

"By authority of the President of the United States, be it enacted by the United States Philippine Commission that: Sec 1. A libel is a malicious defamation, expressed either in writing, printing, or by signs or pictures, or the like, or public theatrical exhibitions, tending to blacken the memory of one who is dead or to impeach the honesty, virtue, or reputation, or publish the alleged or natural defects of one who is alive, and thereby expose him to public hatred, contempt, or ridicule.

"Sec. 4. In all criminal prosecutions for libel the truth may be given in evidence to the court, and if it appears to the court that the matter charged as libelous is true, and was published with good motives, and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; otherwise he shall be convicted; but to establish this defense, not only must the truth of the matter so charged be proven, but also that it was published with good motives and for justifiable ends.

"Sec. 6. Every author, editor, or proprietor of any book, newspaper, or serial publication is chargeable with the publication of any words contained in any part of such book or number of each newspaper or serial, as fully as if he were the author of the same.

"*Sec. 7. No reporter, editor, or proprietor [151] of any newspaper is liable to any prosecution for a fair and true report of any judicial, legislative, or other public official proceedings, or of any statement, speech, argument, or debate in the course of the same, except upon proof of malice in making such report, which shall not be implied from the mere fact of publication.

"Sec. 8. Libelous remarks or comments connected with matter privileged by the last section receive no privilege by reason of being so connected.

"Enacted October 24, 1901."

The contention is that the publication is privileged under §§ 7 and 8, the claim being that the publication was a fair and truthful report of judicial proceedings. Testimony was introduced in the court below tending to show malice, and there was no proof to support the truth of the charges in the alleged libel, which were found to be without basis and wanton, and as the findings of the two lower courts in a case brought in review here are not ordinarily disturbed, the case upon this branch might rest upon that proposition. It is evident, however, that the publication in question did not stop with a simple report of the judicial proceedings. Indeed, the paper offered in evidence could not have been received under the law then in force,—a fact concerning which no comment was made in the report of the proceedings. Furthermore, § 8 of the law, while permitting, as privileged, a fair and truthful report of judicial proceedings, except upon express proof of malice, does not make privileged libelous remarks or comments in connection with the privileged matter. The draftsman of the law evidently had in mind the law of criminal libel in newspaper publications as it exists in this country. The privilege extends to a full and correct report of judicial proceedings without prejudicial comment. The rule is nowhere better stated than by Judge Cooley in his work on Constitutional Limitations, 7th ed., p. 637:

[152] "It seems to be settled that a fair and impartial account of judicial proceedings, which have not been ex parte, but in the hearing of both parties, is, generally speaking, a justifiable publication. But it is said that if a party is to be allowed to publish what passes in a court of justice, he must publish the whole case, and not merely state the conclusion which he himself draws from the evidence. A plea that the supposed libel was, in substance, a true account and report of a trial, has been held bad; and a statement of the circumstances of a trial as from counsel in the case has been held not privileged. The report must also be strictly confined to the actual proceedings in court, and must contain no defamatory observations or comments from any quarter whatsoever, in addition to what forms strictly and properly the legal proceedings."*

Many cases are cited by the learned author in support of this conclusion. In Hayes v. Press Co. 127 Pa. 642, 5 L. R. A. 643, 14 Am. St. Rep. 874, 18 Atl. 331, headlines stating "Hotel Proprietors Embarrassed," in giving an account of a judgment rendered in the suit of a bank against the proprietors of a certain hotel, was held not privileged. In Newell on Defamation, Slander and Libel, chap. 19, § 163, the author says:

"The publisher must add nothing of his own. He must not state his opinion of the conduct of the parties, or impute motives therefor; he must not insinuate that a particular witness committed perjury. That is not a report of what occurred; it is simply his comment on what occurred, and to this no privilege attaches. Often such comments may be justified on another ground,—that they are fair and bona fide criticism on a matter of public interest, and are therefore not libelous. But such observations, to which quite different considerations apply, should not be mixed up with the history of the case. Lord Campbell said: 'If any comments are made, they should not be made as part of the report. The report should be confined to what takes place in court; and the two things—report and comment—should be kept separate.' And all sensational headings to reports should be avoided." Thomas v. Crosswell, 7 Johns, 264, 5 Am. Dec. 269.

These headlines were not privileged matter at the common law, and were libelous remarks or comments if the matter could be deemed otherwise privileged, within the meaning of § 8 of the Philippine libel law. An inspection of them would seem to be sufficient to demonstrate this fact. The complainant was held up to the public where the paper circulated in striking headlines as "Traitor, Seducer, Perjurer," and while these words were quoted, as well as the phrase "Wife would have killed him," their publication in this manner was certainly the equivalent to a remark or comment unnecessary to a fair and truthful report of judicial proceedings, and likely to raise inferences highly detrimental to the character and standing of the one concerning whom they were printed and published.

Further error is assigned in that act No. 277 of the laws of the Philippine Commission was not passed by competent legal authority. The act was one of the laws of the Philippine Commission, passed by that body by virtue of the authority given the President under the so-called Spooner resolution of March 2, 1901 [31 Stat. at L. 910, chap. 803]. The right of Congress to authorize a temporary government of this character is not open to question at this day. The power has been frequently exercised and is too well settled to require further discussion. De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 196, 45 L. ed. 1041, 1056, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Peckham, concurring:

I concur in the result of the opinion of the court in this case, which upholds the conviction of the plaintiffs in error on a trial at Manila, Philippine Islands, for a criminal offense, without a jury. I do so simply because of the decision in Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787. That case was decided by the concurring views of a majority of this court, and although *I did not and do not concur in those views, yet the case in my opinion is authority for the result arrived at in the case now before us, to wit, that a jury trial is not a constitutional necessity in a criminal case in Hawaii or in the Philippine Islands. But, while concurring in this judgment, I do not wish to be understood as assenting to the view that Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 45 L. ed. 1088, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770, is to be regarded as authority for the decision herein. That case is authority only for the proposition that the plaintiff therein was not entitled to recover the amount of duties he had paid under protest upon the importation into the city of New York of certain oranges from the port of San Juan, in the Island of Porto Rico, in November, 1900, after the passage of the act known as the Foraker act [31 Stat. at L. 77, chap. 191]. The various reasons advanced by the judges in reaching this conclusion, which were not concurred in by a majority of the court, are plainly not binding. The Mankichi Case is, however, directly in point, and calls for an affirmance of this judgment.

I am authorized to say that the CHIEF JUSTICE and Mr. Justice Brewer agree in this concurring opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

I do not believe now any more than I did when Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787, was decided, that the provisions of the Federal Constitution as to grand and petit juries relate to mere methods of procedure, and are not fundamental in their nature. In my opinion, guaranties for the protection of life, liberty, and property, as embodied in the Constitution, are for the benefit of all, of whatever race or nativity, in the states composing the Union, or in any territory, however acquired, over the inhabitants of which the government of the United States may exercise the powers conferred upon it by the Constitution.

The Constitution declares that no person, except in the land *or naval forces, shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, except on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury; and forbids the conviction, in a criminal prosecution, of any person, for any crime, except on the unanimous verdict of a petit jury composed of twelve persons. Necessarily, that mandate was addressed to every one committing crime punishable by the United States. This court, however, holds that these provisions are not fundamental, and may be disregarded in any territory acquired in the manner the Philippine Islands were acquired, although, as heretofore decided by this court, they could not be disregarded in what are commonly called the organized territories of the United States. Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620. I cannot assent to this interpretation of the Constitution. It is, I submit, so obviously inconsistent with the Constitution that I cannot regard the judgment of the court otherwise than as an amendment of that instrument by judicial construction, when a different mode of amendment is expressly provided for. Grand juries and petit juries may be, at times, somewhat inconvenient in the administration of criminal justice in the Philippines. But such inconveniences are of slight consequence compared with the dangers to our system of government arising from judicial amendments of the Constitution. The Constitution declares that it "shall be the supreme law of the land." But the court in effect adjudges that the Philippine Islands are not part of the "land," within the meaning of the Constitution, although they are governed by the sovereign authority of the United States, and although their inhabitants are subject in all respects to its jurisdiction,—as much so as are the people in the District of Columbia or in the several states of the Union. No power exists in the judiciary to suspend the operation of the Constitution in any territory governed, as to its affairs and people, by authority of the United States. As a Filipino committing the crime of murder in the Philippine Islands may be hung by the sovereign authority of the United States, and as the Philippine Islands are under a *civil, not [156] military, government, the suggestion that he may not, of right, appeal for his protection to the jury provisions of the Constitution, which constitutes the only source of the power that the government may exercise at any time or at any place, is utterly revolting to my mind, and can never receive my sanction. The Constitution, without excepting from its provisions any persons over whom the United States may exercise jurisdiction, declares expressly that "the trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury." It is now adjudged that that provision is not fundamental in respect of a part of the people over whom the United States may exercise full legislative, judicial and executive power. Indeed, it is adjudged, in effect, that the above clause, in its application to this case, is to be construed as if it read: "The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, and except where Filipinos are concerned, shall be by jury." Such a mode of constitutional interpretation plays havoc with the old-fashioned ideas of the fathers, who took care to say that the Constitution was the supreme law,—supreme everywhere, at all times, and over all persons who are subject to the authority of the United States. According to the principles of the opinion just rendered, neither the governor nor any American civil officer in the Philippines, although citizens of the United States, although under an oath to support the Constitution, and although in those distant possessions for the purpose of enforcing the authority of the United States, can claim, of right, the benefit of the jury provisions of the Constitution, if tried for crime committed on those Islands. Besides there are many thousands of American soldiers in the Philippines. They are there by command of the United States, to enforce its authority. They carry the flag of the United States, and have not lost their American citizenship. Yet, if charged in the Philippines with having committed a crime against the United States of which a civil tribunal may take cognizance, they cannot, under the present decision, claim of [157] right a trial by jury. So that, if an *American soldier, in discharge of his duty to his country, goes into what some call our "outlying dependencies," he is, it seems, "outside of the Constitution," in respect of a right which this court has said was justly "dear to the American people," and has "always been an object of deep interest and solicitude, and every encroachment upon it has been watched with great jealousy;" a right which, Mr. Justice Story said, was, from very early times, insisted on by our ancestors in the parent country "as the great bulwark of their civil and political liberties." Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. 433, 436, 7 L. ed. 732, 733; 2 Story, Const. § 1779. Referring to the declaration by a French writer, that Rome, Sparta, and Carthage having lost their liberties, those of England must in time perish, Blackstone observed that the writer "should have recollected that Rome, Sparta, and Carthage, at the time their liberties were lost, were strangers to the trial by jury." 2 Bl. Com. 379.

In a former case I had occasion to say, and I still think, that "neither the life, nor the liberty, nor the property of any person, within any territory or country over which the United States is sovereign, can be taken, under the sanction of any civil tribunal, acting under its authority, by any form of procedure inconsistent with the Constitution of the United States;" that "the Constitution is the supreme law in every territory, as soon as it comes under the sovereign dominion of the United States for purposes of civil administration, and whose inhabitants are under its entire authority and jurisdiction." [Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 47 L. ed. 1016, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.]

My views as to the scope and meaning of the provisions of the Constitution which relate to grand and petit juries, and as to the relations of the United States to our newly acquired possessions, have been more fully stated in cases heretofore decided in this court,† and I have therefore not deemed it *necessary, in the present case, to enter[158] upon a review of the authorities.

I dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court.

SECUNDINO MENDEZONA y MENDEZONA, Plff. in Err.,

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 158.)

Criminal law—former jeopardy in Philippine Islands—appeal by government from acquittal.

This case is governed by the decision in Kepner v. United States, ante, 114.

[No. 584.]

Argued April 21, 22, 1904. Decided May 31, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of acquittal of the crime of estafa in the court of first instance in the city of Manila, and found the accused guilty of that offense, and imposed punishment therefor. Reversed, and the prisoner discharged.

No brief or argument for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Lebbeus R. Wilfey and Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed briefs for defendant in error.

For their contentions see their briefs as reported in Kepner v. United States, ante, 114.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case involves the question just decided in Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, ante, 114, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797. The plaintiff in error was acquitted in the court of first instance, and convicted in the supreme court of the Philippine Islands.

For the reasons stated in the Kepner Case, the judgment herein is reversed, and the prisoner discharged.

Dissenting: Mr. Justice Brown, Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice McKenna, and Mr. Justice Holmes.

Leave to file a petition for rehearing denied on October 17, 1904.

† Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 516, 538, 28 L. ed. 232, 239, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Thompson v. Utah, 170 U. S. 343, 42 L. ed. 1061, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 605, 44 L. ed. 597, 606, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 375, 45 L. ed. 1088, 1140, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Hawaii v. Mankichi, 190 U. S. 197, 221, 226, 47 L. ed. 1016, 1024, 1026, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 787.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

SUPREME COURT

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

Vol. 195.

THE DECISIONS
OF THE
Supreme Court of the United States
AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

[159]*AUGUST CLIFF, Plff. in Err.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 159-165.)

Excises — tax on artificially colored oleomargarine — appeal — conclusiveness of finding of fact.

1. Oleomargarine containing a small quantity of a vegetable oil, which substantially serves only to give the product the yellow shade which causes it to resemble butter, cannot be regarded as within the proviso in the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), § 8, as amended by the act of May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 266), imposing a lesser tax on oleomargarine when "free from artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow," on the theory that the use of a substance which Congress has, in § 2 of the original act, recognized as a possible ingredient, cannot be artificial coloration, since this congressional enumeration of ingredients specifically includes coloring matter.
2. A finding that the use of palm oil as an ingredient of oleomargarine was substantially only for coloring purposes will not be disturbed on appeal, where it is based on testimony that, out of a total of 160 ounces, only 1½ ounces were palm oil, and that this quantity imparted the yellow shade which caused the product to resemble butter.

[No. 19.]

Argued December 2, 1903. Decided October 24, 1904.

[IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois to review a conviction of having knowingly purchased and received for sale oleomargarine which had not been stamped according to law. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William D. Guthrie argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Maynard Harlan, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The position of the government is clearly in conflict with the decisions.

Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 26 L. ed. 896; Seeberger v. Farwell, 139 U. S. 608, 35 L. ed. 297, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Magone v. Luckmeyer, 139 U. S. 612, 35 L. ed. 298, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 76, 81, 36 L. ed. 893, 895, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; United States v. Irwin, 24 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 746, 78 Fed. 799; Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423.

Doubt, if there be any, in this case, should be resolved in favor of the plaintiff in error.

United States v. Wigglesworth, 2 Story, 369, Fed. Cas. No. 16,690; Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1240; United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496, 21 L. ed. 728; American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 35 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55. See also Eidman v. Martinez, 184 U. S. 578, 583, 46 L. ed. 697, 701, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 515; Rice v. United States, 4 C. C. A. 104, 10 U. S. App. 670, 53 Fed. 910; Matheson v. United States, 18 C. C. A. 143, 38 U. S. App. 25, 71 Fed. 394; Re Southern P. Co. 82 Fed. 311, 31 C. C. A. 263, 59 U. S. App. 496, 87 Fed. 863; Schoenemann v. United States, 56 C. C. A. 104, 119 Fed. 584; Dean v. Charlton, 27 Wis. 522.

The rulings of the Commissioners of Internal Revenue cannot have the effect of amending the law. They may aid in carrying the law as it exists into execution, but they cannot change its positive provisions.

United States v. 200 Barrels of W!

NOTE.—On regulation of traffic in oleomargarine—see notes to State v. Marshall, 1 L. R. A. 52; Com. v. Miller, 6 L. R. A. 633; Com. use of Allegheny County v. Weiss, 11 L. R. A. 532.

95 U. S. 571, 576, 24 L. ed. 491, 492; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 678, 687, 688, 36 L. ed. 592, 594, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie and Francis J. Kearful also filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

If, in view of the palm-oil question, the legislation of Congress is defective to accomplish the purpose intended, the remedy is one for Congress to supply; it cannot be placed in the hands of the commissioner.

Merritt v. Welsh, 104 U. S. 694, 26 L. ed. 896; Secberger v. Farwell, 139 U. S. 608, 35 L. ed. 297, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650; Magone v. Luckemeyer, 139 U. S. 612, 35 L. ed. 298, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; United States v. Schoverling, 146 U. S. 76, 81, 36 L. ed. 893, 895, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24; United States v. Irwin, 24 C. C. A. 349, 45 U. S. App. 746, 78 Fed. 799; Morrill v. Jones, 106 U. S. 466, 27 L. ed. 267, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; United States v. Eaton, 144 U. S. 677, 687, 36 L. ed. 591, 594, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 764; United States v. 200 Barrels of Whiskey, 95 U. S. 571, 576, 24 L. ed. 491, 492.

For further contentions of these counsel, see their brief as reported in Schick v. United States, ante, 99.

Messrs. William D. Guthrie, Miller Outcalt, Charles E. Prior, Francis J. Kearful, Delavan B. Cole, and Charles C. Carnahan also filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

For their contentions see their brief as reported in McCray v. United States, ante, 78.

Solicitor General Hoyt argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error. For his contentions see his brief as reported in McCray v. United States, ante, 78.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

August Cliff was convicted in the district [160] court of the *United States for the northern district of Illinois of a violation of § 11 of the act of August 2, 1886 (24 Stat. at L. 209, chap. 840, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2228), amended May 9, 1902 (32 Stat. at L. 193, chap. 784, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 266). A judgment for $50, as prescribed by the section, was entered, with an order for collection by execution. That judgment was brought directly to this court by writ of error. The constitutionality of the oleomargarine legislation and the right to waive a trial by jury in petty criminal offenses were affirmed in McCray v. United States, 195 U. S. 27, ante, 78, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 769, and Schick v. United States, 195 U. S. 65, ante, 99, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 826. Nothing need be added to the opinions in those cases on these questions.

There is in this case a further question. Section 2 reads:

"Sec. 2. That for the purposes of this act certain manufactured substances, certain extracts, and certain mixtures and compounds, including such mixtures and compounds with butter, shall be known and designated as 'oleomargarine,' namely: All substances heretofore known as oleomargarine, oleo, oleomargarine-oil, butterine, lardine, suine, and neutral; all mixtures and compounds of oleomargarine, oleo, oleomargarine oil, butterine, lardine, suine, and neutral; all lard extracts and tallow extracts; and all mixtures and compounds of tallow, beef fat, suet, lard, lard oil, vegetable oil annatto, and other coloring matter, intestinal fat, and offal fat made in imitation or semblance of butter, or, when so made, calculated or intended to be sold as butter or for butter."

In § 8 is this provision:

"Sec. 8. That upon oleomargarine which shall be manufactured and sold, or removed for consumption or use, there shall be assessed and collected a tax of ten cents per pound, to be paid by the manufacturer thereof; and any fractional part of a pound in a package shall be taxed as a pound: Provided, When oleomargarine is free from artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow said tax shall be one fourth of one cent per pound."

By § 14 the Commissioner of Internal Revenue—

"is authorized to decide what substances, extracts, mixtures, or *compounds, which [161] may be submitted for his inspection in contested cases, are to be taxed under this act; and his decision in matters of taxation under this act shall be final. The Commissioner may also decide whether any substance made in imitation or semblance of butter, and intended for human consumption, contains ingredients deleterious to the public health."

Defendant was charged with having knowingly purchased and received for sale "certain oleomargarine which had not been stamped according to law,—that is to say, 10 pounds of a mixture and compound composed, as he, the said August Cliff, well knew, of oleo oil, neutral lard, cotton-seed oil, milk, common salt, and palm oil (which said last-named ingredient, to wit, palm oil, produced an artificial coloration in the said oleomargarine that caused it to look like butter of a shade of yellow), which said oleomargarine had then lately before, to wit, on the day aforesaid, been manufactured at Chicago aforesaid by William J. Moxley."

It was shown that the tax of 10 cents per pound had not been paid, that the package contained 10 pounds, that its ingredients and their proportions were: 3 pounds of oleo oil; 1 pound and 12 ounces of neutral lard; 2 pounds of cotton-seed oil; 1 pound and 14½ ounces of milk; 1 pound and 4 ounces of salt; 1½ ounces of palm oil. In other words, out of 160 ounces, only 1½ ounces were palm oil. There was introduced in evidence a ruling of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, as follows:

"This office rules that where so minute and infinitesimal a quantity of a vegetable oil is used in the manufacture of oleomargarine as is proposed to be used of palm oil, and through its use the finished product looks like butter of any shade of yellow, it cannot be considered that the oil is used with the purpose or intention of being a bona fide constituent part or element of the product, but is used solely for the purpose of producing or imparting a yellow color to [162] the oleomargarine, *and, therefore, that the oleomargarine so colored is not free from artificial coloration, and becomes subject to the tax of 10 cents per pound."

Now the contention is that, Congress having by § 2 named the possible ingredients of oleomargarine, the coloring given to a compound of some or all by the use of one of the named ingredients is a natural coloring, and not an artificial coloration, subjecting to a tax of 10 cents per pound. In order that the precise contention may be understood we quote the following from one of the briefs filed for plaintiff in error:

"By parity of reasoning, when one is speaking of oleomargarine, natural coloration means a coloration due to a natural ingredient of oleomargarine; and to find out whether a certain ingredient is a natural ingredient of oleomargarine, we turn to the statute which defines the nature of oleomargarine. If the color-giving ingredient be a natural, that is a statutory, ingredient of oleomargarine, then how can it be truly said that the color caused by such ingredient is 'artificial coloration' merely because the quantity of such ingredient used is small or even minute, and the purpose of its use is to impart the desired color? Howsoever minute may be the quantity of palm oil used, it is none the less a vegetable oil, a statutory, or, so to speak, a natural, ingredient of oleomargarine, and displaces in the finished product an equal volume of some other statutory ingredient of oleomargarine; as, for instance, cotton-seed oil. The statute confers no power upon the Commissioner to prescribe the formula for the manufacture of oleomargarine, or the proportion of the different ingredients, or to exclude any ingredient except upon the ground of its being deleterious to health. But does not the government, in effect, assume such power to be in the Commissioner, when, by reason of his 195 U. S.

arbitrary classification, based upon the quantity of palm oil used, it requires a tax of 10 cents per pound upon oleomargarine containing a small or minute proportion of palm oil, while, if the percentage used of that oil were large enough to constitute what the Commissioner would regard as a substantial *part of the finished product, it is conceded [163] that the tax would be only ¼ of a cent per pound?"

We do not undervalue the force of this argument, but, as applied to this case, hold that it cannot prevail. It is true that under the last clause of § 2 oleomargarine includes "all mixtures and compounds" of the substances named, "made in imitation or semblance of butter, or, when so made, calculated or intended to be sold as butter or for butter," and that palm oil is a vegetable oil, one of those substances. But in this enumeration Congress included not only those substances which, entering into the composition of oleomargarine, make it suitable for food, and, so to speak, form its body, but also others used only for coloring. After naming some it adds specifically, "and other coloring matter." The purpose in so including "coloring matter" is obvious. It was to prevent excluding from the operation of the statute anything in its nature oleomargarine by the addition of a substance not in reality an ingredient, but serving substantially only the purpose of coloring the product to cause it to look like butter. The fact that one of the ingredients of this compound is palm oil does not show that such oil does anything else than color the product composed of other ingredients, and if it does substantially only this, it is rightfully styled an artificial coloration. Otherwise the proviso practically nullifies the body of the section. For "other coloring matter" includes all coloring matter; at least, all of the nature of those named; and hence the addition of any coloring matter would produce only a natural, and not an artificial, coloration, and thus relieve the product from the 10-cent tax. It will be noted that the regular tax imposed upon oleomargarine by § 8 is 10 cents a pound, the exception thereto being stated in the proviso, and a party who claims the benefit thereof must make it clear that his oleomargarine is within its scope. That exception is "when oleomargarine is free from artificial coloration that causes it to look like butter of any shade of yellow." Bearing in mind, also, that one of the purposes of this legislation *was to prevent the sale [164] of oleomargarine as and for butter, it must be held that when any substance, although named as a possible ingredient of oleomargarine, substantially serves only the function of coloring the mass, and so as to cause the product to "look like butter of any 141 shade of yellow," it is an artificial coloration.

Whether the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has all the authority which is in terms committed to him by § 14 need not be determined. The letter containing his ruling was admitted in evidence without objection. Irrespective of such ruling, and upon the other testimony, the judge who tried the case, and whose decision must be considered as equivalent to the verdict of a jury, could rightfully have found that this package of oleomargarine was artificially colored by the small amount of palm oil used in its manufacture. A witness testified that he called at the place of business of the defendant, "and found this 10-pound package of oleomargarine, which had been colored with palm oil to a very decided shade of yellow, like natural June butter, bearing a tax-paid stamp of $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent a pound." Other witnesses testified to the exact per cent of palm oil used in the preparation of the package. One said that "the article so manufactured was according to a formula used in the course of business, with the exception of the palm oil. It is what we call the 'Daisy grade,'—the lower grade. It is a substitute for butter." Another testified that "a very small proportion of palm oil is necessary only to produce what is considered a desirable color in oleomargarine. The color of palm oil is a reddish yellow. Its natural color is such that it may be used to make oleomargarine or white substances to look like butter." Further, the defendant offered quite an amount of testimony, which was received by the court, and afterwards, on motion, stricken out as irrelevant and immaterial. Included in this was that of the secretary of the manufacturer, who testified that "before July 1, 1902, we used only the Wells-Richardson improved butter color to produce an artificial coloration. Since *that date we have used the same article. We have used some palm oil. We used that for a few days only, until the Commissioner of Internal Revenue ruled that its use would subject the product to the 10-cent tax."

The verdict of a jury is conclusive upon a question of fact unless plainly against the evidence. The same weight, as we have said, must be given to the finding of a court, and upon the testimony received without objection a finding that this palm oil served substantially only to color the product cannot be disturbed. Indeed, the fact was made certain by the testimony offered by the defendant, although that testimony was afterwards stricken out by the court as immaterial.

We see no error in the record, and the judgment is affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE, Mr. Justice Harlan, and Mr. Justice Peckham dissented.

HUGH STEVENSON, Matilda C. Alloway, Paul E. Stevenson, et al., Appts.

v.

WILLIAM FAIN, John Fain, Robert Fain, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 165-170.)

Appeal—finality of decree of circuit court of appeals.

The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court over a controversy between citizens of different states, claiming under grants from different states, depends entirely upon the diversity of citizenship, within the meaning of the rule that makes the decrees of a circuit court of appeals final in cases in which diversity of citizenship is the sole ground of original jurisdiction, since Congress, in the various judiciary acts, has only conferred original jurisdiction on the circuit courts over controversies of this character when the parties are citizens of the same state.

[No. 8.]

Argued and submitted October 18, 19, 1904.
Decided November 7, 1904.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee dismissing a bill to remove a cloud upon the title to real property which the parties claimed under grants respectively from the states of Tennessee and North Carolina. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 53 C. C. A. 467, 116 Fed. 147.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was a bill filed by Stevenson and others, citizens and residents of New York and Rhode Island, against Fain and others, citizens and residents of North Carolina and Georgia, in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Tennessee, to remove a cloud upon the title to a *body[166] of wild lands lying adjacent to the boundary between Tennessee and North Carolina.

Complainants claimed title under grants from the state of Tennessee, and alleged that the lands lay wholly in Monroe county, Tennessee. Defendants alleged that the lands lay wholly within the county of Cherokee, in the state of North Carolina, and that they were lawfully granted to their ancestor by that state.

[165]

The issue involved the true boundary line between North Carolina and Tennessee. The circuit court held that the lands lay in the state of North Carolina, and that the title was in defendants, and dismissed the bill.

Thereupon an appeal was taken to the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, and, on hearing, the decree of the circuit court was affirmed. 53 C. C. A. 467, 116 Fed. 147.

From the decree of the circuit court of appeals this appeal was prosecuted.

Mr. T. S. Webb argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Charles Seymour, Hu. L. McClung, and L. M. G. Baker, filed a brief for appellants.

Mr. John W. Green submitted the cause for appellees. Mr. Samuel G. Shields was with him on the brief.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

If the jurisdiction of the circuit court was dependent entirely on diversity of citizenship, the decree of the circuit court of appeals was final, and this appeal cannot be maintained. The contention of appellants is that it was not so dependent because jurisdiction also existed in that the parties claimed under grants from different states, to which it is replied that, under the Constitution and laws, the circuit courts are not vested with jurisdiction on that ground except when the parties are citizens of the same state.

By § 1 of article 3 of the Constitution it [167] is provided *that "the judicial power of the United States shall be vested in one supreme court, and in such inferior courts as the Congress may, from time to time, ordain and establish." And by § 2 that "the judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more states, between a state and citizens of another state, between citizens of different states, between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens, or subjects. 2. In all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers, and consuls, and those in which a state shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the other cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, 195 U. S.

with such exceptions, and under such regulations, as the Congress shall make."

The Supreme Court alone "possesses jurisdiction derived immediately from the Constitution, and of which the legislative power cannot deprive it" (United States v. Hudson, 7 Cranch, 32, 3 L. ed. 259), but the jurisdiction of the circuit courts depends upon some act of Congress (Turner v. Bank of North America, 4 Dall. 8, 10, 1 L. ed. 718, 719; M'Intire v. Wood, 7 Cranch, 504, 506, 3 L. ed. 420, 421).

The use of the word "controversies" as in contradistinction to the word "cases," and the omission of the word "all" in respect of controversies, left it to Congress to define the controversies over which the courts it was empowered to ordain and establish might exercise jurisdiction, and the manner in which it was to be done.

By the 11th section of the judiciary act of September 24, 1789, it was provided that the circuit courts of the United States should "have original cognizance, concurrent with the *courts of the several states, of all [168] suits of a civil nature, at common law or in equity, where the matter in dispute exceeds, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of five hundred dollars, and the United States are plaintiffs or petitioners, or an alien is a party, or the suit is between a citizen of the state where the suit is brought and a citizen of another state." [1 Stat. at L. 78, chap. 20.]

In Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 61, 85, 3 L. ed. 38, 44, Mr. Chief Justice Marshall said:

"The judicial power of the United States, as defined in the Constitution, is dependent, 1st, on the nature of the case; and, 2d, on the character of the parties. By the judicial act, the jurisdiction of the circuit court is extended to cases where the constitutional right to plead and be impleaded, in the courts of the Union, depends on the character of the parties; but where that right depends on the nature of the case, the circuit courts derive no jurisdiction from that act, except in the single case of a controversy between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants from different states."

And that jurisdiction was conferred by the 12th section of the act, which provided that "if in any action commenced in a state court the title of land is concerned, and the parties are citizens of the same state," either party might remove the cause to the circuit court on the fact being made to appear that the parties claimed under grants of different states. This section was carried forward as § 647 of the Revised Statutes, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 524, and reappears in substance in § 3 of the act of March 3, 1875. 18

Stat. at L. 470, chap. 137, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 510.

By the 1st section of the latter act original jurisdiction was given to the circuit courts of cases, among others, "arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States, or treaties," or in which there was "a controversy between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states."

The acts of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 552, chap. 373), and of August 13, 1888 (25 Stat. at L. 433, chap. 866), are to the same purport.

Two cases arising under the judiciary act [169] of 1789 are cited: Pawlet v. Clark*, 9 Cranch, 292, 3 L. ed. 735, decided March 10, 1815, and Colson v. Lewis, 2 Wheat. 377, 4 L. ed. 266, decided March 14, 1817.

In Pawlet v. Clark it appeared that the parties were citizens of Vermont, and that the cases were pending in the circuit court for the district of Vermont, but the reporter's statement does not show that the case was commenced in the state court. The record on file in this court, however, discloses that such was the fact, and that the cause was removed into the circuit court under the 12th section.

Colson v. Lewis is not well reported. It was a bill in equity in which Lewis and others were complainants and Rawleigh Colson was the sole defendant. It came here on certificate, and the title was "Lewis and others against Colson," and not as given in the report. The case stated shows that the case was removed from the state court into the circuit court of Kentucky, and that the complainants were citizens of Virginia; but the citizenship of defendant was not disclosed. The headnote asserts that the parties were citizens of Kentucky. But the certificate of the clerk, as appears from our files, sets forth "that it is stated in the bill that the deft. Rawleigh Colson is a citizen of the state of Virginia."

In both cases the parties were citizens of the same state, and the cases were originally commenced in the state courts, and the circuit courts acquired jurisdiction by removal. The judiciary act of 1789 vested the circuit courts with original jurisdiction on the ground of diversity of citizenship, but not where title was claimed under grants of different states. Congress manifestly accepted the letter of the Constitution, and, as the judicial power extended to controversies where citizens of the same state claimed title under grants of different states, assumed that cases presenting such controversies would be commenced in the state courts, and provided that those cases might be removed when that fact was made to appear. The particular constitutional provision was treated as not open to a construction which would make it embrace "citizens of different [170] states. Naturally enough, as the reason for the extension of the Federal judicial power to controversies between citizens of different states, and to controversies between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants of different states, was in substance the same. 2 Story, Const. § 1696.

And when the act of 1875 enlarged the original jurisdiction, no view to the contrary was indicated.

Ayres v. Polsdorfer, 187 U. S. 585, 47 L. ed. 314, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 196, was an action of ejectment brought in the circuit court by citizens of one state against those of another, and the case, having gone to judgment, was carried to the circuit court of appeals, and the judgment affirmed. A writ of error from this court was then sought to be sustained because, as was contended, the evidence disclosed, though the pleadings did not, that the parties claimed under grants of different states. But we held that if the emergence of such a question might have justified taking the case directly to this court, having gone to the court of appeals, it could not, after judgment, then be brought here.

As Congress has not conferred jurisdiction on the circuit courts over controversies between citizens of different states because, apart from diversity of citizenship, they may have claimed title by grants from different states, even if it had power to do so, which is not conceded, the result is that the appeal must be dismissed.

*MRS BEULAH SCHWEER and J. C. Nor-[171] man, Appts.,
v.

J. C. BROWN, Trustee for G. H. Schweer, Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 171, 172.)

Direct appeal to Federal Supreme Court—when jurisdiction is in issue.

A direct appeal from a Federal district court to the Supreme Court cannot be maintained under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, because the jurisdiction of the lower court was questioned, unless it was the jurisdiction of that court as a court of NOTE.—On direct review, in the Federal Supreme Court, of judgments or decrees of the district and circuit courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

the United States that was in issue, and that question is certified to the appellate court.

[No. 162.]

Submitted October 31, 1904. Decided November 7, 1904.

APPPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Arkansas to review a decree requiring the payment to the trustee in bankruptcy of a sum of money as a part of the assets of the bankrupt's estate. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Daniel W. Jones submitted the cause for appellants. Messrs. Harry H. Myers and U. S. Bratton were on his brief.

Mr. Robert E. Wiley submitted the cause for appellee. Mr. George B. Pugh was on his brief.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: This was a summary proceeding in the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Arkansas, in bankruptcy, requiring the payment to the trustee in bankruptcy of the sum of $2,000 as part of the assets of the bankrupt's estate. In return to a rule, one of the respondents alleged that he had paid the money over to the other, and denied the jurisdiction of the court. The other, Mrs. Schweer, denied that she had or ever had had any money belonging or due to the estate, and denied jurisdiction. The matter was heard before a referee, who made findings of fact and conclusions of law, and ordered the return of the money. It was then carried to the district court and there heard de novo. The district court sustained the referee, and entered decree for the payment of the money to the trustee. Thereupon an appeal was taken directly to this court on [172] the *ground that the case fell within the first of the classes of cases enumerated in § 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549]. But that class only includes cases where the question is as to the jurisdiction of courts of the United States as such, and the question has to be certified. That was not the question raised here, and none such was certified. And it is settled that the district court had jurisdiction to determine whether any adverse claim to the money was asserted at the time the petition was filed. Mueiller v. Nugent, 184 U. S. 1, 46 L. ed. 405, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Louisville Trust Co. v. Comingor, 184 U. S. 18, 46 L. ed. 413, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 293.

If the court erred in retaining jurisdiction on the merits, the remedy was by petition to the circuit court of appeals, under § 24b of the bankruptcy law [30 Stat. at L. 553, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3432]. Holden v. Stratton, 191 U. S. 115, 48 L. ed. 116, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 45.

Appeal dismissed.

RICARDO AMADO, Plff. in Err.,
v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 172-176.)

Error to district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico.

1. The review in the Federal Supreme Court of final judgments of the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico is not necessarily confined, by the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 85, chap. 191), § 35, to the class of cases therein described as those where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or an act of Congress is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied, in view of the prior clause of that section, authorizing such review if the case be one which, if determined in a territorial supreme court, may be carried up to the Federal Supreme Court.
2. The claim in a written motion in arrest of judgment or sentence that the indictment did not set forth "an offense under the statutes of the United States" is too indefinite to give the Federal Supreme Court jurisdiction of a writ of error to the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico, under the act of April 12, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 77, 85, chap. 191), § 35, as of a case where the Constitution of the United States or a treaty thereof or an act of Congress was brought in question and the right claimed thereunder denied.

[No. 33.]

Submitted October 25, 1904. Decided November 7, 1904.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a conviction of having unlawfully received and concealed merchandise which had been imported without the payment of the customs duties. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Plaintiff in error submitted the cause on the record.

Assistant Attorney General Purdy submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

The Revised Statutes of the United States provide that "if any person shall fraudulently or knowingly import or bring into the United States, or assist in so doing, any merchandise, contrary to law, or shall receive, conceal, buy, sell, or in any manner facilitate the transportation, concealment, or sale of, such merchandise after importation, knowing the same to have been imported contrary to law, such merchandise shall be forfeited, and the offender shall be fined in any sum not exceeding five thousand dollars nor less than fifty dollars, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding two years, or both." § 3082, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2014.

The act of April 12th, 1900, temporarily providing revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, declares, among other things, that on and after its passage "the same tariffs, customs, and duties shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles imported into Porto Rico from ports other than those of the United States which are required by law to be collected upon articles imported into the United States from foreign countries;" also, that "the statutory laws of the United States not locally inapplicable, except as hereinbefore or hereinafter otherwise provided, shall have the same force and effect in Porto Rico as in the United States, except the internal revenue laws, which, in view of the provisions of section three, shall not have force and effect in Porto Rico." 31 Stat. at L. 77, 80, chap. 191, §§ 2, 14.

[174] *These statutes being in force, the plaintiff in error, Amado, was indicted in the district court of the United States for Porto Rico, upon the charge of having, on May 28th, 1901, unlawfully received, concealed, and facilitated the transportation, concealment, and sale of certain specified quantities of Holland gin, vermouthe, brandy, and Danish beer, theretofore, as the accused well knew, fraudulently imported into Porto Rico, contrary to law, without the payment to the United States of the duties imposed upon such articles.

The accused was duly arraigned, and found guilty by a jury. A motion in arrest of judgment having been overruled, he was sentenced to confinement in the penitentiary of Porto Rico for one year and one day, and to pay a fine of $500. A new trial was denied, and the accused sued out the present writ of error.

In allowing the writ the judge of the district court expressed some doubt whether error would lie, but he resolved the doubt in favor of the defendant.

The government insists that the writ of error should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction in this court to review the judgment below; otherwise, that the judgment should be affirmed.

It is provided by the above act of April 12th, 1900, that the district court of the United States for Porto Rico "shall have, in addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, jurisdiction of all cases cognizant in the circuit courts of the United States, and shall proceed therein in the same manner as a circuit court." 31 Stat. at L. 77, 84, chap. 191, § 34.

The act also provides that writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the supreme court of Porto Rico and the district court of the United States shall be allowed and may be taken to this court "in the same manner and under the same regulations and in the same cases as from the supreme courts of the territories of the United States; and such writs of error and appeal shall be allowed in all cases where *the Constitution of the United States, or [175] treaty thereof, or an act of Congress, is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied." Id. § 35.

The review of the final judgment of the district court of the United States for Porto Rico is not restricted to those cases in which the Constitution, or a treaty of the United States, or an act of Congress, is brought in question and the right claimed under it denied. This construction is too narrow and technical. There may be cases—certainly civil cases—in the United States district court for Porto Rico that do not involve any question arising under the Constitution, or a treaty, or an act of Congress; and yet if the case be one which, if determined in a supreme court of one of the territories of the United States, could be brought here for re-examination, the final judgment could be reviewed by this court, although no right of a distinctly Federal nature was involved. Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149-60, 48 L. ed. 385-388, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247; Hijo v. United States, 194 U. S. 315, 320, 48 L. ed. 994, 995, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727. See Crowley v. United States, 194 U. S. 461, 48 L. ed. 1075, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731. But even this test, if applied here, will not avail the accused; for the statutes regulating the appellate jurisdiction of this court do not authorize a review of the final judgment in a supreme court of one of the territories of the United States in a criminal case like this one.

Can our jurisdiction be sustained by reference to the words, in the Porto Rico act, "in all cases where the Constitution of the United States, or a treaty thereof, or an act of Congress, is brought in question and the right claimed thereunder is denied?" We must answer this question in the negative. The nearest approach to a claim of specific right under the Constitution, or a treaty of the United States, or under an act of Congress, was when the accused, in his written motion to arrest the judgment or sentence, insisted that the indictment did not set forth "an offense under the statutes of the United States." But that language amounted to nothing more, in legal effect, than a plea of not guilty, or a demurrer upon the general ground that the indictment [176] did not state enough to *show an offense. It was not an assertion of any particular right under the Constitution, or under any treaty, or under an act of Congress, which would be denied to him if the prosecution was sustained. His contention was only that he was not subject to criminal prosecution by reason of anything set forth in the indictment. The indictment was plainly sufficient under the statute prescribing the offense charged, and the objections to it were too indefinite to meet the requirements of the act of 1900, and make the case one which, by that act, could be brought to this court for review. Unless the case was one in which the judgment could be reviewed here, then such judgment would be final, and not subject to review; for no case determined in the United States court for Porto Rico can be carried to a circuit court of appeals. We said, in Royal Ins. Co. v. Martin, 192 U. S. 149, 160, 48 L. ed. 385, 388, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247, 250, that "Congress did not intend that any connection should exist between the United States court for Porto Rico and any circuit court of appeals established under the act of 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 826, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 547]."

The writ of error must be dismissed for want of jurisdiction in this court, and it is so ordered.

RICHARD C. CRAWFORD et al., Plffs. *in Err.,
v.

JOHN E. BURKE.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 176-194.)

Bankruptcy — provable debts — discharge.

1. A claim arising out of the conversion by stockbrokers of shares purchased and held by them on a customer's account, charging him with commission and interest, and crediting him with amounts received as margins, is provable under the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), § 63a, as a debt "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied."
2. Only such debts created by the fraud of a bankrupt as were so created while he was acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity are excepted from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy by the act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 550, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3428). § 17, subd. 4, since to hold that the language of this subdivision, making an exception in favor of debts "created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer, or in any fiduciary capacity," includes all debts fraudulently contracted, would render meaningless the exception in subd. 2, in favor of such claims for fraud as have been reduced to judgment.

3. A creditor, by electing to bring an action in trover, as for a fraudulent conversion, does not deprive his debt of its provable character under the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), § 63a, where it is "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied," in view of the recognition of the provable character of claims for fraud in general, inferable from the exception from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy which § 17 of that act makes in favor of claims for fraud which have been reduced to judgment, or which originated in the bankrupt's acts while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity.

[No. 22.]

Argued April 25, 26, 1904. Decided November 7, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Court in and for the First District of that State, which had in turn affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Cook County in favor of plaintiff in an action in trover in which defendants had set up their discharge in bankruptcy as a defense. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 201 Ill. 581, 66 N. E. 833.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action in trover instituted September 10, 1897, in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, by Burke against Crawford & Valentine, plaintiffs in error, to recover damages for the wilful and fraudulent conversion of certain reversionary interests of the plaintiff in 550 shares of Metropolitan Traction stock.

There were ten counts in the declaration. In each of the first five counts it was alleged that the defendant firm of Crawford & Valentine were stockbrokers and dealers in investment securities; that plaintiff employed the defendants as his brokers and agents to buy, hold, and carry stocks for him, subject to his order; that defendants had in their possession, or under their control, certain shares of the capital stock of the Metropolitan Traction Company, which they were holding as a pledge and security for the amount due them from the plaintiff on said stock; that defendants wrongfully, wilfully, and fraudulently, and without his knowledge or consent, sold said shares of stock, and wilfully and fraudulently, and with intent to cheat and defraud the plaintiff, converted plaintiff's reversionary interest in said stock to their use, whereby it was wholly lost.

[178] In each of the last five counts it was alleged that after defendants had wrongfully and fraudulently, and without plaintiff's knowledge or consent, sold the plaintiff's stock, and converted the proceeds of such sales to their own use, they falsely and fraudulently represented to him that they still had the stock on hand and were carrying it for him; that their correspondents in Philadelphia, where the stock had been bought, were calling upon them for further demands or margins, and that it therefore became necessary to call upon the plaintiff to make further payments on the stock in order to comply with their correspondents' demands and to be secured against loss. It was averred in each of said counts that such representations were false and fraudulent, and by means thereof defendants obtained from the plaintiff the aggregate sum of $10,800.

To this declaration defendants pleaded not guilty, upon which issue was joined January 4, 1900, and on May 12, 1900, a jury trial was waived in writing. The case rested without action until January 3, 1901, when defendants filed their separate pleas of pais darrein continuance, setting up that on April 5, 1900, the defendants had received their discharge in bankruptcy, in the district court for the northern district of Illinois, and that plaintiff's claims were provable and not excepted from the operation of such discharge. The plaintiff replied, denying that his claim was provable, and averred that the same was excepted from such operation.

Notwithstanding the plea of pais darrein continuance, the plaintiff introduced evidence and proved the allegations in his declaration, and the amount of damages he had sustained. Defendants were found guilty upon all the counts, and judgment entered against them.

The case was taken to the appellate court, where, it appearing that one of the justices had taken part in the trial of the case below, and that the two remaining justices were unable to agree upon the case, the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed. The judgment of the appellate court was also affirmed by the supreme court of Illinois (201 Ill. 581, 66 N. E. 833), to review which judgment this writ of error was sued out.

Messrs. George Packard and Charles E. Vroman argued the cause, and, with Mr. Harrison Musgrave, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The claim of defendant in error is a provable debt in bankruptcy, under the bankruptcy act of 1898.

Re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Chew, 67 Ill. 383; Elliott v. Jackson, 3 Wis. 649; Staat v. Evans, 35 Ill. 455; Western Assur. Co. v. Towle, 65 Wis. 247, 26 N. W. 106; Dashaway Asso. v. Rogers, 79 Cal. 211, 21 Pac. 742; Re Filer, 125 Fed. 261; Re Silverman, 101 Fed. 219; Collier, Bankr. 338, 344; Beers v. Hamlin, 99 Fed. 695; Re Hilton, 104 Fed. 981; Re Graff, 117 Fed. 343.

As stockholders or factors, plaintiffs in error were not acting in a fiduciary capacity.

Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. 202, 11 L. ed. 236; Neal v. Clark (Neal v. Scruggs) 95 U. S. 704, 24 L. ed. 586; Keime v. Graff, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 7,650; Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 28 L. ed. 565, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Clinton, 5 Biss. 324, Fed. Cas. No. 5,845; Noble v. Hammond, 129 U. S. 68, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Upshur v. Briscoe, 138 U. S. 375, 34 L. ed. 934, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Austill v. Crawford, 7 Ala. 340; Woolsey v. Cade, 54 Ala. 383, 25 Am. Rep. 711; Sanders v. Sanders, 56 Ark. 588, 20 S. W. 517; Chipley v. Frierson, 18 Fla. 642; Georgia R. Co. v. Cubbedge, 75 Ga. 323; Du Pont v. Beck, 81 Ind. 274; Phillips v. Russell, 42 Me. 361; Hayman v. Pond, 7 Met. 330; Halpin v. May, 100 Mass. 499; Cronan v. Cotting, 104 Mass. 245, 6 Am. Rep. 232; Woodward v. Towne, 127 Mass. 42, 34 Am. Rep. 337; Green v. Chilton, 57 Miss. 599, 34 Am. Rep. 483; Gibson v. Gorman, 44 N. J. L. 327; Palmer v. Hussey, 87 N. Y. 308; Lawrence v. Harrington, 122 N. Y. 408, 25 N. E. 406; Mulock v. Byrnes, 129 N. Y. 25, 29 N. E. 244; Bissell v. Couchaine, 15 Ohio, 64; Curtis v. Waring, 92 Pa. 109; Scott v. Porter, 93 Pa. 40, 39 Am. Rep. 719; Pankey v. Nolan, 6 Humph. 155; Hammond v. Noble, 57 Vt. 200; Slayton v. Wells, 66 Vt. 63, 28 Atl. 632; Wilson v. Kirby, 88 Ill. 570; Svanoe v. Jurgens, 144 Ill. 507, 33 N. E. 955; Shipherd v. Furness, 153 Ill. 590, 39 N. E. 1096; Pierce v. Shippee, 90 Ill. 376, 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law 2d ed. p. 781; Re Basch, 97 Fed. 761; Bracken v. Milner, 104 Fed. 522.

The clause "fraud," etc., used in subd. 4 of § 17 of the bankruptcy act, is limited and restricted by the qualifying clause "while acting in a fiduciary capacity."

There being no fiduciary relation between the parties, the debt is not within the exception, and hence is barred.

Re Rhutassel, 96 Fed. 599; Re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69; Re Lewensohn, 99 Fed. 74; Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, 111 Fed. 361; Gee v. Gee, 84 Minn. 384, 87 N. W. 1116; Re Bullis, 68 App. Div. 508, 73 N. Y. Supp. 1048; Allen v. Ferguson, 18 Wall. 1, 21 L. ed. 854.

"Fraud," as used in the act, means positive fraud involving moral turpitude,—not constructive fraud, or fraud in law. Conversion by one in lawful possession of property is not fraud within the meaning of the bankruptcy act. Hence the claim of defendant in error does not fall within the meaning of the term "fraud," as there used. And on this point the entire evidence is properly before the court on the plea puis and the replication thereto.

Chitty, Pl. 246; Clough v. Shepherd, 31 N. H. 490; Teel v. Fonda, 4 Johns. 304; Neal v. Clark (Neal v. Scruggs) 95 U. S. 704, 24 L. ed. 586; Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 28 L. ed. 565, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Noble v. Hammond, 129 U. S. 68, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Upshur v. Briscece, 138 U. S. 365, 34 L. ed. 931, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Keime v. Graff, 17 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 319, Fed. Cas. No. 7,650; Bracken v. Milner, 104 Fed. 522; Burnham v. Pidcock, 58 App. Div. 273, 68 N. Y. Supp. 1009; Re Benedict, 37 Misc. 230, 75 N. Y. Supp. 165; Re Gaylord, 113 Fed. 131; Scott v. Porter, 93 Pa. 38, 39 Am. Rep. 726; Watertown Carriage Co. v. Hall, 66 App. Div. 84, 72 N. Y. Supp. 466; Crosby v. Miller, 25 R. I. 172, 55 Atl. 328; Western Union Cold Storage Co. v. Hurd, 116 Fed. 442.

The case made by defendant in error shows that there was no fraudulent intent or positive fraud on the part of plaintiffs in error, and that the relations between the parties were purely contractual, and therefore not responsive to the counts either for conversion or deceit.

Markham v. Jaudon, 41 N. Y. 239; Wood v. Hayes, 15 Gray, 375; Re Swift, 105 Fed. 493; Covell v. Loud, 135 Mass. 41, 46 Am. Rep. 446; Weston v. Jordan, 168 Mass. 401, 47 N. E. 133; Corbett v. Underwood, 83 Ill. 324, 25 Am. Rep. 392.

The evidence shows that the transactions out of which the claim of defendant in error arises were of a gambling character, and illegal and void at common law and under the statute. The court may, at any stage, when it appears that the matter involved is forbidden by public policy or is against public morality, decline to consider a claim so founded, regardless of the pleadings.

Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 38, 25 Am. 195 U. S.

Rep. 349; Soby v. People, 31 Ill. App. 242; Cothran v. Ellis, 125 Ill. 506, 16 N. E. 646; Schneider v. Turner, 130 Ill. 39, 6 L. R. A. 164, 22 N. E. 497; Oscanyon v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539; Jamicson v. Wallace, 167 Ill. 396, 59 Am. St. Rep. 302, 47 N. E. 762; Martin Emerich Outfitting Co. v. Siegel, C. & Co. 108 Ill. App. 364.

Mr. John E. Burke in propria persona argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The claims of defendant in error were claims for unliquidated damages arising out of torts; they were claims for damages occasioned by positive fraud; they were not provable in bankruptcy, and therefore were not barred by the discharge of plaintiffs in error.

Collier, Bankr. ed. 1900, p. 385; Lowell, Bankr. pp. 487, 488; Re Yates, 114 Fed. 365; Re Hirschman, 104 Fed. 69; Re Big Meadows Gas Co. 113 Fed. 974, 7 Am. Bankr. Rep. 697; Old Colony Boot & Shoe Co. v. Parker S. A. Co. 183 Mass. 557, 67 N. E. 870; Watertown Carriage Co. v. Hall, 75 App. Div. 201, 77 N. Y. Supp. 1028.

If defendant in error might have waived the fraud and sued in assumpsit for money had and received, he did not see fit to do so. He was under no obligation to waive the fraud and base his claims upon an implied contract. Not having done so, his claims were not provable.

Williamson v. Dickens, 27 N. C. (5 Ired. L.) 259; Hughes v. Oliver, 8 Pa. 426; Graham v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 53 Wis. 473, 10 N. W. 609; Bradner v. Strang, 89 N. Y. 299, 114 U. S. 555, 560, 29 L. ed. 248, 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038.

If the claims were not provable, the discharge was not a bar, and the judgment should be affirmed.

Collier v. Stanbrough, 6 How. 21, 12 L. ed. 327; Dewey v. Des Moines, 173 U. S. 197, 198, 43 L. ed. 666, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 636, 22 L. ed. 429, 444.

The presumption is that the reading of a statute according to its grammatical construction gives its correct sense. The grammatical construction should be followed unless it will pervert the legislative intent.

Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 2; 26 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 613; City Trust, S. D. & Surety Co. v. Lee, 107 Ill. App. 263, 204 Ill. 69; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray, 382; State v. Jernigan, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 12; Dearborn v. Brookline, 97 Mass. 466; Wetmore v. Wetmore, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 11; Quinn v. Lowell Electric Light Corp. 140 Mass. 106, 3 N. E. 200; Price v.

Price, 10 Ohio St. 316; Hamilton v. The A. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 428; Zimmerman v. Willard, 114 Ill. 364, 2 N. E. 70.

Courts will, in the construction of statutes, for the purpose of arriving at the real meaning and intention of the lawmakers, disregard the punctuation, or repunctuate, if need be, to render the true meaning of the statute.

Price v. Price, 10 Ohio St. 316; Bouvier, Law Dict. 347, 402; Hamilton v. The A. B. Hamilton, 16 Ohio St. 428; Cushing v. Worrick, 9 Gray, 382; Hammock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 105 U. S. 77, 84, 26 L. ed. 1111, 1113; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 32, 34 L. ed. 843, 852, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

Punctuation has a position in the law, though a subordinate one. Being used in the instrument with the intent to make the meaning plainer, it should certainly be considered in court to aid in discovering that meaning.

"Punctuation—How Considered in the Law," 45 Cent. L. J. 229, 236; Albright v. Payne, 43 Ohio St. 8, 1 N. E. 20; Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 32, 34 L. ed. 843, 852, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243.

When an act or part of an act which has received a judicial construction is reenacted in substantially the same terms, that construction must be considered to have the sanction of the legislature, unless the contrary appears. Mere change in the phraseology works no change in the established interpretation thereof, unless it clearly appears that such was the intention of the legislature.

Black, Interpretation of Laws, 161; Bradley v. State, 69 Ala. 318; Huddleston v. Askey, 56 Ala. 218; Posey v. Pressley, 60 Ala. 243; McDonald v. Hovey, 110 U. S. 619, 628, 28 L. ed. 269, 271, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. pp. 181, note 2, 274, note 4; Bishop, Stat. Crimes, §§ 75, 82; Yates's Case, 4 Johns. 318; Dominick v. Michael, 4 Sandf. 374; The Devonshire, 8 Sawy. 209, 13 Fed. 39; Reiche v. Smythe, 13 Wall. 162, 20 L. ed. 566; Willis v. Eastern Trust & Bkg. Co. 169 U. S. 295, 307, 42 L. ed. 752, 758, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 347; Com. v. Hartnett, 3 Gray, 450; State ex rel. Pearson v. Cornell, 54 Neb. 647, 75 N. W. 25.

A discharge in bankruptcy does not release a bankrupt from debts created by his positive fraud involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong.

Re Thomas, 92 Fed. 912; Re Blumberg, 94 Fed. 476, 1 Am. Bankr. Rep. 633; Re Black, 97 Fed. 493; Re Basch, 97 Fed. 761; Re Lewensohn, 99 Fed. 73; Re Steed, 107 Fed. 682; Lowell, Bankr. §§ 433, 488; Collier, Bankr. 3d ed. pp. 200, 202, 345; Bracken v. Milner, 104 Fed. 522; Re Cole, 106 Fed. 837; Frey v. Torrey, 36 Misc. 216, 73 N. Y. Supp. 201, 32 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 386, 75 N. Y. Supp. 40, 175 N. Y. 501, 67 N. E. 1082; Stevens v. Meyers, 72 App. Div. 128, 76 N. Y. Supp. 332; Predmore v. Torrey, 38 Misc. 127, 77 N. Y. Supp. 86; Re Wollock, 120 Fed. 516, 9 Am. Bankr. Rep. 685; Watertown Carriage Co. v. Hall, 176 N. Y. 313, 68 N. E. 629.

Bankrupt laws are enacted with the object and intention of relieving honest men, but not rascals, from the burden of their debts.

Re Silverman, 1 Sawy. 410, Fed. Cas. No. 12,855; Re Dow, 105 Fed. 889; Re Becker, 106 Fed. 54; Turner v. Turner, 108 Fed. 785; Liebke v. Thomas, 116 U. S. 606, 29 L. ed. 745, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 496; Re Scott, 126 Fed. 981; McDonald v. Brown, 23 R. I. 546, 58 L. R. A. 768, 10 Am. Bankr. Rep. 58, 91 Am. St. Rep. 659, 51 Atl. 213; Disler v. McCauley, 35 Misc. 411, 71 N. Y. Supp. 949; Tinker v. Colwell, 193 U. S. 473, 48 L. ed. 754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

A year after this case was put at issue, and upon the opening of the trial, defendants filed their separate pleas puis darrein continuance, setting up their discharge in bankruptcy, and averring that plaintiff's claim was a provable debt, and the discharge a complete defense.

It is a well-settled principle of law, and was so held by the supreme court of Illinois in this case, that a plea puis darrein continuance waives all prior pleas, and amounts to an admission of the cause of the action set up in the plaintiff's declaration. Mount v. Scholes, 120 Ill. 394, 11 N. E. 401; East St. Louis v. Renshaw, 153 Ill. 491, 38 N. E. 1048; Angus v. Chicago Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 Ill. 298, 48 N. E. 946; Kimball v. Huntington, 10 Wend. 675, 25 Am. Dec. 590.

But notwithstanding this, plaintiff was permitted to introduce evidence in proof of the fraud alleged in his declaration; and upon the conclusion of the trial the court found there had been a conversion of plaintiff's reversionary interest in the stock, for which he "had a right to recover in trover," and that it was not such a debt as was barred by the bankruptcy act. Upon appeal to the supreme court it was held that it was not necessary to the judgment to decide whether the allegations of the declaration were admitted by the pleadings, as they were established by the proof which had been adduced *by plaintiff, "and, the propositions[186] held as law on that branch of the case being correct, judgment for plaintiff necessarily follows." That court also held that the case, being one of fraud, was not covered by the defendants' discharge in bankruptcy.

The only Federal question involved in the case is whether the supreme court of Illinois gave the proper effect to the discharge pleaded by the defendants. If plaintiff's claim was not a provable debt, or was expressly excepted from the operation of the discharge, the decision of that court was right; but if it was covered by the discharge, such discharge was a complete defense.

Section 17 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 contains, among other things, the following provisions:

"Sec. 17. A discharge in bankruptcy shall release the bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such as . . . (2) are judgments in actions for frauds, or obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, or for wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, . . . or (4) were created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer, or in any fiduciary capacity." [30 Stat. at L. 550, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3428.]

Under this section, whether the discharge of the defendants in bankruptcy shall operate as a discharge of plaintiff's debt, it not having been reduced to judgment, depends upon the fact whether that debt was "provable" under the bankruptcy act,—that is, susceptible of being proved; second, whether it was or was not created by defendants' fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity.

1. Provable debts are defined by § 63, a copy of which appears in the margin.† Paragraph a of this section includes *debts arising upon contracts, express or implied, and open accounts, as well as for judgments and costs. As to paragraph b, two constructions are possible: It may relate to all unliquidated demands, or only to such as may arise upon such contracts, express or implied, as are covered by paragraph a.

Certainly paragraph b does not embrace debts of an unliquidated character and which in their nature are not susceptible of being liquidated. Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 350, 47 L. ed. 1084, 1092, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757. Whether the effect of paragraph b is to cause an unliquidated claim which is susceptible of liquidation, but is not literally embraced by paragraph a, to be provable in bankruptcy, we are not called upon to decide, as we are clear that the debt of the plaintiff was embraced within the provision of paragraph a, as one "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied," and might have been proved under § 63*a* had plaintiff chosen to waive the tort, and take his place with the other creditors of the estate. He did not elect to do this, however, but brought an action of trover, setting up a fraudulent conversion of his property by defendants. In the first five counts of his declaration he charges a fraudulent conversion of his interest in the stock, and, in the last five counts, that the defendants had induced him to make further payments on such stock in the way of margins, by false and fraudulent representations.

*The question whether the claim thus set[188] forth is barred by the discharge depends upon the proper construction of § 17, which declares that the discharge in bankruptcy relieves the bankrupt from all of his "provable debts," except such as ". . . (2) are judgments in actions for frauds, or obtaining property by false pretenses, or false representations, or for wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, . . . or (4) were created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer, or in any fiduciary capacity."

Do these words apply to all debts created by the fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation of the bankrupt, or only to such as were created while he was acting as an officer or in some fiduciary capacity? The fact that the 2d subdivision of § 17 excepted from the discharge "all judgments in actions for frauds, or of obtaining property by false pretenses, or false representations," indicates quite clearly that, as to frauds in general, it was the intention of Congress only to except from the discharge such as had been re-

†Sec. 63. Debts which may be proved.—(a) Debts of the bankrupt may be proved and allowed against his estate which are (1) a fixed liability, as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition against him, whether then payable or not, with any interest thereon which would have been recoverable at that date, or with a rebate of interest upon such as were not then payable and did not bear interest; (2) due as costs taxable against an involuntary bankrupt who was, at the time of the filing of the petition against him, plaintiff in a cause of action which would pass to the trustee, and which the trustee declines to prosecute after notice; (3) founded upon a claim for taxable costs incurred in good faith by a creditor before the filing of the petition in an action to recover a provable debt; (4) founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied; and (5) founded upon provable debts reduced to judgments after the filing of the petition, and before the consideration of the bankrupt's application for a discharge, less costs incurred and interests accrued after the filing of the petition, and up to the time of the entry of such judgments.

(b) Unliquidated claims against the bankrupt may, pursuant to application to the court, be liquidated in such manner as it shall direct, and may thereafter be proved and allowed against his estate.

duced to judgment, unless they fall within the 4th subdivision, of those created by the fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation of the bankrupt while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity. Unless these words relate back to all the preceding words of the subdivision, namely, the frauds and embezzlements, as well as misappropriations or defalcations, it results that the exception in subd. 2 of all judgments for fraud is meaningless, since such judgments would be based upon a fraud excepted from discharge by subd. 4, whether judgment had been obtained or not.

This conclusion is fortified by reference to corresponding sections of the former bankrupt acts. Thus, by the 1st section of the act of 1841 (5 Stat. at L. 440, chap. 9), the benefits of that act were extended to all persons owing debts "which shall not have been created in consequence of a defalcation as a public officer; or as executor, administrator, guardian, or trustee, or while acting in any other fiduciary capacity." It is entirely [189] clear *that under this section a discharge was not denied to the bankrupt by reason of debts fraudulently contracted, but only to such as were created by his defalcation as an officer, or while acting in a fiduciary capacity.

We may remark here, in passing, that ever since the case of Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. 202, 11 L. ed. 236, this court has held that a commission merchant and factor who sells for others is not indebted in a fiduciary capacity within the bankruptcy acts by withholding the money received for property sold by him. This rule was made under the bankruptcy act of 1841, and has since been repeated many times under subsequent acts. Neal v. Clark, 95 U. S. 708, 24 L. ed. 586; Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 679, 28 L. ed. 567, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Noble v. Hammond, 129 U. S. 68, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Upshur v. Briscoe, 138 U. S. 375, 34 L. ed. 934, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313,—as well as in cases in the state courts, too numerous for citation.

Under the bankruptcy act of 1867 the list of debts excluded from the operation of the discharge was considerably larger. In § 33, Revised Statutes, 5117, it was declared that—

"No debt created by the fraud or embezzlement of the bankrupt, or by his defalcation as a public officer, or while acting in any fiduciary character, shall be discharged under this act; but the debt may be proved, and the dividend thereon shall be a payment on account of said debt." [14 Stat. at L. 533, chap. 176.]

The language of this section is so clear as to require no construction. It is plain and explicit to the effect that the fraud and embezzlement of the bankrupt need not have been committed by him while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary character, and that this character relates only to his defalcation. But, under the act of 1898, there is no such severance in the fourth paragraph as would authorize us to say that the term "fiduciary capacity" did not extend back to the words "fraud, embezzlement, and misappropriation." It was the opinion of the supreme court of Illinois that "a mere change in phraseology, apparently for the sake of brevity, rendering the meaning somewhat obscure, cannot be regarded as showing a legislative intent to depart so radically from precedents established *by previous bank- [190] ruptcy legislation and judicial decisions as to provide that debts created by the fraud or embezzlement of the bankrupt should be released by his discharge in bankruptcy, unless such fraud or embezzlement should be committed while the bankrupt was acting as a public officer, or in a fiduciary capacity."

Our own view, however, is that a change in phraseology creates a presumption of a change in intent, and that Congress would not have used such different language in § 17 from that used in § 33 of the act of 1867, without thereby intending a change of meaning. The view generally taken by the bankruptcy courts has been that the terms "officer" and "fiduciary capacity" extend to all the claims mentioned in paragraph 4, and are not confined to cases of defalcation. Re Rhutassel, 2 N. B. N. Rep. 381, 96 Fed. 599; Re Lewensohn, 99 Fed. 73; Re Hirschman, 2 N. B. N. Rep. 1123, 104 Fed. 69; Re Cole, 3 N. B. N. Rep. 580, 106 Fed. 837; Re Freche, 109 Fed. 620; Hargadine-McKittrick Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, 111 Fed. 361. This is the natural and grammatical reading of the clause.

The cases in the state courts are almost uniformly to the same effect. Thus in J. C. Smith & W. Co. v. Lambert, 69 N. J. L. 487, 55 Atl. 88, the defendant pleaded to an action on a book account his discharge in bankruptcy, to which the plaintiff replied that the cause of action was created by the fraud of the defendant. The supreme court of New Jersey held the replication to be insufficient. "We think," said the court, "that under § 17 of the bankrupt law, to which reference has been made, there is no provision that would except from the discharge the debt upon which the present suit is brought."

In Morse v. Kaufman, 100 Va. 218, 40 S. E. 916, it was pleaded against the discharge that the goods were procured by false pretenses. After holding that the case had not fallen within subd. 2 of § 17, as there was no judgment for fraud, the supreme court of Virginia observed:

[191] "It would seem to be equally clear that the demand of plaintiffs in error is not within the exception of subd. 4 of *§ 17. It is not pretended that the claim was created by the bankrupt's 'fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer, or in any fiduciary capacity.'

"The contention that 'fraud' should be segregated from the qualifying language 'while acting as an officer or in any fiduciary capacity' is without merit. Such interpretation would not only destroy the grammatical construction of the sentence and contravene its plain meaning, but would likewise be inconsistent with paragraph 2 of the same section, that a creditor should have obtained a judgment in an action for fraud in order to override a discharge in bankruptcy."

A like construction was given to subd. 4 by the supreme court of Missouri in Goodman v. Herman, 172 Mo. 344, 60 L. R. A. 885, 72 S. W. 546, by the supreme court of Minnesota in Gee v. Gee, 84 Minn. 384, 87 N. W. 1116, by that of Rhode Island in Crosby v. Miller, 25 R. I. 172, 55 Atl. 328, and by the supreme court of New York, fourth department, in Re Bullis, 68 App. Div. 508, 73 N. Y. Supp. 1047. In this case the question was discussed at considerable length, the court saying:

"If any debt created by fraud, embezzlement, or misappropriation is to be excepted from the application of the statute, then there is no necessity of subd. 2, making a judgment essential to prevent the granting of the discharge under the statute."

We have not overlooked the fact that the New York supreme court of the first department reached a different conclusion in Frey v. Torrey, 70 App. Div. 166, 75 N. Y. Supp. 40, affirmed by the court of appeals in a per curiam opinion, 175 N. Y. 501, 67 N. E. 1082, but, so far as we know, this is the only case that supports the construction given to § 17 by the supreme court of Illinois.

Why an ordinary claim for fraud should be released by the discharge, while a judgment for fraud is not released, is not altogether clear, although this distinction may have been created to avoid the necessity of going into conflicting evidence upon the subject of fraud; while in cases of judgments [192] for *frauds the judgment itself would be evidence of the fraudulent character of the claim. If a creditor has a claim against a debtor for goods sold which would ordinarily be covered by a discharge in bankruptcy, he is strongly tempted to allege, and if possible to prove, that the goods were purchased under a misrepresentation of the assets of the buyer, and thus to make out a claim for fraud which would not be discharged in bankruptcy. It was probably this contingency which induced Congress to enact that an alleged fraud of this kind should be reduced to judgment before it could be set up in bar of a discharge.

The intent of Congress in changing the language of the act of 1867 seems to have been to restore the act of 1841, which, as already observed, extended the benefits of the law to every debtor who had not been guilty of defalcation as a public officer or in a fiduciary capacity, the act of 1898 adding, however, to the excepted class those against whom a judgment for fraud had been obtained.

Some stress is laid by the supreme court of Illinois upon the punctuation of subd. 4, § 17, presumably upon the insertion of a comma after the word "misappropriation," thereby indicating a severance of that which precedes from that which follows. While we do not deny that punctuation may shed some light upon the construction of a statute (Joy v. St. Louis, 138 U. S. 1, 32, 34 L. ed. 843, 852, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 243), we do not think it is entitled to weight in this case. In the enumeration of persons or things in acts of Congress it has been the custom for many years to insert a comma before the final "and" or "or" which precedes the last thing enumerated, apparently for greater precision, but without special significance. So little is punctuation a part of statutes that courts will read them with such stops as will give effect to the whole. Doe ex dem. Willis v. Martin, 4 Term Rep. 65, 2 Revised Rep. 324; Hammock v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 105 U. S. 77, 84, 26 L. ed. 1111, 1113; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 628, 33 L. ed. 1080, 1083, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496, 21 L. ed. 728.

2. But it is strenuously insisted by the plaintiff that a claim *for the conversion of [193] personal property is not within the scope of § 17, because it is not a "provable debt" within the definition of § 63a. Did the latter section stand alone, there would be some ground for saying that a claim, though "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied," would not be a provable debt, if plaintiff elected to treat the conversion as fraudulent, and sue in trover, though he might have chosen to waive the tort, and bring an action for a balance due on account. An early English case (Parker v. Crole, 5 Bing. 63, 2 Moore & P. 150) is cited to the effect that the operation of the discharge is determined by the election of the creditor to sue in assumpsit or case. A like ruling was made in certain cases under the bankruptcy acts of 1841 and 1867. Williamson v. Dickens, 27 N. C. (15 Ired. L.) 259; Hughes v. Oliver, 8 Pa. 426; Bradner v. Strang, 89 N. Y. 299-307.

But we think that § 63a, defining provable debts, must be read in connection with § 17, limiting the operation of discharges, in which the provable character of claims for fraud in general is recognized, by excepting from a discharge claims for frauds which have been reduced to judgment, or which were committed by the bankrupt while acting as an officer, or in a fiduciary capacity. If no fraud could be made the basis of a provable debt, why were certain frauds excepted from the operation of a discharge? We are, therefore, of opinion that if a debt originates or is "founded upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied," it is provable against the bankrupt's estate, though the creditor may elect to bring his action in trover, as for a fraudulent conversion, instead of in assumpsit, for a balance due upon an open account. It certainly could not have been the intention of Congress to extend the operation of the discharge under § 17 to debts that were not provable under § 63a. It results from the construction we have given the latter section that all debts originating upon an open account, or upon a contract, express or implied, are provable, though plaintiff elect to bring his action for fraud.

[194] *In the case under consideration defendants purchased, under the instructions of the plaintiff, certain stocks, and opened an account with him, charging him with commission and interest, and crediting him with amounts received as margins. Subsequently, and without the knowledge of the plaintiff, they sold these stocks, and thereby converted them to their own use. Without going into the details of the facts, it is evident that the plaintiff might have sued them in an action on contract, charging them with the money advanced and with the value of the stock; or in an action of trover, based upon their conversion. For reasons above given, we do not think that his election to sue in tort deprived his debt of its provable character, and that, as there is no evidence that the frauds perpetrated by the defendants were committed by them in an official or fiduciary capacity, plaintiff's claim against them was discharged by the proceedings in bankruptcy.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Illinois is therefore reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

ANDREW J. AIKENS, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WISCONSIN. (No. 3.)

ALBERT HUEGIN, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WISCONSIN. (No. 4.)

MELVIN A. HOYT, Plff. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF WISCONSIN. (No. 5.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 194-207.)

Constitutional law—validity of legislation punishing combining to effect malicious injury.

Rights under U. S. Const. 14th Amend. are not infringed by the provisions of Wis. Stat. 1898, § 4466a, for the punishment of combining for the purpose of wilfully or maliciously injuring another in his business, as applied to a combination of newspaper managers maliciously to injure a rival paper by agreeing to refuse space to advertisers who should pay the increased rate fixed by such rival, except at a corresponding increase, but to permit those to advertise in their papers at the old rate who should refuse to pay their rival the new rate, whatever may be the force of the constitutional objection if the statute be construed to embrace combining to effect wilful, as distinguished from malicious, injury.

[Nos. 3, 4, 5.]

Argued and submitted October 21, 22, 1903.

Ordered for reargument May 31, 1904. Re-argued and submitted October 17, 18, 1904. Decided November 7, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin to review a judgment affirming convictions in the Municipal Court of Milwaukee County, in that State, of violations of a statute prohibiting combining for the purpose of wilfully or maliciously injuring another in his business. Affirmed. See same case below, 113 Wis. 419, 89 N. W. 1135.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. W. H. Timlin and George D. Van Dyke argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error in Nos. 3 and 4:

The constitutionality of a statute is to be tested not only by what has been declared criminal under it, but by what may be so declared; for a criminal statute cannot be used as a drag net to ensnare the guilty and the innocent, leaving the latter to extricate themselves as they can.

Trade-Mark Cases (United States v. Steffens) 100 U. S. 82, 25 L. ed. 550; Montana Co. v. St. Louis Min. & Mill. Co. 152 U. S. 170, 38 L. ed. 400, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 506; Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289; Re Ah Jow, 29 Fed. 181.

NOTE.—On the effect of bad motive to make actionable what would otherwise not be—see note to Passaic Print Works v. Elv & W. Dry-Goods Co. 62 L. R. A. 673.

Not only does the Wisconsin statute as construed, by the Wisconsin supreme court, subject to criminal prosecution those who enter into an ordinary partnership to compete in trade and win away customers from another,—at least provided a jury find their intentions in doing so to be malicious,—but it makes criminal many agreements in trade competition, approved and found to be a lawful exercise of the right of liberty to contract, by many other eminent courts.

Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 110 Fed. 816; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 21 Q. B. Div. 544, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598 [1892] A. C. 25; Orr v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 12 La. Ann. 255, 68 Am. Dec. 770; Hunt v. Simonds, 19 Mo. 583; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Docter v. Riedel, 96 Wis. 158, 37 L. R. A. 580, 65 Am. St. Rep. 40, 71 N. W. 119; Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 50 W. Va. 611, 56 L. R. A. 804, 88 Am. St. Rep. 895, 40 S. E. 591; Dueber Watch-Case Mfg. Co. v. E. Howard Watch & Clock Co. 14 C. C. A. 14, 35 U. S. App. 16, 66 Fed. 637; Re Grice, 79 Fed. 627; Adler v. Fenton, 24 How. 407-413, 16 L. ed. 696-698; Macauley Bros. v. Tierney, 19 R. I. 255, 37 L. R. A. 455, 61 Am. St. Rep. 770, 33 Atl. 1; Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Hollis (Bohn Mfg. Co. v. Northwestern Lumbermen's Asso.) 54 Minn. 223, 21 L. R. A. 337, 40 Am. St. Rep. 319, 55 N. W. 1119.

There is a proper and lawful competitive motive in imposing a burden or differential against those customers who patronize a competitor, or, what is the same thing, in offering lower prices, or any other advantage to those customers who give the associated traders their sole patronage.

People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 604, 43 L. ed. 300, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Scottish v. Glasgow Fleshers, 35 Scot. L. R. 645; Dueber Watch-Case Mfg. Co. v. E. Howard Watch & Clock Co. 14 C. C. A. 14, 35 U. S. App. 16, 66 Fed. 637; Bowen v. Matheson, 14 Allen, 499.

Liberty to contract involves the right to make or refuse to make lawful contracts without any inquiry into the motive of their making or refusal.

Coffeyville Vitriified Brick & Tile Co. v. Perry (Kan.) 66 L. R. A. 185, 76 Pac. 848; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Krcutzberg, 114 195 U. S.

Wis. 530, 58 L. R. A. 748, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Cooley, Torts, p. 278; Wallace v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 94 Ga. 732, 22 S. E. 579; People v. Warren, 13 Mise. 615, 34 N. Y. Supp. 942; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; State v. Loomis, 115 Mo. 307, 21 L. R. A. 789, 22 S. W. 350; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Millett v. People, 117 Ill. 294, 57 Am. Rep. 869, 7 N. E. 631; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 52 L. R. A. 283, 80 Am. St. Rep. 176, 58 N. E. 1007; Block v. Schwartz, 27 Utah, 387, 65 L. R. A. 308, 76 Pac. 22; Street v. Varney Electrical Supply Co. 160 Ind. 338, 61 L. R. A. 154, 98 Am. St. Rep. 325, 66 N. E. 895; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Cornell, 110 Fed. 816; Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Carroll, 125 Fed. 121; State v. Dalton, 22 R. I. 77, 48 L. R. A. 775, 84 Am. St. Rep. 818, 46 Atl. 234; State v. Santce, 53 L. R. A. 763, and note, 111 Iowa, 1, 82 Am. St. Rep. 222, 82 N. W. 445.

The statute denies the equal protection of the law.

Cote v. Murphy, 159 Pa. 420, 23 L. R. A. 135, 39 Am. St. Rep. 686, 28 Atl. 190; Connolly v. Union Seiver Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; Mathews v. People, 202 Ill. 389, 63 L. R. A. 73, 95 Am. St. Rep. 241, 67 N. E. 28; Schoolcraft v. Louisville & N. R. Co. (Louisville Safety Vault & T. Co. v. Louisville & N. R. Co.) 14 L. R. A. 579, and note, 92 Ky. 233, 17 S. W. 567.

Mr. S. S. Gregory argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Conrad H. Poppenhusen and Joseph L. McNab, filed a brief for plaintiff in error in No. 5:

The right to do that with which the parties here accused stand charged is secured beyond state interference.

State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6 Atl. 354; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; People v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 58 Ark. 407, 23 L. R. A. 264, 41 Am. St. Rep. 109, 25 S. W. 75; Thomas v. Hot Springs, 34 Ark. 553, 36 Am. Rep. 24; State v. Scougal, 3 S. D. 55, 15 L. R. A. 477, 44 Am. St. Rep. 756, 51 N. W.

858; Slaughter-House Cases (Butchers' Benev. Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co.) 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Intoxicating-Liquor Cases, 25 Kan. 751, 37 Am. Rep. 284; State v. Fisher, 52 Mo. 174; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 377, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; Wallace v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 94 Ga. 732, 22 S. E. 579; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 163, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Re Ah Jow, 29 Fed. 181; Braccville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Gillespie v. People, 188 Ill. 176, 52 L. R. A. 283, 80 Am. St. Rep. 176, 58 N. E. 1007; Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454; Bailey v. People, 190 Ill. 28, 54 L. R. A. 838, 83 Am. St. Rep. 116, 60 N. E. 98; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 580, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Shaver v. Pennsylvania Co. 71 Fed. 931.

The statute says nothing whatever about malicious injury. It does very plainly and clearly declare that two or more who "wilfully or maliciously" combine to injure shall be punished. "Wilfully" means intentionally, and is distinguished from "maliciously" in that it does not import an evil mind or intent.

2 Bouvier, Law Dict.

It is not aimed, apparently, at malicious combination, at wrongful combination, at combination such as the court holds may be prohibited; but absolutely at all concert of action or co-operation entered into knowingly to injure the business of another and build up that of those undertaking it. So the Wisconsin court below holds, and, no doubt, this court must take the statute as thus construed.

Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557-596, 30 L. ed. 244-257, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4.

If this statute, as construed by the court below, includes within its prohibitions combinations which are essentially rightful and constitutional, it cannot be sustained as to such a combination as is wrongful and might have been constitutionally forbidden by this statute had its prohibitions been limited only to such or similar combinations. This is not an instance where it is possible to say a statute is valid in part and void in part.

Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 30 L. ed. 766, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656, 763.

Mr. James G. Flanders argued the cause, and, with Mr. Lafayette M. Sturdevant, filed a brief for defendant in error in Nos. 3 and 4.

Plaintiffs in error can have no proper concern with the alternative part of the statute, which was separable and distinct and was in no wise applied to them.

Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 28, 43, 44 L. ed. 657, 663, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Clark v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136.

If the statute, as declared by the legislature and the courts, as to the class of combinations to which it was intended to apply, is constitutional, it is not made unconstitutional because improperly applied to a specific case.

Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023; Re Storti, 109 Fed. 807.

Whether a combination like the one in question might lawfully have been entered into under the common law, or not, it is well settled that the legislature of the state has ample power to prohibit it.

State ex rel. Crow v. Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. 152 Mo. 1, 45 L. R. A. 363, 52 S. W. 595.

Any association or combination of persons organized for the purpose of regulating prices is an unlawful combination.

Central Ohio Salt Co. v. Guthrie, 35 Ohio St. 666; Emery v. Ohio Candle Co. 47 Ohio St. 320, 21 Am. St. Rep. 819, 24 N. E. 660; Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 158 Ill. 488, 47 Am. St. Rep. 200, 41 N. E. 188; Jackson v. Akron Brick Asso. 53 Ohio St. 303, 35 L. R. A. 287, 53 Am. St. Rep. 637, 41 N. E. 257; Bishop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 284, 48 Am. St. Rep. 317, 41 N. E. 765; Santa Clara Valley Mill & Lumber Co. v. Hayes, 76 Cal. 387, 9 Am. St. Rep. 211, 18 Pac. 391; Vulcan Powder Co. v. Hercules Powder Co. 96 Cal. 510, 31 Am. St. Rep. 242, 31 Pac. 581; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 100; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; India Bagging Asso. v. Kock, 14 La. Ann. 164; Chapin v. Brown Bros. 83 Iowa, 156, 12 L. R. A. 428, 32 Am. St. Rep. 297, 48 N. W. 1074; People v. Milk Exchange, 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L. R. A. 437, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062; Ford v. Chicago Milk Shippers' Asso. 155 Ill. 166, 27 L. R. A. 298, 39 N. E. 651; Pacific Factor Co. v. Adler, 90 Cal. 110, 25 Am. St. Rep. 102, 27 Pac. 36; Judd v. Harrington, 139 N. Y. 105, 34 N. E. 790; De Witt Wire-Cloth Co. v. New Jersey Wire-Cloth Co. 16 Daly, 529, 14 N. Y. Supp. 277; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists Asso. 50 N. Y. Supp. 1064; Merz Capsule Co. v. United States Capsule Co. 67 Fed. 414; Cravens v. Carter-Crume Co. 34 C. C. A. 479, 92 Fed. 479.

It is not material whether the price is increased, or whether it is reduced, or whether the price fixed is a reasonable one or an unreasonable one.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 551, 64 L. R. A. 738, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577; National Harrow Co. v. E. Bement & Sons, 21 App. Div. 290, 47 N. Y. Supp. 462; Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L. R. A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102; State ex rel. Watson v. Standard Oil Co. 49 Ohio St. 137, 15 L. R. A. 145, 34 Am. St. Rep. 541, 30 N. E. 279; People v. Milk Exchange, 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L. R. A. 437, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062.

Nor is it necessary that the purpose should be to establish a complete monopoly.

United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Texas Standard Oil Co. v. Adoue, 83 Tex. 650, 15 L. R. A. 598, 29 Am. St. Rep. 690, 19 S. W. 274.

By article 5 of the Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, the Federal government is prohibited from depriving any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law. This prohibition upon the Federal government is precisely the same in terms as the prohibition upon the states by the 14th Amendment, under which it is claimed the liberty of plaintiffs in error has been violated. So it must be admitted that the power of the state to pass laws restricting or prohibiting combinations tending to the injury of trade and commerce within the state is at least as broad as the powers of Congress with reference to interstate trade. Decisions of the Federal courts, therefore, arising under the so-called anti-trust law, entitled "An Act to Protect Trade and Commerce against Unlawful Restraint and Monopolies," with reference to the power of Congress to pass such statutes, are strictly in point on the question of the power of the state to enact the statute under consideration.

Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 571, 43 L. ed. 259, 288, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

It may be said that one tendency of this combination was to lower the price of advertising, by making the Journal Company reduce its rates. But it may also be said that its tendency was to raise the price of advertising by making advertisers of a class which might embrace every advertiser in the community pay an increased rate in the three papers controlled by the parties to the combination. If the object was to force the Journal Company out of business, as counsel suggest it may have been, with this object accomplished the combination might readily extend their arbitrary rates to all advertisers.

People v. Milk Exchange, 145 N. Y. 267, 27 L. R. A. 437, 45 Am. St. Rep. 609, 39 N. E. 1062. See also Gibbs v. McNeeley, 60 L. R. A. 152, 55 C. C. A. 70, 118 Fed. 120; United States v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271, 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The enactment of such statutes as the one in question falls strictly within the broad scope of the police powers of the state.

Noyes, Intercorporate Relations, § 409; Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191, 22 Am. Rep. 71; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Knoxville Iron Co. v. Harbison, 183 U. S. 20, 46 L. ed. 60, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Davis v. Massachusetts, 167 U. S. 43, 42 L. ed. 71, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 731; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180, 41 L. ed. 677, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 592, 41 L. ed. 565, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

It is not necessary, in order to uphold the validity of the statute, to demonstrate that combinations of the character of the one in question were illegal at common law; for the power of the legislature to prohibit combinations of this character, in the interest of public policy, goes much further than the common law. But that such combinations were illegal at common law is established beyond question.

Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 284, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L. R. A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. McKenna, 24 Blatchf. 244, 30 Fed. 48; Cassey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3, 12 L. R. A. 193, 45 Fed. 135; Toledo, A. A. & N. M. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Co. 19 L. R. A. 387, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 522, 54 Fed. 730; Thomas v. Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 788, 62 Fed. 803; Hopkins v. Oxley Stave Co. 28 C. C. A. 99, 49 U. S. App. 709, 83 Fed. 912; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881; Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 214, 27 L. R. A. 416, 49 Am. St. Rep. 366, 16 So. 806; Arthur v. Oakes, 25 L. R. A. 414, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 744, 11 C. C. A. 209, 24 U. S. Ap. 239, 63 Fed. 323; Ertz v. Produce Exchange, 79 Minn. 140, 48 L. R. A. 90, 79 Am. St. Rep. 433, 81 N. W. 737; Deltz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111; Dorcunus v. Hennessy, 176 Ill. 608, 43 L. R. A. 797, 68 Am. St. Rep. 203, 52 N. E. 924, 54 N. E. 524; Inter-Ocean Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 184 Ill. 438, 48 L. R. A. 568, 75 Am. St. Rep. 184, 56 N. E. 822.

This court will not undertake to anticipate an erroneous or mistaken application of the statute by declaring it unconstitutional in advance of such application.

State v. Smiley, 65 Kan. 240, 69 Pac. 199.

Mr. Lafayette M. Sturdevant submitted the cause for defendant in error in No. 5.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

These are three writs of error to the supreme court of Wisconsin, brought to set aside convictions and sentences of the plaintiffs in error, the defendants below, upon informations filed by the district attorney. 113 Wis. 419, 89 N. W. 1135. The ground of the writs is that the proceedings violated the rights of the plaintiffs in error under the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. The informations were brought under the Wisconsin statutes of 1898, § 4466a, which impose imprisonment or fine on "any two or more persons who shall combine . . . for the purpose of wilfully or maliciously injuring another in his reputation, trade, business, or profession, by any means whatever," etc. The plaintiffs in error were severally charged [202] with unlawfully combining together *with the intent of wilfully and maliciously injuring The Journal Company, a corporation, and certain persons named, stockholders and officers of the company, in their trade and business. It was alleged that the company was publisher of a newspaper in Milwaukee, and had notified an increase of about 25 per cent in its charges for advertising, and that thereupon the plaintiffs in error, who were managers of other newspapers in the same place, in pursuance of their combination, and with the intent of wilfully, maliciously, and unlawfully injuring The Journal Company and the others named, agreed as follows: If any person should agree to pay the increased rate to The Journal Company, then he should not be permitted to advertise in any of the other three newspapers except at a corresponding increase of rate; but if he should refuse to pay the Journal Company the increased rate, then he should be allowed to advertise in any of the other three papers at the rate previously charged. It was alleged that this conspiracy was carried out, and that much damage to the business of The Journal Company ensued.

The defendant Hoyt demurred to this information, setting up the 14th Amendment. Aikens and Iluegin filed pleas which admitted the combination and intent of injuring The Journal Company, and the resulting damage, but alleged that the combination was entered into in trade competition, and that the parties had the right to make it under the 14th Amendment. The state demurred to the pleas. The demurrer of Hoyt was overruled; those of the state were sustained. The defendants were sentenced and the judgment of the trial court was affirmed by the supreme court of the state on the authority of an earlier decision between the same parties, reported in 110 Wis. 189, 62 L. R. A. 700, 85 N. W. 1046.

The statute, it will be observed, punishes combining for the purpose of wilfully or maliciously injuring another in his business. If it should be construed literally, the word "wilfully" would embrace all injuries intended to follow from the parties' acts, although they were intended only as the necessary means *to ulterior gain for the parties [203] themselves. Taken in that way the word would hit making a new partnership, if it was intended thereby to hurt someone's else business by competition. We shall not consider whether that branch of the statute, so construed, could be sustained, and express no opinion about it. The supreme court of Wisconsin has intimated that a narrower interpretation will be adopted, and in the present case we have to deal only with the other branch, depending on the word "maliciously," as we shall explain in a moment. The last-quoted word we must take as intended to add something to the word "wilfully," and we can do so only by taking it in its true sense. We interpret "maliciously injuring" to import doing a harm malevolently, for the sake of the harm as an end in itself, and not merely as a means to some further end legitimately desired. Otherwise the phrase would be tautologous, since a wilful injury is malicious in the sense familiar to declarations and indictments, where, indeed, the word means no more than foreseen, or even less than that. A death is caused of malice aforethought if, under the circumstances, known to the actor, the probability of its ensuing from the act done is great and manifest according to common experience. Com. v. Pierce, 138 Mass. 165, 178, 52 Am. Rep. 264; 1 East, P. C. 262. See also Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598, 613.

The informations alleged a combination for the purpose of wilfully and maliciously injuring others, and therefore brought the case within the latter branch of the statute, if there are two, and if "or" in the act is not taken to mean "and." It is true that the plan is set forth, and some argument was spent on whether that plan might or might not be an instrument of ultimate gain. But while that question may have been open when the state court was discussing the evidence warranting a commitment, in 110 Wis. 189, 62 L. R. A. 700, 85 N. W. 1046, none such is open here. The malevolent purpose is alleged, it is admitted by the demurrer, it is not sufficiently denied by the pleas, whatever we may conjecture would [204] have been done if counsel had had this *decision before them. A purely malevolent act may be done even in trade competition.

We come, then, to the question whether there is any constitutional objection to so much of the act as applies to this case. It has been thought by other courts as well as the supreme court of Wisconsin that such a combination, followed by damage, would be actionable even at common law. It has been considered that, prima facie, the intentional infliction of temporal damages is a cause of action, which, as a matter of substantive law, whatever may be the form of pleading, requires a justification if the defendant is to escape. Mogul S. S. Co. v. McGregor, L. R. 23 Q. B. Div. 598, 613, [1892], A. C. 25, 61 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 295, 66 L. T. N. S. 1, 40 Week. Rep. 337, 7 Asp. Mar. L. Cas. 120, 56 J. P. 101. If this is the correct mode of approach, it is obvious that justifications may vary in extent, according to the principle of policy upon which they are founded, and that while some—for instance, at common law, those affecting the use of land—are absolute (Bradford v. Pickles [1895], A. C. 587), others may depend upon the end for which the act is done. Moran v. Dunphy, 177 Mass. 485, 487, 52 L. R. A. 115, 83 Am. St. Rep. 289, 59 N. E. 125; Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 51 L. R. A. 339, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 57 N. E. 1011; Squires v. Wason Mfg. Co. 182 Mass. 137, 140, 141, 65 N. E. 32. See cases cited in 62 L. R. A. 673. It is no sufficient answer to this line of thought that motives are not actionable, and that the standards of the law are external. That is true in determining what a man is bound to foresee, but not necessarily in determining the extent to which he can justify harm which he has foreseen. Quinn v. Leathem [1901], A. C. 495, 524, 70 L. J. P. C. N. S. 76, 85 L. T. N. S. 289, 50 Week. Rep. 139, 65 J. P. 708.

Whether, at common law, combination would make conduct actionable which would be lawful in a single person, it is unnecessary to consider. Quinn v. Leathem [1901], A. C. 495, 70 L. J. P. C. N. S. 76, 85 L. T. N. S. 289, 50 Week. Rep. 139, 65 J. P. 708. We are aware, too, that a prevailing opinion in England makes motives immaterial, although it is probable that in Allen v. Flood [1898], A. C. 1, 94, 67 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 119, 77 L. T. N. S. 717, 46 Week. Rep. 258, 62 J. P. 595, the jury were instructed, as in Temperton v. Russell [1893], 1 Q. B. 715, 719, 62 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 412, 4 Reports, 376, 69 L. T. N. S. 78, 41 Week. Rep. 565, 57 J. P. 676, in such a way that their finding of malice meant no more than that the defendant had acted with foresight of the harm which he would inflict, *as a means to an [205] end. Quinn v. Leathem [1901], A. C. 495, 514. However these things may be, we have said enough to show that there is no anomaly in a statute, at least which punishes a combination such as is charged here. It has been held that even the free use of land by a single owner for purely malevolent purposes may be restrained constitutionally, although the only immediate injury is to a neighboring landowner. Rideout v. Knox, 148 Mass. 368, 2 L. R. A. 81, 12 Am. St. Rep. 560, 19 N. E. 390. Whether this decision was right or not, when it comes to the freedom of the individual, malicious mischief is a familiar and proper subject for legislative repression. Com. v. Walden, 3 Cush. 558. Still more are combinations for the purpose of inflicting it. It would be impossible to hold that the liberty to combine to inflict such mischief, even upon such intangibles as business or reputation, was among the rights which the 14th Amendment was intended to preserve. The statute was assumed to be constitutional in Arthur v. Oakes, 25 L. R. A. 414, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 744, 11 C. C. A. 209, 24 U. S. App. 239, 63 Fed. 310, 325, 326.
195 U. S.

But if all these general considerations be admitted, it is urged, nevertheless, that the means intended to be used by this particular combination were simply the abstinence from making contracts; that a man's right so to abstain cannot be infringed on the ground of motives; and further, that it carries with it the right to communicate that intent to abstain to others, and to abstain in common with them. It is said that if the statute extends to such a case it must be unconstitutional. The fallacy of this argument lies in the assumption that the statute stands no better than if directed against the pure nonfeasance of singly omitting to contract. The statute is directed against a series of acts, and acts of several,—the acts of combining, with intent to do other acts. "The very plot is an act in itself." Mulcahy v. Queen, L. R. 3 H. L. 306, 317. But an act which, in itself, is merely a voluntary muscular contraction, derives all its character from the consequences which will follow it under the circumstances in which it was done. When the acts consist of making a combination calculated to cause temporal [206] damage, the power to punish such acts, when done maliciously, cannot be denied because they are to be followed and worked out by conduct which might have been lawful if not preceded by the acts. No conduct has such an absolute privilege as to justify all possible schemes of which it may be a part. The most innocent and constitutionally protected of acts or omissions may be made a step in a criminal plot, and if it is a step in a plot, neither its innocence nor the Constitution is sufficient to prevent the punishment of the plot by law.

It was urged farther that to make a right depend upon motives is to make it depend upon the whim of a jury, and to deny the right. But it must be assumed that the constitutional tribunal does its duty, and finds facts only because they are proved. The power of the legislature to make the fact of malice material we think sufficiently appears from what we already have said.

Finally, it is argued that the supreme court of Wisconsin would hold that the statute extends to acts of which the motives were mixed, and which were done partly from disinterested malevolence and partly from a hope of gain. If so, it is said, the statute would be open to all the objections at which we have hinted in dealing with the word "wilfully." The supreme court did use some language which looked that way, but we consider it to have decided that the statute would be confined to combinations with intent to do wrongful harm. 110 Wis. 193, 260, 62 L. R. A. 700, 85 N. W. 1046. Thus limited, on whatever ground, the statute would punish only combinations of a kind for which no justification could be offered and those which were taken out of the justification by the motive with which they were made. We see no sufficient reason to believe that the court will go farther, or construe the act in such a way as to raise questions which we need not go into here. Therefore it is unnecessary to consider whether, on a more literal construction, the portion dealing with malicious intent could be separated from that which deals with the purpose of merely wilful injury, and saved, [207] even if the latter were held to go too far. Probably the two phrases will be read together and the statute made unquestionable as a whole.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice White, dissenting:

Not being able to concur in the conclusion of the court that the opinion of the supreme court of Wisconsin has affixed to the statute of that state a much narrower meaning than the text of the statute imports, and thinking, on the contrary, that not only such text, but the construction of the statute adopted by the supreme court of Wisconsin, operates to deprive the citizen of a lawful right to contract, protected by the 14th Amendment, I dissent.

MARIA F. THOMAS and George Folsom
v.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE OHIO
STATE UNIVERSITY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 207-218.)

Federal courts—jurisdiction—sufficiency of allegations to show diverse citizenship.

1. An allegation that the defendant, the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University, is a citizen of and domiciled in that state, and was created by and exists under certain designated laws of that state, with power to sue and be sued, will be held not sufficiently to aver that such body is an Ohio corporation, within the jurisdictional rule of the Federal courts imputing to the members of a corporation citizenship in the state creating it, where the statute creating the board has been upheld by the highest court of the state as not conferring and not intended to confer corporate powers in violation of a prohibition in the state Constitution against conferring corporate powers by special act.
2. The citizenship of the individual members of the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University does not sufficiently appear for the purpose of conferring jurisdiction on a Federal circuit court of a suit against such board, from averments that show that the board, while not an Ohio corporation, was created by and exists as an organized body under the laws of that state, although, under the Ohio Constitution, no person can be elected or appointed to any office in the state unless he possesses the qualifications of an elector, and an elector must be a citizen of the state.
3. The jurisdiction of a Federal circuit court on the ground of diverse citizenship over a suit between a citizen of Michigan and the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University will sufficiently appear, so far as the pleadings are concerned, without bringing the several persons constituting the board before the court as defendants, where it is averred that the board was created by and exists as an organized body under the laws of Ohio, with power to sue and be sued by its collective name, if it is also alleged that each individual trustee is a citizen of that state.

NOTE.—As to sufficiency of averments of citizenship to show jurisdiction in Federal courts—see note to Shipp v. Williams, 10 C. C. A. 261.

On citizenship of corporations for purposes of Federal jurisdiction—see notes to Stephens v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 14 L. R. A. 184; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Newcom, 6 C. C. A. 172; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 27 L. ed. U. S. 87; Hope Ins. Co. v. Boardman, 3 L. ed. U. S. 36.

[No. 43.]

Argued and submitted November 3, 1904.
Decided November 14, 1904.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, presenting questions relating to the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Ohio, Eastern Division, on the ground of diverse citizenship, of a suit in which the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University was a defendant. Answered by holding that the Circuit Court was without jurisdiction, with a grant to the Circuit Court of Appeals of leave to authorize such amendment of the bill in the Circuit Court as will show jurisdiction.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., argued the cause, and, with Mr. Joseph Olds, filed a brief for the University:

The real character of an association does not depend upon the name by which it is called.

1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 18; Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Oliver) 10 Wall. 566, 19 L. ed. 1029, 100 Mass. 531; Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. 9, 103.

The board of trustees has all the qualities possessed by corporations generally in this country.

Williams, Real Prop. 17th ed. 347; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 1; Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. 9, 101; 1 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 18.

The jurisdictional rule in the Federal courts extends to all corporations, public as well as private (Cowles v. Mercer County, 7 Wall. 118, 19 L. ed. 86; Ysleta v. Canda, 67 Fed. 6); nor does it matter how the corporation is created, managed, or terminated.

A citizen of the United States, residing in any state of the Union, is a citizen of that state.

Gassies v. Ballou, 6 Pet. 761, 8 L. ed. 573; Boyd v. Nebraska, 143 U. S. 135, 36 L. ed. 103, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Lehman v. McBride, 15 Ohio St. 600.

The members of the board of trustees are officers appointed in the state of Ohio.

State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Wilson, 29 Ohio St. 349; State ex rel. Rupp v. Rust, 4 Ohio C. C. 329; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Adams, 58 Ohio St. 613, 41 L. R. A. 727, 65 Am. St. Rep. 792, 51 N. E. 135; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Kennon, 7 Ohio St. 547.

195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

All things are presumed to be rightly done until the contrary is proved.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 1266, 1267, 1270; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1099; Hayes v. United States, 170 U. S. 637, 42 L. ed. 1174, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Nofire v. United States, 164 U. S. 660, 41 L. ed. 589, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 212.

The governor could not have regularly or legally appointed as a member of said board any person who was not a citizen of Ohio. It was the duty of the senate to refuse to confirm the appointment of anyone not having that qualification. The presumption is that the governor and the senate performed their respective duties, and that the members of the board are citizens of Ohio.

After the amendment to the bill, setting up further jurisdictional facts, no objection to the jurisdiction was made by plea in abatement, or otherwise. Before the court can now hold that there was want of jurisdiction in the circuit court, it must be legally certain of that fact.

Deputron v. Young, 134 U. S. 241, 252, 33 L. ed. 923, 929, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539.

If the defendant had, by pleading, objected to the jurisdiction, the burden of showing that there was not a diversity of citizenship would have rested upon it.

Adams v. Shirk, 55 C. C. A. 25, 117 Fed. 801.

A corporation is not, strictly speaking, a citizen. But for the purposes of suing and being sued in the Federal courts, it is treated as a citizen of the state under whose laws it was created.

Cowles v. Mercer County, 7 Wall. 118, 19 L. ed. 86; Bank of United States v. Deveaux, 5 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 45; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 562, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621.

The board was properly sued under its statutory designation.

Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

If the suit was not instituted in proper form; still, it might be maintained in such defective form unless the defendant objected thereto on that ground.

St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Henson, 7 C. C. A. 349, 19 U. S. App. 169, 58 Fed. 531; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 120, 46 C. C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 41; Story v. Livingston, 13 Pet. 359, 10 L. ed. 200; Carey v. Brown, 92 U. S. 171, 23 L. ed. 469.

The case having been removed to the Federal court upon the defendant's petition, it does not lie in its mouth to claim that that court had no jurisdiction of the case, unless the court from which it was removed had no jurisdiction.

Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S.

569, 40 L. ed. 263, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 120, 46 C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 41.

Mr. J. E. Sater submitted the cause for Thomas and Folsom. Mr. L. F. Sater was with him on the brief:

The act to establish and maintain an agricultural and mechanical college in Ohio (now the Ohio State University) does not constitute the board of trustees therein provided for a corporation.

Neil v. Ohio Agricultural & Mechanical College, 31 Ohio St. 15.

Corporate existence must be positively averred, or must be, as a fact, brought affirmatively into the record.

Desty, Fed. Proc. 9th ed. p. 378; Shiras, Eq. Pr. 2d ed. p. 32; Bates, Fed. Eq. Proc. p. 146, § 125; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451; Piquignot v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 16 How. 104, 14 L. ed. 863; Pennsylvania v. Quicksilver Min. Co. 10 Wall. 553, 19 L. ed. 998; Muller v. Dows, 94 U. S. 444, 24 L. ed. 207; United States Exp. Co. v. Kountze Bros. 8 Wall. 342, 19 L. ed. 457; Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Baack, 2 Abb. U. S. 232, Fed. Cas. No. 9,052. See also 2 Garland & R. Fed. Pr. p. 929; 1 Loveland, Forms on Fed. Proc. p. 230.

Decisions of the highest courts of the state construing its statutes are binding on the Federal courts, although they would put a different construction on them were they first called upon to construe them.

Brannon, 14th Amendment, 397; Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S. 20, 27 L. ed. 359, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Cravens, 178 U. S. 389, 395, 44 L. ed. 1116, 1122, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962; O'Brien v. Wheelock, 95 Fed. 883; Bucher v. Cheshire R. Co. 125 U. S. 555, 31 L. ed. 795, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 974; Randolph v. Quidnick Co. (Jencks v. Quidnick Co.) 135 U. S. 457, 34 L. ed. 200, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 655; Brown v. New Jersey, 175 U. S. 172, 44 L. ed. 119, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Sutherland-Innes Co. v. Evart, 30 C. C. A. 305, 58 U. S. App. 335, 86 Fed. 597; Andrews v. National Foundry & Pipe Works, 36 L. R. A. 139, 22 C. C. A. 110, 46 U. S. App. 281, 76 Fed. 166; Saux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 173 U. S. 99, 107, 43 L. ed. 628, 631, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 158 U. S. 431, 39 L. ed. 1043, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 896; Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 44 L. ed. 1028, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U. S. 398, 42 L. ed. 515, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87; First Nat. Bank v. Chehalis County, 166 U. S. 440, 41 L. ed. 1069, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629; Merchants' &

M. Nat. Bank v. Pennsylvania, 167 U. S. 461, 42 L. ed. 236, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 829; Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 181 U. S. 580, 45 L. ed. 1011, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 729.

A quasi corporation cannot maintain a suit in the Federal courts.

Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

The board of trustees of the Ohio State University does not possess the essential attributes of a corporation.

Walsh v. New York & B. Bridge, 96 N. Y. 427; Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Massachusetts (Liverpool & L. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Oliver) 10 Wall. 566, 19 L. ed. 1029.

If the court finds the board of trustees to be a corporation, it must declare the act of its creation unconstitutional.

School Dist. No. 56 v. St. Joseph F. & M. Ins. Co. 103 U. S. 707, 26 L. ed. 601.

This court should not disturb the policy of Ohio as determined by an unbroken line of legislation and decisions extending over more than half a century.

Chestnut v. Shane, 16 Ohio, 599, 47 Am. Dec. 387; M'Keen v. Delancy, 5 Cranch, 22, 3 L. ed. 25.

Only corporations or natural persons can sue or be sued by their respective names in the United States courts.

Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690; Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. 566, 7 L. ed. 521; Ebbinghaus v. Killian, 1 Mackey, 247; American Steel & Wire Co. v. Wire Drawers' Die Makers' Unions Nos. 1 & 3, 90 Fed. 598; Greer v. Stoller, 77 Fed. 1.

An unincorporated society or company, association or board, has no legal entity distinct from that of its members.

Haskins v. Alcott, 13 Ohio St. 216; Maitoon v. Wentworth, 7 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 639; 22 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 230, 242; Higdon v. Gardner, 2 Ohio C. C. 340; Story, Eq. Pl. § 497; Cooper, Ch. Pl. pp. 164, 165; 1 Chitty, Pl. pp. 18, 19, note; Mitford, Ch. Pl. pp. 40, 41; Lloyd v. Loaring, 6 Ves. Jr. 773. See also Gurd v. Wallace, 7 Dana, 190, 32 Am. Dec. 85; 2 Cook, Corp. 4th ed. p. 947.

If the corporate name is used without an averment of the corporate existence, the citizenship of all the members must be averred, and the suit will then be regarded as the joint suit of the individual persons united together in a corporate body and acting under its corporate name.

Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451; Piquignot v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 16 How. 104, 14 L. ed. 863; Ohio & M.

R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Black, 295, 296, 17 L. ed. 130.

It is not sufficient that jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively from the averment.

Wolfe v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. 148 U. S. 389, 37 L. ed. 493, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 602.

There must appear upon the record, not that the board is composed of a citizen, but of citizens; not that the single individual entity, the board, is or consists of a single citizen, but that it is composed of a number of citizens.

Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227, 15 L. ed. 896.

The members of the association must be brought into the record as parties by positive averment.

Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 44 L. ed. 842, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is before us upon certified questions relating to the jurisdiction of the circuit court.

The suit is in equity, and the plaintiff is a citizen of Michigan. The defendants are George Folsom, a citizen of California, and the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University.

The object of the bill was to effect the partition of certain lands claimed by the plaintiff and the defendant Folsom as tenants in common, but held adversely by the defendant board of trustees. The plaintiff sought to have the title determined as preliminary to partition.

The board of trustees appeared and demurred to the bill as not making a case entitling the plaintiff to any relief against it.

[209] *The demurrer was sustained, and the bill dismissed,—the decree reciting that neither the plaintiff nor the defendant Folsom had any title or interest in the lands described in the bill, or in the rents or profits thereof, but that the same belonged to the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University. Folsom entered his appearance in circuit court, but made no defense, nor was any decree taken by default against him.

From that decree the plaintiff and the defendant Folsom prayed and perfected an appeal.

It is certified that the jurisdiction of the circuit court was wholly dependent upon diversity of citizenship, and that neither defendant objected in the circuit court that the case was not of equitable cognizance, or that the court, as a Federal court, was without jurisdiction to determine it. But in the circuit court of appeals Folsom insisted, among other things, that the circuit court "had no cognizance of the cause because the requisite diversity of citizenship does not exist, the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University not being a corporation of Ohio within the jurisdictional rule imputing to the members of that board citizenship of the state under whose law it is organized."

The circuit court of appeals propound the following questions:

1. Does the bill sufficiently aver that the Board of Trustees of Ohio State University is a corporation of the state of Ohio, or does it aver facts which, in legal intendment, constitute said body a corporation of the state of Ohio, within the rule that a suit by or against a corporation in a court of the United States is conclusively presumed, for the purpose of litigation, to be one by or against citizens of the state creating the corporation?

2. If the said board of trustees be not such a corporation as is required by the jurisdictional rule referred to, may this suit be maintained against it as "The Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University" without bringing the persons constituting the board before the court as defendants?

*3. If the said board may sue or be sued [210] in a Federal court by the name of "The Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University," although not constituting a corporation of the state of Ohio, within the jurisdictional rule referred to in the first question, do the facts stated on the face of the bill sufficiently show that the persons composing said board of trustees are citizens of Ohio, or should the court take notice of the law creating said board of trustees, and of other laws of Ohio defining the qualification of such trustees, and by legal intendments find that the persons constituting said board when this bill was filed were in fact citizens of Ohio, and that the requisite diversity of citizenship existed to give jurisdiction to the circuit court?

That the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States is limited in the sense that it has no jurisdiction except that conferred by the Constitution and laws of the United States; that a cause is presumed to be without its jurisdiction unless the contrary affirmatively appears; that such jurisdiction, or the facts upon which, in legal intendment, it rests, must be distinctly and positively averred in the pleadings, or should appear affirmatively and with equal distinctness in other parts of the record, it not being sufficient that jurisdiction may be inferred argumentatively; and that, for the purposes of suing and being sued in a circuit court of the United States, the members of a local "corporation" are conclusively presumed to be citizens of the state by whose laws it was created, and in which alone the corporate body has a legal existence,—are propositions so firmly established that further discussion of them would be both useless and inappropriate. Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 112, 115, 8 L. ed. 885, 886; Louisville, C. & O. R. Co. v. Letson, 2 How. 497, 11 L. ed. 353; Marshall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 16 How. 314, 14 L. ed. 953; Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 405, 15 L. ed. 451; Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. 227, 15 L. ed. 896; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Black, 286, 296, 17 L. ed. 130, 133; Merchants' Ins. Co. v. Ritchie, 5 Wall. 541, 18 L. ed. 540; Robertson v. Cease, 97 U. S. 646, 648, 24 L. ed. 1057, 1058; National S. S. Co. v. Tugman, 106 U. S. 118, 120, 27 L. ed. 87, 88, 1 Sup. Ct. [211] Rep. 58; King Bridge Co. v. Otoc County*. 120 U. S. 226, 30 L. ed. 623, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 552; Parker v. Ormsby, 141 U. S. 81, 35 L. ed. 654, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 912; Continental Nat. Bank v. Buford, 191 U. S. 120, 48 L. ed. 119, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

It is equally well established that when jurisdiction depends upon diverse citizenship the absence of sufficient averments or of facts in the record showing such required diversity of citizenship is fatal and cannot be overlooked by the court, even if the parties fail to call attention to the defect, or consent that it may be waived. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co. v. Swan, 111 U. S. 379, 28 L. ed. 462, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; Martin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 673, 689, 38 L. ed. 311, 317, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 533; Powers v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 169 U. S. 92, 98, 42 L. ed. 673, 675, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 264. As late as in Minnesota v. Northern Securities Co. 194 U. S. 48, 62-3, 48 L. ed. 870, 877, 878, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 598, 601, we said, both parties insisting upon the jurisdiction of the circuit court: "Consent of parties can never confer jurisdiction upon a Federal court. If the record does not affirmatively show jurisdiction in the circuit court, we must, upon our own motion, so declare and make such order as will prevent that court from exercising an authority not conferred upon it by statute."

So that the fact stated in the certificate, that neither party in the circuit court objected to its jurisdiction, is of no consequence.

Two other cases illustrating the above rules may be specially referred to.

In Chapman v. Barney, 129 U. S. 677, 682, 32 L. ed. 800, 801, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426, 428, which was a suit in the circuit court for the northern district of Illinois, by the United States Express Company against a citizen of Illinois, the declaration alleged that the company was organized under and by virtue of the laws of New York, and was a citizen of that state. The court said: "On looking into the record we find no satisfactory showing as to the citizenship of the plaintiff. The allegation of the amended petition is, that the United States Express Company is a joint-stock company, organized under a law of the state of New York, and is a citizen of that state. But the express company cannot be a citizen of New York, within the meaning of the statutes regulating jurisdiction, unless it be a corporation. The allegation that the company *was organized under the laws of New York [212] is not an allegation that it is a corporation. In fact, the allegation is, that the company is not a corporation, but a joint-stock company,—that is, a mere partnership. And, although it may be authorized by the laws of the state of New York to bring suit in the name of its president, that fact cannot give the company power, by that name, to sue in a Federal court. The company may have been organized under the laws of the state of New York, and may be doing business in that state, and yet all the members of it may not be citizens of that state. The record does not show the citizenship of Barney or of any of the members of the company."

In Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 177 U. S. 449, 456, 457, 44 L. ed. 842, 845, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 690, 693, the bill alleged that the plaintiffs Jones and others were members of a limited partnership association, doing business, by their firm name, under the authority of a Pennsylvania statute, and that such association was a citizen of that state. Although the Constitution of Pennsylvania provided that the term "corporation," as used in a certain article of that instrument, should be construed as including all joint-stock companies or associations having any of the powers or privileges of corporations not possessed by individuals or partnerships, and although the supreme court of Pennsylvania had held that it would not be improper to call a limited partnership, created under its statutes, a quasi corporation, having some of the characteristics of a corporation, this court, without considering the merits of the case, said: "When the question relates to the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States as resting on the diverse citizenship of the parties, we must look, in the case of a suit by or against a partnership association, to the citizenship of the several persons composing such association. . . . That a limited partnership association created under the Pennsylvania statute may be described as a 'quasi corporation,' having some of the characteristics of a corporation, or as a 'new artificial person,' is not a sufficient reason for regarding it as a corporation within the jurisdictional rule [213]*heretofore adverted to. That rule must not be extended. We are unwilling to extend it so as to embrace partnership associations. . . We therefore adjudge that, as the bill does not make a case arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, it was necessary to set out the citizenship of the individual members of the partnership association of Jones & Laughlins, Limited, which brought this suit." The judgment was reversed upon the ground that the jurisdiction of the circuit court did not affirmatively appear from the record. Upon the return of the cause to the court of original jurisdiction the bill was amended, and it was alleged that each member of the partnership was a citizen of Pennsylvania. The case was then heard upon its merits and was again brought here and determined. Great Southern Fire Proof Hotel Co. v. Jones, 193 U. S. 532, 48 L. ed. 778, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

In the light of these decisions we come to the question whether the jurisdiction of the circuit court affirmatively appears in this case. If it does not, it must be held that that court had no authority to take cognizance of it.

The bill alleges that the defendant the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University "was created by, and exists under and by virtue of, a law duly passed and enacted by the legislature of said state of Ohio, on March 22d, 1870, and now known and designated as §§ 4105-9 and following, of the Revised Statutes of said state of Ohio, and the subsequent acts amendatory of and supplementary thereto;" that said board, "under and by virtue of the aforesaid laws and enactments, and at all times since its creation and establishment, is fully authorized and empowered to sue and be sued, to contract and be contracted with, to make and use a common seal, and to alter the same at its pleasure, and to adopt by-laws, rules, and regulations for the government of said college, and to have the general supervision of all lands, buildings, and other property belonging to said college, and of receiving by gift, devise, or bequest, moneys, lands, and other properties for its benefit and for the benefit of those under its charge, subject, [214]*however, to the provisions, exceptions, and restrictions contained in section twenty and five thousand nine hundred and fifteen of the Revised Statutes of the state of Ohio;" and is "a citizen of and domiciled in the state of Ohio." 67 Ohio Laws, 20; 75 Ohio Laws, 126; Ohio Rev. Stat. §§ 4105 et seq.

Do those averments, taken in connection with the statutes of Ohio relating to the defendant board,—of the provisions of which statutes judicial notice may be taken (Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 6, 29 L. ed. 195 U. S.

535, 537, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242),—sufficiently show that the circuit court was entitled to take cognizance of this case?

If the defendant board had been specifically averred to be, and was in fact, a corporation created by and existing under the laws of Ohio, then, within the meaning of the adjudged cases, the controversy would have been one between citizens of different states, and consequently within the jurisdiction of the circuit court; for, in that case, the legal presumption would be that the trustees were citizens of the state by which the corporation was brought into existence, and no averment or evidence to the contrary would be admissible for the purpose of withdrawing the suit from the jurisdiction of the circuit court. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 1 Black, 286, 296, 17 L. ed. 130. Here the averment is only that the defendant board of trustees is a citizen of and domiciled in Ohio; not that the trustees themselves are citizens of that state. That averment alone is not sufficient. In Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 405, 15 L. ed. 451, 452, which was a suit brought in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Indiana, the declaration alleged that the plaintiffs were citizens of Ohio, and that the defendant, the Lafayette Insurance Company, was a citizen of Indiana. This court, speaking by Justice Curtis, said: "This averment is not sufficient to show jurisdiction. It does not appear from it that the Lafayette Insurance Company is a corporation, or, if it be such, by the law of what state it was created. The averment that the company is a citizen of the state of Indiana can have no sensible meaning attached to it. This court does not hold that either a voluntary association of *persons, or an association [215] into a body politic, created by law, is a citizen of a state within the meaning of the Constitution." It is vital that the corporate character of the collective body should be averred or shown.

The fundamental inquiry, therefore, is whether the defendant board of trustees is a "corporation" within the jurisdictional rule that admits of a corporation being regarded, for purposes of suing and being sued in the courts of the United States, as a citizen of the state under and by the laws of which it was created. The pleadings, we have seen, do not in terms aver the board to be a corporation; only that it is a citizen of and domiciled in Ohio, and to have been created as a collective body by the laws of that state, with power to sue and be sued by the name of the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University. Those laws must therefore be examined in order to ascertain whether, for purposes of suit in the circuit court of the United States, the board may be deemed a corporation of Ohio within the meaning of the above cases.

In determining this question we are confronted with the fact that the statute creating the defendant board was clearly a special, as distinguished from a general, act, and that the Constitution of Ohio forbade the passage of any special act conferring corporate powers. Ohio Const. art. 13, § 1. So that the board of trustees cannot be held to have been made a corporation or endowed with corporate powers without holding that the act by which it was created was invalid under the Constitution of Ohio; whereas, the supreme court of Ohio have adjudicated that the act was valid, as not conferring, and as not intended to confer, corporate powers on the board.

This question was presented in Neil v. Ohio Agricultural & Mechanical College (1876) 31 Ohio St. 15, 21, which was the original name of the Ohio State University. The validity of the act creating the board was there brought in question as having, to all intents and purposes, created a corporation, and clothed it with corporate powers and privileges. But the supreme court of [216] Ohio said: "We are not able to yield our assent to this construction of the statute. The act is entitled 'An Act to Establish and Maintain an Agricultural and Mechanical College in Ohio.'* It creates a board of trustees, to be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate; and commits to such board the government, control, and general management of the affairs of the institution; and while the statute authorizes the board to make contracts for the benefit of the college, and to maintain actions, if necessary, to enforce them, and to exercise other powers similar to those conferred on bodies corporate, it does not assume to, nor does it in fact, create or constitute such board of trustees a corporation; and hence does not clothe it with corporate functions or powers. State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Davis, 23 Ohio St. 434. The college is a state institution, designed and well calculated to promote public educational interests, established for the people of the whole state, to be managed and controlled by such agencies as the legislature, in its wisdom, may provide. Similar powers, but perhaps less extensive, because less required, are conferred on the trustees of the various hospitals for the insane (73 Ohio Laws, 80), and on the board of managers of the Ohio Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' Homes (67 Ohio Laws, 53), and other institutions of the state. The powers thus conferred are essentially necessary to accomplish the objects for which these institutions were established. The power to establish them is found clearly granted in the 7th article of the Constitution." The article here referred to gave the legislature power to establish benevolent and other state institutions.

Thus, upon an issue distinctly made, the supreme court of Ohio has adjudged that the defendant board is not, and was not intended to be made, a corporation of the state, but only an agency to manage and control a state institution as the state may direct or provide. And the interpretation of the state Constitution upon which that judgment rests has never been modified by that court.

While the state court may not conclusively determine for *this court what is and [217] what is not a corporation within the meaning of the jurisdictional rule that a corporation, for purposes of suing and being sued in the courts of the United States, is, under the Constitution and laws of the United States, to be deemed a citizen of the state by whose laws it is created, nevertheless, this court should accept the judgment of the highest court of a state upon the question whether a particular body created by its laws is or is not a corporation, by virtue of those laws, unless a contrary view is demanded by most cogent reasons involving or affecting the constitutional and statutory jurisdiction of the Federal courts. No such reasons exist in this case; and, accepting the above decision of the supreme court of Ohio as correctly interpreting the Constitution and laws of that state, we hold that while the defendant board is clothed with some, it is not clothed with all, of the functions belonging to technical corporations, and is not such a corporation as may sue and be sued in a circuit court of the United States as a citizen of Ohio. A contrary ruling would, we apprehend, produce confusion and embarrassment in litigation relating to those public state institutions or agencies in Ohio which, according to the decision of its highest court, were not endowed, nor intended to be endowed, with corporate powers.

It is contended, however, that the bill sufficiently shows that the persons constituting the Board of Trustees of the Ohio State University were in fact citizens of Ohio, and therefore, as the board had power to sue and be sued, and to contract and be contracted with, in its collective name, the requisite diversity of citizenship sufficiently appeared from the pleadings. This contention is not warranted by any distinct averments in the bill. The bill contains no such averment. As already stated, it alleges that the board is a citizen of Ohio; not that the trustees are citizens of that state. As already stated, the bill does not, in terms, even allege that the board is a corporation, although it shows that it possesses some of the characteristics of corporations. The Constitution of Ohio provides *that no person shall be elected or appointed to any office in the state unless he possesses the qualifications of an elector; and an elector must be a citizen of the state (Const. art. 15, § 4, art. 5, § 1); therefore it must be taken, not only that each trustee of the Ohio State University holds an office within the meaning of the state Constitution, but is in fact a citizen of that state; and the allegation that the board was created by, and existed as, an organized body under the laws of Ohio, was equivalent to an allegation that the trustees are each and all citizens of Ohio. Such is the process of reasoning by which it is attempted to support the jurisdiction of the circuit court in the present case. But it is settled that the jurisdiction of a court of the United States must appear from distinct allegations, or from facts clearly proven, and is not to be established argumentatively or by mere inference. The presumption is that a cause is without the jurisdiction of a circuit court of the United States unless the contrary affirmatively and distinctly appears. Brown v. Keene, 8 Pet. 115, 8 L. ed 886, and other cases above cited.

For the reasons stated the first question must be answered in the negative. To the second question our answer is that as the board was entitled to sue and be sued by their collective name, and would be bound by any judgment rendered against it in that name, the jurisdiction of the circuit court would have sufficiently appeared, so far as the pleadings were concerned, without bringing the several persons constituting the board before the court as defendants, provided the bill had contained the additional allegation that each individual trustee was a citizen of Ohio. Each branch of the third question must be answered in the negative. These answers will be certified to the circuit court of appeals, with liberty to that court to authorize such amendment of the bill in the circuit court as will show jurisdiction.

It is so ordered.

[219] *WILLIAM A. WRIGHT, Comptroller General, Petitioner,

v.

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY and Atlantic Coast Line Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 219-223.)

Taxation—of shares of stock in foreign corporation.

Shares of stock in a foreign corporation, held

NOTE.—On the taxation of capital stock of corporations in the United States—see note to State Bd. of Equalization v. People, 58 L. R. A. 513.

195 U. S.

by a domestic corporation, are taxable as the property of the latter, under the mandate of the Georgia Constitution that "all taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and ad valorem on all property subject to be taxed within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws," which is carried out in Ga. Laws 1898, No. 150, §§ 1, 2, authorizing a tax on all the taxable property of the state, and § 16, which requires taxpayers to return the number of shares of stock in foreign corporations which they own.

[No. 20.]

Argued October 25, 1904. Decided November 14, 1904.

ON WRIT of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Georgia enjoining the comptroller general of that state from collecting a tax on shares of stock in a foreign corporation. Reversed.

See same case below, 54 C. C. A. 672, 117 Fed. 1007.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Boykin Wright and John C. Hart argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner.

Messrs. Joseph B. Cumming and Alexander C. King argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Joseph B. & Bryan Cumming and King, Spalding, & Little, filed a brief for respondents.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This case comes here on certiorari to the circuit court of appeals, that court having affirmed, per curiam, a decree of the circuit court enjoining the comptroller general of Georgia from collecting a tax for the year 1900. 116 Fed. 669, 54 C. C. A. 672, 117 Fed. 1007. In view of the conclusion to which we have been driven, it is enough to say that the question presented is whether shares of stock in the Western Railway of Alabama, an Alabama corporation, held by the Georgia Railroad & Banking Company, a Georgia corporation, are taxable as property of the latter, by the state of Georgia, under its Constitution and statutes. The defendants in error, the plaintiffs below, are lessees of the Georgia corporation, and are bound to reimburse the latter for the tax, if it has to be paid. Taking into account the decision in Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401, *the power of the state to tax [220] the shares is not denied, so far as the Constitution of the United States is concerned, but it is argued that the state has not attempted to use that power by its present Constitution and laws.

The Constitution of Georgia provides that "all taxation shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects, and ad valorem on all property subject to be taxed within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax, and shall be levied and collected under general laws." Code of 1895, § 5883. The words "within the territorial limits" plainly qualify "subject to be taxed." The Constitution further makes void all laws exempting property from taxation, other than the property therein enumerated, which does not include this stock. § 5886. Following these requirements the general tax act for 1899 and 1900, Laws of 1898, No. 150, §§ 1, 2, p. 22, authorizes a tax on all of the taxable property of the state.

The natural inference from the foregoing language is that the comptroller general was bound to collect this tax. It is true that it was said, in a case decided before the date of the present Constitution, that stock in railroads outside the state was not taxable in Georgia, the reason offered being that such stock is really but so many shares of the railroad's property, and that that property is real estate, for the most part at least, and taxable by the state in which the road lies. Wright v. Southwestern R. Co. 64 Ga. 783, 799. This reason is shown by later decisions to be an insufficient ground for a claim of constitutional right, and the language of the case probably does not represent adequately the present opinion of the supreme court, although the passage is cited in the later of the two following cases: Georgia State Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Savannah, 109 Ga. 63, 69, 35 S. E. 67; People's Nat. Bank v. Cleveland, 117 Ga. 908, 913, 915, 44 S. E. 20.

If we look to the construction adopted by the legislature, there is no doubt as to that. The Code, after defining personalty as property movable in its nature, continues: "[221] "Stocks representing shares in an incorporated company holding lands, *or a franchise in or over lands, are personalty." § 3070. The act of 1884-1885, touching returns of property for taxation, No. 457, § 2, p. 30, enacted in terms "that personal property shall be construed, for purposes of taxation, to include . . . all stocks and securities, whether in corporations within this state or in other states, owned by citizens of this state, unless exempt," etc. It is argued on one side and denied on the other that this section was repealed by the Code; but whether it was or not, it equally may be invoked for the purpose of interpretation, at least. We do not understand and cannot believe that the supreme court of the state would deny the power of the legislature under the present Constitution to tax stock.

The argument against the tax is that the Constitution of Georgia is satisfied if all the lands and goods in the state are taxed once, and that the appearance of the same capital in two forms, technically distinct, ought not to be laid hold of as an excuse for two taxes. It is admitted that no such double taxation is enforced with regard to corporations of which the property is taxed within the state, and it hardly would be contended that this wise moderation is unconstitutional. It even has been thought that a similar constitution forbade taxation of both capital and stock. People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, 601. But, from the point of view of the taxpayer, it does not matter whether all of his double taxation is done in one state or half in one and half in another. He suffers the same injustice. And, as manifestly the clearest right to tax belongs to the state where the railroad has its tracks, every principle of justice and patriotism would require the same abstinence from taxing stocks of the railroads of neighboring states that is practised with regard to those of the taxing state—in this case Georgia—itsself.

The difficulty with this argument is that the Georgia Constitution requires the taxation of all property subject to be taxed in Georgia. And while it may be that the constitutional requirement is sufficiently complied with when the land and *chattels which [222] give value to the stock pay a tax, without another tax on the stock, there is much more difficulty in saying that the words are satisfied if stock is left untaxed when the land and chattels cannot be reached. Probably the Constitution does not go further than to require one tax on all attainable sources of value, even if it permits more. People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, 601. But it certainly seems intended to tax once, at least, all property which can be come at in any way. San Francisco v. Fry, 63 Cal. 470. A tax in another state is no tax for the purposes of the state of Georgia. Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 732, 47 L. ed. 669, 672, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401; Dwight v. Boston, 12 Allen, 316; Seward v. Rising Sun, 79 Ind. 351; Dyer v. Osborne, 11 R. I. 321, 23 Am. Rep. 460; McKeen v. Northampton, 49 Pa. 519, 88 Am. Dec. 515.

Putting the case at the lowest, the above-cited section of the Constitution was adopted in the interest of the state as a tax-collector, and authorizes, if it does not require, a tax on the stock. In pursuance of the Constitution, the law of 1898, under which this tax is demanded, contains the following: "In addition to the questions now propounded to taxpayers by the tax-receivers, questions shall be framed by the comptroller general to reach all property upon which a tax is imposed by this act, and especially the following questions: . . . Thirtieth—How many shares of stock did you own on the day fixed for the return of property for taxation issued by corporations located without this state? Thirty-first—What was the gross nominal value thereof? Thirty-second—What was the fair market value thereof?" Laws of 1898, No. 150, § 16, p. 36. This plainly contemplates that the mandate of the Constitution shall be carried out, and in view of §§ 1, 2, of the same act, referred to above, and of the facts that legislation could not make the requirement to tax more explicit, and that the Constitution seems to be regarded by the supreme court of the state as self-executing (Georgia State Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Savannah, 109 Ga. 63, 35 S. E. 67), we think it impossible to escape from the words. The [223] distinction intended *between stock in corporations of which the property is taxed by the state and that in corporations otherwise untaxed is emphasized by the thirty-third question: "How many shares of stocks did you own, . . . issued by corporations within this state, the capital stock of which or the property of which is not returned by such corporation for taxation?" We think the distinction consistent with the Constitution, if not required by it, as held in People ex rel. Burke v. Badlam, 57 Cal. 594, 601.

Decree reversed.

CAROLINE W. DOBBINS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CITY OF LOS ANGELES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 223-242.)

Constitutional law—interference with property rights—police power—municipal limits for gasworks — equity — injunction against criminal proceedings.

1. An arbitrary interference with property rights protected by U. S. Const., 14th Amend., which cannot be justified as an exercise of the police power, results from the narrowing, NOTE.—On municipal power over buildings and other structures as nuisances—see note to Evansville v. Miller, 38 L. R. A. 161.

As to municipal power over nuisances relating to trade or business—see note to Ex parte Lacey, 38 L. R. A. 640.

Municipal power over nuisances affecting safety, health, and personal comfort is the title of a note to Harrington v. Providence, 38 L. R. A. 305.

Injunction against criminal prosecutions under void municipal ordinances affecting property rights or franchises.

"It is settled," said the court in Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756, "that a court of equity should enjoin the enforcement of a municipal ordinance, though violations of it are punished criminally, when its enforcement will by municipal ordinance, of the limits within which gasworks may be erected and maintained, so as to include within the prohibited territory property purchased for that purpose within the district wherein the erection of such works was then permitted, and on which such erection was then proceeding in compliance with an existing ordinance and a permit of the board of fire commissioners, where such change was not demanded by the public welfare, and seems rather to have been actuated by a purpose to perpetuate a monopoly enjoyed by a gas company whose works were still within the privileged district.

2. Equity will enjoin criminal proceedings under a void municipal ordinance, where property rights will be destroyed by its enforcement.

[No. 107.]

Argued October 11, 12, 1904. Decided November 14, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court in and for the County of Los Angeles in that state dismissing a bill to enjoin the enforcement of a municipal ordinance prohibiting the erection or maintenance of gasworks except within certain prescribed limits. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 139 Cal. 179, 96 Am. St. Rep. 95, 72 Pac. 970.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This is a writ of error to the supreme court of the state of California, seeking a reversal of the judgment of that court, affirming the judgment of the superior court, dismissing the complaint of the plaintiff in error against the city of Los Angeles.

Plaintiff in error filed a bill of complaint against the city of Los Angeles, seeking an injunction to restrain the enforcement of certain ordinances prohibiting the erection or maintenance of gasworks except within prescribed limits in said city.

The case was decided upon demurrer to the bill. The complaint sets forth, in substance:

effect the illegal destruction of, or a grave interference with, a corporate franchise in the operation of which the public had an interest."

Hence a bill alleging that a city is attempting by an ordinance unlawfully to arrest complainant's employees, and to destroy the franchise of a railroad company, will not be dismissed, although it may appear that the ordinance is quasi-criminal. Mobile v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 115, 5 Am. St. Rep. 342, 4 So. 106.

An injunction was granted against prosecution under a building ordinance, where arrest was threatened, and the chancellor held that the addition to the depot in course of construction was not included in the ordinance. Montgomery v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 127, 4 So. 626.

Equity will grant an injunction against a criminal proceeding where it is necessary to

That on August 26, 1901, the city council of Los Angeles adopted an ordinance making it unlawful to erect and maintain gasworks outside of a certain district described in the ordinance, and fixing penalties for the violation thereof. While this ordinance was in force the plaintiff in error made a contract with the Valley Gas & Fuel Company for the erection of certain gasworks upon territory to be thereafter designated by her, and on September 28, 1901, purchased lands within the limits of the privileged district as fixed by the ordinance. That on the 22d of November, 1901, upon application to the board of fire commissioners of the city of Los Angeles, that body granted to the plaintiff in error the privilege to erect the gasworks upon the territory aforesaid. Thereupon the plaintiff in error directed the Valley Gas & Fuel Company to proceed with the erection of the works upon the premises so purchased. That the foundations were con-protect property rights, and threatened prosecution and arrest is for the sole purpose of preventing the exercise of civil rights conferred directly by law, as in case of a city ordinance preventing the laying of pipes in the streets without permission, where the gas company has a contract, but permission is refused. Atlanta v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 106.

The principle underlying the case just cited is thus explained by the same court in a later case: "When the damages would be irreparable if the threatened injury is not prevented, equity, if properly appealed to, will not permit valuable vested corporate franchises granted by the state to be seriously impaired or practically destroyed by prosecution instituted under color of municipal ordinances which are wrested from their legitimate purposes, and fraudulently used, in a matter to which they cannot apply, as a means with which to prevent the exercise of these franchises." Paulk v. Sycamore, 104 Ga. 24, 41 L. R. A. 772, 69 Am. St. Rep. 128, 30 S. E. 417.

Directly within the ruling in Atlanta v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 126, supra, is the case of Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Atlanta, 118 Ga. 486, 45 S. E. 256, where the court held that injunctive relief against criminal proceedings to enforce a municipal ordinance against obstructing streets should have been granted on behalf of a railway company, because such proceedings were threatened for the purpose of preventing the company from building a fence with a view to inclosing land which it had permitted the public to use without intent to dedicate it as a street.

An injunction was granted against prosecution by a city under an ordinance, where the defendant claimed title to the land that he was prosecuted for using. The criminal action was stayed until the right to possession could be determined. Shinkle v. Covington, 83 Ky. 420; Louisville Trustees v. Gray, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 147.

An injunction may be granted to prevent a city from enforcing an ordinance void as to complainant, by continued arrests and prosecutions, where the complainant has a valuable franchise and has expended large sums of money under a city ordinance, and thereafter another ordinance is passed imposing great restrictions and penalties. Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 132 Ind. 575, 15 L. R. A. 321, 28 N. E. 853.

In Platte & D. Canal & Mill Co. v. Lee, 2 Colo. App. 184, 29 Pac. 1036, a court of equity was held to have power to enjoin threatened criminal proceedings to enforce a municipal ordinance regulating a ditch constructed to furnish water for milling, manufacturing, and irrigation purposes, where vested rights of the corporate owner of such ditch would be impaired by such enforcement.

A prosecution under a city ordinance, not involving morals, health, or safety, but to enforce the views of the city as to the construction of its contract, will be enjoined, where the enforcement would not be a valid exercise of police power. Newport v. Newport & C. Bridge Co. 90 Ky. 193, 8 L. R. A. 484, 13 S. W. 720.

The rule forbidding a court of equity to stay criminal proceedings does not apply to a suit for an injunction to restrain the enforcement of an ordinance imposing an unlawful license fee on an express company engaged in interstate commerce, under penalty of fine or imprisonment for noncompliance. Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756.

But a bill to restrain a prosecution under a city ordinance prohibiting unloading cars in the streets does not state a cause of action where no irreparable damages are shown, and no franchise is involved. The invalidity of the ordinance must first be established in a judgment of a court of law. Forchheimer v. Mobile, 84 Ala. 127, 4 So. 112.

Criminal proceedings to enforce a municipal ordinance requiring an electric railway company to maintain flagmen at street crossings cannot be enjoined on the theory that an invasion of property rights results, because of the grant to the company to operate its lines over the city streets, without any reservation of the right to impose such a burden. Camden Interstate R. Co. v. Catlettsburg, 129 Fed. 421.

Under Ark. Const. art. 16, § 12, providing that any citizen may sue to protect inhabitants against illegal exactions, a court of equity will not enjoin a prosecution under a city ordinance to punish or prohibit acts. Yet, as the ordinance in question was an illegal exaction of 25 cents a bale for weighing cotton, when it should be about 15 cents, the decree of the court declared "void all existing ordinances of the city imposing fines or penalties upon any persons who refuse to weigh their cotton at the city scales." Taylor v. Pine Bluff, 34 Ark. 603.

A subcontractor who has contracted to erect gasworks on certain premises is not entitled to injunctive relief to prevent the enforcement, by criminal proceedings against his employees, of municipal ordinances prohibiting the erection or maintenance of such structures within certain limits, which are alleged to infringe the obligation of the contract of the owner of the land with the municipality under prior ordinances; since his remedy, if any, is by action against the principal contractor, who is presumed to be able to respond in damages for all such as the subcontractor may have suffered by the interruption of the contract. Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup.Ct. Rep. 498.

On the general subject of injunction against criminal proceedings, see note to Crichto v. Dahmer, 21 L. R. A. 84, structed at a cost of upwards of $2,500. After the foundations had been nearly completed the city council, on November 25, [225] *1901, passed a second ordinance, amending the first ordinance, and thereby so limiting the boundaries of the territory within which the erection of gasworks was permitted in said city as to include the premises of the plaintiff in error within the prohibited territory. The work of constructing the works was continuously prosecuted until the latter part of February, 1902, when the plaintiff in error alleges that the city of Los Angeles, combining and confederating with one James R. C. Burton and other persons unknown, caused certain employees of the company engaged in the erection of said works to be arrested, charged with the violation of the said city ordinance. Other arrests were made on the 1st and 3d of March, 1902. On the 3d of March, 1902, the city council passed a third ordinance, amending the ordinance of November 25, 1901, in respect to the description of the district within which gasworks could be erected. On March 6, 1902, the city caused the arrest of certain persons employed by the company in charge of the erection of the works, charged with the violation of the amended city ordinance.

It is averred that the adoption by the city council of the ordinances aforesaid, and the attempted enforcement thereof, were instigated by officers and agents of the Los Angeles Lighting Company, a corporation engaged in manufacturing and supplying gas in said city, and having a monopoly of said business therein. It is further averred that the action of the municipal authorities complained of was taken for the purpose of protecting the said Los Angeles Lighting Company in the enjoyment of its monopoly. It is also claimed that the territory surrounding the premises of the plaintiff in error, and within which, under the ordinance of August 26, in force when the complainant made her purchase and located and began the erection of the gasworks, it was lawful so to do, and which, by the amending ordinances, was added to the prohibited territory, was and is a district devoted almost exclusively to manufacturing enterprises. Within its boundaries there is a large amount of vacant and [226] unoccupied land which is and *will continue to be useless except for the erection of manufacturing establishments; within which were located at that time a soap factory, a wool-pulling factory, three wineries, numerous oil wells in operation, iron foundry, brass foundry, oil refinery; immediately east of said tract, railroads and an extensive tannery; immediately north, the oil tanks and refinery of the Standard Oil Company. That the works being constructed for the plaintiff in error are to be built upon concrete foundations with a superstructure of noncombustible material, so that there can be no danger from explosion, bursting, or leaking. The machinery is to be of the most approved pattern; and that there can be no leakage or escape of odors or any interference with the health, comfort, or safety of the inhabitants of the city.

195 U. S.

The plaintiff in error, relying upon the protection of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, prays that the permit granted by the board of fire commissioners be declared to be a valid and subsisting contract between the city of Los Angeles and herself, and that all ordinances passed by the city council in contravention thereof be declared void; that the defendant be enjoined from enforcing said ordinances against the plaintiff, from delaying or interfering with the action of the plaintiff in erecting the said works, from interfering with the maintenance and operation of the same, and for general relief.

Messrs. Lynn Helm and Edward C. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry T. Lee, J. R. Scott, and Charles W. Chase, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In passing upon a municipal ordinance it is necessary to its validity that its provisions should be determined to be reasonable.

Oxanna v. Allen, 90 Ala. 468, 8 So. 79; Tugman v. Chicago, 78 Ill. 405; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90, 92 Am. Dec. 200; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Lake View v. Tate, 130 Ill. 247, 6 L. R. A. 268, 22 N. E. 791.

The determination, by the legislative body, of what is a proper exercise of the police power, is not final or conclusive, but is subject to the supervision of the courts; and what is a reasonable ordinance is a judicial, and not a legislative, question.

Covington & L. Turnp. Road Co. v. Sandford, 164 U. S. 578, 592, 41 L. ed. 560, 565, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 198; Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133, 38 L. ed. 385, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Re Smith, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180; Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L. R. A. 727, 35 Am. St. Rep. 152, 32 Pac. 870; Ex parte Sing Lee, 96 Cal. 354, 24 L. R. A. 195, 31 Am. St. Rep. 218, 31 Pac. 245; 1 Tiedeman, State & Federal Control, p. 238; Jew Ho v. Williamson, 103 Fed. 10; Weil v. Ricord, 24 N. J. Eq. 169; Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; People v. Budd, 117 N. Y. 1, 15 Am. St. Rep. 460, 22 N. E. 670; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Maxwell v. Fulton County, 119 Ind. 23, 21 N. E. 453; Whittington v. Polk, 1 Harr

& J. 236; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. pp. 247 et seq.

The legislature is distinguished from a municipal council in enacting its police provisions, and is not subject to review by the courts merely because its laws may be unreasonable.

In determining the validity of an ordinance, the objects and purposes sought to be accomplished are always scrutinized by the courts; and in so doing they are not limited to those matters which appear upon the face of the ordinance, or of which they may take judicial notice, but may consider all the circumstances in the light of existing conditions.

Oxanna v. Allen, 90 Ala. 468, 8 So. 79; Tugman v. Chicago, 78 Ill. 405; Chicago v. Rumpff, 45 Ill. 90, 92 Am. Dec. 200; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 37, 16 Am. Rep. 611; Lake View v. Tate, 130 Ill. 247, 6 L. R. A. 268, 22 N. E. 791; Ex parte Patterson, 42 Tex. Crim. Rep. 256, 51 L. R. A. 654, 58 S. W. 1011; People v. Armstrong, 73 Mich. 288, 2 L. R. A. 721, 16 Am. St. Rep. 578, 41 N. W. 275; Wreford v. People, 14 Mich. 41; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Connersville, 147 Ind. 277, 37 L. R. A. 175, 62 Am. St. Rep. 418, 46 N. E. 579; State v. Boardman, 93 Me. 73, 46 L. R. A. 750, 44 Atl. 118; Corrigan v. Gage, 68 Mo. 541; Pieri v. Shieldsboro, 42 Miss. 493; Kosciusko v. Slomberg, 68 Miss. 469, 12 L. R. A. 528, 24 Am. St. Rep. 281, 9 So. 297; Crowley v. West, 52 La. Ann. 526, 47 L. R. A. 652, 78 Am. St. Rep. 355, 27 So. 53.

The motives which actuate a municipal council in the adoption of ordinances are material as showing the objects and purposes for which the ordinances are adopted.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Re Ho Ah Kow, 5 Sawy. 552, Fed. Cas. No. 6,546; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 234, 41 L. ed. 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Dil. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 311; State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. 262.

The business of erecting or maintaining gasworks is a lawful occupation.

Re Johnston, 137 Cal. 115, 69 Pac. 973; People v. Stephens, 62 Cal. 209.

A municipality has not the power or right to impose additional burdens, terms, or conditions on the exercise of rights created by the sovereign authority of the state in its Constitution. Restrictions in the exercise of these rights are not regulations, and at least impair, if they do not deny, the exercise of the right.

Re Johnston, 137 Cal. 115, 69 Pac. 973; Summit Twp. v. New York & N. J. Teleph. Co. 57 N. J. Eq. 123, 41 Atl. 146; Atlanta

v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 106; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Benton Harbor, 121 Mich. 512, 47 L. R. A. 104, 80 N. W. 386; Wiseonsin Teleph. Co. v. Oshkosh, 62 Wis. 32, 21 N. W. 828; Pittsburgh's Appeal, 115 Pa. 4, 7 Atl. 778; Millvale v. Evergreen R. Co. 131 Pa. 1, 7 L. R. A. 369, 18 Atl. 993; Harrisburg City Pass. R. Co. v. Harrisburg, 149 Pa. 465, 24 Atl. 56; State ex rel. Bell Teleph. Co. v. Flad, 23 Mo. App. 185; Hodges v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 72 Miss. 910, 29 L. R. A. 770, 18 So. 84.

Gasworks are not, either in their erection or their maintenance, a nuisance per se, and it is not within the power of the city council of the city of Los Angeles to pass an ordinance making that a nuisance which is not a nuisance per se; nor could such a declaration make it a nuisance unless it in fact had that character.

Yates v. Milwaukee, 10 Wall. 497, 19 L. ed. 984; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Joliet, 79 Ill. 39; Everett v. Council Bluffs, 46 Iowa, 66; Ex parte Sing Lee, 96 Cal. 354, 24 L. R. A. 195, 31 Am. St. Rep. 218, 31 Pac. 245; Los Angeles County v. Hollywood Cemetery Asso. 124 Cal. 344, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, 57 Pac. 153; Grossman v. Oakland, 30 Or. 478, 36 L. R. A. 593, 60 Am. St. Rep. 832, 41 Pac. 5; Re Tie Loy, 26 Fed. 611; Re Sam Kee, 31 Fed. 680; Re Hong Wah, 82 Fed. 623; Ex parte Whitwell, 98 Cal. 73, 19 L. R. A. 727, 35 Am. St. Rep. 152, 32 Pac. 870; Wood, Nuisances, § 744.

The power granted in the city charter to abate nuisances does not give power to prevent except in cases of nuisances per se; and those things which only become nuisances because of the method of their operation cannot be prevented and stopped under the power to abate until it has been demonstrated that they are nuisances.

Lake View v. Lctz, 44 Ill. 81.

The rights acquired by plaintiff in error were vested rights.

Calder v. Bull, 3 Dall. 394, 1 L. ed. 651; Farrington v. Tennessee, 95 U. S. 679, 24 L. ed. 558; Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 457, 17 L. ed. 807; Wirth v. Branson, 98 U. S. 118, 25 L. ed. 86; Classen v. Chesapeake Guano Co. 81 Md. 258, 31 Atl. 808; Roberts v. Brooks, 71 Fed. 914; Baltimore Trust & G. Co. v. Baltimore, 64 Fed. 153; Levis v. Newton, 75 Fed. 884; Cleveland City R. Co. v. Cleveland, 94 Fed. 385; City R. Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 166 U. S. 562, 41 L. ed. 1116, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 653.

The ordinance is void as depriving the plaintiff in error of property without due process of law.

Chicago v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L. R. A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U.

S. 234, 41 L. ed. 983, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Froerer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A. 492, 31 N. E. 395; Ramsey v. People, 142 Ill. 380, 17 L. R. A. 853, 32 N. E. 364; Braeerville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62; Cooley, Const. Lim. 393.

The police power has reference to those things which affect the public health, the public safety, the public comfort, or the public morals.

Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L. R. A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616; Chicago v. Neteher, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L. R. A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707; State v. Donaldson, 41 Minn. 74, 42 N. W. 781; Indianapolis v. Consumers Gas Trust Co. 140 Ind. 107, 27 L. R. A. 514, 49 Am. St. Rep. 183, 39 N. E. 433; Barthet v. New Orleans, 24 Fed. 564; Buffalo v. Chadeayne, 134 N. Y. 163, 31 N. E. 443; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The provision of § 11 of art. 11 of the Constitution of the state of California is not a grant of the police power. It is simply an extension to counties, cities, and towns of the right to exercise powers that are inherent in the legislature as the representative of the people; but it is in no sense an enlargement of that power.

Ex parte Campbell, 74 Cal. 20, 5 Am. St. Rep. 418, 15 Pac. 318; Ex parte Roach, 104 Cal. 272, 37 Pac. 1044; Los Angeles County v. Hollywood Cemetery Asso. 124 Cal. 344, 71 Am. St. Rep. 75, 57 Pac. 153.

A court of equity has power to restrain by injunction a municipality from instituting criminal proceedings, threatened under color of an invalid ordinance, for the purpose of compelling the relinquishment of a property right.

Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Central Trust Co. v. Citizens' Street R. Co. 80 Fed. 225, 82 Fed. 1; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 38 L. ed. 1014, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Southern Exp. Co. v. Ensley, 116 Fed. 756; Louisiana State Lottery Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 3 Woods, 222, Fed. Cas. No. 8,541; Springhead Spinning Co. v. Riley, L. R. 6 Eq. 558; Osborn v. Bank of United States, 9 Wheat. 738, 6 L. ed. 204; Wood v. Brooklyn, 14 Barb. 425; Manhattan Iron Works Co. v. French, 12 Abb. N. C. 446; Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 132 Ind. 575, 15 L. R. A. 321, 28 N. E. 853; Davis v. Fasig, 128 Ind. 271, 27 N. E. 726; Platte & D. Canal & Mill. Co. v. Lee, 2 Colo. App. 184, 29 Pac. 1036; Smith v. Bangs, 195 U. S.

15 Ill. 399; Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 218, 33 Am. Rep. 239; Cape May & S. L. R. Co. v. Cape May, 35 N. J. Eq. 419; Los Angeles City Water Co. v. Los Angeles, 103 Fed. 711; Atlanta v. Gate City Gaslight Co. 71 Ga. 106; Austin v. Austin City Cemetery Asso. 87 Tex. 330, 47 Am. St. Rep. 114, 28 S. W. 528; Mobile v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 84 Ala. 115, 5 Am. St. Rep. 342, 4 So. 105; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 517, 42 L. ed. 819, 838, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Detroit v. Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. 184 U. S. 368, 378, 46 L. ed. 592, 600, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The plaintiff in error has no remedy against the defendant in error for damages for the wrongful arrest of her employees, or for the destruction of her business and property rights.

Stedman v. San Francisco, 63 Cal. 193; Chope v. Eureka, 78 Cal. 588, 4 L. R. A. 325, 12 Am. St. Rep. 113, 21 Pac. 364; Doeg v. Cook, 126 Cal. 213, 77 Am. St. Rep. 171, 58 Pac. 707.

It is not enough that the plaintiff has a remedy at law. It must be as efficient and as prompt in its administration as the remedy in equity.

Boyce v. Grundy, 3 Pet. 210, 7 L. ed. 655; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 12, 43 L. ed. 341, 346, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Phoenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Bailey, 13 Wall. 616, 621, 20 L. ed. 501, 503; Kilbourn v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505, 514, 32 L. ed. 1005, 1008, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 95, 36 L. ed. 82, 88, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 928.

Mr. W. B. Mathews argued the cause, and, with Mr. Herbert J. Goudge, filed a brief for defendant in error:

The enactment of the ordinance drawn in question was fully within the police powers of the city of Los Angeles.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Westfield Gas & Mill. Co. v. Mendenhall, 142 Ind. 538, 41 N. E. 1033; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 650, 29 L. ed. 516, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252; 2 Tiedeman, Pol. Power, p. 740; Jamieson v. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. 128 Ind. 555, 12 L. R. A. 652, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 613, 28 N. E. 76; Lanigan v. New York Gaslight Co. 71 N. Y. 29; Ex parte Lacey, 108 Cal. 326, 38 L. R. A. 640, 49 Am. St. Rep. 93, 41 Pac. 411; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

The allegations of the complaint as to the unreasonableness of this ordinance are not sufficient to sustain a decision against its validity.

Slack v. Jacob, 8 W. Va. 612; Harrison v. Lewistown, 153 Ill. 313, 46 Am. St. Rep.

893, 38 N. E. 628; Danielly v. Cabaniss, 52 Ga. 212; Wells v. Atlanta, 43 Ga. 67; State v. Schlenker, 112 Iowa, 642, 51 L. R. A. 351, 84 Am. St. Rep. 360, 84 N. W. 698; People v. Cipperly, 101 N. Y. 634, 4 N. E. 108; Re Wilshire, 103 Fed. 620; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

All rights in contracts and property are held subject to such regulations as may be made from time to time by the state for the protection of public health, comfort, and safety.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 707; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 669, 31 L. ed. 213, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Knoxville v. Bird, 12 Lea, 121, 47 Am. Rep. 326; Salem v. Maynes, 123 Mass. 372; Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357; New Orleans v. Stafford, 27 La. Ann. 417, 21 Am. Rep. 563; 2 Story, Const. § 1954; Jamieson v. Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. 128 Ind. 555, 12 L. R. A. 652, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 613, 28 N. E. 76.

A municipality cannot in any manner barter away, part with, or abridge its right to exercise the police powers delegated to it by the state.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 341; Russell, Pol. Power, p. 88; Davenport v. Richmond City, 81 Va. 636, 59 Am. Rep. 694; Newson v. Galveston, 76 Tex. 559, 7 L. R. A. 797, 13 S. W. 368; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036.

A bill in equity will not lie to restrain the enforcement of a municipal ordinance by criminal prosecution, upon the mere ground of its alleged invalidity.

Re Sawyer, 124 U. S. 200, 31 L. ed. 402, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 482; Fitts v. McGhee, 172 U. S. 528, 43 L. ed. 541, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 115 Fed. 537, 189 U. S. 207, 47 L. ed. 778, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Hemsley v. Myers, 45 Fed. 283; Wagner v. Drake, 31 Fed. 849; Minneapolis Brewing Co. v. McGillivray, 104 Fed. 272.

The motives of a legislative body in enacting a law cannot be inquired into by the courts.

Fletcher v. Peck, 6 Cranch, 87, 3 L. ed. 162; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. 371, 15 L. ed. 417; United States v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 142 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 1109, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730.

[234] *Mr Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

As this case was decided upon demurrer to the complaint, the allegations thereof must be taken as true. The question presented involves the right of the plaintiff in error to invoke the protection of the 14th Amendment against alleged infraction of her rights by the action of the city council in passing and enforcing the ordinances which prevent the carrying on of the business of making and selling gas to the people of the city.

Before entering upon a consideration of the case it is essential to examine briefly the extent to which constitutional and legislative control have been exercised by authority of the state of California in reference to the erection and maintenance of gasworks in cities. The Constitution of the state, § 19, article 11, provides that "in any city where there are no public works owned and controlled by the municipality for supplying the same with water or artificial light, any individual, or any company duly incorporated for such purpose under and by authority of the laws of this state, shall, under the direction of the superintendent of streets, or other officer in control thereof, and under such general regulations as the municipality may prescribe for damages and indemnity for damages, have the privilege of using the public streets and thoroughfares thereof, and of laying down pipes and conduits therein, and connections therewith, so far as may be necessary for introducing into and supplying such city and its inhabitants either with gaslight or other illuminating light, or with fresh water for domestic and all other purposes, upon the condition that the municipal government shall have the right to regulate the charges thereof." By the act of the state legislature of April 4, 1870 (Stat. 1869-70, p. 815), it was provided that cities may control the location and construction of works so that they may be erected in suitable localities to give the least discomfiture or annoyance to the public. By the Constitution *of the state of California it is provided (art. [235] 12, § 11) that any county, city, town, or township may make and enforce within its limits all such local, police, sanitary, or other regulations as are not in conflict with the general laws. In these provisions may be found a grant of power to the city of Los Angeles to control the location and erection of gasworks within the city limits. In the grant of such control the fact is recognized that while the erection and maintenance of such works is a lawful business pursuit, and one essential to the welfare and comfort of the community, its prosecution requires the use of materials of such a character, and such construction and maintenance of the works, as not to be dangerous or offensive when carried on within thickly populated parts of the city; and such rights are consequently justly subject to regulation in such manner as to protect the public health and safety. The supreme court of California, as may be gathered from its opinion in this case, based its decision upon the proposition that, as the exercise of the right to control the location and construction of gasworks is within the power conferred by the legislature upon the city, the act of the municipality in question cannot be reviewed, because so to do would be a substitution of the judgment of the court for that of the council upon a matter left within the exclusive control of the legislative body. To support this conclusion a citation is made from the opinion of this court in the case of Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77, to the effect that the legislature is the exclusive judge of the propriety of police regulation when the matter is within the scope of its power. The observations of Mr. Chief Justice Waite in that connection had reference to the facts of the particular case and were certainly not intended to declare the right of either the legislature or a city council to arbitrarily deprive the citizen of rights protected by the Constitution, under the guise of exercising the police powers reserved to the states. It may be admitted that every intendment is to be made in favor of the lawfulness of the exercise of municipal power, making regulations to promote the public [236] health and *safety, and that it is not the province of courts, except in clear cases, to interfere with the exercise of the power reposed by law in municipal corporations for the protection of local rights and the health and welfare of the people in the community. But notwithstanding this general rule of the law, it is now thoroughly well settled by decisions of this court that municipal by-laws and ordinances, and even legislative enactments undertaking to regulate useful business enterprises, are subject to investigation in the courts with a view to determining whether the law or ordinance is a lawful exercise of the police power, or whether, under the guise of enforcing police regulations, there has been an unwarranted and arbitrary interference with the constitutional rights to carry on a lawful business, to make contracts, or to use and enjoy property. In Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133-137, 38 L. ed. 385-388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499-501, Mr. Justice Brown, speaking for the court, said upon this subject:

"To justify the state in thus interposing its authority in behalf of the public it must appear, first, that the interests of the public generally, as distinguished from those of a particular class, require such interference; and, second, that the means are reasonably necessary for the accomplishment of the purpose, and not unduly oppressive upon individuals. The legislature may not, under the guise of protecting the public interests, arbitrarily interfere with private business or impose unusual and unnecessary restrictions upon lawful occupations. In other words, its determination as to what is a proper exercise of its police powers is not final or conclusive, but is subject to the supervision of the courts."

195 U. S.

And, again, in Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383, the same justice, again speaking for the court, said:

"The question in each case is whether the legislature has adopted the statute in exercise of a reasonable discretion, or whether its action be a mere excuse for an unjust discrimination, or the oppression or spoliation of a particular class."

And in Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 558, 46 L. ed. 679, 689, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431, 438, Mr. Justice Harlan, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

*"The question of constitutional law to [237] which we have referred [the equal protection of the laws] cannot be disposed of by saying that the statute in question may be referred to what are called the police powers of the state, which, as often stated by this court, were not included in the grants of power to the general government, and therefore were reserved to the states when the Constitution was ordained. But, as the Constitution of the United States is the supreme law of the land, anything in the Constitution or statutes of the states to the contrary notwithstanding, a statute of a state, even when avowedly enacted in the exercise of its police powers, must yield to that law. No right granted or secured by the Constitution of the United States can be impaired or destroyed by a state enactment, whatever may be the source from which the power to pass such enactment may have been derived. 'The nullity of any act inconsistent with the Constitution is produced by the declaration that the Constitution is the supreme law.' The state has undoubtedly the power, by appropriate legislation, to protect the public morals, the public health, and the public safety; but if, by their necessary operation, its regulations looking to either of those ends amount to a denial to persons within its jurisdiction of the equal protection of the laws, they must be deemed unconstitutional and void. Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 210, 6 L. ed. 23, 73; Sinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 243, 16 L. ed. 243, 247; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 626, 42 L. ed. 878, 882, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488."

This principle was recognized and applied in the supreme court of California in a case decided later than the one under consideration (Re Smith, decided May 31, 1904, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180), in which it was held that a county ordinance making it a misdemeanor to maintain a gasworks within a sparsely settled district was unreasonable and void. In that case the court, after again quoting from Munn v. Illinois, to the effect that the courts will not interfere with laws which are within the scope of legislative power, well said:

[238] "But running current with this principle, and to be read with it, is one of equal importance,—namely, that when the *police power is exerted to regulate a useful business or occupation, the legislature is not the exclusive judge as to what is a reasonable and just restraint upon the constitutional right of the citizen to pursue any trade, business, or vocation which in itself is recognized as innocent and useful to the community. It is always a judicial question if any particular regulation of such right is a valid exercise of police power, though the authority of the courts to declare such regulation invalid will be exercised with the utmost caution, and only when it is clear that the ordinance or law declared void passes the limits of the police power, and infringes upon rights guaranteed by the Constitution."

Applying the principles settled by these decisions to the allegations of the bill, admitted by the demurrer, we think a case is made which called for the protection of the courts against arbitrary interference with the rights of the plaintiff in error. Complying with the terms of the ordinance which was in force when the plaintiff in error was about to begin the erection of the gasworks in controversy, a tract of land was purchased within the district wherein the erection of such works was permitted, a contract was entered into for the construction of the works, a considerable sum of money was expended. It may be admitted as being a correct statement of the law as held by the California supreme court that, notwithstanding the grant of the permit, and even after the erection of the works, the city might still, for the protection of the public health and safety, prohibit the further maintenance and continuance of such works, and the prosecution of the business, originally harmless, may become, by reason of the manner of its prosecution or a changed condition of the community, a menace to the public health and safety. In other words, the right to exercise the police power is a continuing one, and a business lawful to-day may, in the future, because of the changed situation, the growth of population, or other causes, become a menace to the public health and welfare, and be required to yield to the public good. North Western Fer- enactment. It was averred that the works would be so constructed as not to interfere with the health or safety of the people. No reasonable explanation for the arbitrary exercise of power in the case is suggested. The narrowing of the limits within which the plaintiff in error, in compliance with the ordinance of the city and the permit of the board of fire commissioners, was proceeding to erect the gasworks, to the smaller and more limited section, was not demanded by the public welfare, and, taking the facts as alleged in the bill, seems rather to have been actuated by the purpose to exclude the plaintiff in error from further prosecution of the enterprise. The limits of the privileged district were fixed late in August. In September the complainant began the construction of the works. In November, without changed conditions or adequate reason, the council, by an amended ordinance, draw a line embracing a part of the district including the complainant's property, and declare that, too, shall be prohibited territory. This action is strongly corroborative of the allegations of the bill that the purpose was not police regulation in the interest of the public, but the destruction of the plaintiff's rights, and the building up of another company still within the privileged district after the passage of the amendment. Being the owner of the land, and having partially erected the works, the plaintiff in error had acquired property rights, and was entitled to protection against unconstitutional encroachments which would have the effect to deprive her of her property without due process of law. It is averred in the bill of complaint that the district within which the works were being erected was one given over to manufacturing enterprises, some of which were fully as obnoxious as gasworks possibly could be; that it contained large spaces of unoccupied lands, worthless except for manufacturing purposes, and, by clear inference, that there was *nothing in the situation [240] which rendered it necessary, in order to protect the city from a noisome and unhealthy business, to decrease the area within which gasworks could lawfully be erected.

[239] *tilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659, 24 L. ed. 1036; New Orleans Gaslight Co. v. Louisiana Light & H. P. & Mfg. Co. 115 U. S. 672, 29 L. ed. 524, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 252. But the exercise of the police power is subject to judicial review, and property rights cannot be wrongfully destroyed by arbitrary

It is urged that, where the exercise of legislative or municipal power is clearly within constitutional limits, the courts will not inquire into the motives which may have actuated the legislative body in passing the law or ordinance in question. Whether, when it appears that the facts would authorize the exercise of the power, the courts will restrain its exercise because of alleged wrongful motives inducing the passage of an ordinance, is not a question necessary to be determined in this case; but where the facts as to the situation and conditions are such as to establish the exercise of the police power in such manner as to oppress or discriminate against a class or an individual, the courts may consider and give weight to such purpose in considering the validity of the ordinance. This court in the case of Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064, held that, although an ordinance might be lawful upon its face, and apparently fair in its terms, yet, if it was enforced in such a manner as to work a discrimination against a part of the community, for no lawful reason, such exercise of power would be invalidated by the courts.

In some of the states, perhaps in most, the right to build and maintain gasworks is derived from the state, but subject to municipal control as to the use of the streets and the prices to be charged to consumers. In Ohio this price is regulated for stated periods. Could it be successfully maintained that, after the erection of the works, and the fixing of prices for a term of ten years, at the expiration thereof, and exercising the right to fix prices for a new term, the council could arbitrarily, and with a view of compelling the sale of the works to the municipality or a rival company, fix the rate at a price below the cost of gas to the producer, and at such a rate as to be ruinous to the business? In State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Cincinnati Gaslight & Coke Co. 18 Ohio St. [241] 262, it was *held to be the legislative intention, in empowering city councils to regulate the price of gas, to limit such companies to fair and reasonable prices, and if, in the colorable exercise of this power, a majority of the members of the council, for a fraudulent purpose, combine to pass an ordinance fixing the price of gas at a rate at which they well know it cannot be manufactured and sold without loss, such an ordinance would impose no obligation on the company. This case was cited with apparent approval by Mr. Justice Matthews in delivering the opinion of this court in Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; and see Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 311.

In this case we think the allegations of the bill disclose such character of territory, such sudden and unexplained change of its limits after the plaintiff in error had purchased the property and gone forward with the erection of the works, as to bring it within that class of cases wherein the court may restrain the arbitrary and discriminatory exercise of the police power which amounts to a taking of property without due process of law and an impairment of property rights protected by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

It is also urged by the defendants in error
195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

that a court of equity will not enjoin prosecution of a criminal case; but, as we have seen, the plaintiff in error in this case had acquired property rights which, by the enforcement of the ordinances in question, would be destroyed and rendered worthless. If the allegations of the bill be taken as true, she had the right to proceed with the prosecution of the work without interference by the city authorities in the form of arrest and prosecution of those in her employ.

It is well settled that, where property rights will be destroyed, unlawful interference by criminal proceedings under a void law or ordinance may be reached and controlled by a decree of a court of equity. Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 207-218, 47 L. ed. 778-780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498, and cases therein cited.

Upon the whole case, we are of opinion that the demurrer *should have been over-[242] ruled and the city of Los Angeles put upon its answer.

For the reasons herein stated, the judgment of the Supreme Court of California is reversed, and the cause remanded to that court for further proceedings not in conflict with this opinion.

MARTIN DALY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

CHARLES ELTON, Chief of Police of the City of Los Angeles.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 242, 243.)

Constitutional law—interference with property rights—police power—municipal limits for gasworks.

This case is governed by the decision in Dobbins v. Los Angeles, ante, 169.

[No. 108.]

Argued October 11, 12, 1904. Decided November 14, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of California to review a judgment which denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to discharge from custody a person convicted of a violation of a municipal ordinance prohibiting the erection and maintenance of gasworks except within certain prescribed limits. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 139 Cal. 216, 72 Pac. 1097.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Lynn Helm and Edward C. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry T. Lee, J. R. Scott, and Charles W. Chase, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Where a law under which a prisoner is held has been declared unconstitutional, and the unreasonableness and oppression of the ordinance is not apparent upon the face thereof, evidence will be admitted by a court of general jurisdiction upon habeas corpus, showing existing conditions, and for the purpose of determining whether a public offense has been committed.

Re Smith, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180; Re Nielson, 131 U. S. 176, 33 L. ed. 118, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 672; Ex parte Lang, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Ex parte Siebold, 100 U. S. 376, 25 L. ed. 719; Re Coy, 127 U. S. 731, 758, 32 L. ed. 274, 280, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263; Re Mayfield, 141 U. S. 107, 35 L. ed. 635, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

Mr. W. B. Mathews argued the cause, and, with Mr. Herbert J. Goudge, filed a brief for defendant in error:

In reviewing a judgment upon a petition for writ of habeas corpus, discharging the writ and remanding the petitioner, the only question reviewable by this court is the question whether the plaintiff in error has been denied a right in violation of the Constitution, laws, or treaties of the United States.

Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064; Re Wright, 29 Hun, 361; Ex parte Sternes, 77 Cal. 156, 11 Am. St. Rep. 251, 19 Pac. 275; Ex parte McCullough, 35 Cal. 97; Ex parte Granice, 51 Cal. 315; Powell v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 425; Re Coy, 127 U. S. 732, 32 L. ed. 275, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1263; Re Lennon, 166 U. S. 548, 41 L. ed. 1110, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. ed. 422, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Re Bell, 159 U. S. 95, 40 L. ed. 88, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 987.

For further contentions of counsel, see their respective briefs as reported in Dobbins v. Los Angeles, ante, 169.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case is practically determined by views expressed in Dobbins v. Los Angeles, 195 U. S. 223, ante, 169, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18. It was a petition for a writ of habeas corpus to discharge Daly from custody, in a prosecution under the ordinance under consideration in the Dobbins Case. The prayer of the petition was denied and the writ discharged. Re Daly, 139 Cal. *216, 72

178

Pac. 1097. Under the California practice, in the absence of issue joined the allegations of the petition are taken as true and the facts alleged therein are taken as admitted. Re Smith, 143 Cal. 368, 77 Pac. 180. The petition made allegations attacking the ordinance, which, if true, would render it invalid for the reasons stated in the Dobbins Case, supra, and the petitioner upon the record made should have been discharged from custody.

It is therefore ordered that the judgment of the Supreme Court of California be reversed and the cause remanded for further proceedings not inconsistent with the views announced in the Dobbins Case, supra.

MAGGIE A. BRADFORD

v.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 243-252.)

Appeal—necessity of security for costs.

1. The right to prosecute a writ of error from a circuit court of appeals without giving security for costs is not given by the act of July 20, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 252, chap. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 706), providing for the prosecution of suits or actions in forma pauperis, as that act does not apply to appellate proceedings.
2. A circuit court of appeals cannot, without statutory authority, permit the prosecution in forma pauperis of a writ of error sued out of that court.

[No. 151.]

Submitted October 19, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

ON A CERTIFICATE from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, presenting the question whether the right exists to prosecute a writ of error from that court in forma pauperis, and whether, in the absence of such right, the court may permit such prosecution of the writ of error. Both questions answered in the negative.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This case is brought here on the following certificate:

"This was an action of tort. The plaintiff was a citizen of Tennessee, and the defendant a corporation organized under the laws of Virginia. The jurisdiction of the court below was wholly dependent upon

NOTE.—On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

195 U. S.

diversity of citizenship. There was a jury and verdict against the plaintiff in error and a judgment accordingly.

[244] "The plaintiff in error sued out this writ of error, and has lodged with the clerk of this court, within the time required by law, a full transcript of the record in the court below. The *clerk refusing to docket same unless the plaintiff would deposit with him the sum of $35, as security for taxable costs, as required by rule 16 of this court, the plaintiff has filed her petition, duly verified, praying to be allowed to prosecute her writ in forma pauperis, and that the clerk be required to docket said transcript, and that the rule requiring a deposit to cover costs be dispensed with. The petition shows a state of facts which entitle the plaintiff to prosecute her writ of error as a poor person, provided the act of July 20, 1892, 27 Stat. at L. 252, chap. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 706, applies to appellate proceedings.

"Because this court has doubts as to whether the act of Congress above mentioned applies to appellate proceedings, it is ordered that the foregoing statement be certified to the Supreme Court, and the instruction of that court be requested for the proper decision of the following questions which arise upon the petition and motion of the plaintiff in error:

"1. Does the act of July 20, 1892 (27 Stat. at L. 252, chap. 209, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 706), providing when a plaintiff may sue as a poor person, apply to the prosecution of a writ of error from this court?

"2. If that act of Congress does not apply to appellate proceedings, has this court any authority to permit the prosecution of a writ of error in forma pauperis?"

The act of July 20, 1892, above referred to, reads:

"An Act Providing When Plaintiff May Sue as a Poor Person and When Counsel Shall Be Assigned by the Court.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any citizen of the United States, entitled to commence any suit or action in any court of the United States, may commence and prosecute to conclusion any such suit or action without being required to prepay fees or costs, or give security therefor before or after bringing suit or action, upon filing in said court a statement under oath, in writing, that, because of his poverty, he is unable to pay the costs of said suit or action which he is about to commence, or to give security for the same, and that he believes

[245] he is entitled to the redress he seeks *by such suit or action, and setting forth briefly the nature of his alleged cause of action.
195 U. S.

"Sec. 2. That after any such suit or action shall have been brought, or that is now pending, the plaintiff may answer and avoid a demand for fees or security for costs by filing a like affidavit, and wilful false swearing in any affidavit provided for in this or the previous section shall be punishable as perjury is in other cases.

"Sec. 3. That the officers of the court shall issue, serve all process, and perform all duties in such cases, and witnesses shall attend as in other cases, and the plaintiff shall have the same remedies as are provided by law in other cases.

"Sec. 4. That the court may request any attorney of the court to represent such poor person, if it deems the cause worthy of a trial, and may dismiss any such cause so brought under this act if it be made to appear that the allegation of poverty is untrue, or if said court be satisfied that the alleged cause of action is frivolous or malicious.

"Sec. 5. That judgment may be rendered for costs at the conclusion of the suit, as in other cases: Provided, That the United States shall not be liable for any of the costs thus incurred."

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney submitted the cause for Bradford. Mr. James Gallagher was on his brief:

Inasmuch as the case at bar was removed to the circuit court, it is to be considered, for all purposes, as having originated in said court, thus distinguishing it from the Galloway Case, which arose in a state court. The former case is within the equity of the act of Congress.

Fuller v. Montague, 53 Fed. 206.

The only case to the contrary is The Presto, 35 C. C. A. 394, 93 Fed. 522.

The Tennessee statute which authorized the commencement of this case in forma pauperis, in the state court, is narrower in its terms and seemingly more restricted in scope than the act of Congress upon the same subject; nevertheless it has been construed by the supreme court of that state to extend to the prosecution of appellate proceedings.

Philips v. Rudle, 1 Yerg. 121; Brumley v. Hayworth, 3 Yerg. 421; Mowry v. Davenport, 6 Lea, 80; Andrews v. Page, 2 Heisk. 634.

Independent of any statute, the circuit court of appeals possesses inherent power to allow the prosecution of a writ of error in forma pauperis in any case wherein there might otherwise be a failure of justice.

Bland v. Lamb, 2 Jac. & W. 402; Brinkley v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 95 Fed. 345.

Mr. Frank P. Poston submitted the cause for the Southern Railway Company. Mr. W. A. Henderson was on his brief:

An appeal or writ of error is a statutory proceeding, and is not a common-law right. The mere fact that the appellant is a pauper does not, of itself, relieve him of the necessity of giving an appeal bond; and the general rule is that express statutory authority must be had for an appeal in forma pauperis.

The Presto, 35 C. C. A. 394, 39 Fed. 523; McClain v. Williams, 10 S. D. 332, 43 L. R. A. 287, 73 N. W. 72; Sullivan v. Haug, 82 Mich. 548, 10 L. R. A. 263, 46 N. W. 795; Bailey v. Kincaid, 57 Hun, 516, 11 N. Y. Supp. 294; Butler v. Jarvis, 117 N. Y. 115, 22 N. E. 561; Halloran v. Texas & N. O. R. Co. 40 Tex. 465; Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413, 11 S. E. 782.

In Sage v. Central R. Co. 96 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 643, it was held that there can be no appeal without the taking of security for costs, or costs and damages, and this must be done by the court, or judge, or justice.

In Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 21, 23 L. ed. 788, this court held that the regulation of the appellate power of this court was conferred upon Congress, and Congress having given an appeal or writ of error only in certain specified cases, the implication is irresistible that those errors and irregularities which can be reviewed only by appeal or writ of error cannot be reviewed in this court in any other cases than those in which those processes are given.

In Woods v. Davidson, 57 Miss. 206, the supreme court of Mississippi held, under a statute of that state similar to the act of Congress, that a litigant who has commenced a suit in forma pauperis in a justice's court cannot appeal without bond from an adverse decision,—basing this rule upon the proposition that the right to appeal is statutory, and not a common-law one, and that he is deprived of no constitutional right, because he has had his day in court.

In the case of Galloway v. State Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 178, 46 L. ed. 1111, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811, which involved an application for leave to prosecute a writ of error to a state court without giving security, as required by § 1000 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 712), under the act of Congress of July 20, 1892, this court held that that act had no application to proceedings in the Supreme Court.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

After the passage of the act of July 20, 1892, many applications were made to this court for leave to prosecute writs of error or appeals in forma pauperis, and were uniformly denied, as we were of opinion that the act had no relation to proceedings in this court. And we so stated in Galloway v. State Nat. Bank, 186 U. S. 177, 46 L. ed. 1111, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 811, where leave was asked to prosecute a writ of error to a state court without giving security as required by § 1000 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 712). The ruling would have been the same if the review of the judgment or decree of a court of the United States had been sought; because, in our view, the statute refers only to the court of original jurisdiction. And the same ruling must necessarily obtain in the circuit courts of appeals.

The act consists of five sections. Of these, §§ 3 and 4 obviously relate to the trial or hearing. By § 5 "judgment may be rendered for costs at the conclusion of the suit, as in other cases," which we take to mean judgment at the close of the trial or hearing, and not judgment then and also judgment in appellate proceedings, or, in case of such proceedings, no judgment for costs below until judgment rendered above.

*The first section relates to the commence-[248]ment and carrying forward of a suit or action without plaintiff being required to prepay fees or costs or to give security therefor, whether the fees or costs accrue at the beginning or during the progress of the suit or action. The application is to be made at the outset, and the order, if granted, covers the fees or costs accruing when or after the suit or action is commenced. And this result is secured by the words "and its prosecution to conclusion." That conclusion is the termination of the suit or action in the court where it is commenced. The second section provides for a similar application after the suit or action has been brought.

The words "suit or action" are used in both sections, and the applicant is required to set forth "his alleged cause of action," and by § 4 the case may be dismissed "if it be made to appear that the allegation of poverty is untrue, or if said court be satisfied that the alleged cause of action is frivolous or malicious."

Lord Coke defined "action" to be "a legal demand of one's right," and cause of action comprises every fact a plaintiff is obliged to prove in order to obtain judgment; or, conversely, every fact the defendant would have the right to traverse (Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Dixon, 179 U. S. 131, 139, 45 L. ed. 121, 125, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67). The words "action" and "cause of action" are not ordinarily applicable to writs of error, and, in our opinion, were obviously not so applicable here, but used diverso intuitu. And this is so whether a writ of error be considered a new proceeding or a continuation of the original proceeding, as it is usually regarded in the Federal courts. Cohen v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 410, 5 L. ed. 292; Nations v. Johnson, 24 How. 205, 16 L. ed. 632; Re Chetwood, 165 U. S. 443, 461, 41 L. ed. 782, 788, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385.

A leading case on the subject is Moore v. Cooley, 2 Hill, 412. The statute of New York under consideration in that case was as follows (2 Rev. Stat. N. Y. 2d ed. 1836, p. 362):

[249] "Every poor person, not being of ability to sue, who shall have a cause of action against any other, may petition the *court in which such action is depending, or in which it is intended to be brought, for leave to prosecute as a poor person, and to have counsel and attorneys assigned to conduct his suit."

After quoting the statute Judge Cowen said:

"Strictly speaking, an error on which a writ lies is not a cause of action; for, as Lord Coke says, there is a distinction between writs and actions; and under this distinction he instances actions and writs of error. 2 Inst. 39, 40. And yet, a release of all actions extends to writs of error, when anything may be recovered or taken by way of restitution under or in consequence of the writ of error. Co. Litt. 288, b; Bacon, Abr. Release, I. 2. This, however, I take it, proceeds rather upon an equitable, and therefore extended, construction of the words in the release, beyond their strict meaning; for they generally reach the original matter out of which the error arose, that being the direct subject of an action if the matter be thrown open by the writ of error. The original matter being released, therefore, the words are very properly construed as reaching indirectly and in liberal construction to the writ of error itself, because that depends upon the original matter. Yet, in strictness, no book holds the word 'action,' or words 'cause of action,' to be identical with a writ of error or cause of a writ of error.

"There can be little doubt that the statute under which this motion is made should be construed strictly; for the pauper comes to litigate entirely at the expense of others. He is neither to pay his own attorneys or counsel, nor is he liable to his adversary should the suit prove to be groundless. He thus enjoys a great privilege and exemption from the common lot of men, whereby, in respect to causes of action proper, he becomes, as Lord Bacon says, rather able to vex than unable to sue. Hist. of Hen. VII."

Lord Bacon was referring to the statute 11 Hen. VII., chap. 12, and his language is elsewhere translated or explained to mean "that the charity of the legislature thought it better that the *poor man should be able[250] to vex than that he should not be able to sue." 6 Bacon's Works, 161.

So in Bristol v. United States, 129 Fed. 87, where the circuit court of appeals for the seventh circuit held that the act of Congress of July 20, 1892, did not entitle a defendant in a criminal case to prosecute a writ of error out of the circuit court of appeals in forma pauperis, Jenkins, J., delivering the opinion, said:

"We do not think it can properly be said that a writ of error is a suit or action within the statute so far as respects a writ of error in a criminal case. Were it not for the words 'prosecute to conclusion,' we doubt if any court would hold that the act applied to an appeal or writ of error in a civil cause. The applicant, by the statute, must declare the nature of his cause of action. Surely an erroneous ruling by the trial court cannot be held to furnish a 'cause of action,' as that phrase is commonly understood. The statute, by that term, in our judgment, refers to a legal demand by one against another, not to the rulings of a trial court. Under a somewhat similar statute of the state of New York, its supreme court, speaking through Judge Cowen, held that the provisions of the statute do not extend to writs of error. Moore v. Cooley, 2 Hill, 412."

We adhere to the view that the act, on its face, does not apply to appellate proceedings, and that it does not is sustained by other considerations.

The act of July 20, 1892, does not purport to grant the right to prosecute a writ of error or an appeal, and that right depends on a statute, and not on the common law. United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 171, 2 L. ed. 401. Errors can be reviewed only in the cases in which those processes are given by statute. Ex parte Parks, 93 U. S. 21, 23 L. ed. 788.

Section 11 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, creating the circuit court of appeals, provides:

"And all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of *error,[251] shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error, and any judge of the circuit courts of appeals, in respect of cases brought or to be brought to that court, shall have the same powers and duties as to the allowance of appeals or writs of error, and the conditions of such allowance, as now by law belong to the justices or judges in respect of the existing courts of the United States respectively." [26 Stat. at L. 829, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 552.]

There are several such provisions, and, among others, § 1000 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 712) reads:

"Every justice or judge signing a citation on any writ of error shall, except in cases brought up by the United States, or by direction of any department of the government, take good and sufficient security that the plaintiff in error or the appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect; and, if he fails to make his plea good, shall answer all damages and costs, where the writ is a supersedeas and stays execution, or all costs only where it is not a supersedeas as aforesaid."

Clearly, an act giving the right to prosecute in forma pauperis cannot be extended by implication beyond its terms, in conflict with existing provisions in relation to writs of error and appeals.

The result is that the first question must be answered in the negative.

2. The second question is whether, if the act of July 20, 1892, does not apply to appellate proceedings, the court of appeals has "any authority to permit the prosecution of a writ of error in forma pauperis."

We answer that that court has no such power unless derived from statute, and we find no statute authorizing any order to that effect.

Costs are the creatures of statute, and it is settled that authority to permit prosecution in forma pauperis must be given by statute.

[252] *By § 2 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, the costs and fees in the Supreme Court are made the costs and fees in the circuit courts of appeals, and the latter courts are empowered to establish all rules and regulations for the conduct of the business of the court.

And it appears that on November 21, 1898, rule 16 of the circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit was so amended as to read that, "at the time of filing the record, the plaintiff in error or appellant shall deposit with the clerk the sum of $35 as security for costs, except in cases in which the proper showing is made, and an order of this court is entered thereon, allowing the cause to proceed in forma pauperis."

But the exception must be assumed to have been framed on a construction of the act of July 20, 1892, which we have been constrained to hold it does not bear, and the exception falls in the absence of a statute authorizing such an order.

We need not advert to the distinction between costs and fees, but it should be noted that the power of the circuit courts of appeals, in respect of the distribution of costs, or in dealing with its officers in respect of their fees, under special circumstances, is not here involved.

Both questions answered in the negative.

JOHN T. NEW, Plff. in Err.,
v.

TERRITORY OF OKLAHOMA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 252-256.)

Appeal—from Oklahoma supreme court—not maintainable in capital cases—stare decisis.

1. Lack of statutory authority precludes a review in the Federal Supreme Court of judgments of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma in capital cases.
2. The Federal Supreme Court will not consider itself bound on the question of its jurisdiction by a prior case in which jurisdiction was entertained without any suggestion as to the want of it.

[No. 226.]

Argued October 14, 17, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction of murder in the District Court of Washita County, in that Territory. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 12 Okla. 172, 70 Pac. 198.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Hugh T. Taggart argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Culp & Giddings and John J. Weed, filed briefs for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Percy C. Simons argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

John T. New was tried on an indictment for murder in the district court of Washita county, Oklahoma territory, found guilty, and his punishment fixed by the jury at imprisonment for life.

The crimes act of Oklahoma provided that every person convicted of murder should "suffer death or imprisonment at hard labor in the territorial penitentiary for life, at the discretion of the jury." Okla. Stat. 1893, chap. 25, § 13, p. 456; Okla. Stat. 1890, chap. 25, art. 17, § 13.

Judgment was entered on the verdict, and New was sentenced accordingly. He carried the case to the supreme court of the territory, and the judgment was affirmed. This writ of error was then allowed, and the objection is made that this court has no jurisdiction to review the judgments of the supreme court of Oklahoma in criminal cases, for want of statutory provision to that effect.

NOTE.—On review of decisions of territorial courts by the Federal Supreme Court—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

By the "Act to Provide a Temporary Government for the Territory of Oklahoma," approved May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182), "the legislative power and authority of said territory" was vested in the governor and legislative assembly, and the power extended "to all rightful subjects of [254] legislation not *inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States."

Section 28 provided: "That the Constitution and all the laws of the United States not locally inapplicable shall, except so far as modified by this act, have the same force and effect as elsewhere within the United States; and all acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this act are, as to their effect in said territory of Oklahoma, hereby repealed;" and by a proviso § 1850 of the Revised Statutes, requiring the submission of territorial laws to Congress, was made inapplicable to Oklahoma.

By § 11 certain enumerated "chapters and provisions of the Compiled Laws of the state of Nebraska, in force November 1, 1889, in so far as they are locally applicable, and not in conflict with the laws of the United States or with this act, are hereby extended to and put in force in the territory of Oklahoma until after the adjournment of the first session of the legislative assembly of said territory, namely: . . . and of part three thereof, entitled 'Criminal Code.'"

This temporary provision was supplanted some months subsequently by laws passed by the Oklahoma legislative assembly. Okla. Stat. 1890. These statutes were elaborate and comprehensive, and embraced a crimes act, with due provision for procedure.

Section 9 of the organic act reads as follows:

"Sec. 9. That the judicial power of said territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and justices of the peace.

". . . and the said supreme and district courts, respectively, shall possess chancery as well as common-law jurisdiction and authority for redress of all wrongs committed against the Constitution or laws of the United States or of the territory, affecting persons or property. . . . Writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of said district courts to the *supreme [255] 195 U. S.

court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law, but in no case removed to the supreme court shall trial by jury be allowed in said court. Writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of said supreme court shall be allowed and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by oath or affirmation of either party or other competent witness, shall exceed $5,000."

So far as review by this court is concerned, this is the usual provision, and is limited to civil cases. We are then brought to inquire whether any other statute may be invoked to sustain our jurisdiction.

Section 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), provided that appeals or writs of error might be taken from the district and circuit courts directly to this court in certain enumerated classes of cases, among which were "cases of conviction of a capital or otherwise infamous crime." By amendment the words "or otherwise infamous" were stricken out, and it was declared that cases of convictions for an infamous crime not capital might be carried to the circuit courts of appeals. 29 Stat. at L. 492, chap. 68, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 556.

By § 6, the judgments of the circuit courts of appeals are made final in cases arising under the criminal laws.

And § 15 provides: "That the circuit court of appeal in cases in which the judgments of the circuit courts of appeal are made final by this act shall have the same appellate jurisdiction, by writ of error or appeal, to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the supreme courts of the several territories as by this act they may have to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the district court and circuit courts; and for that purpose the several territories shall, by orders of the Supreme Court, to be made from time to time, be assigned to particular circuits."

But the case before us is a capital case, and not included in *the criminal cases to [256] which the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of appeals extends. It is suggested that, as it follows that if this court has no jurisdiction, convictions for crimes not capital are reviewable on a second appeal, while convictions for a capital crime are not, this involves an absurdity, hardship or injustice presumably not intended. We held, however, in Folsom v. United States, 160 U. S. 121, 40 L. ed. 363, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222, that the intention was plain, and that the statute must be taken as it read.

There remains the act of February 6, 1889 (25 Stat. at L. 655, chap. 113, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 569), by the 6th section of which it was provided that "in all cases of conviction of crime, the punishment of which provided by law is death, tried before any court of the United States, the final judgment of such court against the respondent shall, upon the application of the respondent, be re-examined, reversed, or affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States upon a writ of error." As to this, however, it was ruled in Cross v. United States, 145 U. S. 571, 36 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842, that, in view of the terms of the whole section, the allowance of a writ of error to any appellate tribunal was not contemplated, but merely to review the judgment of the trial court.

It is thus seen that there is no statute giving appellate jurisdiction to this court over the judgments of the supreme court of Oklahoma in capital cases.

Reference is made to Queenan v. Oklahoma, 190 U. S. 548, 47 L. ed. 1175, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 762, in which we entertained jurisdiction in the absence of any suggestion as to the want of it. United States v. Simms, 1 Cranch, 252, 2 L. ed. 98, is an instance of similar inadvertence, and when cited in United States v. More, 3 Cranch, 159, 172, 2 L. ed. 397, 401, Chief Justice Marshall disposed of it in these words: "No question was made, in that case, as to the jurisdiction. It passed sub silentio, and the court does not consider itself as bound by that case."

Writ of error dismissed.

[257]*NATIONAL EXCHANGE BANK OF Tiffin, OHIO, Plff. in Err.,

v.

SOLOMON L. WILEY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 257-270.)

Constitutional law—full faith and credit—collateral attack on foreign judgment—due process of law.

1. A judgment taken under a warrant of attorney annexed to a promissory note, authorizing confession of judgment "in favor of the holder," is not protected by the Federal

NOTE.—As to the validity of personal judgments rendered upon constructive service of process—see note to Moyer v. Bucks, 16 L. R. A. 231.

On the effect of a judgment obtained upon an unauthorized appearance by an attorney—see note to Williams v. Johnson, 21 L. R. A. 848.

Constitution and laws, when sued on in another state, from collateral attack upon the ground that the party in whose behalf it was rendered was not in fact the holder, because not the real owner of the note.

2. Due process of law is wanting in proceedings by which judgment is taken in a state court under a warrant of attorney annexed to a promissory note, authorizing confession of judgment "in favor of the holder," if the party in whose favor the judgment was rendered has ceased, before the commencement of the suit, to own the note, or to be entitled to receive the proceeds to its own use, since such judgment is, in legal effect, a personal judgment without service of process upon the defendants, and without their appearance in person or by an authorized attorney.

[No. 53.]

Argued November 4, 7, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Nebraska to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Douglas County, of that State, in favor of defendant in an action on a foreign judgment. Affirmed.

See same case below (Neb.) 92 N. W. 582.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. J. Boucher argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Constantine J. Smyth and Thomas D. Crane, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

It appears by the answer itself that the defendant executed and delivered to the plaintiff a note and warrant of attorney authorizing any attorney at law to appear for him without process, in any court of record, and confess judgment against him; that pursuant to such authority an attorney did appear for him in an action by the plaintiff against him on the note, in a court of general jurisdiction, and confess judgment against him; and that such judgment constituted the cause of action set up in the petition. The answer thus brings this case clearly within the case of Tcel v. Yost, 128 N. Y. 387, 13 L. R. A. 796, 28 N. E. 353.

Under the full faith and credit clause of the Constitution of the United States, the judgment of the Ohio court is conclusive that the plaintiff therein was the holder of the note.

Richtmeyer v. Remsen, 38 N. Y. 206; Reid v. Spoon, 66 N. C. 415; Fisher v. Williams, 56 Vt. 586.

Whether or not the plaintiff was the holder of the note is not a jurisdictional question, but is, instead, a quasi-jurisdictional question, and the judgment of the Ohio court is conclusive thereon.

12 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 211; Reinach v. Atlantic
184 195 U. S.

& G. W. R. Co. 58 Fed. 43; Betts v. Bagley, 12 Pick. 572; Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 132; Wright v. Douglass, 10 Barb. 97; Ex parte Sternes, 77 Cal. 156, 11 Am. St. Rep. 251, 19 Pac. 275; Bostwick v. Skinner, 80 Ill. 153; Wing v. Dodge, 80 Ill. 564; Young v. Lorain, 11 Ill. 624, 52 Am. Dec. 463.

The case of Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369, is decisive of the case at bar.

A statute of Ohio provides that, in any action in that state on a contract of insurance made therein with a foreign insurance company, service of process on the resident agent of such company shall be as effectual as though the same were served on the principal. Judgment was rendered in Ohio, in an action against an Indiana insurance company, the only service of process being upon its resident agent, there being no appearance by the company. This court held in the case of Lafayette Ins. Co. v. French, 18 How. 404, 15 L. ed. 451, that such judgment, when sued on in Indiana, was entitled to the same faith and credit in Indiana as in Ohio, under the Constitution and laws of the United States. It is impossible to distinguish that case from the case at bar.

This judgment has the same force and effect as a judgment on adversary proceedings.

Snyder v. Critchfield, 44 Neb. 66, 62 N. W. 306.

Mr. James H. McIntosh argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The jurisdiction of the court and the facts upon which jurisdiction is based may always be questioned, whether the findings formally recite that the court has acquired jurisdiction, or not.

Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 21 L. ed. 897; Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 22 L. ed. 70; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 23 L. ed. 271; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 33 L. ed. 538, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Thormann v. Frame, 176 U. S. 356, 44 L. ed. 503, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 45 L. ed. 804, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551.

The right to question collaterally the jurisdiction of the court opens inquiry into all the facts upon which the jurisdiction is based.

Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369; Thormann v. Frame, 176 U. S. 350, 44 L. ed. 500, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 45 L. ed. 804, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551.

An authority given by warrant of attorney to confess judgment against the maker of the note must be clear and explicit and strictly pursued, and the courts cannot supply any supposed omissions of the parties.

195 U. S.

Spence v. Emerine, 46 Ohio St. 433, 15 Am. St. Rep. 634, 21 N. E. 866; Cushman v. Welsh, 19 Ohio St. 536; Cowie v. Allaway, 8 T. R. 257; Henshall v. Matthew, 1 Dowl. P. C. 217; Foster v. Clagget, 6 Dowl. P. C. 524; Manufacturers' & M. Bank v. St. John, 5 Hill, 497; Kahn v. Lesser, 97 Wis. 217, 72 N. W. 739; Morris v. Bank of Commerce, 67 Tex. 602, 4 S. W. 246.

The holder of the note is the owner thereof,—one who in good faith acquired the same for a valuable consideration.

1 Randolph, Com. Paper, § 14, and note.

The following cases, on the one hand, involved strictly jurisdictional questions:

Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565, as to whether or not service of process within the state was essential to the validity of a personal judgment.

Griffith v. Frazier, 8 Cranch, 9, 3 L. ed. 471, as to the validity of the appointment of an administrator of the estate of a living person.

Wise v. Withers, 3 Cranch, 331, 2 L. ed. 457, as to the validity of a sentence by a court-martial against a person not in the military service.

Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 241, 2 L. ed. 608, as to the validity of a judgment in proceedings in rem, where the res was not seized within the bailiwick.

Galpin v. Page, 18 Wall. 350, 21 L. ed. 959, as to the validity of a decree charging the property of an absent defendant, where publication has not been made in strict accordance with the statute.

Clarke v. Clarke, 178 U. S. 186, 44 L. ed. 1028, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873, as to the validity of title claimed, under the inheritance laws of one state, to lands lying in another state.

Examples of quasi-jurisdictional questions, on the other hand, questions, namely, constituting merely preliminary facts necessary to be proved, not for the purpose of giving the court authority to bind the person or the thing, but to set the machinery of the law in motion, and authorize the court to act after jurisdiction of the person or of the thing has been acquired, are the following:

Averments of citizenship necessary to give the Federal courts jurisdiction.

Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. v. Iowa Homestead Co. 123 U. S. 552, 31 L. ed. 202, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 217.

The existence and amount of the debt of a petitioning debtor in an involuntary bankruptcy.

Michaels v. Post, 21 Wall. 398, 22 L. ed. 520.

The fact that there is sufficient personal property to pay the debts of a decedent when application is made to sell his real estate.

Comstock v. Crawford, 3 Wall. 396, 18 L. ed. 34.

The fact that one of the heirs of an estate had reached his majority, when the act provided that the estate should not be sold if all the heirs were minors.

Thompson v. Tolmie, 2 Pet. 157, 7 L. ed. 381.

The question as to whether or not a contract gave certain trustees the powers the court found it gave them.

Reinach v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 Fed. 43.

The question as to whether or not the courts of another state were right in discharging a contract there made.

Betts v. Bagley, 12 Pick. 572.

The question as to whether or not the domicile of a decedent was within the state so as to authorize the issuance of letters of administration, the property itself being within the state.

Holcomb v. Phelps, 16 Conn. 132.

When the parties are in court, and the jurisdiction depends on a fact litigated in the suit, and is adjudged in favor of that party who avers the jurisdiction.

Wright v. Douglass, 10 Barb. 97.

Simmons v. Saul, 138 U. S. 439, 34 L. ed. 1054, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 369, which the plaintiff declares is decisive of the case at bar, is a good illustration of the distinction between strictly jurisdictional and quasi-jurisdictional questions. In that case the property in question, as well as the domicile of the decedent, was within the jurisdiction of the court. The court had jurisdiction over the thing. Thereupon, having acquired jurisdiction over the thing, its subsequent acts in disposing of it were, at most, quasi-jurisdictional. And such was the ground of the court's decision.

These quasi-jurisdictional questions bear no resemblance to the question involved in this suit. The question involved here is, Did the court have jurisdiction over Wiley? Was Wiley ever in court? Did the facts exist essential to the court's jurisdiction over the person? This, therefore, was not a quasi-jurisdictional, but a strictly jurisdictional, question.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action upon a judgment rendered in one of the courts of Ohio, and the question to be considered is whether the final judgment under review gave to the proceedings in the Ohio court such faith and credit as are required by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The Constitution, art. 4, § 1, provides that "full faith and credit shall be given in each state to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other state. And the Congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records, and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof." The statute enacted in execution of that power (Rev. Stat. § 905, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 677) provides for the authentication of the records and judicial proceedings of the several states and territories and any country subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and declares that "the said records and judicial proceedings, so authenticated, shall have such faith and credit given to them in every court within the United States as they have by law or usage in the courts of the state from which they are taken."

The Wiley Construction Company, a Massachusetts corporation, and Wiley, the defendant in error, executed and delivered to the National Exchange Bank, the plaintiff in error, a written instrument,—being a note with warrant of attorney annexed,—dated Tiffin, Ohio, April 26th, 1884, in which, for value received, they jointly and severally promised to pay to that bank, or order, on the 1st day of October, 1884, at its office in that city, $10,000, with 8 per cent interest after maturity. The instrument authorized N. L. Brewer, or any attorney at law in the United States, or elsewhere, to appear before any court of record, after such obligation became due, waive the issuing and service of process, and confess judgment against the obligors or either of them "in favor of the holder" for the amount then appearing to be due, together with the cost of suit; and thereupon to release all errors and writs of error, and, in behalf of the obligors or either of them, waive all right to appeal and stay of execution.

On the 31st day of July, 1899, nearly fifteen years after the maturity of the note, the National Exchange Bank instituted suit against both obligors in the court of common pleas of Seneca county, Ohio,—a court of general jurisdiction in that state,—to recover the balance due on that obligation, which was alleged to be $5,772.70, with interest from May 9th, 1887, at 8 per cent. Upon it was credited a payment of $6,311.75, as of May 9th, 1887.

It may be here stated that there was no indorsement on the note showing that it had ever been assigned or transferred by the original payee.

With the petition in that suit were filed copies of the paper constituting the note and warrant of attorney. With it was also filed an answer, in which an attorney, assuming, by virtue of the above warrant, and not otherwise, to be the attorney of the construction company and of Wiley, confessed judgment against them for the full amount claimed by the bank.

On the very day of the bringing of that suit judgment was entered against the defendants therein for $11,419.68, being the amount of the obligation with interest at 8 per cent from May 9th, 1887; the judgment reciting that the attorney who acted under the warrant of attorney, naming him in person, by virtue of that warrant, entered the appearance of the defendants, waived the issuing and service of process, confessed judgment, and released and waived all exceptions, errors, and right of appeal.

The present action was by the National Exchange Bank against Wiley on the judgment rendered in the Ohio suit. The defendant disputed the plaintiff's right to recover upon several grounds, one of which was that, prior to the institution of the Ohio suit, and more than twelve years before the commencement of the present action, the note had been fully discharged, so far as he was concerned, pursuant to an agreement between him and the holder. But on this writ of error we are concerned only with the part of the defense which distinctly raises a Federal question.

The defendant alleged that the warrant of attorney annexed to the note of April 26th, 1884, did not authorize a confession of judgment against the obligors except in favor of the "holder;" that so far from the National Exchange Bank being such holder when it brought the Ohio suit, the Tiffin National Bank, as early as March 2, 1885, purchased, received, and *became the holder of the obligation, and thereafter remained and still was the holder; that, therefore, the attorney professing to act in behalf of the defendants in the Ohio suit had no authority, in virtue of such warrant of attorney, to represent them in that suit, or to confess judgment in favor of the National Exchange Bank; that the defendant was neither served with process in the Ohio suit nor had any notice thereof; that the Ohio court was entirely without authority or jurisdiction to render judgment against him in favor of the plaintiff bank; and that its authority or jurisdiction could not be upheld consistently with the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The plaintiff insisted that it was the holder of the note when put in suit; further, that the court in Ohio had full power and jurisdiction to render the judgment in question, and that neither personal service of process on nor notice to the obligors was necessary in order to give that court jurisdiction of the parties and subject-matter.

Both at the trial and in the supreme court of Nebraska the bank contended that full faith and credit, as required by the Constitution and laws of the United States, would not be given to the proceedings in the Ohio suit if the judgment in its favor was held not to be conclusive in respect of the authority of the Ohio court to render such judgment.

It is unnecessary to set out all the instructions. It is sufficient to say that the jury were, in substance, instructed that the warrant of attorney authorized a confession of judgment in favor of the holder of the note; that it was to be presumed upon the showing made by the record of the Ohio court that it had jurisdiction to render the judgment sued on; and that such presumption continued throughout this case unless the defendant, by a preponderance of evidence, proved that the plaintiff bank was not, in fact, the holder of the note when put in suit in Ohio. The jury were also instructed that if the plaintiff was found not to be such holder, the verdict should be for the defendant.

*The jury's verdict was for the defendant [263] and the judgment thereon was affirmed. Upon the issue as to the ownership of the note at the time it was sued on in Ohio there was, as the supreme court of Nebraska held, proof both ways.

Did the Ohio court have jurisdiction to render the judgment in question? It is a settled doctrine, Chief Justice Marshall said, in Rose v. Himely, 4 Cranch, 269, 2 L. ed. 617, that the effect of every judgment must depend upon the power of the court to render that judgment. In determining whether the Ohio court had authority to render the judgment against the obligors in the note, we must look first into the decisions of the highest court of that state.

In Osborn v. Hawley (1850) 19 Ohio, 130, the plaintiff declared as indorsee of a promissory note, to which was attached a power of attorney to confess judgment. The report of that case is very meager, but in the course of the opinion the court said: "The power of attorney is not negotiable, and when the legal title to the note is transferred the power of attorney becomes invalid, and no power whatever can be exercised under it, for the benefit of the indorsee; and he holds the note as if no such power had ever been attached to it."

In Marsden v. Soper (1860) 11 Ohio St. 503, the plaintiff declared on a note to which was attached a warrant of attorney authorizing a confession of judgment "in favor of any holder." A suit was brought on the note in one of the courts of Ohio by the indorsee thereof, and judgment was confessed under a warrant of attorney annexed to the note. The question was whether the court had jurisdiction of the persons of the defendants so as to authorize a judgment affecting their rights. The supreme court of Ohio said: "It will be noticed that the plaintiff in this judgment is not the payee of the note on which judgment is taken, but an indorsee; and that the warrant of attorney under which judgment was confessed purports to authorize such confession 'in favor of any holder of this obligation,' after the same becomes due. But, it was held, in broad and general terms, in the case of Osborn v. Hawley, 19 Ohio, *130, that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment, attached to a note, and forming a part of the same instrument, is not negotiable, and when the note is transferred becomes invalid and inoperative. It is true, the report of that case does not inform us whether the warrant of attorney in that case purported to authorize the confession of a judgment in favor of the payee of the note alone, or whether its terms extended, as in this case, to any holder of the note after due. But, however this may have been in that case, we suppose that, if this judgment rested upon the confession under the warrant of attorney alone, it would be very questionable whether the court of common pleas had any rightful jurisdiction of the defendants in the judgment."

In Cushman v. Welsh, 19 Ohio St. 536, 539, the warrant of attorney authorized a confession of judgment "in favor of the legal holder." The note there in question was payable to order, and had not been regularly indorsed to the party who in fact purchased and owned it, and in whose name suit was brought. The question in the case was whether the confession under the warrant of attorney authorized judgment in favor of the purchaser. The court said: "Though he might, as the owner of the note in equity, have brought an action thereon, under the provisions of the Code, in his own name, against the makers of the note, it does not follow that he could obtain judgment by confession of their warrant of attorney attached to the note. That depends on the extent of the power conferred by the warrant. The attorney can do nothing more than execute the power conferred by his warrant; moreover, 'all authorities of this sort must be strictly pursued.' Cowie v. Allaway, 8 T. R. 257. 'Indeed, formal instruments of this sort are ordinarily subjected to a strict interpretation, and the authority is never extended beyond that which is given in terms, or which is necessary and proper for carrying the authority so given into full effect.' Story, Agency, § 68. Now, the power conferred by the terms of the instrument in this case was, to confess judgment *only 'in favor of the legal holder' of the note. The plaintiff below was not the 'legal' holder of the note, for the note had not been indorsed to him. He could become the 'legal holder' of the note only 'by indorsement thereon,' as authorized by the statute. Swan & C. Stat. 862; Avery v. Latimer, 14 Ohio, 542. The waiving of process, and confession of judgment in favor of the plaintiff below, was not, then, within the authority conferred by the power of attorney. Under the rule of interpretation applicable to such instruments, we must conclude that the jurisdiction of the defendants below, obtained through the warrant of attorney only, and the confession of judgment by means thereof, exceeded the authority conferred by the defendants in their power of attorney, and that the court, therefore, erred in overruling their motion to set aside the judgment, irregularly obtained against them."

In Watson v. Paine, 25 Ohio St. 340, which was an action upon a judgment based on a warrant of attorney attached to a promissory note, and which authorized any attorney at law to confess judgment in favor of the holder of the note, the point was made that the warrant of attorney did not authorize the waiving of process or an appearance for the defendants in an action brought by an indorsee. The members of the supreme court of Ohio were divided in opinion on that point, and it was left undecided. The case went off upon another ground, but Mellvaine, J., delivering the judgment of the court, expressed his individual opinion that a power to confess judgment in favor of any holder of the note may be exerted as well in favor of an indorsee as of the payee.

But in Clements v. Hull, 35 Ohio St. 141-143, it was held that, under the Code of Civil Procedure, a warrant of attorney authorizing judgment to be confessed in favor of the holder of a note could be executed in favor of the equitable owner and holder, being the real party in interest. The court said: "The scope of the power is not limited in this case as it was in the case Cushman v. Welsh, 19 Ohio St. 536, in favor of the legal holder only. The authority here given is 'to confess *judgment in favor of the holder of said note,' and we think these words were intended, and should be construed, to embrace any holder who might lawfully prosecute an action on said note, in his own name and for his own use."

The latest case in the supreme court of Ohio is Spence v. Emerine, 46 Ohio St. 433, 440, 441, 15 Am. St. Rep. 634, 21 N. E. 866. There the note was payable to a named person or bearer, and the warrant of attorney authorized any attorney to appear for the obligor in any court of record in Ohio, and confess judgment for the amount then due, and to release all errors and the right of appeal. The confession was in favor of one to whom the note had been transferred by delivery merely. The question was as to the power of the court to render the judgment. The supreme court of Ohio, after referring to its prior adjudications, said: "Whether the warrant of attorney can be executed for the benefit of a holder of the note other than the payee must depend upon the language of the warrant itself. But it is an established principle that an authority given by warrant of attorney to confess a judgment against the maker of the note must be clear and explicit and strictly pursued, and we cannot supply any supposed omissions of the parties. Cushman v. Welsh, 19 Ohio St. 536; Cowie v. Allaway, 8 T. R. 257; Henshall v. Matthew, 1 Dowl. P. C. 217; Foster v. Claggett, 6 Dowl. P. C. 524; Manufacturers' & M. Bank v. St. John, 5 Hill, 497. . . . The power of attorney attached to the note in controversy does not, in express language, authorize a confession of judgment in favor of anyone, not even of the payee; but if such authority might be implied as to the payee, we cannot, under the rule of a strict interpretation, extend that implication in favor of the defendant in error, to whom the note was transferred by delivery. . . .

[267] It will thus be seen that where it has been adjudged by the court that a power of attorney to confess a judgment may be executed in favor of a party other than the payee, it has been in cases where authority was expressly conferred to confess a judgment in favor of a *legalholder or holder of the note.

The decisions have all been based upon a strict interpretation of the power granted, without aiding any omission or defect in its terms by liberal intendment or construction. In accordance with the views which we have expressed, our conclusion is, that the warrant of attorney attached to the note sued on did not authorize a confession of judgment in favor of defendant in error, and, there having been no summons or other notice to the plaintiff in error of the bringing of the original action, the court of common pleas acquired no jurisdiction over the person of the plaintiff in error, and erred in rendering a judgment against him."

Looking at the face of the note, the National Exchange Bank insists that, being payee, it was also the holder within the meaning of the warrant of attorney, however strictly construed; that nothing else appearing than the note and warrant, a confession of judgment in its favor was in conformity with law and usage in Ohio, as declared by the highest court of that state. We incline to think that that position is justified by the above cases, when carefully considered; and assuming such to be the law as administered in Ohio,—which is the view most favorable to the plaintiff in error,—the question still remains whether the judgment, when sued on in another state, may be collaterally attacked upon the ground that the party in whose behalf it was rendered was not in fact the holder, because not the real owner of the note? This question must, we think, be answered in the affirmative. It can be so answered without doing violence to the Constitution or the laws of the United States. While the words of the warrant of attorney might be held to embrace any holder, even the equitable owner, who might rightfully prosecute an action on the note in his own name and for his own use (Clements v. Hull, 35 Ohio St. 141), yet if it was true, as alleged, that in 1885 the Tiffin National Bank purchased, received, and became the owner of the note, then the National Exchange Bank could not thereafter rightfully sue on it in *its name and [268] for its own use. Here, the confession of judgment was in behalf of the payee bank, which was not entitled to sue for its own use or to receive the proceeds if it sold the note in 1885, and never afterwards became the owner. The words, in the warrant of attorney, "in favor of the holder of this instrument," ought not, as between the National Exchange Bank and the obligors, to be construed as embracing the former after it ceased to be the owner of the note, but, at most, as only authorizing a confession of judgment in favor of the party who had become its real owner. It should not be supposed that the obligors intended, or that the payee bank ever understood them as intending, to authorize a confession of judgment in favor of one who was not entitled, of right, to demand payment from the obligors. That view accords with justice, and, not being inconsistent with the words in the warrant of attorney, it should be adopted.

Byles on Bills says that "holder is a general word, applied to anyone in actual or constructive possession of the bill, and entitled at law to recover or receive its contents from the parties to it." Sharswood's ed. 66. So in 1 Parsons on Bills & Notes it is said that "by the holder of negotiable paper is meant, in law, the owner of it; for if it be in his possession without title or interest he is, in general, considered only as the agent of the owner." p. 253. So that proof that the payee bank was not the owner of the note when it brought suit in Ohio tended to show that it was not in law the "holder" of the instrument within what must be regarded as the true meaning of the warrant of attorney, and, therefore, that the court was without authority to enter judgment by confession in its favor against the obligor. In other words, the defendant Wiley could show collaterally that he was not legally before the court—as he was not, in any just sense—if his appearance was entered and judgment confessed by one who had, in fact, at the time, no authority to do either; and, consequently, that the court was without jurisdiction to proceed except on legal notice to him, or without his ap-[269]pearance in *person or by an attorney authorized to represent him. If law and usage in Ohio were to the contrary, then such law and usage would be in conflict with the Constitution of the United States; for it is thoroughly settled that a personal judgment against one not before the court by actual service of process, or who did not appear in person or by an authorized attorney, would be invalid as not being in conformity with due process of law.

This whole subject was carefully considered in Thompson v. Whitman, 18 Wall. 457, 463, 469, 21 L. ed. 897, 899, 901. That was an action of trespass, brought in the circuit court of the United States for the southern district of New York, for taking and carrying away a certain sloop. The defendant, a New Jersey sheriff, had seized the vessel, pursuant, as he claimed, to a statute of New Jersey relating to the raking of clams, and proceeded against it before two justices of Monmouth county, New Jersey, by whom it was condemned and ordered to be sold. Those justices had no jurisdiction, under the statute, to act in the premises, unless the seizure and the offense both occurred in that county. The record of the case recited that the offense was committed and the seizure made in Monmouth county, and the contention was that the record was conclusive, both as to the jurisdiction of the court and the merits of the case. In that case it was held to be competent for the complaining party to prove collaterally that the vessel was not seized in Monmouth county, and therefore that the facts necessary to the exercise of jurisdiction by the New Jersey justices did not exist, although their existence was recited or affirmed in the official record made by them. Speaking by Mr. Justice Bradley, this court adjudged, in the language of Story, that the Constitution “did not make the judgments of other states domestic judgments to all intents and purposes, but only gave a general validity, faith, and credit to them, as evidence;” and, upon an elaborate review of previous cases, that “the jurisdiction of the court by which a judgment is rendered in any state may be of the 4th article of the Constitution and law of 1790 [Rev. Stat. § 905, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 677 et seq.], and notwithstanding the averments contained in the record of the judgment itself.” There has been no departure in the decisions of this court from the doctrines announced in Thompson v. Whitman, whether the question related to courts of general or to courts of limited or special jurisdiction. It has been repeatedly affirmed. Knowles v. Logansport Gaslight & Coke Co. 19 Wall. 58, 61, 22 L. ed. 70, 72; Hall v. Lanning, 91 U. S. 160, 165, 23 L. ed. 271, 273; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 732, 24 L. ed. 565, 572; Cole v. Cunningham, 133 U. S. 107, 112, 33 L. ed. 538, 541, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 269; Grover & B. Mach. Co. v. Radcliffe, 137 U. S. 287, 295, 34 L. ed. 670, 672, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92; Thormann v. Frame, 176 U. S. 350, 356, 44 L. ed. 500, 503, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Bell v. Bell, 181 U. S. 175, 178, 45 L. ed. 804, 807, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 551; Andrews v. Andrews, 188 U. S. 14, 34, 47 L. ed. 366, 370, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237. The general jurisdiction of the Ohio court undoubtedly embraced such a cause of action as was set forth in the suit on the note. But we are of opinion that that court had no authority or jurisdiction to render judgment against the obligors if the National Exchange Bank had in fact sold the note, and ceased, before the commencement of that suit, to own it or to be entitled to receive the proceeds to its own use. It was, in such case, in legal effect, a personal judgment without service of process upon the defendants, and without their appearance in person or by an authorized attorney. The proceedings were wanting in due process of law. The obligors never consented to judgment by confession in favor of one who was not the owner of the note or entitled to receive its proceeds, and the warrant of attorney cannot be held to have authorized such a confession.

[270]questioned in a collateral *proceeding in another state, notwithstanding the provision

Perceiving no error of law in the record the judgment must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

*JOSEPH S. KAUFMAN, Plff. in Err., [27
v.

W. T. TREDWAY, Trustee of the Estate of Gustave Kaufman, Bankrupt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 271-276.)

Error to state court—review of questions of fact — bankruptcy — preferences — evidence of creditor's knowledge—interest on preference—set-off.

1. Whether a bankrupt was insolvent at the time of giving an alleged preference, and whether the creditor had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, are questions of fact, as to which the Supreme Court of the United States is concluded by the verdict of the jury in a suit by the trustee to recover the amount of such preference.

NOTE.—On the right of a creditor of a bankrupt to set off new credits given after receipt.

2. Testimony of dealings between debtor and creditor some six or seven months prior to a transaction alleged to constitute a preference under the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3445), § 60, is admissible on the question of knowledge, in an action by the trustee to recover the amount of the preference.
3. The commencement by a trustee in bankruptcy of an action to recover a sum alleged to have been paid by the bankrupt to a creditor as a preference is a demand which starts the running of interest on the claim.
4. To secure the set-off in favor of a creditor who, after receiving a preference, in good faith extends further credit, without security, of property which becomes part of the debtor's estate, which is allowed by the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 544, 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3445), § 60c, to the extent of "the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy." It is not necessary that such property should remain a part of the debtor's estate until his adjudication in bankruptcy, or that it should be used in payment of preferred debts.

[No. 17.]

Argued October 24, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Superior Court of the State of Pennsylvania to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 3, of Allegheny County, in that State, in favor of a trustee in bankruptcy in an action to recover a sum of money alleged to have been given by the bankrupt to a creditor as a preference. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 256.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On August 20, 1898, Gustave Kaufman filed his petition in bankruptcy and was subsequently adjudged and decreed a bankrupt. W. T. Tredway was appointed trustee of his estate. On July 24, 1899, the trustee commenced suit in the court of common pleas, No. 3, of Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, to recover from Joseph S. Kaufman the sum of $4,086.64, charged to have been given, on August 4, 1898, by the bankrupt to the defendant as a preference. The trial resulted in a judgment in favor of the trustee for $1,086.64 and interest. This judgment was affirmed on appeal by the superior court. An application for a further appeal to the supreme court of the state was denied, and thereupon this writ of error was sued out to review the judgment of the superior court. Section 60 of the bankrupt act is as follows:

"Section 60. (a) A person shall be deemed to have given a preference if, being insolvent, he has procured or suffered a judgment to be entered against himself in favor of any person, or made a transfer of any of his property, and the effect of the *enforce-[272]ment of such judgment or transfer will be to enable any one of his creditors to obtain a greater percentage of his debt than any other of such creditors of the same class."

"(b) If a bankrupt shall have given a preference within four months before the filing of a petition, or after the filing of the petition and before the adjudication, and the person receiving it, or to be benefited thereby, or his agent acting therein, shall have had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, it shall be voidable by the trustee, and he may recover the property or its value from such person."

"(c) If a creditor has been preferred, and afterwards in good faith gives the debtor further credit, without security of any kind, for property which becomes a part of the debtor's estate, the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy may be set off against the amount which would otherwise be recoverable from him." 30 Stat. at L. 544, 562, chap. 541, July 1, 1898, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3445.

Messrs. Joseph A. Langfitt and William Kaufman argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. L. Castle argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William A. Stone and Stone & Stone, filed a brief for defendant in error.

*Mr. Justice Brewer, delivered the opinion-[273]ion of the court:

Whether the bankrupt was insolvent on August 4, 1898, when he paid the money to his brother, the defendant, and whether the latter had reasonable cause to believe that it was intended thereby to give a preference, are questions of fact, determined by the verdict of the jury, and not open to review in this court. Hedrick v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 167 U. S. 673, 677, 42 L. ed. 320, 322, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 922; E. Bement ing a preference—see note to Peterson v. Nash Bros. 55 L. R. A. 344.

195 U. S.

For set-off in bankruptcy cases generally—see note to Morgan v. Wordell, 55 L. R. A. 33.

& Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 70, 83, 46 L. ed. 1058, 1064, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905, and cases cited in opinions. It is suggested that the trial court erred in admitting testimony of transactions between the brothers some six or seven months prior to the payment by the bankrupt to the defendant; that such transactions were too remote from the time of the preference to throw light on the question of knowledge. We think that the testimony, whether of much or little value, was competent, and that it was not error for the court to admit it. Clune v. United States, 159 U. S. 590-592, 40 L. ed. 269, 270, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125.

We see no reason to doubt the propriety of allowing interest on the claim from the commencement of the action. Such commencement is itself a demand.

The principal contention, however, is that the state court erred in ruling that the sum of $767, loaned by the defendant to the bankrupt on August 8, could not be considered as a set-off. It appeared that four days after he had received the money paid to him in preference the defendant handed to the bankrupt $767, on the latter's request for money to pay his employees. There was no testimony tending to show what became of this money, whether it was used in paying employees, or whether the payments, if made, were for wages earned within three months before the date of the commencement of proceedings in bankruptcy. All that appeared was the fact of the loan and the expressed purpose thereof. Under these circumstances the court instructed the jury that the defendant had not established his [274] claim to a set-off, as authorized *by paragraph c of § 60. This presents a distinct question of law.

The trial court, and its views were approved by the superior court, held that the statute required not merely that the creditor in good faith gave the debtor credit without security, and that the money or property in fact passed to the debtor, and became a part of his estate, but also that it remained such until the time of the bankruptcy, and was transferred to the trustee; or, at least, that it was used in payment of preferred debts. In its opinion, on a motion for a new trial, it said:

"Evidence that the debtor got the money for another purpose certainly is not evidence that he turned it over to the trustee.

"The most that defendant can ask—and this we would probably hold—is that money shown to have been given and used to pay a preferred debt would entitle the defendant to a set-off."

It will be noticed that the words used in paragraph c are not "the bankrupt's estate," but "the debtor's estate." "Debtor" is also found in the preceding clause as descriptive of the one to whom the credit is given. While the same person is both debtor and bankrupt, first debtor and then bankrupt, the use of the former term is suggestive of the time of the transaction as well as the status of the recipient of the credit. The paragraph further provides that "the amount of such new credit remaining unpaid at the time of the adjudication in bankruptcy may be set off." It is the nonpayment, and not the fact that the property remains still a part of the debtor's estate, which entitles to a set-off. It would seem that if Congress intended that which the trial court held to be the meaning of the statute, it would have said "which becomes a part of the bankrupt's estate" or "which becomes and remains a part of the debtor's estate until the adjudication in bankruptcy."

Further, Congress provided that the creditor act in good faith. Thus it excluded any arrangement by which the creditor, *seeking [275] to escape the liability occasioned by the preference he has received, passes money or property over to the debtor with a view to its secretion until after the bankruptcy proceedings have terminated, or with some other wrongful purpose. It meant that the creditor should not act in such a way as to intentionally defeat the bankrupt act, but should let the debtor have the money or property for some honest purpose. Requiring that it should become a part of the debtor's estate excluded cases in which the creditor delivered the property to a third person on the credit of the debtor, or delivered it to him with instructions to pass it on to some third party. The purpose was that the property which passed from the creditor should in fact become a part of the debtor's estate, and that the credit should be only for such property.

Still again, to require that the creditor should not only in good faith have extended the credit, and that the money or property should have passed into, and become a part of, the debtor's estate, but that he should also show the actual disposition thereof made by the debtor, would, in many cases, practically deny the creditor the benefit of a credit which he has extended in good faith. Suppose, three months and a half before bankruptcy, the creditor, in good faith, sells and delivers a bill of goods to the debtor, a merchant; how difficult it would be to show what had become of each particular article on that bill, or what was done with the money received for those that had been sold; and the same when, as in this case, money was delivered to the debtor. If Congress had intended to require such proof it would seem that it would have used language more definite and certain. If the creditor has acted in good faith, extended credit without security, and the money or property has actually passed into the debtor's possession, why should anything more be required? Has the creditor not been already sufficiently punished when, having received money or property in payment of a just debt, he is compelled to refund that to the trustee because he believed, or had reason to believe, that the debtor, in [276] paying that debt, preferred him? *Why should he be punished in addition by the loss of the benefit of a credit given in good faith?

We are of opinion that the state court erred in its construction of the statute and in peremptorily denying to the creditor the benefit of the credit. For these reasons the judgment of the Superior Court is reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

EMMA S. FAYERWEATHER and Mary W. Achter, Appts.,
v.

THOMAS G. RITCH et al., Individually, and as Executors, etc., and others. (No. 157.)

JOHN B. REYNOLDS, as Sole Executor of the Last Will and Codicil of Lucy Fayerweather, Deceased, Appt.,
v.

THOMAS G. RITCH et al., Individually, and as Executors, etc., and others. (No. 158.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 276-309.)

Direct appeal to Federal Supreme Court—case involving application of Constitution—res judicata—parol testimony to limit conclusiveness of judgment.

1. The application of the due process of law clause of U. S. Const. 5th Amend. is involved so as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court from a circuit court, where the latter court gave effect, as res judicata, to the judgment of a state court which is claimed unlawfully to have deprived the parties of their property under the forms of law, without any judicial finding of the vital fact which alone could justify such deprivation.

NOTE.—On direct appeals to the Federal Supreme Court from district or circuit courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

2. The validity of certain releases is res judicata as between the parties to a suit in which the question of their invalidity for fraud and undue influence was put in issue by the pleadings, where the decree of the trial court, which could not properly have been rendered without holding the releases valid, was followed by an affirmance on appeal, with an opinion declaring that there was no evidence in the record justifying the contention that they were obtained by fraud and undue influence, with a further affirmance in the court of last resort, whose opinion declared that, upon the state of the record, it was to be presumed that the validity of the releases had been affirmatively found and that there was sufficient evidence to sustain such a finding, followed by a refusal to frame its remittitur so as to send this question back to the trial court for consideration, although the trial judge made no findings of fact, made no mention in his memorandum of decision of the contention respecting the releases, and in his opinion failed in terms to pass upon this point.

3. The effect as res judicata of a decree in a case in which the validity of certain releases was put in issue by the pleadings, and in which no judgment could properly have been rendered without a determination of that question, cannot be limited by the oral testimony of the trial judge, some six years after his decision, to the effect that, in deciding the case, he did not consider the validity of the releases.

[Nos. 157, 158.]

Argued October 12, 13, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

APPEALS from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York to review a decree sustaining pleas of res judicata to, and dismissing, a bill and cross bill to set aside certain releases as fraudulently obtained. Affirmed.
See same case below, 118 Fed. 943.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

The controlling question in these cases arises on pleas of res judicata. The essential facts are as follows:

On October 6, 1884, Daniel B. Fayerweather, a citizen and resident of the state of New York, made a will, by the 9th article of which he gave to twenty colleges bequests amounting in the aggregate to $2,100,000. By the 10th article he gave the residuary estate to his executors, as trustees, directing them to divide it equally among the twenty colleges named in the 9th article. On the same day he signed the following statement:

"This certifies that I have executed my will of this date, having been advised by my counsel of the provision and restrictions of the law of this state relative to benevolent corporations. I trust my heirs will permit the provision of this my will to be carried into effect."

At that time, by chap. 360, Laws of 1860, of the state of New York, a testator having husband, wife, child, or parent was forbidden to give to literary or benevolent institutions more than one half of his estate. On December 13, 1884, the testator made a first codicil to his will, by which he revoked the 10th article, and gave the residuary of his estate absolutely to his executors. In other respects the will was ratified. At or about the same time a paper, bearing date December 11, 1884, headed "Private Memorandum," was signed by him, which reads as follows:

"I have made Messrs. Bulkley and Ritch my residuary legatees in the confidence that thereby my intentions as expressed in my will shall be carried into effect, and without [278] *litigations on the part of any person or persons interested. In case of my death, I trust that they will take such steps, by will or otherwise, as will protect my estate against the contingency of the death of either before my estate is settled and distributed."

By subsequent codicils minor changes were made, and Henry B. Vaughan was added as executor. The testator died on November 15, 1890, leaving a widow and three nieces, his only heirs at law and next of kin. On the day of his death he executed a codicil, which was mainly a confirmation of the provisions of the will and prior codicils.

Mr. Fayerweather's estate amounted at the date of the will to about three millions of dollars, and at the time of his death to from five to six millions of dollars, mainly in personal property.

While by the articles in the will, prior to the 9th, he had made provision for his widow and also bequests to his three nieces, yet obviously his purpose was to give the bulk of his estate to the several colleges named, and to avoid the restraining effect of the New York statute. After the death of Mr. Fayerweather the will and codicils were propounded for probate, to which the widow and nieces filed objections. A hearing was had before the surrogate, and on February 25, 1891, he entered an order admitting the will to probate, and leaving the contest of the codicils to continue. On February 24, 1891, the three executors, residuary legatees, made a deed of gift, which reads:

"Know all men by these presents, That we, Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan, residuary devisees and legatees under the will, meaning thereby the original will and the subsequent codicils of Daniel B. Fayerweather, late of the city of New York, deceased, prompted by our determination that we will not retain for our own use any part of the residuary estate left to us by his will, and by the desire to make such disposition of his said residuary estate as in our judgment will best honor his memory, do dispose of so much *of the same as shall remain after the [279] payment of all lawful fees, expenses, and charges as follows:

"First, We reserve the power to make, and we retain the right to assent to, any enlargement of the $15,000 a year by the will left to Mrs. Fayerweather, which she may desire.

"Second, We reserve the power to make, and we retain the right to assent to, any enlargement of the provisions made by the will for Mrs. Mary W. Achter and Mrs. Emma S. Drury, in case we shall be satisfied that such enlargement would not be against the wishes of Mr. Fayerweather.

"Third, We give to Lucy J. Beardsley, wife of Morris B. Beardsley, $100,000.

"We do this because of Mr. Fayerweather's letter written to Mr. Vaughan and Mr. F. B. Myrick. If accepted, this gift is in discharge of any claim under that letter."

Then, after making gifts of several sums to individuals, hospitals, and colleges (some being those named in the will of Mr. Fayerweather, and others not so mentioned), the deed closes with these words:

"We execute this instrument, recognizing that there is pending a contest in proceedings for the probate of Mr. Fayerweather's will, and recognizing further that if such contest shall not prevail, a question may be made about our legal rights as devisees and legatees. . . . Our object is each for himself to give away whatever may come to us as residuary devisees and legatees under Mr. Fayerweather's will."

Subsequently, and on March 5, the executors, as residuary legatees, entered into an agreement with the contestants by which the amounts coming to them were increased, and thereupon the contestants executed the following paper:

"In consideration of the instrument of even date herewith executed by Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan, residuary devisees and legatees under the will, meaning thereby the original will and subsequent codicils of Daniel B. Fayerweather, . . . we, the undersigned, being *the widow and all of the next [280] of kin of the said Daniel B. Fayerweather, do hereby severally agree for ourselves, our, and each of our heirs, executors, and administrators, as follows:

"1. All objections to the probate of the will and four codicils of the late Daniel B. Fayerweather, offered for probate to the surrogate of the county of New York, are hereby withdrawn, and we consent to the probate of the same.

"2. No suit shall hereafter be brought for the construction of the said will and codicils or either of them, or to set aside the will and codicils or either of them, and we further agree not to make any claim upon the said Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan or either of them, or against their heirs or personal representatives, or either against them, the said Bulkley, Ritch, and Vaughan, as executors, or as residuary legatees, other than for amounts left to us by the will and codicils aforesaid, and the deed of gift executed by the said Bulkley, Ritch, and Vaughan on the 24th day of February, 1891, and the instrument dated on the 5th day of March, 1891.

"3. Upon the payment to the undersigned, respectively, of the several amounts mentioned in said deed of gift and said instrument, we will severally execute a general release of all claims, except those arising under the will and codicils, both to the executors and to the donees mentioned in the deed of gift on the 24th day of February, 1891, and to the said Bulkley, Ritch, and Vaughan individually."

On March 24, 1891, the codicils were admitted to probate on written consent, signed by the attorneys for the parties to the contest. On June 12, 1891, the widow executed the following release:

"Know ye, that I, Lucy Fayerweather, widow of Daniel B. Fayerweather, of the city of New York, for and in consideration of the sum of $225,000, lawful money of the United States, to me in hand paid *by Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan, as executors and trustees under the last will and testament of Daniel B. Fayerweather, deceased, and individually, and as the representatives of the persons or corporations hereinafter named, forming a class known as donees, under the deed of gift executed by the said Bulkley, Ritch, and Vaughan, on February 24th, 1891, which sum is in compromise and full settlement of any and all contests on my part of the will of said Daniel B. Fayerweather, deceased, or concerning his estate, have remised, released, and forever discharged, and by these presents do, for myself and for my heirs, administrators, and executors, remise, release, and discharge the said Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan, as executors and trustees aforesaid, as individuals and as representatives of the said donees constituting a class, and also the said donees, to wit, the persons and corporations mentioned in a certain deed of gift duly delivered, made by Justus L. Bulkley, Thomas G. Ritch, and Henry B. Vaughan on the 24th day of February, 1891, which deed of gift was introduced in evidence in the probate proceedings of the last will and testament of Daniel B. Fayerweather, deceased, and marked 'Exhibit No. 7, contestants,' and which said deed of gift is hereby made a part of this release, in order that the persons constituting said class of donees and to whom this release runs may be more fully known, and also the legal successors, assigns, heirs, executors, and administrators of all the aforesaid persons and corporations, of and from all and all manner of action and actions, cause and causes of action, suits, debts, dues, sums of money, claims and demands whatsoever in law or in equity, which against the said persons or corporations, or any of them, I ever had or now have, or which I or my heirs, executors, or administrators hereinafter shall, can, or may have for, upon, or by reason of any matter, cause, or thing whatsoever, except my claim for the annuity given me by the will and codicils thereto of said Daniel B. Fayerweather, deceased, and also my claim for the increased annuity mentioned *in the agreement dated [282] March 5th, 1891, and made pursuant to the deed of gift above referred to."
195 U. S.

Releases similar in form were executed by the other three contestants, the nieces and next of kin.

In January, 1893, five of the colleges named in article 9 of the will brought suit in the supreme court of the state of New York against the executors of Mr. Fayerweather's will, the executors of the will of Mrs. Fayerweather (who had died since the release), the nieces, the donees in the deed of gift, and all the colleges not joined as plaintiffs. The contention of the plaintiffs was that the codicil which gave the residue of the estate to the three executors absolutely was made in pursuance of an agreement that they should take that residue in trust for the colleges mentioned in the will, and distribute it among them. The complaint set forth the will and codicils, their admission to probate, and the issue of letters testamentary, and averred that the value of the estate left by the testator was upwards of $6,000,000 and the residuary estate more than $3,000,000. It alleged that the intention of the testator was to devote the principal part of his estate to the several institutions mentioned, and that the proceedings taken by him were under the advice of counsel and for the purpose of carrying into effect that intention, and upon a promise and assurance from the executors that they would dispose of the residuary estate accordingly; it averred also the fact of a contest in respect to the probate of the will and codicils, a settlement with the contestants in consideration of the payment of $310,000 and the execution of releases by them. The prayer was that it be adjudged and decreed that the residuary estate was devised by the testator and received by the executors in trust for the purposes set forth, that they be required to apply that estate to those purposes, and, also, "that the ultimate rights of the plaintiffs as between them and each of them and every of the other defendants herein be determined by the judgment in this action in accordance with the allegations of this complaint and the prayer hereinbefore contained."

[283] *The donees in the deed of gift answered, asserting the validity of that deed, and praying that its provisions be carried out.

The widow's executors and the nieces also appeared and filed an answer and counterclaim, in which they alleged that the agreement which the suit was brought to enforce was a secret trust to evade the New York statute by giving more than half to the several institutions, that the releases were obtained from them by concealment and fraud, and therefore of no obligation; and prayed for judgment, among other things—

"3d. That it be adjudged that the said settlements and releases made with or obtained from the said Lucy Fayerweather, Mary W. Achter, and Emma S. Fayerweather, respectively, were and are each fraudulent and void, and that the same be set aside, upon such terms as may be just and equitable, and that the sums paid for the same to said releasors or their attorneys, respectively, with the interest thereon, including the increased payments to said Lucy Fayerweather on her annuity, be charged against or allowed upon the sums payable to them respectively under the judgment herein, or be otherwise provided or accounted for as may be according to equity.

"4th. That it be adjudged that the said deed of gift, dated February 24th, 1891 (Exhibit F), was and is fraudulent and void, and that the said Thomas G. Ritch, Justus L. Bulkley, and Henry B. Vaughan be enjoined and restrained from further distributing the said residuary estate, or any part thereof, under the same, except to continue the payment of the said annuity to said Anner Amelia Reynolds, as aforesaid.

"5th. That the said defendants Ritch, Bulkley, and Vaughan may be required to account for the moneys and property received by them from the estate of the said Daniel B. Fayerweather under said last will and testament and codicils or otherwise, and for the application thereof, and to pay over the said moneys and property remaining in their hands among the parties to this action according to their several and respective *rights thereto, as the same may be adjudged in this action.

"6th. That the ultimate rights of the parties to this action in the estate of the said Daniel B. Fayerweather be determined and enforced by the judgment in this action, in accordance with the allegations of this answer and the foregoing prayers for relief therein.

"7th. That these defendants may have such other and further relief herein as may be just and equitable, with their costs herein, to be paid as the court may direct."

The decree of the supreme court at special term, entered on December 28, 1894, adjudged and decreed that the residuary estate passed to the executors in trust for the colleges named in the ninth paragraph of the will; that the executors and trustees be restrained and enjoined from distributing the residuary estate, or any part thereof under the deed of gift, and that the plaintiffs and certain of the defendants (including therein the executors of the will of Mrs. Fayerweather and two of the nieces) recover from the trustees their costs, together with extra allowances to be paid out of the trust funds. There was no formal finding of facts and no mention made in the decree of the specific claim of the executors of Mrs. Fayerweather's will and the nieces, that the releases were fraudulently obtained. An appeal was taken by the defendants to the general term of the supreme court, which, on December 18, 1895, affirmed the judgment. A further appeal was taken to the court of appeals, which, on January 19, 1897, affirmed the judgment of the general term. 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876. On January 28, 1897, a motion was made in the court of appeals to amend the remittitur so as to direct the justice of the supreme court before whom the action was tried at special term to consider the evidence given before him at the trial concerning the releases, and to determine whether the said releases were valid and binding or invalid and void, which motion was on March 9, 1897, denied.

After these proceedings in the state court two of the nieces *and next of kin, being [285] citizens of the state of Iowa, instituted this suit in the circuit court of the United States, making defendants substantially all the parties to the suit in the state court, the one or two omissions in no way affecting the question before us. Subsequently the remaining executor, one having resigned, of the will of Mrs. Fayerweather, filed a cross bill, the allegations and the relief asked being similar to those in the original bill.

These bills—in addition to setting forth the will and codicils executed by Mr. Fayerweather, the probate proceedings, and the releases by the widow and nieces, and alleging that these letters were fraudulently obtained, and not binding—averred the bringing of the suit hereinbefore referred to in the supreme court of the state by the five colleges, annexing copies of the pleadings, and alleged “thereupon the issues so joined, as well as others duly raised by the answers of the several defendants, came on to be tried before said court, and these complainants gave evidence tending to prove the allegations in their said answer, and all of the said allegations, and thereupon it became and was the duty of said court to adjudge and determine whether the releases therein described were invalid, and whether these complainants were entitled to the affirmative relief prayed in respect thereto;” and further, that the defendants—“Confederating and combining together and between themselves to prevent the entry of any judgment upon an actual determination of the invalidity of said releases so in issue, requested and induced the court to hold and decide that the right of the respective parties to said property and residuary estate did not require any consideration or decision of said issues, and said court thereupon made and rendered its decision without considering, passing upon, or including in judgment the said issues, and omitted to decide upon these complainants’ right to the affirmative relief by said answer prayed in respect to said releases.

[286] “And thereupon there was filed and entered in said action *a decision and judgment, a copy of which is hereto annexed, which complainants pray may be referred to and taken as part of this bill as if the same were herein set forth at length.

“Thereupon, by appeals taken from said judgment, in which appeals these complainants were respondents as well as appellants, said judgment was reviewed by the general term of said supreme court, sitting as a court for the correction of errors, and not exercising any original jurisdiction, and thereupon said court held and determined that the right of the respective parties to said property and residuary estate did require the consideration and decision of said issues, and thereupon, being duly informed by the record that said issues had not been in fact considered, passed upon, or included in said judgment, it became and was the duty of said court, pursuant to due process of law, the law of the land, and the provisions of the Constitutions of the state of New York and of the United States, to require and order that said issues should be in fact considered, passed upon, and included in judgment by the trial court, and until that should be done said court could not duly adjudge or determine whether any error had been committed in such determination upon said issues.

195 U. S.

“Nevertheless, said court at said general term did not so require or order, but by various fictions of law imputed to said trial term and court below that it had determined said issues and had decided in favor of the plaintiffs in said action upon such determination, contrary to the truth and fact, and thereupon pretended to adjudge and determine, as such court for the correction of errors, that there was not sufficient preponderance of evidence to support the asserted invalidity of said releases to render such imputed determination of said trial court erroneous as matter of law, but that such imputed determination was supported by evidence sufficient to relieve the same from the assignment of error in so deciding.

“It was not competent for said general term to have exercised an original jurisdiction, and to have adjudged said issues, *and [287] thereupon to have modified said judgment so as to include the actual determination thereof; and said general term did not exercise such power, but confined its action wholly to the consideration of errors in the record.

“Thereupon said judgment was by appeals taken from the judgment of affirmance so rendered, in which appeals these complainants were respondents as well as appellants, and reviewed by the court of appeals of the state of New York.

“Said court determined that these complainants had no standing to be heard or to have their rights determined by said court of appeals, because the limitations imposed by statute upon the jurisdiction of said court precluded any inquiry into the facts, the proof, or the merits of the said issues, but the said court was bound by the formal record procured as aforesaid, and by the fictions thereby adjudged as aforesaid, and had no power to review the same.

“During the pendency of the appeals aforesaid, the control of the several courts below over said action, and the trial thereof, and the correction of any injustice arising as aforesaid, was suspended, and upon the affirmance of said judgment of affirmance, by the statutes of the state of New York any correction of the injustice arising as aforesaid was placed beyond the power of any court of said state, except as the court of appeals should, by its remittitur, confer power upon said subordinate courts to entertain and try the said issues.

“Thereupon these complainants duly made application to said court of appeals so to frame its said remittitur as to permit said subordinate courts to entertain and try the said issues, which application said court denied.”

To these bills the defendants filed pleas of res judicata, claiming that the controversy between the parties was finally settled by the decision of the state court. These pleas were accompanied by an answer, denying the allegations of fraud. The circuit court sustained the pleas, and dismissed the bill and cross bill on the ground that the cause [288] of action set forth *in them was barred by the prior judgment of the state court. From this decree of dismissal the plaintiffs appealed directly to this court.

Mr. Roger M. Sherman argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

If the course of procedure cut off the right to try the question raised by the answer, it would be as much short of due process of law as the decision of a case involving such a question without allowing an answer would be.

Castillo v. McConnico, 168 U. S. 683, 42 L. ed. 625, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

If it be conceded that § 1022 of the New York Code allowed the general term to adjudicate the validity of the releases, although that question had been held by Judge Truax to be an immaterial issue, and he had not considered it, then we have the authority of the court of appeals of New York that such a provision is not one of procedure only, but one prescribing a tribunal unknown to the Constitution.

Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 726, 49 N. E. 326; Rodgers v. Clement, 162 N. Y. 427, 76 Am. St. Rep. 342, 56 N. E. 901; Truesdell v. Bourke, 145 N. Y. 616, 40 N. E. 83.

Such a decision of that issue, being without authority, and incapable of being authorized, according to the highest judicial utterances of the New York courts, cannot be collaterally upheld in the United States circuit court. Full faith and credit is accorded the five-college judgment here, when it is restrained within the limits which the court of appeals has since decided such a decision deserves.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 264, 265, 35 L. ed. 467, 468, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

The right to a trial of an essential issue by the judge of first instance is not a question of procedure; nor can any state statute make it such. That right is one of substance, with which the 14th Amendment is concerned.

Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 591, 45 L. ed. 1246, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 707, 708, 28 L. ed. 571, 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; Truesdell v. Bourke, 145 N. Y. 616, 40 N. E. 83.

The latest authority upon the subject in the New York court of appeals confines the jurisdiction of the general term to the functions of a court of errors, and denies that tribunal any power to decide facts which the trial court left undetermined.

Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 724, 49 N. E. 326.

Complainants by this bill here contend that the success of the colleges in excluding all consideration, by Judge Truax, of the releases as immaterial, estops them from now asserting that the five-college judgment concludes that issue in another action. It was, to all intents and purposes, as if complainants' answers there had been stricken out. If their answers, or so much thereof as sought an adjudication of the invalidity of the releases, had been stricken out, then controlling authority relieves them from any consequences here of any pretended determination there of these issues.

Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 414, 417, 443, 446, 42 L. ed. 220, 221, 229, 231, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841.

The contention thus presented does not relate to the principles of estoppel by judgment, but to that quite different principle of estoppel by conduct.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. p. 54, note 3; Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 689, 39 L. ed. 584, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Davis v. Cornwall, 15 C. Ct. A. 559, 26 U. S. App. 777, 35 U. S. App. 315, 68 Fed. 525.

The law of New York is settled that, when an action is brought on one theory, and that theory sustained by judgment, and upon appeal the appellate court decides that the theory of the action is erroneous in law, in its entire scope and meaning, that court is required to reverse the judgment and direct a new trial. Such obviously is the requirement of any just conception of judicial remedies.

Smith v. Platt, 96 N. Y. 637; Crocket v. Lee, 7 Wheat. 525, 527, 5 L. ed. 514; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 715, 20 L. ed. 671; Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 302, 36 L. ed. 981, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 527, 528, 28 L. ed. 225, 236, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 195, 10 L. ed. 930; Munday v. Nail, 34 N. J. L. 418; Bailey v. Knight, 8 Tex. 61; Romeyn v. Sickles, 108 N. Y. 650, 15 N. E. 698; Goodsell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 109 N. Y. 150, 16 N. E. 324; Stevens v. New York, 84 N. Y. 305; Southwick v. First Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 428; Arnold v. Angell, 62 N. Y. 510; Neudecker v. Kohlberg, 81 N. Y. 296; Barnes v. Quigley, 59 N. Y. 268; Bradley v. Aldrich, 40 N. Y. 509, 100 Am. Dec. 528; Lewis v. Mott, 36 N. Y. 398; Sixth Ave. R. Co. v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 138 N. Y. 551, 34 N. E. 400; Malloney v. Horan, 49 N. Y. 115, 10 Am. Rep. 335.

Under the plea of res judicata the actual theory upon which the action was tried is a question of fact not concluded by the formal record. It is nothing to the purpose, therefore, to meet an allegation that the issue was not decided by setting up the record in bar. A false issue is tendered thereby.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 234, 235, 41 L. ed. 983, 984, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 444, 445, 42 L. ed. 230, 231, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp. 124 U. S. 231, 31 L. ed. 413, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Jones v. Jones, 12 Pa. 350, 51 Am. Dec. 611; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; Wilson v. Deen (Milne v. Deen) 121 U. S. 525, 30 L. ed. 980, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Cunningham v. Foster, 49 Me. 68; Hickerson v. Mexico, 58 Mo. 61; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214; Wood v. Jackson, 8 Wend. 9, 22 Am. Dec. 603; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Young v. Black, 7 Cranch, 565, 567, 3 L. ed. 440, 441; Parker v. Thompson, 3 Pick. 429; Wheeler v. Van Houten, 12 Johns. 311; Briggs v. Wells, 12 Barb. 567; Scott v. McNeal, 154 U. S. 43-46, 38 L. ed. 900-902, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1108; O'Donoghue v. Boies, 159 N. Y. 98, 53 N. E. 537.

No principle of adjudication, no rule that what might have been adjudged in the state court is concluded elsewhere, can extend so far as to conclude anything here which could not, by reason of limitations upon the jurisdiction of the court there, have been considered and determined in the five-college action.

Suppose after the five-college action, which would lie and was conducted only as a suit construing the will, the surrogate, in a proceeding under § 2481, subd. 6, of the Code, should have vacated his decrees and decided that another will was the last testamentary act of Mr. Fayerweather. All rights to this estate, arising upon the establishment of another will, would then have been a new title. No adjudication upon such new title could have been predicated against the judgment construing the will, when the will had thus become invalid.

Gaines v. Hennen, 24 How. 553, 16 L. ed. 770. See also People ex rel. Reilly v. Johnson, 38 N. Y. 65, 97 Am. Dec. 770; Dawley v. Brown, 79 N. Y. 398; De Graaf v. Wyck-off, 118 N. Y. 6, 22 N. E. 1118; Canerdy v. Baker, 55 Vt. 582; Fisfield v. Edwards, 39 Mich. 264; Baker v. Rand, 13 Barb. 152; La Moille Valley R. Co. v. Bixby, 57 Vt. 548; Barker v. Belknap, 27 Vt. 700, 39 Vt. 168; Re Chickering, 56 Vt. 82; Wood v. Griffith, 1 Meriv. 35; 3 Dan. Ch. Pr. 2d Am. ed. 1679; Standish v. Parker, 2 Pick. 20, 13 Am. Dec. 393; Outram v. Morewood, 3 East, 346; Blakemore v. Glamorganshire 195 U. S.

Canal Co. 2 Crompt. M. & R. 133; Hibshman v. Dullesban, 4 Watts, 190.

In the consideration of what was in fact decided in the five-college action, or what might have been there decided, regard must be had to the nature of that action and the extent to which, under the limitations upon remedies in the state courts, the parties thereto could effectually attack the probate, establish the destroyed codicil, obtain discovery of its contents, or obtain any relief incidental to and dependent upon these subjects of jurisdiction.

That action was brought under a head of jurisdiction in the court, repeatedly held to be wholly incidental to trusts. Its power to construe a will is merely incidental to its jurisdiction over trusts.

Mellen v. Mellen, 139 N. Y. 217, 34 N. E. 925; Anderson v. Anderson (Anderson v. Appleton) 112 N. Y. 104, 2 L. R. A. 175, 19 N. E. 427; Chipman v. Montgomery, 63 N. Y. 229; Horton v. Cantwell, 108 N. Y. 266, 15 N. E. 546.

In the distribution of remedies in the state of New York, all questions of probate and of fraud on probate courts have been confided to those courts, and denied to courts of chancery.

Brady v. McCosker, 1 N. Y. 214; Vanderpoel v. Van Valkenburgh, 6 N. Y. 190; Post v. Hover, 33 N. Y. 602; Re Tilden, 98 N. Y. 434; Re Hawley, 100 N. Y. 206, 3 N. E. 68; Mellen v. Mellen, 139 N. Y. 217, 34 N. E. 925.

The supreme court has no jurisdiction, either by statute or as a court of chancery, to entertain any attack upon the probate of a will for fraud in its procurement, or to entertain any suggestions against the validity of the will itself, until the probate is impugned in a direct proceeding.

Post v. Mason, 91 N. Y. 550, 43 Am. Rep. 689; Sheridan v. Houghton, 84 N. Y. 643; Lewis v. Cook, 150 N. Y. 163, 44 N. E. 778; Broderick's Will (Kieley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 519, 520, 22 L. ed. 599, 605, 606; Allen v. M'Pherson, 1 H. L. Cas. 191; Kalish v. Kalish, 45 App. Div. 530, 61 N. Y. Supp. 448.

In the five-college action no allegations could be entertained not based upon the assumption of the validity of the will, its codicils, and their probate.

Chipman v. Montgomery, 63 N. Y. 229.

If the next of kin had invoked the power conferred by § 1861 to establish by action a destroyed will, the court would have replied: "The probate is conclusive until set aside by the surrogate; there can be no new will while the probate of that established remains in force; the demand is so foreign to the action as not to be within the scope of any counterclaim."

Vanderpoel v. Van Valkenburgh, 6 N. Y. 190; Chipman v. Montgomery, 63 N. Y. 229.

The present contention was so far independent of that made by the colleges as to entitle complainants to withhold it there, and bring a separate action upon it.

Inslee v. Hampton, 8 Hun, 232; Gillespie v. Torrance, 25 N. Y. 310, 82 Am. Dec. 355; Simon v. Schurck, 29 N. Y. 613; Brown v. Gullaudet, 80 N. Y. 413.

Such was the effect of Judge Truax's holding that the issues which they there tendered were immaterial.

Stark v. Starr, 94 U. S. 477, 485, 486, 24 L. ed. 276, 278, 279; Dennison v. United States, 168 U. S. 249, 42 L. ed. 456, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Bissell v. Spring Valley Twp., 124 U. S. 231, 31 L. ed. 413, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Reynolds v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 160 N. Y. 651, 55 N. E. 305; House v. Lockwood, 137 N. Y. 259, 33 N. E. 595; Dawley v. Brown, 79 N. Y. 398; Fifield v. Edwards, 39 Mich. 264; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 9, 41 Am. Dec. 675; De Graaf v. Wyckoff, 118 N. Y. 6, 22 N. E. 1118.

When a party succeeds in defeating an action by his pleading, by motion, or the like, he cannot defeat a second action by taking a position inconsistent with that taken in the first.

Bigelow, Estoppel, 5th ed. p. 54, note 3.

When these defendants succeeded in their contention that these issues were not in that case, it was as if they had been withdrawn. They could not, by fiction, thereafter be regarded as decided.

Davis v. Wakelee, 156 U. S. 689, 39 L. ed. 584, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555; Davis v. Cornwall, 15 C. C. A. 559, 26 U. S. App. 777, 35 U. S. App. 315, 68 Fed. 525.

Nor is the rule which confines the operation of the judgment of the supreme court to the limits here contended for merely a principle of the general law. To conclude complainants here by that judgment, upon matters not actually decided there, but, on the contrary, there decided not to be within the issues tried, encroaches upon constitutional rights.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 146 U. S. 254, 268-270, 35 L. ed. 464, 468, 469, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Munday v. Vail, 34 N. J. L. 418; Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 414, 417, 443, 446, 42 L. ed. 220, 221, 230, 231, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841; Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 591, 45 L. ed. 1246, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Third Nat. Bank v. Cornes, 1 Silv. Ct. App. 167; Romeyn v. Sickles, 108 N. Y. 652, 15 N. E. 698; Arnold v. Angell, 62 N. Y. 510; Southwick v. First Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 428; Ferguson v. Crawford, 70 N. Y. 257, 26 Am. Rep. 589; Neudecker v. Kohlberg, 81 N. Y. 301.

The mere fact that the complaint contained references to the releases, pleaded as inducement to a claim inconsistent with title in the releasors, the question of the validity or invalidity of the releases not having been, in fact, decided by the trial court, did not draw that question within the doctrine of estoppel.

Stowell v. Chamberlain, 60 N. Y. 275; Barnes v. Quigley, 59 N. Y. 268; Third Nat. Bank v. Cornes, 1 Silv. Ct. App. 167; Romeyn v. Sickles, 108 N. Y. 652, 15 N. E. 698; Neudecker v. Kohlberg, 81 N. Y. 301; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 160, 44 L. ed. 114, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62.

It being evident that, within the issues actually decided, the validity of the releases or of the concomitant agreements was not decided as a matter of fact, and was not material to the decision in view of the law upon which the decision was reached, it follows that their validity is here an open question.

Fairchild v. Edson, 154 N. Y. 199, 61 Am. St. Rep. 609, 48 N. E. 541, 155 N. Y. 555, 50 N. E. 265.

The state courts could not decide any facts not decided by the trial court, without departure from their own settled rules.

Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 715, 49 N. E. 326; Wright v. Wright, 51 N. J. Eq. 475, 26 Atl. 166.

To the contention that there was necessarily involved in the decision of the court of appeals, in affirming the judgment in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876, a decision that the power exercised by the general term was a valid determination by a competent tribunal of the issue of the validity of the releases as a matter of fact, it may be replied that the question of jurisdiction there passed sub silentio, and such a determination as this, this court has held, in the cases cited below, does not establish the jurisdiction.

Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 236, 48 L. ed. 163, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; United States v. Sanges, 144 U. S. 319, 36 L. ed. 449, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Cross v. Burke, 146 U. S. 87, 36 L. ed. 898, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22.

And see what the court of appeals has itself declared to be the extent of its judgments, in Colonial City Traction Co. v. Kingston City R. Co., 154 N. Y. 495, 48 N. E. 900.

The question of the powers upon appeal of the general term is not a rule of property.

Bolles v. Brimfield, 120 U. S. 763, 764, 30 L. ed. 788, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 297, 8 L. ed. 405; Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 205-207, 17 L. ed. 525, 526.

The question of jurisdiction being always open collaterally, this court is not bound to accept an earlier decision of the court of appeals in the very case sustaining the jurisdiction, when the trend of authority, both before and after the decision in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876, is that, by the operation of the Constitution of the state of New York and its laws, no such power is or can be conferred upon the general term, or the appellate division, or any other appellate court.

Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 206, 207, 17 L. ed. 525, 526; Ohio Life Ins. & T. Co. v. Debolt, 16 How. 432, 14 L. ed. 1003; Carroll County v. Smith, 111 U. S. 562, 563, 28 L. ed. 519, 520, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 539.

This court regards the latest case in the highest state court as the law as it was always, so far as applying the state rule is concerned.

The jurisdiction to try these issues on appeal is settled by the negation of Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 726, 49 N. E. 326, and cases cited, and not by any implications of Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876.

Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599, 603, 17 L. ed. 261, 262; United States v. Morrison, 4 Pet. 124, 137, 7 L. ed. 804, 808; Green v. Neal, 6 Pet. 291, 298, 299, 301, 8 L. ed. 402, 405, 406.

The insistence upon a trial at general term, of the counsel for the complainants in the state court, under a misapprehension of the legal effect of § 1022 of the Code of Civil Procedure, constitutes no estoppel against their clients: First, because jurisdiction cannot be conferred by consent or even by insistence (Smith v. Platt, 96 N. Y. 637); and second, because the estoppel rests upon a mere mistake of law, which cannot estop (Union Bank v. Bush, 36 N. Y. 637).

The question of due process of law is not a question of form, but of substance.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 436, 45 L. ed. 1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

The appellate court should have reversed the judgment under review, and ordered a new trial.

Truesdell v. Bourke, 145 N. Y. 616, 40 N. E. 83; Smith v. Platt, 96 N. Y. 637; Rodgers v. Clement, 162 N. Y. 427, 76 Am. St. Rep. 342, 56 N. E. 901; Iselin v. Starin, 144 N. Y. 460, 39 N. E. 488; Thomas v. New York L. Ins. Co. 99 N. Y. 250, 1 N. E. 772; Ehrichs v. De Mill, 75 N. Y. 370; Whitehead v. Kennedy, 69 N. Y. 462; Foot v. Aina L. Ins. Co. 61 N. Y. 578; Griffin v. Marquardt, 17 N. Y. 28.

The question of the validity of these releases is here an open question, and has not been in anywise adjudged.

Stark v. Starr, 94 U. S. 485, 486, 24 L. ed. 278, 279.

Even if the validity of the releases be deemed to have been adjudged, so far as the residuary estate in controversy in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876, is concerned, it is nevertheless wholly at large and undetermined upon any other claim than that, and is not adjudged as involved in the assault upon the wills and probate, and has no effect upon those features of the several bills of complaint.

Wilmington & W. R. Co. v. Alsbrook, 146 U. S. 302, 36 L. ed. 981, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. 715, 734, 20 L. ed. 671, 678; King v. Chase, 15 N. H. 17, 41 Am. Dec. 675.

The constitutional question comes up substantially, as regards its importance and difficulty, as it would have done under the old practice of certifying questions here upon a division of opinion; and in that case this court would hardly do otherwise than treat the question as worthy of an answer.

Davis & F. Mfg. Co. v. Los Angeles, 189 U. S. 216, 47 L. ed. 780, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 498; Press Pub. Co. v. Monroe, 164 U. S. 110, 111, 41 L. ed. 368, 369, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40.

Where the jurisdiction of this court attaches under § 5 of the act of March 3, 1891, it does not follow that a decision against the correctness of the appellant's contention upon the Federal question disposes of the appeal, or even that his abandonment of the point does so. The whole case is, none the less, here for decision.

Home L. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 188 U. S. 727, 47 L. ed. 668, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 509, 40 L. ed. 513, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

When the question of jurisdiction involves, as this one does, a question of the power of a state court, it may in New York always be examined collaterally, even if it is necessary to prove extrinsic facts in contradiction of the record.

O'Donoghue v. Boies, 159 N. Y. 98, 53 N. E. 537.

To hold that upon such a question, even if expressly decided (instead of, as in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876, being assumed sub silentio, or involved in the affirmance of the judgment of the general term), the decision of the court of appeals is conclusive upon this court, would be to abrogate the functions of this court upon the Federal question, and require it merely to register the decision of the court of appeals.

Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. 216, 17 L. ed. 529; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 278-284, 23 L. ed. 914, 916-918; Galpin v.

Page, 18 Wall. 350, 365-368, 373, 21 L. ed. 959, 962, 963, 965.

In Home L. Ins. Co. v. Fisher, 188 U. S. 727, 47 L. ed. 668, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380, this court held that, although the question upon which this court acquired jurisdiction had been in the meantime decided adversely to the plaintiff in error by this court, and that question was therefore not even pressed upon the argument, the jurisdiction to decide the whole case was nevertheless retained.

The court of appeals exercised a discretion in denying the motion to amend the remittitur; and the constitutional right to one trial, at least, does not rest in discretion, and cannot be adjudged by a denial of the right.

Simon v. Croft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Jacobs v. Marks, 182 U. S. 591, 45 L. ed. 1246, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865.

It was competent to prove by parol the issues determined. Hence the testimony of the judges was admissible, if they chose to give it.

Miles v. Caldwell, 2 Wall. 43, 17 L. ed. 758; Campbell v. Rankin, 99 U. S. 263, 25 L. ed. 436; Bernards Twp. v. Morrison, 133 U. S. 523, 33 L. ed. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333.

In New York the common-law presumption of absolute verity in a judgment is only a rebuttable presumption, and the truth is not excluded. Of course a judgment may be impugned in the Federal courts by any means admitted, in the state where it was rendered, for that purpose.

O'Donoghue v. Boies, 159 N. Y. 87, 53 N. E. 537; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

Mr. William Blaikie also argued the cause and filed a brief for appellants:

The essence of estoppel by judgment is that there has been a judicial determination of a fact, and the question always is, Has there been such determination? and not, Upon what evidence or by what means was it reached?

Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 690, 39 L. ed. 862, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733.

If there be uncertainty as to whether or not the question was passed upon, the judgment is not conclusive as evidence.

Bell v. Merrifield, 109 N. Y. 209, 4 Am. St. Rep. 436, 16 N. E. 55; Stowell v. Chamberlain, 60 N. Y. 272; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195.

A judgment is not conclusive in a second action, unless the same question was at issue in the former suit, of which the court had competent jurisdiction.

Ward v. Boyce, 152 N. Y. 203, 36 L. R. A. 549, 46 N. E. 180; Reynolds v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 160 N. Y. 650, 55 N. E. 305.

A former judgment is final only as to the facts which are actually litigated and decided, which relate to the issue therein, and the determination of which was necessary to the determination of that issue.

Bell v. Merrifield, 109 N. Y. 202, 4 Am. St. Rep. 436, 16 N. E. 55; Rudd v. Cornell, 171 N. Y. 127, 63 N. E. 823; Zoeller v. Riley, 100 N. Y. 102, 53 Am. Rep. 157, 2 N. E. 388; Palmer v. Hussey, 87 N. Y. 303; Reynolds v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 160 N. Y. 651, 55 N. E. 305; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 608, 24 L. ed. 215.

To apply the judgment and give effect to the adjudication actually made, when the record leaves the matter in doubt, extrinsic evidence is admissible.

Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 580, 18 L. ed. 550; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 608, 24 L. ed. 215.

It is allowable to reason back from a judgment to the basis on which it stands, upon the obvious principle that where a conclusion is indisputable, and could have been drawn only from certain premises, the premises are equally conclusive and indisputable with the conclusion. But such an inference must be inevitable, or it cannot be drawn.

Freeman, Judg. § 257; Burlen v. Shannon, 99 Mass. 200, 96 Am. Dec. 733; Lea v. Lea, 99 Mass. 493, 96 Am. Dec. 772.

The trial court's decision was upon a ground inconsistent with a decision as to the validity of the releases.

The decision in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876, is not res judicata.

Jenkins v. Robinson, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. App. Cas. 117; Casparsz, Estoppel by Representation & Res Adjudicata, 342; Fifield v. Edwards, 39 Mich. 264; State ex rel. Brown v. Rusk, 23 Wis. 643; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 608, 24 L. ed. 215; Hooker v. Hubbard, 102 Mass. 245.

As the state court judgment was not responsive to the issues of the complaint, it is, upon that ground also, no bar.

Arnold v. Angell, 62 N. Y. 511; Romeyn v. Sickles, 108 N. Y. 652, 15 N. E. 698; Neudecker v. Kohlberg, 81 N. Y. 301; Stevens v. New York, 84 N. Y. 305; Graham v. Read, 57 N. Y. 683; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773; Crocket v. Lee, 7 Wheat. 525, 527, 5 L. ed. 514.

The courts will deal with evasions of the law.

Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 75, 17 L. R. A. 97, 24 Atl. 964.

By departing in this instance from the settled rule of property, and returning to that rule since the decision herein, the New York court of appeals has deprived the widow and next of kin of the equal protection of the laws.

Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank, 187 U. S. 227, 47 L. ed. 154, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52.

Justice Truax was properly called to say if he had considered and decided the issue as to the validity of the releases.

Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 690, 39 L. ed. 862, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; Baker v. Cummings, 181 U. S. 117, 45 L. ed. 776, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 578; National Foundry & Pipe Works v. Oconto Water Supply Co. 183 U. S. 234, 46 L. ed. 169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111.

There is an admitted exception to the rule of res judicata, and that is when a judgment has been obtained by fraud in the very fashion described at bar.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61, 25 L. ed. 93.

There is no distinction in principle between determining a cause upon issues not raised by the pleadings, and rendering a decree by refusing to permit a party to be heard in his defense, or to consider the merits of a sufficient defense.

Hovey v. Elliott, 167 U. S. 446, 42 L. ed. 231, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 841.

A question which was entirely overlooked by counsel, and which was not even considered by the court, can hardly be said to have been settled by the decision.

State ex rel. Brown v. Rusk, 23 Wis. 643.

By due process of law is meant one which, following the forms of law, is appropriate to the case and is just to the parties to be affected.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

Shall complainant now be cut off from procuring adjudication of his rights because the court erroneously prevented him from having them adjudicated before?

Starr v. Stark, 2 Sawy. 603, Fed. Cas. No. 13,317.

There can be no proceeding against life, liberty, or property, which may result in the deprivation of either, without the observance of those general rules established in our system of jurisprudence for the security of private rights.

Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 708, 28 L. ed. 572, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663.

When a state by its judicial department takes away property from one private individual and gives it to another, not for an adequate consideration, but without any consideration, such act of a state is not the due process of law guaranteed by the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 389, 42 L. ed. 790, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383; Logan v. United States, 144 U. S. 288, 36 L. ed. 437, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 697, 34 L. ed. 818, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Campbell v. Evans, 45 N. Y. 358; People v. O'Brien, 111 N. Y. 38, 2 L. R. A. 255, 7 Am. St. Rep. 684, 18 N. E. 692; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 325, 37 L. ed. 467, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622; Boyd v. United States, 116 U. S. 635, 29 L. ed. 752, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 524; Hurtado v. California, 110 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 235, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 111, 292; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 695, 41 L. ed. 1168, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 92, 23 L. ed. 679; Allen v. Georgia, 166 U. S. 140, 41 L. ed. 949, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 525; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 417, 41 L. ed. 495, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 231, 41 L. ed. 982, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581; Brown, Const. Law, 228; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Citizens' Sav. L. Asso. v. Topeka, 20 Wall. 663, 22 L. ed. 461.

Mr. Charles Andrews filed a brief for the widow and next of kin upon the question of res judicata:

The doctrine of res judicata rests upon a principle of public policy which requires that, a case having been once decided, there should be an end of strife and litigation.

United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 65, 25 L. ed. 95.

Constituting a part of the doctrine of res judicata are two principal conditions, rooted in the immutable foundation of justice: First; that before a party can be concluded by a former adjudication affecting any property right he must have had a hearing, or an opportunity to be heard, on the point in controversy.

Munday v. Vail, 34 N. J. L. 418; Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 254, 35 L. ed. 464, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

Second; that the adjudication relied upon must have been made by a court or tribunal of competent jurisdiction, authorized to pass upon the question and to render the decree affecting the right embraced in the adjudication.

Herman, Estoppel, § 68.

Jurisdiction may be defined to be the right to adjudicate the subject-matter in a given case.

Reynolds v. Stockton, 140 U. S. 268, 35 L. ed. 468, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 773.

Jurisdiction is conferred by the sovereign power and authority which organizes the court, and is to be sought for in the general nature of its powers, or in authority specially conferred.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1060.

Jurisdiction consists not only in the power to hear and determine, but also in the power to render the particular judgment entered in the particular case. There may be the most complete jurisdiction of the person and the general subject-matter, but if the court in rendering the judgment transcends the limitations of its powers as defined by statute, or as regulated by the character of its functions, the judgment is void for want of jurisdiction. This doctrine has been declared in frequent decisions of the United States Supreme Court.

Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. 339, 19 L. ed. 696; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152.

A judgment may be impeached collaterally for want of jurisdiction, not only when no jurisdiction was acquired of the person or the subject-matter, but also where the court, although having jurisdiction of the person and the subject-matter, transcended its power in awarding judgment. In other words, the judgment will be void if the court transcends in the relief awarded, although there is no defect of jurisdiction of the person or of the cause.

Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 23 L. ed. 914; Ex parte Lange, 18 Wall. 163, 21 L. ed. 872; Bigelow v. Forrest, 9 Wall. 339, 19 L. ed. 696; Ex parte Yarbrough, 110 U. S. 651, 28 L. ed. 274, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 152; People ex rel. Tweed v. Liscomb, 60 N. Y. 559, 19 Am. Rep. 211.

The general term erred in directing final judgment on the question of fraud. It was a jurisdictional error.

Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 726, 49 N. E. 326; Whitehead v. Kennedy, 69 N. Y. 462; Thomas v. New York L. Ins. Co. 99 N. Y. 250, 1 N. E. 772.

There is a long line of cases supporting the principle that the general term, if it reverses the judgment on the facts, cannot proceed to render a final judgment, but must order a new trial.

New v. New Rochelle, 158 N. Y. 41, 52 N. E. 647; Van Beuren v. Wotherspoon, 164 N. Y. 368, 57 N. E. 633.

The only exception is where it appears that in no possible state of proof could the appellant be entitled to judgment.

New v. New Rochelle, 158 N. Y. 41, 52 N. E. 647.

The cases cited in support of the right of the general term to affirm a judgment if, upon an examination of the whole evidence, it is able to find facts to support it, all proceed upon the presumption that the necessary facts were found by the trial court, although not expressed. When this presumption is rebutted, as in this case, as well by the record as by the extrinsic evidence, there is no case which I have been able to find in conflict with the fundamental principle that the general term cannot preclude a party by assuming to decide in the first instance controverted facts not found by the court of original jurisdiction. No good reason can be assigned why the same principle should not be applied, whether the judgment is one of affirmance or reversal.

I assume that it will not be claimed that the judgment of the court of appeals is material on the question of res judicata. The jurisdiction of that court excluded it from reviewing the facts. It was bound by a conclusive presumption that the facts supported the judgment, without any inquiry as to the truth.

If any question of fact or liability be conclusively presumed against a party, there is not due process of law.

1 Herman, Estoppel, § 69.

The fact that it was claimed by the counsel for the widow and next of kin before the general term, that the court had jurisdiction to find the facts and render final judgment thereon, creates no estoppel.

Union Bank v. Bush, 36 N. Y. 637.

Where a former judgment is relied upon as res judicata of a fact involved in the second action, and the former judgment may have proceeded on a ground not involving a determination of the fact upon which the second action is based, it is always competent—at least when not inconsistent with the record in the former action—to show by parol evidence the grounds of that judgment, so as to exclude any inference that the particular fact was adjudicated thereby.

Washington, A. & G. Steam Packet Co. v. Sickles, 5 Wall. 592, 18 L. ed. 553; Aurora v. West, 7 Wall. 106, 19 L. ed. 50; Russell v. Placc, 94 U. S. 606, 24 L. ed. 214; Lewis v. Ocean Nav. & Pier Co. 125 N. Y. 341, 26 N. E. 301; Burlen v. Shannon, 99 Mass. 202, 96 Am. Dec. 733; Foster v. Busted, 100 Mass. 409, 1 Am. Rep. 125; 2 Herman, Estoppel, p. 211; 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 769, 772; 21 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, title Res Judicata, p. 191.

Many of the cases above cited hold that, where the record does not disclose the particular ground of the judgment, and it may have passed on a ground which would involve no estoppel, the burden is upon the party alleging it to show that the controverted question was, in fact, decided in the former action. The opinion of this court in De Sollar v. Hanscome, 158 U. S. 221, 39 L. ed. 959, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816, is instructive on the question of estoppel by judgment.

It is idle to say, in view of the circumscribed powers of the court of appeals, that the plaintiffs had their day in court on the vital question on which their right depends.

People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 152 N. Y. 421, 46 N. E. 875.

Mr. Elihu Root argued the cause, and, with Messrs. James L. Bishop, William Forse Scott, William Ford Upson, Thomas H. Hubbard, John McL. Nash, Stewart L. Woodford, Horace Russell, Henry L. Stimson, C. N. Bovee, Jr., Alfred W. Kiddle, Seth Sprague Terry, George G. Reynolds, Henry B. Twombly, Haley Fiske, and Henry Stoddard, filed a brief for appellees:

It is not claimed that the law of the state as construed deprived the appellants of due process, but merely that the law was erroneously construed. It is not claimed that a decision of the question of fact by the general term was not due process, but solely that the general term had no jurisdiction to decide the fact,—which is not a constitutional question. Under such circumstances, the construction and application of the Constitution cannot be said to be involved so as to authorize a direct appeal to this court.

Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; Carey v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 170, 37 L. ed. 1041, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 63; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 44 L. ed. 723, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344.

The court of appeals has never decided that the general term is not authorized to affirm a judgment upon an appeal on a case and exceptions, upon facts not specifically stated in a general concise decision. On the contrary, the power of the general term in this regard has been continuously recognized ever since the adoption of the concise form of decision.

Johnstone v. O'Connor, 21 App. Div. 77, 47 N. Y. Supp. 425, Affirmed in 162 N. Y. 639, 57 N. E. 1123; Keegan v. Smith, 60 App. Div. 168, 70 N. Y. Supp. 260; Gardner v. New York Mut. Sav. & L. Asso. 67 App. Div. 141, 73 N. Y. Supp. 604; Multz v. Price, 91 App. Div. 116, 86 N. Y. Supp. 480.

The concise decision authorized by § 1022 has the effect of a general verdict rendered by a jury, and the same presumptions arise in its support, and the court can look into the evidence only to ascertain whether there were facts proved which would support the decision.

People ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v.
195 U. S.

Barker, 152 N. Y. 431, 46 N. E. 875; Bartlett v. Goodrich, 153 N. Y. 424, 47 N. E. 794; New York Security & T. Co. v. Lipman, 157 N. Y. 556, 52 N. E. 595; Petrie v. Hamilton College, 158 N. Y. 463, 53 N. E. 216; Garvey v. Long Island R. Co. 159 N. Y. 328, 70 Am. St. Rep. 550, 54 N. E. 57; Solomon v. Continental F. Ins. Co. 160 N. Y. 598, 46 L. R. A. 682, 73 Am. St. Rep. 707, 55 N. E. 279; Reed v. McCord, 160 N. Y. 334, 54 N. E. 737; Marden v. Dorothy, 160 N. Y. 46, 46 L. R. A. 694, 54 N. E. 726; Consolidated Electric Storage Co. v. Atlantic Trust Co. 161 N. Y. 611, 56 N. E. 145; Rodgers v. Clement, 162 N. Y. 427, 76 Am. St. Rep. 342, 56 N. E. 901; National Harrow Co. v. E. Bement & Sons, 163 N. Y. 510, 57 N. E. 764; Lamkin v. Palmer, 164 N. Y. 204, 58 N. E. 123; Carpenter v. Taylor, 164 N. Y. 182, 58 N. E. 53; Brokaw v. Duffy, 165 N. Y. 403, 59 N. E. 196; Woodbridge v. First Nat. Bank, 166 N. Y. 245, 59 N. E. 836; Niagara Falls v. New York C. & H. R. Co. 168 N. Y. 611, 61 N. E. 185; Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 170 N. Y. 289, 63 N. E. 350; Critten v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 171 N. Y. 231, 57 L. R. A. 529, 63 N. E. 969; Hutton v. Smith, 175 N. Y. 375, 67 N. E. 633; People ex rel. Sands v. Feitner, 173 N. Y. 647, 66 N. E. 626.

If the want of jurisdiction of the general term had not before been presented to the court of appeals, it was by the motion to amend the remittitur brought directly to their consideration, and the argument upon both sides, as now presented, was before that court. It denied that motion, all the judges concurring, and it thus declared that the general term had jurisdiction to affirm a judgment upon the facts appearing in the evidence which had not been passed upon by the court at special term. Federal courts are conclusively bound by the law thus settled and announced.

Sioux City Terminal R. & Warehouse Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 173 U. S. 99, 43 L. ed. 628, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 36 L. ed. 925, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54.

The due process clause of the 14th Amendment does not necessitate that the proceedings in a state court shall be by a particular mode, but only that there shall be a regular course of proceedings in which notice is given of the claim asserted and an opportunity afforded to defend against it.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 45 L. ed. 1165, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; The Robert W. Parsons (Perry v. Haines) 191 U. S. 45, 48 L. ed. 85, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8.

There is nothing in the Constitution to prevent any state from adopting any system of laws or adjudication it sees fit, for all or any part of its territory.

Missouri v. Lewis (Bowman v. Lewis) 101 U. S. 22, 25 L. ed. 989.

Inasmuch as the judgment of the general term when rendered was in accordance with the law of the state as it then existed and as it was then promulgated, this court will not undertake to say that the judgment so rendered was void for want of due process of law, even though the principle upon which the decision was made was afterwards declared by the court of appeals to be erroneous.

Deposit Bank v. Frankfort, 191 U. S. 499, 48 L. ed. 276, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 492, 493, 45 L. ed. 290, 291, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

Where a trial has once been had which affords a party due process of law, he cannot complain that he has been deprived of due process of law because no right of appeal is given, or because the appeal which he has been permitted to take did not afford him the redress to which he believes himself entitled, where no benefit which he could derive from the judgment has been diminished on appeal.

McKane v. Durston, 153 U. S. 684-687, 38 L. ed. 867, 868, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 913; Andrews v. Swartz, 156 U. S. 272, 39 L. ed. 422, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Holden v. Hardy, 169 U. S. 366, 42 L. ed. 780, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 383.

Where the parties have been fairly heard in the regular course of judicial proceedings, an erroneous decision by the state court does not deprive the unsuccessful party of his property without due process of law, within the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90, 23 L. ed. 678; Head v. Amoskeag Mfg. Co. 113 U. S. 9, 26, 28 L. ed. 889, 895, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Morley v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 146 U. S. 162, 171, 36 L. ed. 925, 930, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 54; Bergemann v. Backer, 157 U. S. 655, 39 L. ed. 845, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 727; Fielden v. Illinois, 143 U. S. 452, 36 L. ed. 224, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 528.

It is not enough that a mere claim in words is made that the appellant has been deprived of due process of law, to justify a direct appeal to this court. It must appear that there is a real, and not merely a feigned or fictitious, question of the invasion of a constitutional right presented, or the appeal will be dismissed.

New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 46 L. ed. 936, 22 Sup. 206

Ct. Rep. 691; St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Steele, 167 U. S. 659, 42 L. ed. 315, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 925; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; Lampasas v. Bell, 180 U. S. 276, 45 L. ed. 527, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

Where a court having jurisdiction of specific property, the subject-matter of an action, awards the property to one of the parties to the action, every other party is conclusively bound by such adjudication, and cannot thereafter assert any right in the property inconsistent with that judgment, until the judgment has been first vacated or set aside.

Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24 L. ed. 195; Stout v. Lye, 103 U. S. 66, 26 L. ed. 428; Dovell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 355, 48 L. ed. 476, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Werlein v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 390, 44 L. ed. 817, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682; Nougue v. Clapp, 101 U. S. 551-555, 25 L. ed. 1026-1028; Barrow v. Hunton, 99 U. S. 80, 25 L. ed. 407; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 61-65, 25 L. ed. 93-95; Wilson v. Deen (Milne v. Deen) 121 U. S. 525, 30 L. ed. 980, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 46 C. C. A. 322, 107 Fed. 328; Tuska v. O'Brien, 68 N. Y. 446; Stilwell v. Carpenter, 59 N. Y. 414; Young v. Farwell, 165 N. Y. 341, 59 N. E. 143; New York v. Brady, 115 N. Y. 599, 22 N. E. 237.

This court cannot disregard the conclusive effect of the state court judgment on the ground that it was given on an erroneous view of the law.

Wilson v. Deen (Milne v. Deen) 121 U. S. 525, 30 L. ed. 980, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004.

It cannot be successfully contended that Federal courts of equity have power to disaffirm or disregard judgments of the state courts, by reason of error or irregularity other than want of jurisdiction, or fraud.

Barrow v. Hunton, 99 U. S. 80, 25 L. ed. 407; Graham v. Boston, H. & E. R. Co. 118 U. S. 161, 30 L. ed. 196, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1009; Arrowsmith v. Gleason, 129 U. S. 99, 100, 32 L. ed. 634, 635, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 237; Marshall v. Holmes, 141 U. S. 589, 600, 35 L. ed. 870, 874, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Morgan, 21 C. C. A. 468, and note, 47 U. S. App. 1, 76 Fed. 429.

The essence of estoppel by judgment is that there has been a judicial determination of a fact, and the question always is, Has there been such determination? and not, Upon what evidence or by what means was it reached?

Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 195 U. S.

157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733.

The general term might, and the appellate division and the court of appeals may, affirm a judgment when upon the record, including the evidence, it appears that the judgment was right, even though, in order to do so, the appellate court must examine and determine questions of law or fact which were not passed upon by the court below.

Ward v. Hasbrouck, 169 N. Y. 407, 62 N. E. 434; Keegan v. Smith, 60 App. Div. 168, 70 N. Y. Supp. 260.

The reason for this distinction between an affirmance and reversal of judgments is found in the nature of the review by an appellate court under the New York practice. When the judgment is reversed, the respondent should ordinarily be granted a new trial, unless the facts are conceded, because upon the record before the appellate court the appellant's exceptions only have been presented and considered, and it may well be that there were, at the trial, erroneous rulings against the respondent which have not been considered, but which might, if presented, materially affect the conclusion.

Thomas v. New York L. Ins. Co. 99 N. Y. 250, 1 N. E. 772.

Where the evidence is before the appellate court, it has always been the rule that the court of appeals might, in support of the judgment, examine the evidence and supply findings needed to support the judgment.

First Nat. Bank v. Chalmers, 144 N. Y. 432, 39 N. E. 331.

The rule is even more emphatic under the practice permitting the short form of decision than it was and is where specific findings of fact and law are made. In the latter case, if an appeal is taken merely from the judgment, without the presentation of "a case" bringing the evidence before the appellate court, the appellate court can only consider whether the legal conclusion is correctly drawn from the facts found.

Rochester Lantern Co. v. Stiles & P. Press Co. 135 N. Y. 209, 31 N. E. 1018.

Where a concise form of decision is made, the general finding is in the nature of a general verdict, and the judgment will be sustained, although the facts stated as the ground of the decision are insufficient to warrant the judgment,—even where the evidence is not before the court.

Health Department v. Weekes, 22 App. Div. 110, 47 N. Y. Supp. 913; Gardner v. New York Mut. Sav. & L. Assn. 67 App. Div. 141, 73 N. Y. Supp. 604; Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876; Bomeislcr v. Forster, 154 N. Y. 237, 39 L. R. A. 240, 48 N. E. 534; People 195 U. S.

ex rel. Manhattan R. Co. v. Barker, 152 N. Y. 431, 46 N. E. 875.

Cases in which it has been held that, upon reversing a judgment, the general term or appellate division ordinarily may not award ultimate judgment in favor of the appellant, but must send the case back for a new trial, and also those in which it has been held that the appellate division cannot make new findings upon the evidence upon which to base a reversal (Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 715, 49 N. E. 326; New v. New Rochelle, 158 N. Y. 41, 52 N. E. 647; Van Beuren v. Wotherspoon, 164 N. Y. 368, 57 N. E. 633), have no application here.

Any additional fact found by them in the evidence in support of a judgment which they affirm is as conclusively determined by the judgment as though it had been specifically found in the findings of the court below; and since in the Amherst College Case the issue as to the validity of the releases was open under the pleadings, the judgment concludes that issue.

New Dunderberg Min. Co. v. Old, 38 C. C. A. 89, 97 Fed. 150; Werlein v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 390, 44 L. ed. 817, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682.

The testimony of jurors will not be received to impeach their verdict.

People ex rel. Hosmer v. Columbia Common Pleas, 1 Wend. 297; Sargent v. —, 5 Cow. 106; Dana v. Tucker, 4 Johns. 487.

Messrs. John E. Parsons and C. N. Bovee, Jr., filed a brief for appellees Ritch, Bulkley, and Vaughan:

The jurisdiction of the circuit court was not in issue in the court below. The decision of the court did not rest upon the ground that the circuit court, as a Federal court, did not have jurisdiction to hear and determine the cause; on the contrary, the court assumed jurisdiction in giving effect to the judgment of the state court in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876.

Bache v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 48 L. ed. 774, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547; Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 501, 43 L. ed. 783, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; United States v. Rider, 163 U. S. 132, 41 L. ed. 101, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 983; Smith v. McKay, 161 U. S. 355, 40 L. ed. 731, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Blythe v. Blythe, 172 U. S. 644, 43 L. ed. 1183, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Arkansas v. Schlierholz, 179 U. S. 598, 45 L. ed. 335, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Shields v. Coleman, 157 U. S. 177, 39 L. ed. 663, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 429, 47 L. ed. 245, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; O'Neal v. United States, 190 U. S. 36, 47 L. ed. 945, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 776; Barney v. New York, 193 U. S.

430, 48 L. ed. 737, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 502; West v. Louisiana, 194 U. S. 258, 48 L. ed. 965, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 650.

This suit is not one which involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, within the meaning of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, authorizing the taking of appeals or writs of error in such cases from district or circuit courts of the United States direct to the Supreme Court.

Cosmopolitan Min. Co. v. Walsh, 193 U. S. 460, 48 L. ed. 749, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 489; C. A. Treat Mfg. Co. v. Standard Steel & I. Co. 157 U. S. 674, 39 L. ed. 853, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Sloan v. United States, 193 U. S. 614-620, 48 L. ed. 814-817, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Lambert v. Barrett, 157 U. S. 697, 39 L. ed. 865, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722; Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435.

The mere assertion by the plaintiffs of constitutional questions, or that they have been deprived of their property without due process of law, does not establish jurisdiction. Otherwise, every defeated litigant in a state court action could, in the event of diverse citizenship of the parties, bring an action in the United States circuit court, and, upon his allegation respecting due process of law and the 14th Amendment, secure a review of the whole record upon an appeal directly to this court.

Newburyport Water Co. v. Newburyport, 193 U. S. 561-576, 48 L. ed. 795, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553.

The duties and powers of the appellate court in the state of New York upon appeal have been fully considered and determined in the highest court of that state. The appellate court is required to review all questions of fact and law, and may grant such a judgment to either of the parties as the facts warrant, without ordering a new trial.

Multz v. Price, 91 App. Div. 116, 86 N. Y. Supp. 480; Johnstone v. O'Connor, 21 App. Div. 77, 47 N. Y. Supp. 425, Affirmed in 162 N. Y. 639, 57 N. E. 1123; Harding v. Elliott, 91 Hun, 502, 36 N. Y. Supp. 648; Bomeisler v. Forster, 154 N. Y. 229, 39 L. R. A. 240, 48 N. E. 534.

A decision stating concisely the grounds, without findings, is tantamount, in fact, to the general verdict of a jury.

Health Department v. Weekes, 22 App. Div. 110, 47 N. Y. Supp. 913; Gardner v. New York Mut. Sav. & L. Asso. 67 App. Div. 141, 73 N. Y. Supp. 604.

The judgment and record in Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A.

305, 45 N. E. 876, was res judicata upon the right, title, or interest of the complainants Fayerweather and Achter in the bill, and Reynolds, as executor, in the cross bill.

Fayerweather v. Ritch, 34 C. C. A. 61, 63 U. S. App. 112, 91 Fed. 721; Landon v. Bulkley, 37 C. C. A. 96, 95 Fed. 344; Manhattan Trust Co. v. Trust Co. of N. A. 46 C. C. A. 322, 107 Fed. 328; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 352, 24 L. ed. 197; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 355, 48 L. ed. 476, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266; Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327-343, 38 L. ed. 463-469, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Wilson v. Deen (Milne v. Deen) 121 U. S. 525, 30 L. ed. 980, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Stout v. Lye, 103 U. S. 66, 26 L. ed. 428; Masoh Lumber Co. v. Buchtel, 101 U. S. 638, 25 L. ed. 1074; Mitchell v. First Nat. Bank, 180 U. S. 471, 45 L. ed. 627, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Manson v. Duncanson, 166 U. S. 533, 41 L. ed. 1105, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 647; United States v. Throckmorton, 98 U. S. 65, 25 L. ed. 95; Smith v. Nelson, 62 N. Y. 288; Sanders v. Soutter, 126 N. Y. 199, 27 N. E. 263; Herring v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 105 N. Y. 340, 12 N. E. 763; Pray v. Hegeman, 98 N. Y. 358; Thorn v. De Breuille, 179 N. Y. 64, 71 N. E. 470; Leavitt v. Wolcott, 95 N. Y. 212.

Due process of law was not denied to complainants Fayerweather, Achter, and Reynolds in the proceedings in Amherst College v. Ritch.

Simon v. Craft, 182 U. S. 427, 436, 45 L. ed. 1165, 1170, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Schmidt, 177 U. S. 230, 44 L. ed. 747, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 620; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Louisiana, 185 U. S. 336, 350, 46 L. ed. 936, 943, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 691; Fayerweather v. Ritch, 34 C. C. A. 61, 63 U. S. App. 112, 91 Fed. 721; Kennard v. Louisiana, 92 U. S. 480, 23 L. ed. 478; Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Wilson v. North Carolina, 169 U. S. 586, 42 L. ed. 865, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 435; People ex rel. Witherbec v. Essex County, 70 N. Y. 228.

The Code of Civil Procedure of the state of New York affords a complete and harmonious system for bringing parties into court, for a full and fair trial of issues, and for subsequent appeals for the correction of errors in the trial of the cause.

Bomeisler v. Forster, 154 N. Y. 237, 39 L. R. A. 240, 48 N. E. 534.

A correct decision will not be reversed on appeal because founded upon a wrong reason.

Ward v. Hasbrouck, 169 N. Y. 407, 62 195 U. S.

N. E. 434; Marvin v. Universal L. Ins. Co. 85 N. Y. 278, 39 Am. Rep. 657; Allard v. Graesert, 61 N. Y. 1; Ferguson v. Gill, 74 Hun, 566, 26 N. Y. Supp. 596.

The 14th Amendment of the Constitution in no way undertakes to control the power of a state to determine by what process legal rights may be ascertained or legal obligations be enforced, provided the method of procedure adopted for these purposes gives reasonable notice and affords fair opportunity to be heard before the issues are decided.

Iowa C. R. Co. v. Iowa, 160 U. S. 389, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 344; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 104, 24 L. ed. 616, 619; Gallup v. Schmidt, 183 U. S. 300, 46 L. ed. 207, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

Mr. Thomas H. Hubbard filed a brief for the President and Trustees of Bowdoin College:

The appellants had their day in court upon the trial at special term of the New York supreme court, and the judgment rendered by that court is a bar to this action.

Werlein v. New Orleans, 177 U. S. 390, 44 L. ed. 817, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682. See also Pray v. Hegeman, 98 N. Y. 351.

The general term may not, as a court of original jurisdiction, make from the record before it on an appeal new findings of fact to support a new judgment contrary to the judgment appealed from, or to modify the judgment appealed from.

Benedict v. Arnoux, 154 N. Y. 715, 49 N. E. 326; Cutter v. Gudebrod Bros. Co. 168 N. Y. 512, 61 N. E. 887.

The general term in reality did not make new findings of fact in respect to the releases; on examination of that record it stated and decided, as a proposition of law, that there was not evidence enough to support a verdict or a judgment invalidating the releases.

Whether evidence is sufficient to sustain a verdict is a question of law, not a question of fact. Whether evidence is sufficient to require the reversal of a judgment is also a question of law for the appellate court to pass upon.

Otten v. Manhattan R. Co. 150 N. Y. 395, 44 N. E. 1033.

[297] *Mr Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

Our jurisdiction of this direct appeal from the decision of the circuit court is invoked on the ground that the case involves the application of the Constitution of the United States.

The contention is that, by article 5 of the 195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Amendments to the Federal Constitution, no person can "be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law;" that these plaintiffs were entitled to large shares of the estate of Daniel B. Fayerweather; that they were deprived of this property by the judgment of the circuit court, which gave unwarranted effect to a judgment of the state courts; that this action of the circuit court is not to be considered a mere error in the progress of a trial, but a deprivation of property under the forms of legal procedure. In Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581, we held that a judgment of a state court might be here reviewed if it operated to deprive a party of his property without due process of law, and that the fact that the parties were properly brought into court and admitted to make defense was not absolutely conclusive upon the question of due process. We said (p. 234, L. ed. p. 983, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 584):

"But a state may not, by any of its agencies, disregard the prohibitions of the 14th Amendment. Its judicial authorities may keep within the letter of the statute prescribing forms of procedure in the courts, and give the parties interested the fullest opportunity to be heard, and yet it might be that its final action would be inconsistent with that amendment. In determining what is due process of law, regard must be had to substance, not to form. This court, referring to the 14th Amendment, has said: 'Can a state make anything due process of law which, by its own legislation, it chooses to declare such? To affirm this is to hold that the prohibition to the states is of no avail, or has no application where the invasion of private rights is effected under the forms of state legislation.' Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 102, 24 L. ed. 616, 618. The *same question could be propounded, [298] and the same answer should be made, in reference to judicial proceedings inconsistent with the requirement of due process of law. If compensation for private property taken for public use is an essential element of due process of law as ordained by the 14th Amendment, then the final judgment of a state court, under the authority of which the property is in fact taken, is to be deemed the act of the state within the meaning of that amendment."

And again (p. 236, 237, L. ed. p. 985, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 584):

"The mere form of the proceeding instituted against the owner, even if he be admitted to defend, cannot convert the process used into due process of law, if the necessary result be to deprive him of his property without compensation."

If a judgment of a state court can be re- 14 209 viewed by this court on error upon the ground that, although the forms of law were observed, it necessarily operated to wrongfully deprive a party of his property (as indicated by the decision just referred to), a judgment of the circuit court of the United States, claimed to give such unwarranted effect to a decision of a state court as to accomplish the same result, may also be considered as presenting the question how far it can be sustained in the view of the prohibitory language of the 5th Amendment, and thus involve the application of the Constitution. It is said that the right of these plaintiffs to share in the estate of Daniel B. Fayerweather is undoubted, unless destroyed by the releases they executed; that the fundamental question presented in the trial court of the state was the validity of those releases; that, notwithstanding this, that court came to its conclusion and rendered its judgment without any determination thereof; that the appellate courts wrongfully assumed that the trial court had decided the question, and rendered their judgments on that assumption, so that the necessary result of the proceedings in the state courts was a deprivation of the right of the plaintiffs to a share of the estate, without any finding of the vital fact which [299] alone could destroy their right. The *contention is not that the state courts erred in their finding in respect to this fact, but that there never was any finding. Such decision of the state courts, made without any finding of the fundamental fact, was accepted in the circuit court of the United States as a conclusive determination of the fact. Although these plaintiffs were parties to the proceedings in the state courts, and presented their claim of right, if it be true that the necessary result of the course of procedure in those courts was a denial of their rights,—a taking away and depriving them of their property without any judicial determination of the fact upon which alone such deprivation could be justified,—a case is presented coming directly within the decision in 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581. Giving effect in the circuit court to the state judgment does not change the character of the question. It is simply adding the force of a new determination to one wrongfully obtained, and adding it upon no new facts. Whether the contention of the plaintiffs in respect to the character of the state proceedings can be sustained or not is a question upon the merits, and does not determine the matter of jurisdiction. That depends upon whether there is presented a bona fide and reasonable question of the wrongful character of the proceedings in the state courts.

and the necessary result therefrom. We are of opinion that the jurisdiction of this court must be sustained.

We pass, therefore, to consider the merits of the case. Private right and public welfare unite in demanding that a question once adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction shall, except in direct proceedings to review, be considered as finally settled and conclusive upon the parties. Interest rei publicæ ut sit finis litium. But in order to make this finality rightful it should appear that the question was distinctly put in issue; that the parties presented their evidence, or at least had an opportunity to present it, and that the question was decided. Cases of an alleged prior adjudication have frequently been presented in this court and the scope of a plea thereof fully determined. In the leading *case of Cromwell v. Sac [300] County, 94 U. S. 351, 352, 24 L. ed. 195, 197, we said:

"In considering the operation of this judgment, it should be borne in mind, as stated by counsel, that there is a difference between the effect of a judgment as a bar or estoppel against the prosecution of a second action upon the same claim or demand, and its effect as an estoppel in another action between the same parties upon a different claim or cause of action. In the former case, the judgment, if rendered upon the merits, constitutes an absolute bar to a subsequent action. It is a finality as to the claim or demand in controversy, concluding parties and those in privity with them, not only as to every matter which was offered and received to sustain or defeat the claim or demand, but as to any other admissible matter which might have been offered for that purpose. Thus, for example, a judgment rendered upon a promissory note is conclusive as to the validity of the instrument and the amount due upon it, although it be subsequently alleged that perfect defenses actually existed, of which no proof was offered, such as forgery, want of consideration, or payment. If such defenses were not presented in the action, and established by competent evidence, the subsequent allegation of their existence is of no legal consequence. The judgment is as conclusive, so far as future proceedings at law are concerned, as though the defenses never existed. The language, therefore, which is so often used, that a judgment estops not only as to every ground of recovery or defense actually presented in the action, but also as to every ground which might have been presented, is strictly accurate, when applied to the demand or claim in controversy. Such demand or claim, having passed into judgment, cannot again be brought into litigation between the parties in proceedings at law upon any ground whatever."

See also Wilson v. Deen, 121 U. S. 525, 30 L. ed. 980, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1004; Hefner v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 123 U. S. 747, 31 L. ed. 309, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Wiggins Ferry Co. v. Ohio & M. R. Co. 142 U. S. 396, 35 L. ed. 1055, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. [301] 188; *Nesbit v. Independent District, 144 U. S. 610, 36 L. ed. 562, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Johnson Steel Street Rail Co. v. Whar-ton, 152 U. S. 252, 38 L. ed. 429, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 608; Dowell v. Applegate, 152 U. S. 327, 38 L. ed. 463, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co. 157 U. S. 683, 39 L. ed. 859, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 733; New Orleans v. Citizens' Bank, 167 U. S. 371, 42 L. ed. 202, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 168 U. S. 1, 42 L. ed. 355, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Bryar v. Campbell, 177 U. S. 649, 44 L. ed. 926, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 794; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 192 U. S. 355-358, 48 L. ed. 476-478, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

The state court was one of competent jurisdiction, and the present contestants were before that court, taking part in the litigation. The validity of the releases was put in issue by the pleadings, and no judgment could properly have been rendered without a determination of that question. The colleges sought to enforce a secret trust, but the property covered by the trust, together with that passing under the 9th article of the will, was the bulk of the estate,—far more than half. Such a disposition of the testator's property was in contravention of the laws of New York. They who would take the estate in case of intestacy had a right to object to the enforcement of the trust. Only on condition that they waived their objections and released could it be sustained. The judgment enforced it. It therefore practically determined that the releases were valid, and decided against the contention of these plaintiffs, that they were fraudulent and void. All this is evident from a perusal of the pleadings. The appellants concede this and rest their claim in the Federal court partly upon that basis. Thus, in their brief it is said:

"The issues so joined came on to be tried in the state supreme court; these complainants gave evidence tending to prove their allegations, and thereupon it became the duty of the court to adjudge whether the releases which they assailed were invalid, and whether they were entitled to the affirmative relief prayed. The issues so tendered were necessary to be determined before any valid judgment upon those issues could be given pursuant to due process of law, the law of the land and the provisions of the Constitution of the United States." 195 U. S.

The case was tried by the court without a jury. No special *findings of fact were [302] made. According to testimony given on the trial of this case in the circuit court the omission to make special findings was with the acquiescence (if not at the instance) of all the counsel appearing in the state court. The decree adjudged that the residuary estate was held in trust for the colleges named in the 9th article of the will, enjoined the residuary legatees from distributing any portion of that estate under the deed of gift, and directed that it be paid over to the respective colleges. The ordinary rule in respect to a judgment without any special findings is that it, like a general verdict of a jury, is tantamount to a finding in favor of the successful party of all the facts necessary to sustain the judgment. In the general term, on the appeal taken to it, two opinions were filed,—one by Judge Follett, in which Judge Parker concurred, and one by the presiding judge, Van Brunt. Judge Follett, after stating that the executors of the testator's widow and two of his heirs at law and next of kin sought to have the residuary clause declared invalid, under chap. 360 of the Laws of 1860, said:

"The difficulty with their contention is that the widow and heirs released all of their interest in the estate for valuable considerations paid to them. . . . It is urged that these releases were procured by fraud and undue influence. There is no evidence in the record justifying this contention. The terms of settlement were agreed on during the controversy in the surrogate's court over the probate of the will and codicils, and the widow and heirs were represented in that controversy and in the settlement by distinguished counsel, and acted under their advice. . . . If the person entitled to contest a will, or some one or more of its provisions, voluntarily, and for a valuable consideration received after the testator's death, with full knowledge of the invalidity of the will, divests himself of all interest in the property attempted to be disposed of by it, he cannot impeach its validity."

Presiding Judge Van Brunt thus stated his conclusions:

"The testator left him surviving a widow, who was the only *person who could call [303] into operation, for her protection, the statute which we have quoted. The widow, however, has released to the executors all claims to the estate, which release cannot be successfully attacked or set aside. There is consequently no person for whose benefit the statute can operate.

"No rights of heirs and next of kin have been infringed upon, because the trust does not contravene any statute for their benefit, and is not the subject of attack by them. If it were, they have also executed a release of their interest in the estate in the same manner as the widow.

"We have therefore the case of a trust established, which would be valid as against all the world but for the statute in favor of the widow; and the widow, having released all her rights in the estate, how can her representatives claim the invalidity of a trust as to property in which she had no interest?" [91 Hun, 534, 36 N. Y. Supp. 576.]

The opinion in the court of appeals was delivered by Judge Vann, and concurred in by all the judges except Chief Judge Andrews. In it it is said:

"Although the decision by the special term and the affirmance by the general term were general in form, necessarily some facts were found by those courts, even if they are not specified in the record. Otherwise the burden of deciding questions of fact would be cast upon this court, which has jurisdiction to decide only questions of law. We think that the effect of a decision by the trial court without expressing the facts found is the same as if there had been a general verdict rendered by a jury, and that the same presumptions arise in its support.

"We are of the opinion, therefore, that where the decision of the special term does not state the facts found, and the judgment entered thereon has been affirmed by the general term, upon an appeal to this court all the facts [alleged in the complaint] warranted by the evidence, and necessary to support the judgments below, are presumed to have been found. Hence, upon such an appeal, we have no more control over the facts than [304] we have *when specific findings are made by the special term and affirmed by the general term. This conclusion takes the question as to the fraud alleged to have been practised by the residuary legatees upon the widow and next of kin in procuring the releases out of the case, for it cannot be said on the record before us that the evidence tending to show fraud is so irresistible as to make the omission to find fraud an error of law. Assuming that there was evidence enough to warrant the inference of fraud, there was also ample evidence to warrant the inference that there was no fraud. A question of fact was thus presented which is beyond our power of review." [151 N. Y. 320, 321, 37 L. R. A. 320, 45 N. E. 886.]

Thus the court of appeals held in accord with the ordinary ruling as to the effect of a judgment without findings. So it has frequently decided. In Bartlett v. Goodrich, 153 N. Y. 421, 424, 47 N. E. 794, 795, it said:

"The learned trial judge held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and the general term has affirmed the judgment. There were no findings made as the result of the trial, but simply a brief statement of the ground of the decision. In this condition of the record we must presume that all facts warranted by the evidence, and necessary to support the judgment, have been found. Amherst College v. Ritch, 151 N. Y. 282, 37 L. R. A. 305, 45 N. E. 876. The appeal, therefore, cannot prevail unless it appears, as matter of law, that the learned trial judge was not warranted, upon any fair view of the evidence, in finding as he did, that the deceased was, at the time of his death, the equitable owner of the policies."

See also New York Security & T. Co. v. Lipman, 157 N. Y. 551, 556, 52 N. E. 595; Garvey v. Long Island R. Co. 159 N. Y. 323, 328, 70 Am. St. Rep. 550, 54 N. E. 57; Reed v. McCord, 160 N. Y. 330, 334, 54 N. E. 737; Solomon v. Continental F. Ins. Co. 160 N. Y. 595, 598, 46 L. R. A. 682, 73 Am. St. Rep. 707, 55 N. E. 279; Rodgers v. Clement, 162 N. Y. 422, 427, 76 Am. St. Rep. 342, 56 N. E. 901; National Harrow Co. v. Bement & Sons, 163 N. Y. 505, 510, 57 N. E. 764; Niagara Falls v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 168 N. Y. 611, 61 N. E. 185; Critten v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 171 N. Y. 219, 231, 57 L. R. A. 529, 63 N. E. 969; Hutton v. Smith, 175 N. Y. 375, 378, 67 N. E. 633.

*After the filing of its opinion an application made to the court of appeals, as shown in the statement of facts, to amend the remittitur so as to direct the trial court to find specifically whether the releases were valid or not, was denied. [305]

We have thus the case of a hearing in the trial court upon issues which required a determination of the validity of these releases as a condition of a judgment adverse to these plaintiffs; a judgment against them; an affirmance of the judgment by the general term of the supreme court, with an opinion declaring that there was in the record no evidence justifying the claim that these releases were fraudulently obtained, and void; and a further affirmance by the court of appeals, accompanied by an opinion declaring that, upon the state of the record, it was to be presumed that the validity of the releases had been affirmatively found, and also that there was sufficient evidence to sustain such a finding, followed by a refusal to send the question of the validity of the releases back to the trial court for consideration. Notwithstanding all this, apparent upon the face of the record, the plaintiffs insist that the validity of the releases was never determined by any of the state courts, and that the final judgment of affirmance by the court of appeals was based upon the presumption of a determination which was never in fact made.

Upon what is this contention based? First, the silence of the judgment, which contains no findings to indicate upon what it is based; second, a memorandum of decision filed by the trial judge, in which he states that "the grounds upon which the issues have been decided are" a promise of the executors that if made residuary legatees they would distribute the residuary estate among the colleges named in the 9th article, and that the testator made them residuary legatees in reliance upon such promise; the opinion of the trial judge, in which he discusses at some length, and with citation of authorities, the validity of the secret trust and the testimony by which it was established, and then, without in terms passing upon the contention respecting the releases, [306] states "the *view that I have taken of the facts and the law of this case renders it unnecessary for me to consider the very interesting questions of law propounded by the learned counsel for the defendants Reynolds, Achter, and Fayerweather;" and, finally, the testimony of the trial judge, given on the hearing in this case some six years after his decision in the state court, to the effect that, in deciding the case he did not consider the question of the validity of the releases.

It is undoubtedly true that, in some cases, evidence may be introduced outside the record to show what particular question was tried and determined in the former suit. Washington, A. & G. Steam-Packet Co. v. Sickles, 24 How. 333, 344, 16 L. ed. 650, 654, 5 Wall. 580, 592, 18 L. ed. 550, 553; Russell v. Place, 94 U. S. 606, 608, 24 L. ed. 214, 215. But it does not follow that testimony of every kind is admissible for that purpose. In Washington, A. & G. Steam-Packet Company v. Sickles, although it was held that "in cases where the record itself does not show that the matter was necessarily and directly found by the jury, evidence aliunde consistent with the record may be received to prove the fact," yet, it appearing that some of the jurors on the former trial were permitted to testify as to the particular ground upon which they found their verdict, it was said (p. 593, L. ed. p. 554):

"But it is proper to say that the secret deliberations of the jury or grounds of their proceedings while engaged in making up their verdict are not competent or admissible evidence of the issues or finding. The jurors oftentimes, though they may concur in the result, differ as to the grounds or reasons upon which they arrive at it.

"The evidence should be confined to the points in controversy on the former trial, to the testimony given by the parties, and to the questions submitted to the jury for their consideration, and then the record furnishes the only proper proof of the verdict."

See also Wood v. Jackson, 8 Wend. 9-36, 22 Am. Dec. 603; Lawrence v. Hunt, 10 Wend. 80-85, 25 Am. Dec. 539.

Tested by the rule thus laid down the testimony of the trial *judge given six [307] years after the case had been disposed of, in respect to the matters he considered and passed upon, was obviously incompetent. True, the reasoning of the court for the rule is not wholly applicable, for, as the case was tried before a single judge, there were not two or more minds coming by different processes to the same result. Nevertheless, no testimony should be received except of open and tangible facts,—matters which are susceptible of evidence on both sides. A judgment is a solemn record. Parties have a right to rely upon it. It should not lightly be disturbed, and ought never to be overthrown or limited by the oral testimony of a judge or juror of what he had in mind at the time of the decision. Undoubtedly, when the pleadings are general, as in a case of the common counts, evidence may be given of the testimony which was introduced on the trial, for that may disclose what must have been considered and determined. And where the evidence is that testimony was offered at the prior trial upon several distinct issues, the decision of any one of which would justify the verdict or judgment, then the conclusion must be that the prior decision is not an adjudication upon any particular issue or issues, and the plea of res judicata must fail.

Putting one side the oral testimony of the trial judge, there is nothing in the other matters specified to disturb the conclusion which follows from an examination of the record, that the validity of the releases was actually determined. Of course, the omission of special findings means nothing, for the judgment implies a finding of all necessary facts. The memorandum of decision naturally states the grounds for arriving at a conclusion concerning the respective claims of the colleges named in the 9th clause and the beneficiaries of the deed of gift, for that was the controversy between those parties, and indeed, the primary controversy presented by the pleadings. The declaration in the opinion, that the conclusion reached upon the matters discussed rendered it unnecessary to consider the questions of law propounded by the counsel for these plaintiffs, must be read in the light [308] of the *prior statement therein that the widow and next of kin were demanding that the releases executed by them be set aside and they be given the residuary estate, and the further fact that whether the releases were fraudulently obtained and void was a question of fact rather than of law. Evidently the opinion proceeded and the conclusion was reached on the assumption that there was no sufficient testimony to invalidate the releases.

Further, the entire record of the case was taken on appeal to the general term. That court had before it for consideration all the evidence which was presented to the trial court; and, as we have seen, declared in its opinion that there was no evidence justifying the contention that the releases were procured by fraud and undue influence. While this was not stated in the form of a special finding, it discloses the conclusion of the court from the evidence. We cannot hold that it was not authorized to pass upon this question, for its conclusion was sustained by the court of appeals, which, in its opinion, also referred to the question. Finally, by the motion to amend its remittitur, the attention of the court of appeals was specifically called to these very matters which are now urged as showing a failure on the part of the lower courts to determine the question of the validity of the releases, and it refused to make any order which would permit a further consideration. Nothing can be clearer from this record than that the question of the validity of the releases was not only before the state courts, but was considered and determined by them, and the regularity of the procedure was sustained by the highest court of the state. The question was, as affirmed by counsel for these appellants, put in issue by the pleadings, and its determination was a necessary prerequisite to an adverse judgment. It was referred to by all the courts in their opinions, was affirmatively decided by the general term, its decision sustained by the court of appeals, and reaffirmed by that court, by a refusal to amend its remittitur.

Under these circumstances the pleas of [309] res judicata were *properly sustained, and the decree of the Circuit Court, dismissing the bill and cross bill, is affirmed.

The CHIEF JUSTICE did not hear the argument, and took no part in the decision of this case.

C. EWING PATTERSON et al., Appts.,
v.

JOHN Y. HEWITT et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 309-322.)

Laches in suit to enforce rights to mining location.

1. Laches may defeat a suit in equity to enforce rights in a mining location, although the time fixed in N. M. Comp. Laws, § 2938, for the prosecution of actions or suits "in law or equity" for any lands, tenements, or hereditaments has not expired.
2. A delay of eight years after the right to a deed of an interest in a mining claim has accrued by reason of a proportionate contribution to the work and expense necessary to obtain a patent will defeat a suit to enforce such right, where complainants contributed nothing further to the subsequent development of the mine and the consequent discovery of a rich ore deposit.
3. The refusal of a trustee to execute a deed of an interest in a mining location in compliance with the trust agreement is a repudiation of the trust, which, if known to the complainants, opens the door to the defense of laches to a suit to enforce the trust.

[No. 23.]

Argued October 25, 26, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the District Court for Lincoln County in that Territory, dismissing, on the ground of laches, a bill to enforce a trust in certain mining locations. Affirmed.

See same case below (N. M.) 55 L. R. A. 658, 66 Pac. 553.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

Appellants C. Ewing Patterson, a resident of New Jersey, and Henry J. Patterson, a resident of New Mexico, on April 29, *1893, filed their bill of complaint in the [310] district court for Lincoln county, territory of New Mexico, against John Y. Hewitt, William Watson, Mathew Hoyle, and Harvey B. Fergusson, residents of New Mexico, and the Old Abe Company, a corporation of the same territory, to enforce a trust which is alleged to have existed between the appellants and the defendant Hewitt, and by virtue of which they sought to recover a one-fourth interest in two mining locations, made in the name of John Y. Hewitt, on the 2d day of May, 1884. The bill prayed for an accounting of proceeds of ores taken from the mines, and a lien on the property, for an injunction, and the appointment of a receiver.

NOTE.—As to laches as a defense—see notes to Hammond v. Hopkins, 36 L. ed. U. S. 135; Felix v. Patrick, 36 L. ed. U. S. 720; Middletown v. Newport Hospital, 1 L. R. A. 191; Calhoun v. Deihl & M. R. Co. 8 L. R. A. 248; Coffey v. Emigh, 10 L. R. A. 125.

On the application of limitations to trusts—see notes to Hughes v. Brown, 8 L. R. A. 480; Cone v. Dunham, 8 L. R. A. 647.

The facts in the case as found by the district court and adopted by the supreme court are substantially as follows:

In 1881 the property in controversy was claimed by the appellants and by Watson, one of the defendants, under locations previously made by them. Between 1881 and 1883, appellants, in conjunction with the defendant Watson, did a large amount of work upon the claims, and were asserting their rights under the mining laws of the United States. During this time the same ground was also claimed by other parties, among whom was the defendant Hewitt. In August, 1883, a dispute arose in regard to this property between appellants and the defendant Watson on one side and the other parties upon the other side.

The parties interested held a meeting in August or September, 1883, for the purpose of adjusting the differences then existing between them, and to endeavor, if possible, to arrive at an agreement whereby the interests of all would be protected. The two appellants, the defendant Watson and the defendant Hewitt, with several others who were interested, attended this meeting. The result was an agreement between them that all the old locations then existing, whether made by the appellants or any of the defendants, or conflicting claimants, should be from that date abandoned, surrendered, and given up by all of the parties, and that the [311]ground should be *put in possession of Hewitt, as trustee, to hold in his own name for the benefit of all the parties then interested. It was also agreed that Hewitt, as such trustee, should make a deed to such of the said parties holding interests therein as should contribute their part to the work, labor, and expenses necessary to obtain a patent to the land; but there was no agreement as to what should become of the interests of anyone who failed to contribute his share of the expenses. It was also agreed that each of the appellants contributing his share of the expenses should receive a one-eighth interest in the location, and that the said Watson and Hewitt should each receive a one-eighth interest, part on account of their services and part on account of their interests in the ground, and that the remaining shares should go to other parties who were interested therein.

In pursuance of this agreement Hewitt took charge of the property, and, together with the defendant Watson and one of the appellants Patterson, superintended and directed the work upon said mine during the year 1883 and part of the year 1884. In order to raise money for the working of the mine it was agreed that a one-sixth interest should be sold to H. B. Fergusson for $500.

During 1884 and 1885 a sufficient amount of work was done upon the property to obtain a patent, and to discover mineral thereon. The appellants contributed their share of the work, which enabled the trustee to obtain a patent, and so far carried out their part of the agreement as to entitle them to a deed from the trustee for their one-eighth interest each, according to said agreement.

In April, 1885, the appellant Henry J. Patterson, in person and by his agent, demanded a deed from Hewitt, trustee, of the one-eighth interest to which he claimed to be entitled; but the defendant Hewitt at that time refused to make the said deed, and has ever since refused to execute the same, and has disputed his right thereto.

No demand for a deed appears to have been made by C. *Ewing Patterson until [312] just before the commencement of this suit, when it was also refused.

In 1883, the complainant C. Ewing Patterson left New Mexico, and, up to the time of the bringing of this suit, had never returned there. The appellant Henry J. Patterson left in 1885, and from that time until the fall of 1892 was a nonresident of New Mexico.

From 1885 to 1890 the defendants performed a large amount of work and expended a good deal of money on the mine in addition to the annual assessment required by the government of the United States thereon; but neither of the appellants ever contributed or offered to contribute any part of the expenses of said work, or perform any labor.

In November, 1890, the defendants discovered a large body of rich ore in the mine, and since that date have taken out therefrom gold amounting to several hundred thousand dollars. In 1892, a corporation known as the Old Abe Mining Company was organized by the defendants Hewitt, Fergusson, Watson, and others, and the ground in controversy, known as the Old Abe ground, including the interests claimed by the appellants, was turned over to the new corporation by the trustee, Hewitt, and this corporation is now holding title thereto.

The appellant Henry J. Patterson, through his agent, Henry Burgess, had knowledge from April, 1885, that Hewitt had refused to carry out said agreement, and execute the deed to him and his co-complainant, and both of the appellants were again informed after April, 1885, that Hewitt had refused to make the said deeds or to carry out the trust agreement.

Upon this state of facts the district court dismissed the bill upon the ground of laches. The supreme court of the territory affirmed its action (55 L. R. A. 658, 66 Pac. 553), and complainants appealed to this court.

Mr. W. B. Childers argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. W. Clancy, filed a brief for appellants:

Where a statute declares that a suit in equity cannot be maintained after the lapse of ten years, nothing less than the lapse of that period can bar the suit. The defense of laches and staleness of claim is no longer available.

Corning v. Stebbins, 1 Barb. Ch. 591; Varick v. Edwards, Hoffm. Ch. 417, 11 Paige Ch. 291; Hill v. Nash, 73 Miss. 862, 19 So. 710; Washington v. Soria, 73 Miss. 665, 55 Am. St. Rep. 555, 19 So. 487; Cross v. Allen, 141 U. S. 537, 35 L. ed. 849, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67.

Our statute expressly provides in effect that no suit shall be barred within ten years.

Every statute must be construed from the words in it, and that construction is to be preferred which gives to all of them an operative meaning.

Potter's Dwarrr. Stat. 144, 145; Early v. Doe, 16 How. 617, 14 L. ed. 1082; Post Master General v. Early, 12 Wheat. 152, 6 L. ed. 583; United States v. Gooding, 12 Wheat. 477, 6 L. ed. 699; Washington Market Co. v. Hoffman, 101 U. S. 115, 116, 25 L. ed. 783, 784; Allen v. Louisiana, 103 U. S. 84, 85, 26 L. ed. 319, 320; Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 152, 27 L. ed. 432, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 391; United States v. Fisher, 109 U. S. 145, 27 L. ed. 886, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154.

No general rule as to laches can be laid down which controls in all cases, but each case must be decided upon its own peculiar circumstances: and in withholding or granting relief where the defense of laches has been interposed, the court lays great stress upon the presence or absence of special circumstances which make it inequitable or otherwise to grant what complainants ask.

Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 250, 36 L. ed. 145, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Gallier v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 368, 36 L. ed. 738, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873; Halstead v. Grinnan, 152 U. S. 416, 417, 38 L. ed. 496, 497, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Penn. Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Austin, 168 U. S. 698, 42 L. ed. 631, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 223; Abraham v. Ordway, 158 U. S. 420, 39 L. ed. 1039, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894.

Mere delay or silence on the part of complainants is not enough to bar them, no matter how long continued, if it does not extend beyond the statutory period of limitation.

New York Rubber Co. v. Rothery, 107 N. Y. 315, 1 Am. St. Rep. 822, 14 N. E. 269; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Dubois, 12 Wall. 64, 20 L. ed. 269; American Co. v. Bradford, 27 Cal. 360; Lux v. Haggin, 69 Cal. 267, 10 Pac. 674; Wood, Limitation of Actions, §§ 61-63; Kline v. Vogel, 90 Mo. 250, 1 S. W. 733, 2 S. W. 408; Perry, Tr. § 850; First Nat. Bank v. Nelson, 106 Ala. 535, 18 So. 155; Hill v. Epley, 31 Pa. 333; Brant v. Virginia Coal & I. Co. 93 U. S. 336, 23 L. ed. 929; Ross v. Payson, 160 Ill. 349, 43 N. E. 402.

In cases where a trust is clearly established by the testimony, or where fraud is clearly proved, or where the property has not passed into the hands of persons innocent of the fraud and without notice thereof, and lapse of time has not obscured the facts or caused the loss of testimony, relief will be granted, notwithstanding great delay on the part of a complainant.

McIntyre v. Pryor, 173 U. S. 53, 43 L. ed. 611, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 352.

Mr. H. B. Fergusson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

Appellants delayed the institution of their suit in this case for at least eight years. This, under the facts before this court, is laches.

Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329; Great West Min. Co. v. Woodmas of Alston Min. Co. 14 Colo. 90, 23 Pac. 908; Kinne v. Webb, 49 Fed. 512; Harwood v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co. 17 Wall. 78, 21 L. ed. 558; Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. ed. 422; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 24 L. ed. 855; Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 29 L. ed. 538, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Société Foncière v. Milliken, 135 U. S. 304, 34 L. ed. 208, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 823; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224, 36 L. ed. 134, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Hoyt v. Latham, 143 U. S. 567, 36 L. ed. 264, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 568; Pratt v. California Min. Co. 9 Sawy. 354, 24 Fed. 869; Manning v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 7 Sawy. 418, 9 Fed. 726; Kline v. Vogel, 90 Mo. 239, 1 S. W. 733, 2 S. W. 408; Halsted v. Grinnan, 152 U. S. 412, 38 L. ed. 495, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 641; Richards v. Mackall, 124 U. S. 183, 31 L. ed. 396, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 437; McCabe v. Matthews, 155 U. S. 550, 39 L. ed. 256, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Evers v. Watson, 156 U. S. 527, 39 L. ed. 520, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 430; Johnson v. Atlantic, G. & W. I. Transit Co. 156 U. S. 618, 39 L. ed. 556, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 520; Johnston v. Standard Min. Co. 148 U. S. 360, 37 L. ed. 480, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; Foster v. Mansfield, C. & L. M. R. Co.

146 U. S. 88, 36 L. ed. 899, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28.

Complainants are required to allege and prove satisfactory reasons or excuses for long delay.

Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. 87, 17 L. ed. 836; Gooden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201, 25 L. ed. 431.

Complainants are held to diligence in efforts to ascertain; and means of knowledge are held to be the same as knowledge.

Norris v. Haggin, 28 Fed. 275; Grymes v. Sanders, 93 U. S. 55, 23 L. ed. 798; Mudsill Min. Co. v. Watrous, 9 C. C. A. 415, 22 U. S. App. 12, 61 Fed. 163.

Delay cannot be excused except by some actual hindrance or impediment caused by the fraud or concealment of the party in possession.

Wagner v. Baird, 7 How. 234, 12 L. ed. 681; Landsdale v. Smith, 106 U. S. 391, 27 L. ed. 219, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 350.

The excuse of absence, ignorance, and poverty is held not sufficient.

Naddo v. Bardon, 2 C. C. A. 335, 4 U. S. App. 642, 51 Fed. 493; Galliher v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 371, 36 L. ed. 739, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 873.

In express continuing trusts the question of repudiation by the trustee is important. But even in express continuing trusts, after such notice of repudiation, the statute of limitations and the doctrine of laches both apply in all their vigor.

Naddo v. Bardon, 2 C. C. A. 335, 4 U. S. App. 642, 51 Fed. 493; Speidel v. Henrichi, 120 U. S. 377, 30 L. ed. 718, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Philippi v. Philippe, 115 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 336, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1181; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317, 36 L. ed. 719, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862; Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 140, 25 L. ed. 808; Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201, 25 L. ed. 431; Wollensak v. Reiher, 115 U. S. 96, 29 L. ed. 350, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1137.

Laches is not, like limitation, a mere matter of time, but principally a question of the inequity of permitting the claims to be enforced; an inequity founded upon some change in the condition or relations of the property or parties.

Galliher v. Cadwell, 145 U. S. 368, 36 L. ed. 738, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. 94, 17 L. ed. 838; Harwood v. Cincinnati & C. Air-Line R. Co. 17 Wall. 78, 21 L. ed. 558; McQuiddy v. Ware, 20 Wall. 19, 22 L. ed. 312; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329; Sullivan v. Portland & K. R. Co. 94 U. S. 807, 24 L. ed. 324; Brown v. Buena Vista County, 95 U. S. 157, 24 L. ed. 422; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 24 L. ed. 855; Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 29 L. ed. 538, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Davison v.
195 U. S.

Davis, 125 U. S. 90, 31 L. ed. 635, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 825; Société Foncière v. Milliken, 135 U. S. 304, 34 L. ed. 208, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 823; Hall v. Russell, 3 Sawy. 506, Fed. Cas. No. 5,943, Affirmed in 101 U. S. 503, 25 L. ed. 829; Hayden v. Manning, 106 U. S. 586, 27 L. ed. 306, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Lakin v. Sierra Buttes Gold Min. Co. 25 Fed. 337.

Inexcusable delay for a period short of the time prescribed by the statute constitutes laches, and is an equitable defense wholly independent and outside of the statute; wherever the relief sought is wholly equitable, as in this case.

Bliss v. Prichard, 67 Mo. 181; Kline v. Vogel, 90 Mo. 239, 1 S. W. 733, 2 S. W. 408; Tatum v. Holliday, 59 Mo. 426; Landrum v. Union Bank, 63 Mo. 56; Moreman v. Talbott, 55 Mo. 397; Davis v. Fox, 59 Mo. 127; Scruggs v. Decatur Mineral & Land Co. 86 Ala. 173, 5 So. 441; Calhoun v. Millard (Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co.) 121 N. Y. 69, 8 L. R. A. 248, 24 N. E. 27; Heywood v. Buffalo, 14 N. Y. 540; Venice v. Woodruff, 62 N. Y. 462, 20 Am. Rep. 495; Springport v. Teutonia Sav. Bank, 75 N. Y. 397; First Nat. Bank v. Nelson, 106 Ala. 535, 18 So. 154; Frame v. Kenny, 2 A. K. Marsh. 145, 12 Am. Dec. 367; Nettles v. Nettles, 67 Ala. 599; James v. James, 55 Ala. 525; Bergen v. Bennett, Cai. Cas. 19, 2 Am. Dec. 281; Sheldon v. Rockwell, 9 Wis. 166, 76 Am. Dec. 265; Mooers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 360; Kerr, Fraud & Mistake, pp. 303 et seq.; Story, Eq. Jur. § 1520; Pon. Eq. Jur. §§ 817, 917, and note.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The defense of laches, which prompted the dismissal of the bill in this case, has so often been made the subject of discussion in this court that a citation of cases is quite unnecessary. Some degree of diligence in bringing suit is required under all systems of jurisprudence. In actions at law, the question of diligence is determined by the words of the statute. If an action be brought the day before the statutory time expires, it will be sustained; if the day after, it will be defeated. In suits in equity the question is determined by the circumstances of each particular case. The statute of limitations consorts with the rigid principles of the common law, but is ill adapted to the flexible remedies of a court of equity. The statute frequently works great practical injustice,—the doctrine of laches, never. True, lapse of time is one of the chief ingredients, but there are others of almost equal importance. Change in the value of the property between the time the cause of action arose and the time the bill was filed, complainant's knowledge or ignorance of the facts constituting the cause of action, as well as his diligence in availing himself [318] of the means *of knowledge within his control,—are all material to be considered upon the question whether the suit was brought without unreasonable delay.

1. In the case under consideration the appellants claim the benefit of § 2938 of the Compiled Laws of New Mexico, to the following effect:

"No person or persons, nor their children or heirs, shall have, sue, or maintain any action or suit, either in law or equity, for any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, but within ten years next after his, her, or their right to commence, have, or maintain such suit shall have come, fallen, or accrued," etc.

If this were an action of ejectment at law, there seems to be no question but what it could be maintained, since it was brought within ten years from the time the cause of action accrued; but where the statute is in terms applicable to suits in equity, as well as at law, it is ordinarily construed, in cases demanding equitable relief, as fixing a time beyond which the suit will not, under any circumstances, lie; but not as precluding the defense of laches, provided there has been unreasonable delay within the time limited by the statute. In an action at law, courts are bound by the literalism of the statute; but in equity the question of unreasonable delay within the statutory limitation is still open. Alsop v. Riker, 155 U. S. 448-460, 39 L. ed. 218-222, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 162.

If this were not so, it would seem to follow that in the code states, where there is but one form of action applicable both to proceedings of a legal and equitable nature, a statute of limitations, general in its terms, would apply to suits of both descriptions, and the doctrine of laches become practically obsolete. This, however, is far from being the case, as questions of laches are as often arising and being discussed in the code states as in the others. In a few cases where the statute of limitations is made applicable in terms to suits in equity, it has been construed as allowing a suit to be begun at any time within the period limited by the statute, notwithstanding the intermediate laches of the complainant, although in those [319] *cases it will usually be found that the language of the statute is explicit and imperative. Hill v. Nash, 73 Miss. 849, 19 So. 709; Washington v. Soria, 73 Miss. 665, 55 Am. St. Rep. 555, 19 So. 485.

But the weight of authority is the other way, and we consider the better rule to be that, even if the statute of limitations be made applicable in general terms to suits in equity, and not to any particular defense, the defendant may avail himself of the laches of the complainant, notwithstanding the time fixed by the statute has not expired. This has been expressly held in Alabama (Scruggs v. Decatur Mineral & Land Co. 86 Ala. 173, 5 So. 440), in Missouri (Bliss v. Prichard, 67 Mo. 181; Kline v. Vogel, 90 Mo. 239, 2 S. W. 408), and in New York (Calhoun v. Millard, 121 N. Y. 69, 8 L. R. A. 248, 24 N. E. 27). In the last case the question is discussed at considerable length by Chief Judge Andrews, and the conclusion reached that "the period of limitation of equitable actions fixed by the statute is not, where a purely equitable remedy is invoked, equivalent to a legislative direction that no period short of that time shall be a bar to relief in any case, or precludes the court from denying relief in accordance with equitable principles for unreasonable delay, although the full period of ten years has not elapsed since the cause of action accrued."

Indeed, in some cases the diligence required is measured by months rather than by years. Pollard v. Clayton, 1 Kay & J. 462; Attwood v. Small, 6 Clark & F. 356.

And in others a delay of two, three, or four years has been held fatal. Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 24 L. ed. 855; Holgate v. Eaton, 116 U. S. 33, 29 L. ed. 538, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Hagerman v. Bates, 5 Colo. App. 391, 38 Pac. 1100; Graff v. Portland Town & Mineral Co. 12 Colo. App. 106, 54 Pac. 854.

2. The facts in this case, so far as they concern the applicability of the defense of laches, are that all prior locations made by the claimants to this land were abandoned in August, 1883, when an oral agreement was entered into that Hewitt should be appointed trustee for all concerned; that upon the performance of certain conditions by the parties interested he *should make [320] a deed to each of such parties as should contribute his part to the work and expense necessary to obtain a patent; that each of the appellants contributed his share of the work in the years 1883 and 1884,—enough to entitle each of them to a deed of his interest under the agreement; that in April, 1885, Henry J. Patterson demanded a deed of Hewitt, which was refused, but that C. Ewing Patterson did not demand his deed until just before the institution of this suit; that the defendants and their associates, from the year 1885 to 1890, performed a large amount of work in developing the mine, to which neither of the appellants contributed any part; that in November, 1890, a large body of rich ore was discovered, and since that time gold to the amount of several hundred thousand dollars has been taken out. Both of the appellants left the territory of New Mexico during the year 1885, and resided abroad up to the time of the beginning of this suit. Both were aware that Hewitt had refused to deed them their interest in the mine and in the patent which he, in the meantime, had obtained to the property.

It thus appears that the right of action accrued to the appellants in April, 1885, and that this suit was not begun until eight years thereafter,—in 1893. Whether the refusal of Hewitt to make the deeds was right or wrong is not material here. There is no doubt from the findings that appellants had no share in the subsequent development of the mine or the discovery of ore in 1890, and that it was through the efforts and perseverance of the defendants, and the aid they received from Ferguson, that they were put in possession of this valuable property. If appellants had expected a share in this property they should either have brought a bill promptly to enforce their rights, or at least contributed their proportionate share to the subsequent work and labor, and the expenses then incurred. To award them now a deed to their original interest in the property would be grossly unjust to the defendants, through whose exertions the value of the property was discovered and the mine put upon a paying basis.

[321] While *it is true the court might impose upon the appellants the payment of their proportionate share of labor and expenses as a condition of relief, it could not compensate the defendants for the risk assumed by them that their exertions would come to nought. There is no class of property more subject to sudden and violent fluctuations of value than mining lands. A location which to-day may have no salable value may in a month become worth its millions. Years may be spent in working such property, apparently to no purpose, when suddenly a mass of rich ore may be discovered, from which an immense fortune is realized. Under such circumstances, persons having claims to such property are bound to the utmost diligence in enforcing them, and there is no class of cases in which the doctrine of laches has been more relentlessly enforced.

3. But little need be said in reply to appellants' argument that a trust relation was established between these parties by the oral agreement of 1883, under which Hewitt was to take possession, hold the property for the benefit of all concerned, and ultimately to convey to each his proportionate share. In this connection it is sought to apply the familiar rule that neither laches nor the statute of limitations is applicable against an express trust, so long as that trust continues. Conceding all that can be claimed as to the existence of an express parol trust in this case, the refusal of Hewitt to execute the deed to H. J. Patterson of his interest in the property, of which both appellants had notice, was a distinct repudiation of such trust, which entitled the complainants to immediate relief, and opened the door to the defense of laches. Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377-386, 30 L. ed. 718, 719, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 610; Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U. S. 621-634, 34 L. ed. 283-287, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924.

The supreme court of the territory also found that the case was within § 2916 of the Compiled Laws of the territory, requiring that all actions founded upon "unwritten contracts . . . or for relief upon the ground of fraud, and all other actions not herein otherwise provided for and specified," shall be brought within four years; and that this defense was not *answered by [322] § 2930, declaring that "none of the provisions of this act shall run against causes of action originating in or arising out of trusts, when the defendant has fraudulently concealed the cause of action, or the existence thereof, from the party entitled or having the right thereto." As there was no evidence that the defendants had fraudulently concealed the facts from the appellants, and abundant proof that the facts were known to them, the latter section was held not to apply. While the case does not necessarily involve it, we see no reason to question the correctness of the court's conclusion on this point.

We are clearly of the opinion that the delay of eight years in this case was inexcusable, and the decree of the court below must, therefore, be affirmed.

METROPOLITAN RAILROAD COMPANY,
Appt. and Plff. in Err.,
v.

HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND, Henry L. West, and John Biddle, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 322-332.)

Review in condemnation proceedings—error, not appeal, the proper remedy—necessity of bill of exceptions.

1. Writ of error, and not appeal, is the only mode of reviewing a judgment of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, sustaining an assessment and award in condemnation proceedings instituted under the act of Congress of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 668, chap. 810), in view of the provision of D. C. Code, § 233 (31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854), that the power to review judgments or decrees of that court is to be exerted only in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as prevailed before its organization in cases of writs of error to, or appeals from, the supreme court of that District.

NOTE.—On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

2. Errors of the court below, committed in sustaining the refusal of the trial court to give certain requested instructions or to set aside an assessment in condemnation proceedings, cannot be considered on writ of error, in the absence of any bill of exceptions, allowed and authenticated by the trial judge, although the transcript contains what purport to be certain instructions asked and refused, marked filed by the clerk, and a petition to make certain testimony of record, and other papers concerning the evidence given before the jury, and an agreement between counsel, reciting that the court allowed the prayer of such petition.

[No. 16.]

Argued October 24, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

A PPEAL from, and IN ERROR to, the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, to review an affirmance of an order of the Supreme Court of that District, which sustained an assessment and award in condemnation proceedings. Appeal dismissed and judgment affirmed on writ of error.

See same case below, 20 App. D. C. 421.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

Upon this record the Metropolitan Railroad Company seeks, both by appeal and writ of error, to obtain a review of the action of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, affirming an order of the su-[323]preme court of the District, which *order sustained an award against the company, contained in the verdict of a jury, rendered in condemnation proceedings, under an act of Congress. 31 Stat. at L. 668, chap. 810. The statute referred to is entitled, "An Act Authorizing and Requiring the Metropolitan Railroad Company to Extend Its Lines on Old Sixteenth Street." Briefly, the act authorized and required the company to extend its lines over the streets to which the act referred, and, for the purpose of enabling this to be done, directed the commissioners of the District to commence the necessary proceedings to acquire the land needed for the widening of the streets. It was directed that the condemnation proceedings should be commenced in the supreme court of the District, upon notice, under the supervision of the court, to all interested parties. A jury of seven was directed to be empaneled by the court, and this jury, after organizing and viewing the premises, were to "proceed, in the presence of the court, if the court shall so direct, or otherwise, as the court may direct, to hear and receive such evidence as may be offered or submitted on behalf of the District of Columbia, and by any person or persons having any interest in the proceedings for the extension of said street." The act required the jury to return a written verdict fixing the amount of damages sustained by the lot owners by reason of the taking of their property for the widening of the streets, and also to ascertain and fix the benefits which would result from the work, not only to the lot owners, but to the Metropolitan Railroad Company, and the sum of the benefits was directed to be assessed against the railroad company and the lot owners. Power was conferred upon the court to hear any objections which might be made to the verdict, and to set it aside in whole or in part if the court were satisfied that it was unjust or unreasonable.

Section 13 of the act is as follows:

"Sec. 13. That no appeal by any interested party from the decision of the supreme court of the District of Columbia confirming the assessment or assessments for benefits or damages herein provided for, nor any other proceedings at law or *in equity by [324] such party against the confirmation of such assessment or assessments, shall delay or prevent the payment of the award to others in respect to the property condemned nor the widening of such streets: Provided, however, That upon the final determination of said appeal or other proceeding at law or in equity, the amount found to be due and payable as damages sustained by reason of the widening of the streets under the provisions hereof shall be paid as hereinbefore provided."

The transcript before us shows that in July, 1900, the commissioners of the District instituted the proceedings in condemnation required by the act, and that, among others, the Metropolitan Railroad Company was made a party. A jury having been empaneled, they were directed by the court to view the premises, and, outside of the presence of the court, to hear such evidence as might be produced by the interested parties, and to return their verdict to the court. Soon afterwards the railroad company filed an answer praying that it might be dismissed from the proceedings, because the act of Congress requiring the company to extend its lines was unconstitutional, and because the company could not be made liable for any assessment for benefits conferred upon it by the proposed work, as it owned no property in the District embraced by the improvement. Immediately following the answer of the railroad company is set out what purports to be instructions asked by the railroad company to be given by the court to the jury. Each of these instructions is marked by the clerk as filed on a named date, and below each instruction, unaccompanied by any certificate from a judge, is the statement, "Rejected, with permission to present later." Following these papers is what purports to be a notice on behalf of the railroad company that, on a given day, it would present a request to the court for the giving of the refused instructions as well as of others; and the paper in question, as also the instructions referred to in it, are marked filed by the clerk on a date named, and below some of the instructions, [325] without any *certificate whatever by the judge, is a recital, "Rejected, and exception by the Railroad Company," or "Granted, and exception by D. C. and also by G. F. Williams, on behalf of certain property owners."

The transcript shows that the jury returned a verdict to the court, fixing the damages and benefits, and that there was assessed against the railroad company, for benefits, the sum of $25,000. A rule nisi was entered to confirm the verdict, and the railroad company filed the following exceptions:

"The Metropolitan Railroad Company excepts to the finding, assessment, and award against it for alleged benefits to it from the proposed widening and extension of the said Columbia road and Sixteenth street, and for cause or ground of exception shows:

"1. That the said finding, assessment, and award are without evidence to support the same.

"2. That the said finding, assessment, and award are contrary to the evidence.

"3. That the said finding, assessment, and award are contrary to the weight of the evidence.

"4. For errors of law in the instructions given and refused by the court to the jury, over the objection and exception of the Metropolitan Railroad Company, before the said finding, assessment, and award were made, as shown by the record of the said cause."

After the filing of these exceptions the transcript shows that a paper was filed by the clerk, which is styled "Petition of Metropolitan R. R. Co., to make of record testimony as to the benefits to Metropolitan Railroad Company." In this petition it is recited that the evidence before the jury was taken outside of the presence of the court, and that the only testimony before the jury on the subject of the benefits to the railroad company, as shown by affidavits annexed to the petition, was that of James B. Lackey, which was reduced to writing by a stenographer. The court was asked to allow the affidavits and deposition to be [326] filed as part of the record, "the *same being essential to the hearing and determination of this respondent's exceptions to said award, filed in this cause, and it being impossible for this respondent properly to defend its rights in the premises without, in some way, causing the said evidence, and the fact that it was the only evidence in the case upon the question of said benefits to this respondent, to appear of record." Upon this petition the following indorsement is shown: "Let the within petition be filed. A. B. Hagner, Justice." The transcript then sets out what purports to be the affidavits and testimony of Lackey, referred to in the petition.

195 U. S.

It is also shown that, upon a subsequent date, the supreme court of the District, after due notice to all interested parties, and after hearing arguments of counsel upon the exceptions to the verdict, overruled the exceptions, and entered a final decree confirming the award and assessment as found by the jury, except in a minor particular, which need not be noticed. There is nothing in the transcript showing that any exception was reserved to the overruling of the objections to the award interposed by the company, and no bill of exceptions is shown to have been allowed by the judge. Immediately at the foot of the final decree appears the following:

"And from so much of the above decree as overrules its exceptions and confirms the verdict, award, and assessment against it, the Metropolitan Railroad Company appeals in open court, and the penalty of the appeal bond is fixed by the court at $100.

"A. B. Hagner, Asso. Justice."

Next follows a stipulation signed by the attorneys for the District and for the railroad company as to what should constitute the transcript of record for the purposes of the appeal of the Metropolitan Railroad Company. Item 11 reads as follows:

"Petition of Metropolitan Railroad Co. to make of record certain testimony, and allowance of same, filed November 24, 1900.

"Motion to vacate order on said petition." [327]

The motion last referred to, however, does not appear in the transcript.

On the appeal of the railroad company the court of appeals affirmed the order appealed from (20 App. D. C. 421), and from its action in so doing the railroad company prayed, and was allowed, an appeal to this court. About a month afterwards the attorney for the railroad company filed in said court of appeals a motion in the cause, reading as follows:

"And now comes the appellant, by its counsel, and shows to the court that because of the fact that the record in this cause contains what may possibly be considered a bill of exceptions, it may be that the proper remedy would be held to be a writ of error instead of an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. It therefore prays that this honorable court, in addition to the appeal which was granted to it to the Supreme Court of the United States in this cause on the 24th day of October, 1902, it may also be allowed a writ of error to said court, and that the supersedeas bond required upon said appeal may also be taken and accepted as a supersedeas bond upon said writ of error."

An entry appears in the transcript of the allowance of a writ of error, the filing of a bond conditioned for the prosecution both of the appeal and writ of error, and the transcript contains citations, as well on the writ of error as on the appeal, signed by the chief justice of the court of appeals. The consolidated proceeding, by appeal and writ of error, is the one which is now here for review.

Messrs. J. J. Darlington and C. C. Cole argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant and plaintiff in error.

Mr. Edward H. Thomas argued the cause, and, with Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, filed a brief for appellees and defendants in error.

[328] Mr. Justice White*, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Assuming that the matters complained of are susceptible of review by this court, the first question is whether our jurisdiction is dependent upon the appeal or the writ of error.

That a proceeding involving the exercise of the power of eminent domain is essentially but the assertion of a right legal in its nature has been determined. So, also, the decisions of this court have settled that a condemnation proceeding initiated before a court, conducted under its supervision, with power to review and set aside the verdict of the jury, and with the right of review vested in an appellate tribunal, is, in its nature, an action at law. Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 376, 23 L. ed. 449, 452; Searl v. School Dist. No. 2, 124 U. S. 197, 31 L. ed. 415, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 460; Chappell v. United States, 160 U. S. 499, 513, 40 L. ed. 510, 515, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

The proceedings provided for in the act of June 6, 1900, being of this character, it is, we think, manifest that the jurisdiction of this court can be exercised only by writ of error.

When both the proceeding by appeal and that by writ of error were allowed, the jurisdiction of this court to review the judgments and decrees of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia was regulated by § 233 of the Code of the District of Columbia. 31 Stat. at L. 1227, chap. 854. In effect that section was but a re-enactment of the then existing provisions of the 8th section of the act of February 9, 1893 [27 Stat. at L. 436, chap. 74, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 573], which act established the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. By said section of the Code the power of this court to review by writ of error or appeal the judgments or decrees of said court of appeals, excluding certain exceptional and enumerated cases, is limited to cases where the matter in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of $5,000; and such power to review is to be exerted only in the same manner and under the same regulations as theretofore prevailed before the organization of the court of appeals in cases *of writs of error on judgments or appeals [329] from decrees rendered in the supreme court of the District of Columbia.

Now, as it is settled by the authorities previously referred to that the proceeding in question was legal in its nature, and not one of equitable cognizance, and as it has also been settled that the jurisdiction of this court prior to the act of 1893, to review the final judgments or decrees of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, did not give power to review by appeal a matter not of equitable cognizance (Ormsby v. Webb, 134 U. S. 47, 64, 33 L. ed. 805, 812, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478), it necessarily follows that we are without jurisdiction to review the action of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia on the appeal here taken, and that appeal must, therefore, be dismissed.

Thus disposing of the appeal, we come to consider the case on the writ of error. The errors assigned in the brief of counsel are as follows:

"The court below erred in sustaining the trial court:

"1st. In refusing to set aside the assessment because not supported by the evidence, and because contrary to the same and the weight thereof.

"2d. In refusing to instruct the jury that no assessment could be made against it as a corporation, but only against such of its property, if any, as might be benefited.

"3d. In refusing to instruct the jury that no assessment of benefits could be made against appellant."

In view of the condition of the record as disclosed by the statement of the case which we have made, we are of opinion that we cannot pass upon the errors embraced by these assignments.

The inability so to do results from the fact that there is no bill of exceptions in the record showing that the supreme court of the District of Columbia was asked to and refused to give the alleged instructions upon which the second and third assignments of error depend, nor does it appear, from a bill of exceptions or in any other appropriate mode, upon what the supreme court [330] of the District of Columbia acted *in considering the exception expressly stated to be based upon the evidence. Not only this, but there is nothing of record exhibiting the fact that any exception was duly taken to the action of the court in overruling the objections urged by the railroad company to the confirmation of the verdict of the jury.

True it is that the transcript contains what purport to be certain instructions asked and refused, marked filed by the clerk. True also is it that there is in the printed transcript a petition and other papers concerning the evidence given before the jury, to which we have referred in the statement of the case. And it is also true that there is in the printed transcript an agreement between counsel, reciting that the court allowed the prayer of the petition. But, in the absence of a bill of exceptions, allowed and authenticated by the judge, these documents form no part of the record in this court, which we have alone the right to consider in determining the merits of the errors assigned. Young v. Martin, 8 Wall. 357, 19 L. ed. 419; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Sixth Presby. Church, 91 U. S. 127, 23 L. ed. 260; Clune v. United States, 159 U. S. 593, 40 L. ed. 270, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 125; Nelson v. Flint, 166 U. S. 276, 279, 41 L. ed. 1002, 1003, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576.

In Young v. Martin, where entries had been made by the clerk in his minutes, stating the filing of a demurrer, argument thereon, and overruling of the demurrer, and that exception had been taken by plaintiff, it was held that the exception was not available. The court said (p. 356, L. ed. p. 419):

"These entries do not present the action of the court and the exceptions in such form that we can take any notice of them. It is no part of the duty of the clerk to note in his entries the exceptions taken, or to note any other proceedings of counsel, except as they are preliminary to, or the basis of, the orders or judgment of the court."

It may be observed in passing that whilst it is not now necessary to seal a bill of exceptions (Rev. Stat. § 953, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 696), the other requisites referred to are essential.

In Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Sixth Presby. Church,—a case similar in character to that under review,—the court said (pp. 130, 131, L. ed. p. 261):
[331] 195 U. S.

"Neither depositions nor affidavits, though appearing in the transcript of a common-law court of errors, can ever be regarded as a part of the record unless the same are embodied in an agreed statement of facts, or are made so by a demurrer to the evidence, or are exhibited in a bill of exceptions.

"Exceptions may be taken by the opposite party to the introduction of depositions or affidavits; and the party introducing such evidence in a subordinate court may insist that the court shall give due effect to the evidence, and, in case of refusal to comply with such a request, may except to the ruling of the court, if it be one prejudicial to his rights. Where neither party excepts to the ruling of the court, either in respect to its admissibility or legal effect, the fact that such a deposition or affidavit is exhibited in the transcript is not of the slightest importance in the appellate court, as nothing of the kind can ever constitute the proper foundation for an assignment of error. Suydam v. Williamson, 20 How. 433, 15 L. ed. 980.

"Inquisitions like the present one bear a strong analogy in many respects to the report or award of referees appointed under a rule of court, to whom is referred a pending action. Referees in such cases make their report to the court; and in such a case the report, unlike an award at common law, must be confirmed before the prevailing party is entitled to the benefit of the finding of the referees. When the report is filed in court the losing party may file objections in writing to the confirmation of the report, and may introduce evidence in support of the objections; and it is well-settled law that the ruling of the court in overruling such objections is the proper subject of a bill of exceptions. York & C. R. Co. v. Myers, 18 How. 250, 15 L. ed. 382."

In Clune v. United States, in the course of the opinion the court said (159 U. S. 593, 40 L. ed. 270, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126):

"Finally, there is a claim of error in the [332] instructions, but the difficulty with this is that they are not legally before us. True, there appears in the transcript that which purports to be a copy of the charge, marked by the clerk as filed in his office among the papers in the case; but it is well settled that instructions do not in this way become part of the record. They must be incorporated in a bill of exceptions, and thus authenticated by the signature of the judge. This objection is essentially different from that of the lack or the sufficiency of exceptions. An appellate court considers only such matters as appear in the record. From time immemorial that has been held to include the pleadings, the process, the verdict, and the judgment, and such other matters as, by some statutory or recognized method, have been made a part of it."

That parties, by their affidavits or agreements, cannot cause that to become a bill of exceptions which is not such in a legal sense, is settled. Nelson v. Flint, 166 U. S. 276, 279, 41 L. ed. 1002, 1003, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Malony v. Adsit, 175 U. S. 281, 285, 44 L. ed. 163, 165, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115, and cases cited.

As it results that the record before us does not exhibit error, the judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia must be, and it is, affirmed.

OTTO OLSEN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

A. D. SMITH, L. Huth, L. Best, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 332-345.)

Commerce—validity of state pilotage laws—error to state court—Federal question.

1. State legislation concerning pilotage is not necessarily repugnant to the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.
2. Whether clauses of a state pilotage law granting discriminatory exemptions, in violation of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4237, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903, can be eliminated without destroying the remaining provisions, is a question for the state court to decide, and cannot be reviewed by the Federal Supreme Court, on writ of error to the state court.
3. Only the discriminatory features of state pilotage laws are abrogated by the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4237, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903, forbidding such discrimination.

NOTE.—Effect on state pilotage laws of congressional prohibition against discrimination.

The effect of the provision of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4237, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903, prohibiting discrimination in state pilotage laws, in the rates of pilotage or half pilotage, between vessels sailing between the ports of one state and vessels sailing between ports of different states, or any discrimination against vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, or against national vessels of the United States, has received consideration in several cases.

This statute is constitutional and valid under the clause of the Federal Constitution authorizing Congress to regulate commerce between the states. Freeman v. The Undaunted, 37 Fed. 662.

The exemption from all pilotage charges unless a pilot be actually employed, which Cal. Pol. Code, § 2468, makes in favor of all vessels coasting between ports in the state, and between San Francisco and any port in Oregon, Washington, or Alaska, renders this section repugnant to the congressional prohibition. Ibid.

So, the exemption in favor of Texas ports and annulling and abrogating "all existing regulations or provisions making any such discrimination."

4. The exemption of coastwise steam vessels of the United States, from the operation of state pilotage laws, created by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4444, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3037, interferes with such laws only so far as they relate to these vessels, as the section expressly declares that "nothing in this title shall be considered to annul or affect any regulation established by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state."
5. State pilotage laws, as applied to a British vessel coming from a foreign port, do not conflict with a treaty provision that "no higher or other duties or charges shall be imposed in any ports of the United States on British vessels than those payable in the same ports by vessels of the United States," because of the exemption of coastwise steam vessels of the United States from pilotage, resulting from U. S. Rev. Stat. § 4444, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3037, or of any lawful exemption of coastwise vessels, created by the state laws.
6. No inherent rights guaranteed by the Federal Constitution are infringed by state regulations providing for the appointment of pilots, and restricting the right to pilot to those duly appointed.
7. No monopoly or combination forbidden by the Federal anti-trust laws is created by state regulations providing for the appointment of pilots, and restricting the right to pilot to those duly appointed.

[No. 42.]

Argued November 3, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals for the Fourth Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgand ships from any charge for pilotage except for actual services, which is made by Tex. Rev. Stat. 1895, art. 3801, is an invalid discrimination. Olsen v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320.

So, the exception which Ga. Code, § 1512, makes in favor of coasters in that state, and between the ports of that state and other designated states, renders invalid the provision of that section that any person, master, or commander of a ship or vessel bearing toward any of the harbors of that state, who refuses to receive a pilot on board, shall be liable to the first pilot offering his services outside the bar for the full pilotage rate. Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 30 L. ed. 115, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988.

But the South Carolina legislation of 1878 prescribing a system of pilotage for the ports of that state, requiring the employment of licensed pilots, and establishing the fees to be paid by incoming and outgoing vessels, contains no invalid discrimination. State v. Penny, 19 S. C. 218.

The failure of the Virginia pilotage laws to impose pilotage fees between her inland ports, ment which affirmed in part a judgment of the District Court of Galveston County, in that State, in favor of plaintiffs in an action in which the alleged repugnancy of the pilotage laws of that state to the Federal Constitution and laws was set up as a defense. Affirmed.

See same case below (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Walter Gresham argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The articles under discussion clearly constitute one entire scheme, and the illegal provisions of the statute are so interwoven and connected that it seems impossible to separate them without substituting the opinion of the judge for the expressed will of the legislature.

Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 94, 95, 30 L. ed. 115, 117, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988; Freeman v. The Undaunted, 37 Fed. 662.

The anti-trust law of Congress is very broad and comprehensive in its terms. It prohibits all contracts or combinations that are or may be in restraint of trade or commerce, whether they were unlawful at common law or not, and whether they are unreasonably in restraint of commerce or not.

United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Assn. 166 U. S. 327, 41 L. ed. 1023, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

Every contract, combination, or conspiracy, such as is shown in this case, is included within the language of this statute, and, to use the words of the Supreme Court, "no exception or limitation can be added, without placing in the act that which has been omitted by Congress."

Ibid.

As the business or official duties of defendants in error are inseparably connected with interstate and foreign commerce and the instrumentalities thereof, Congress has the power to say, and has said, that all such agreements, combinations, and conspiracies as shall restrain trade or commerce by shutting out the operation of the general law of competition, are illegal.

United States v. Joint Traffic Assn. 171 U. S. 569, 43 L. ed. 287, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

An agreement of the nature of this one, which directly and effectually stifles competition, must be regarded under the statute as one in restraint of trade.

United States v. Joint Traffic Assn. 171 U. S. 577, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.

All the authorities agree that, in order to vitiate a contract or combination, it is not essential that its result shall be a complete monopoly; it is sufficient if it really tends to that end and to deprive the public of the advantages which flow from free competition.

Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 237, 44 L. ed. 146, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 197, 48 L. ed. 679, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436; Montague & Co. v. Lowry, 193 U. S. 38, 48 L. ed. 608, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 307.

The legislature has limited the number of deputies, and has undertaken to delegate to defendants in error the power to select and limit the number of men who can become qualified to serve as branch pilots.

Petterson v. Pilot Comrs. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 33, 57 S. W. 1002.

Such a limitation and delegation of authority by the legislature is illegal, whether a branch pilot be an officer of the state or not.

Willis v. Owen, 43 Tex. 41; People's Pass. R. Co. v. Memphis City R. Co. 10 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 848; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 137, and note 1.

or between Virginia and Maryland ports which can be reached without going to sea, or upon vessels bound to or from any point on the Potomac river, does not render this legislation repugnant to the congressional prohibition. Darden v. Thompson, 101 Va. 635, 44 S. E. 755.

Nor is this prohibition violated by the exemption of vessels owned wholly within the state from the payment of any pilotage dues, unless a pilot is actually employed, which is made by Fla. act of March 7, 1879. Williams v. The Lizzie Henderson, Fed. Cas. No. 17,726a.

As in OLSEN v. SMITH, the other provisions of the state laws have sometimes been sustained after eliminating the discriminatory features.

Thus, while the exemption from pilotage and half pilotage charges, established by Cal. Pol. Code §§ 2466, 2468, in favor of vessels coasting between California ports, or between San Francisco and any port in Oregon, Washington, or Alaska, renders this legislation invalid so far as it relates to coasting vessels, it may be enforced as to vessels engaged in foreign trade. The Alameda, 31 Fed. 366.

195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

And the exemption under Cal. Pol. Code, § 2468, of certain coasting vessels from the charge of half pilotage, does not have the effect of bringing the whole system of regulations for half pilotage, prescribed by § 2466, providing for a system of pilotage and half pilotage, and exempting vessels engaged in the whaling or fishing trade, within the inhibition of that statute; § 2466 being left intact, while § 2468 is invalid so far as it conflicts with the Federal prohibition. The Alameda v. Neal, 32 Fed. 331. The court distinguished Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 30 L. ed. 115, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, on the ground that in that case it was sought to charge a coasting vessel which was excepted from pilotage charges by the Georgia Code, while here it was sought to except from such charges a vessel engaged in foreign commerce, because of an exemption in favor of certain coasting vessels, contained in an independent section.

On the general subject of the liability of vessel or owner for compulsory pilotage fees, see note to Clayton v. Hebb, 39 L. R. A. 177.

This statute is also unconstitutional because it deprives all citizens of the state of the liberty of pursuing one of the industrial avocations of life, takes from him the "property" which every man has or should have in his labor, and (if a pilot is an officer) disfranchises him from holding an office, without the due course of the law of the land.

Brenham v. Brenham Water Co. 67 Tex. 560, 4 S. W. 143.

A pilot is a seaman authorized by law to act as an officer of a ship in conducting her into and out of a port. His duties require that he should be able to navigate and manage a ship, and have a knowledge of the harbor for which he has been licensed.

Hobart v. Drogan, 10 Pet. 123, 9 L. ed. 368.

A branch pilot is not an officer of this state.

Dean v. Healy, 66 Ga. 503; Navigation Laws of the U. S. 1899, p. 53; 18 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 444; United States v. Forbes, 1 Crabbe, 558, Fed. Cas. No. 15,129.

But if it be conceded that a branch pilot is some sort of an officer of this state, and not a mere licensed employee, such as a physician or lawyer, then it by no means follows that he is an executive officer of the state. An "executive officer" is defined to be one whose duties are mainly to cause the laws to be executed and obeyed.

Bouvier, Law Dict.

An executive officer of the state is one whose duty it is to execute the laws of the state.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 391.

The right of the defendants in error to maintain this suit is based upon the hypothesis that a pilot is a state officer.

United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. ed. 830; Atty. Gen. v. Drohan, 169 Mass. 534, 61 Am. St. Rep. 301, 48 N. E. 279; Shelby v. Alcorn, 36 Miss. 273, 72 Am. Dec. 169; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 42 L. ed. 1100, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

This statute is in effect a regulation of interstate and foreign commerce and the instrumentalities thereof. Its restrictions and limitations upon the liberty of plaintiff in error to act as a pilot are not only an abridgement, but a deprivation, of the privileges and immunities guaranteed him as a citizen of the United States.

Slaughter-House Cases (Butchers' Benev. Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co.) 16 Wall. 79, 21 L. ed. 409; Brannon, 14th Amend. 83; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 480, 31 L. ed. 513, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064, 82 Fed. 533; Powell v. Penn- sylvania, 127 U. S. 684, 32 L. ed. 256, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992, 1257; Butchers' Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 757, 758, 28 L. ed. 591, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652; Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 589-591, 41 L. ed. 835, 836, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427.

In the statute under discussion, neither the public health nor the morals of the people are involved, but merely the right to follow an ordinary industrial occupation, the liberty to pursue which the state cannot deprive plaintiff in error of.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 744, 745; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 386, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 515, 30 Am. Rep. 323; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; Brannon, 14th Amend. 109-115; State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285; State v. Julow, 129 Mo. 172, 29 L. R. A. 257, 50 Am. St. Rep. 443, 31 S. W. 781; Ex parte Kuback, 85 Cal. 274, 9 L. R. A. 482, 20 Am. St. Rep. 226, 24 Pac. 737; Leep v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 58 Ark. 407, 23 L. R. A. 264, 41 Am. St. Rep. 109, 25 S. W. 75; Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 554, 24 Am. Dec. 511; Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A. 492, 31 N. E. 395.

The grant of the privilege of piloting at the port of Galveston to twelve men, and then conferring upon them the authority to determine who, if any, shall possess the qualifications required by the statute, before he can be appointed a pilot, is a denial of the equal protection of the laws.

Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 558-567, 46 L. ed. 689-692, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431.

Mr. James B. Stubbs argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles J. Stubbs, filed a brief for defendants in error:

The objectionable provisions of the statute are separable from the rest of the provisions.

The Alameda v. Neal, 32 Fed. 333; Reagan v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 154 U. S. 362, 398, 38 L. ed. 1014, 1023, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 560, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1047; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. State, 62 Tex. 630.

The allowed and the prohibited paragraphs of the state law are plainly separable and distinct, and it is only when all the provisions are so connected in meaning and interdependent that it cannot be presumed that the legislature would have passed one without the other, that the entire statute will be disregarded.

Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 89, 24 L. ed. 381.

The point is not whether the parts are contained in the same section, for the distribution into sections is purely artificial. but whether they are essentially and inseparably connected in substance,—whether the provisions are so interdependent that one cannot operate without the other.

Loeb v. Columbia Turp. 179 U. S. 490, 45 L. ed. 290, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174.

It is apparent that the legislature would not have hesitated, if the matter had been called to its attention, to make the state exemptions or options conform to the national.

Tiernan v. Rinker, 102 U. S. 123, 26 L. ed. 103, 47 Tex. 393; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Mahaffey, 10 Tex. Ct. Rep. 779, 81 S. W. 1047.

All depends upon the intention of the legislature, as shown by the general scope of the law.

Florida C. R. Co. v. Schutte, 103 U. S. 118, 142, 26 L. ed. 327, 335.

It is only when different clauses of an act are so dependent upon each other that it is evident that the legislature would not have enacted one of them without the other—as, when the two things provided are necessary parts of one system—that the whole act will fall with the invalidity of one clause. When there is no such connection and dependency, the act will stand though different parts of it are rejected.

Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Worthen, 120 U. S. 102, 30 L. ed. 590, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

This court will accept the construction of the Texas courts in such cases as this.

W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 466, 45 L. ed. 626, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423; Tullis v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 175 U. S. 348, 44 L. ed. 192, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 136; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nebraska, 164 U. S. 403, 41 L. ed. 489, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 130; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S. 418, 33 L. ed. 970, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 209, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 462, 702; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Paul, 173 U. S. 404, 43 L. ed. 746, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 419; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 586, 43 L. ed. 1097, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

The contention that in all cases where American vessels are relieved from any duty or charge in a port of the United States, the same exemptions should extend to British vessels at that port, is true, but defendant does not and cannot show that American vessels employed in commerce with foreign countries are exempt from such charges in Texas ports. The vessels of the two countries are upon a parity, as the treaties and laws have been understood and applied for many years; and this construction is the only reasonable and just one.

Hunt v. Card, 14 Pick. 135.

195 U. S.

It has been held that the formation of a partnership among all the pilots of the port is not unlawful, but commendable, for the reason that by so combining they could relieve each other at stated hours, purchase better boats with their joint funds, and otherwise conduce to better service.

Petterson v. Pilot Comrs. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 33, 57 S. W. 1002; Jones v. Fell, 5 Fla. 510; Levine v. Michel, 35 La. Ann. 1121; The Pirate, 32 Fed. 490; The City of Dundee, 103 Fed. 698, Affirmed in 47 C. C. A. 581, 108 Fed. 679; Mason v. Irvine, 27 Fed. 459.

An agreement, to be in conflict with the anti-trust act, must directly and substantially, and not merely indirectly and incidentally, regulate interstate or foreign commerce.

Anderson v. United States, 171 U. S. 615, 43 L. ed. 306, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Hopkins v. United States, 171 U. S. 578, 43 L. ed. 290, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. v. United States, 175 U. S. 211, 231, 44 L. ed. 136, 143, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96.

The state has the right to limit the number of port pilots, and require service as a deputy pilot as a condition precedent to appointment as pilot.

Pacific Mail S. S. Co. v. Joliffe, 2 Wall. 450, 17 L. ed. 805; Petterson v. Pilot Comrs. 24 Tex. Civ. App. 33, 57 S. W. 1007; Davidson v. Sadler, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 600, 57 S. W. 54.

Licensed state pilots are public officers.

People ex rel. Palmer v. Woodbury, 14 Cal. 43; People ex rel. Flynn v. Abbott, 16 Cal. 359; 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 324.

They seem to be treated as such in Massachusetts.

Dolliver v. Parks, 136 Mass. 499.

The Oregon law seems to authorize limitation as to number.

The California, 1 Sawy. 596, Fed. Cas. No. 2,313.

The Indiana law seems to require bond and oath after appointment by the governor.

Barnaby v. State, 21 Ind. 450.

Will it be questioned that, if Congress had taken charge of the entire subject, its right to prescribe an apprenticeship or a deputyship could be successfully challenged?

Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 207, 6 L. ed. 72; Tiedeman, Pol. Power, 626; Hughes, Adm. 28-38; The China (The China v. Walsh) 7 Wall. 53, 19 L. ed. 67; Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 26 L. ed. 234; Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 300, 13 L. ed. 996.

Legislation limited in its application, but operating alike on all persons similarly situated, is not within the 14th Amendment.

Barbier v. Connolly, 113 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 923, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

The right to designate the class from which certain officers shall be selected carries with it the idea of inequality; but this fact alone does not determine the matter of constitutionality.

Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 174 U. S. 106, 43 L. ed. 913, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

The following cases are instances in which the state delegated to others the authority to recommend in one case, and to appoint in the other, the pilot commissioners of the ports of Boston and New York respectively:

Opinion of the Justices, 154 Mass. 603, 31 N. E. 634; Sturgis v. Spofford, 45 N. Y. 446.

While it is conceded that Congress can, if it deems best, assume control of pilotage in every state, yet it is equally well settled that the mere grant to Congress of the power to regulate commerce did not deprive the states of the power to regulate pilots, unless and until Congress should determine otherwise.

Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 236, 20 L. ed. 624; The Carrie L. Tyler, 45 C. C. A. 405, 106 Fed. 426; Smith v. The Creole, 2 Wall. Jr. 485, Fed. Cas. No. 13,033; Darden v. Thompson, 101 Va. 635, 44 S. E. 755.

As in the case of the locomotive engineer, Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 32 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564, where a license was required, there is no doubt that the state could have prescribed further conditions than those which it did; such, for instance, as service as an apprentice.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants in error, who were plaintiffs in the court of original jurisdiction, as the duly licensed state pilots of the port of Galveston, Texas, sued in a Texas district court to recover the damages averred to have been caused them by the alleged illegal action of the defendant in offering, when he was not authorized by law to do so, his services "to pilot sail vessels or registered steamers, bound to or from foreign ports, in or out of the port of Galveston." An injunction was prayed restraining the defendant from acting "in any manner as branch or deputy pilot, or pilot under the [339] laws of the state *of Texas, and of said port, or under the laws of the United States, with respect to the kind of vessels specified." The defendant filed a general demurrer, and, reserving the demurrer, answered, raising special defenses based on averments that the pilotage laws of Texas were in conflict with the Constitution and laws of the United States. The court overruled the demurrer of the defendant, and, on the ground that no defense was stated, sustained a demurrer to the answer. A judgment was entered in favor of the plaintiffs, awarding an injunction as prayed. (Tex. Civ. App.) 68 S. W. 320. The case was taken to the court of civil appeals for the first supreme judicial district, was thence transferred to the court of civil appeals for the fourth supreme judicial district, where the decree below was affirmed, with a slight modification not necessary to be stated. The supreme court of the state having declined to review the action of the court of civil appeals, this writ of error was prosecuted to the latter court.

The defenses raised by the answer, which the court below held to be no defense to the action, and which are in effect reiterated in the assignments of error, require us to determine, first, whether the state of Texas had power to enact laws regulating pilotage in the ports of that state; and, second, if such power existed, whether the provisions of the state statutes on that subject are void because they conflict with acts of Congress on the subject of pilotage, and because the statutes of Texas as to pilotage contain provisions of such a character as to cause them to be repugnant to the 14th Amendment or to the laws of Congress forbidding combinations in restraint of trade or commerce. Briefly, the pilotage laws of the state of Texas provide as follows: The governor is authorized to appoint for each port whose population and circumstances shall warrant it, "a board of five persons of respectable standing, to be known as commissioners of pilotage." Upon this board power is conferred to fix, within the maximum limits provided by law, the charges to be made by branch and deputy pilots for their services, to regulate the manner *in which such pilots shall perform [340] their duty, to examine them as to their qualifications, to hear complaints made against them, and, if occasion requires, to suspend them until the governor shall act in the matter. Upon the governor is conferred the authority to appoint such number of branch pilots as may from time to time be necessary, each of whom shall hold office for two years, subject to removal by the governor at pleasure, and any one who is not a duly commissioned branch pilot or deputy thereof is prohibited from engaging in the business of pilotage so far as the statutes provide for pilotage services by the duly appointed pilots. Revised Statutes of the state of Texas for 1895, articles 3790, 3791, 3792, 3793, 3794, 3796, and 3803. The maximum rates of pilotage are provided for as follows:

"The rate of pilotage on any class of vessels shall not, in any port of this state, exceed $4 for each foot of water which the vessel, at the time of piloting, draws, and whenever a vessel, except of the classes below excepted, shall decline the services of a pilot, offered outside the bar, and shall enter the port without the aid of one, she shall be liable to the first pilot whose services she so declined, for the payment of half pilotage; and any vessel which, after being brought in by a pilot, shall go out without employing one, shall be liable to the payment of half pilotage to the pilot who brought her in, or, if she has come in without the aid of a pilot, though offered outside, she shall, on so going out, be liable for the payment of half pilotage to the pilot who had first offered his services before, she came in; but if she has come in without the aid of a pilot, or the offer of one outside, she shall not, in case of going out without a pilot, be liable to half pilotage. . . ." Article 3800.

The vessels excepted from the operation of the foregoing provisions are thus stated in article 3801:

"The following classes of vessels shall be free from any charge for pilotage, unless for actual service, to wit: All vessels of twenty tons and under, all vessels of what-[341]soever burthen *owned in the state of Texas, and registered and licensed in the district of Texas, when arriving from or departing to any port of the state of Texas; all vessels of seventy-five tons and under, owned and licensed for the coasting trade in any part of the United States, when arriving from or departing to any port in the state of Texas; all vessels of seventy-five tons or under owned in the state of Texas and licensed for the coasting trade in the district of Texas, when arriving from or departing to any port in the United States."

The first contention in effect is that the state was without power to legislate concerning pilotage, because any enactment on that subject is necessarily a regulation of commerce within the provision of the Constitution of the United States. The unsoundness of this contention is demonstrated by the previous decisions of this court, since it has long since been settled that even although state laws concerning pilotage are regulations of commerce, "they fall within that class of powers which may be exercised by the states until Congress has seen fit to act upon the subject." Cooley v. Port Wardens, 12 How. 299, 13 L. ed. 996; Ex parte McNiel, 13 Wall. 237, 20 L. ed. 624; 195 U. S.

Wilson v. McNamee, 102 U. S. 572, 26 L. ed. 234.

The second proposition relied on is that, albeit the state had power to legislate concerning pilotage until Congress acted, the state laws are void because in conflict with the laws enacted by Congress. This is based upon two provisions of the Revised Statutes of the United States, the one providing that "no regulations or provisions shall be adopted by any state which shall make any discrimination in the rate of pilotage or half pilotage between vessels sailing between the ports of one state and vessels sailing between the ports of different states, or any discrimination against vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, or against national vessels of the United States, and all existing regulations or provisions making any such discrimination are annulled and abrogated" (Rev. Stat. 4237, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2903); the other being the provision of the statutes (Rev. Stat. 4444, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3037) exempting coastwise steam vessels from the operation *of state pilotage laws. Undoubt-[342] edly the exempting clause of the Texas statute is discriminatory, and is therefore void, because in conflict with the law of the United States. The court below so decided. It held, however, that the provisions discriminating in favor of Texas ships and ports were separable from the remainder of the statutes, and therefore the general regulations concerning pilotage were valid, although the discriminating provisions were eliminated. . Whether the illegal clauses granting discriminatory exemptions could be eliminated without destroying the other provisions of the state laws regulating pilotage is a state, and not a Federal, question. For the purpose of determining the validity of the statutes in their Federal aspect this court accepts the interpretation given to the statutes by the state court, and tests their validity accordingly. W. W. Cargill Co. v. Minnesota, 180 U. S. 452, 466, 45 L. ed. 619, 625, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 423, and authorities there cited. True it is in Sprague v. Thompson, 118 U. S. 90, 30 L. ed. 115, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 988, a case involving the pilotage laws of Georgia, in the course of the opinion it was remarked (p. 94, L. ed. p. 116, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 989) that the ruling of the supreme court of the state of Georgia, that the illegal provision of the statute in question was separable, caused the statute "to enact what confessedly the legislature never meant." But this remark was not made the basis of the conclusion, since it was decided in that case that the pilotage charge in question was invalid, even under the construction given by the supreme court of the state of Georgia to the state statute, because the exaction which was in controversy was in conflict with the provisions of the Revised Statutes of the United States, exempting coastwise steam vessels from pilotage charges. In any event, it is apparent that the observation referred to, made in the case of Sprague v. Thompson, has been qualified by the later decisions of this court to which we have previously referred.

Of course, whilst accepting the construction of the state court as to the divisibility of the statute, the duty yet remains, for the purpose of the Federal question, to determine whether the statute as construed is [343] valid. As the effect of *the construction below was to eliminate the discrimination from the statute, it is clear, in view of the power of the state to legislate concerning pilotage until Congress acts upon the subject, that the statutes, as interpreted below, were within the power of the state, and not in conflict with any act of Congress. Indeed, it is obvious from the provisions of the Revised Statutes (§ 4237, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901. p. 2903) forbidding discrimination in state legislation concerning pilotage, that Congress did not intend by that section to revoke the power of the states on the subject, or to abrogate existing pilotage laws of the several states, containing discriminatory provisions, but only to abrogate the provisions making the discrimination. This results since the statute, after first generally prohibiting regulations by any state discriminating "in the rate of pilotage or half pilotage between vessels sailing between the ports of one state and vessels sailing between the ports of different states, or any discrimination against vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, or against national vessels of the United States," in careful language annuls and abrogates only "all existing regulations or provisions making any such discrimination." And this construction of the section in question disposes also of the argument that, if the statute be accepted as interpreted by the state court, it is nevertheless repugnant to the law of the United States, since, if the exceptions found in the state statute are eliminated, then those statutes impose pilotage charges upon all vessels, and hence subject coastwise steam vessels of the United States to such charges, although they are expressly exempted therefrom. Rev. Stat. § 4444, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3037. But the provisions of that section clearly contemplated that, by the existing state laws, coastwise steam vessels of the United States were subject to pilotage charges, and proposed, whilst withdrawing such vessels from pilotage charges, not in other respects to interfere with the state laws on the subject of pilotage. This is plainly the result of the following provision contained in the section in question:

"Nothing in this title shall be construed to annul or affect *any regulation estab-[344]lished by the laws of any state, requiring vessels entering or leaving a port in any such state, other than coastwise steam vessels, to take a pilot duly licensed or authorized by the laws of such state."

Nor is there merit in the contention that, as the vessel in question was a British vessel, coming from a foreign port, the state laws concerning pilotage are in conflict with a treaty between Great Britain and the United States, providing that "no higher or other duties or charges shall be imposed in any of the ports of the United States on British vessels than those payable in the same ports by vessels of the United States." [8 Stat. at L. 229, art. 2.] Neither the exemption of coastwise steam vessels from pilotage, resulting from the law of the United States, nor any lawful exemption of coastwise vessels, created by the state law, concerns vessels in the foreign trade, and, therefore, any such exemptions do not operate to produce a discrimination against British vessels engaged in foreign trade, and in favor of vessels of the United States in such trade. In substance the proposition but asserts that, because, by the law of the United States, steam vessels in the coastwise trade have been exempt from pilotage regulations, therefore there is no power to subject vessels in foreign trade to pilotage regulations, even although such regulations apply, without discrimination, to all vessels engaged in such foreign trade, whether domestic or foreign.

It remains only to consider the contentions based upon the 14th Amendment and the anti-trust laws of Congress. The argument is, that the right of a person who is competent to perform pilotage services to render them is an inherent right, guaranteed by the 14th Amendment, and that therefore all state regulations providing for the appointment of pilots, and restricting the right to pilot to those duly appointed, are repugnant to the 14th Amendment. But this proposition in its essence simply denies that pilotage is subject to governmental control, and therefore is foreclosed by the adjudications to which we have previously referred. The contention that (because) the commissioned pilots have a *monopoly of the business, and by combina-[345]tion among themselves exclude all others from rendering pilotage services, is also but a denial of the authority of the state to regulate, since, if the state has the power to regulate, and in so doing to appoint and commission those who are to perform pilot-age services, it must follow that no monopoly or combination in a legal sense can arise from the fact that the duly authorized agents of the state are alone allowed to perform the duties devolving upon them by law. When the propositions just referred to are considered in their ultimate aspect they amount simply to the contention, not that the Texas laws are void for want of power, but that they are unwise. If an analysis of those laws justified such conclusion,—which we do not at all imply is the case,—the remedy is in Congress, in whom the ultimate authority on the subject is vested, and cannot be judicially afforded by denying the power of the state to exercise its authority over a subject concerning which it has plenary power until Congress has seen fit to act in the premises.

Affirmed.

CLARENCE T. BIRKETT, Plff. in Err.,
v.
COLUMBIA BANK.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 345-351.)

Bankruptcy—discharge—effect of debts not scheduled—knowledge of creditor.

Knowledge of bankruptcy proceedings on the part of a creditor of the bankrupt, which is not acquired until after discharge, though in time to prove his claim under the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 563, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3448), § 65, and to move, under § 15 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3428), to revoke the discharge, is not the "actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy" which, under § 17, is essential to the release, by the discharge, of provable debts which have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance.

[No. 26.]

Argued October 28, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment entered in that court in accordance with the direction of the Court of Appeals of that State, which affirmed a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, which had, in turn, affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court at a term held in and for the county of New York, in favor of plaintiff in an action on a promissory note, in which defendants set up a discharge in bankruptcy as a bar. Affirmed.

See same case below, 174 N. Y. 112, 66 N. E. 652.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

195 U. S.

Mr. John Murray Downs argued the cause, and Messrs. Robert G. Scherer and Thomas Carmody filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Julius J. Frank argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action on a promissory note for $750. The defense is discharge in bankruptcy. The making of the note *was admitted, and the only question presented is the effect of the discharge. (346)

The facts as found by the court are: Plaintiff in error and one Calvin Russell, who died before the commencement of this action, were partners, doing business under the name of Russell & Birkett, and in that name made and delivered to the Manhattan Railway Advertising Company a promissory note for $750. The latter company indorsed the note to defendant in error, of which Russell & Birkett had knowledge before its maturity. On the 13th of April, 1899, the firm of Russell & Birkett and plaintiff in error, upon their own petition, were adjudicated bankrupts in the United States district court for the northern district of New York, and were discharged September 12, 1899. The claim of defendant in error was not scheduled, either as a debt of the firm or of plaintiff in error, in time for proof and allowance with the name of the defendant in error, though defendant in error was known, at the time of filing the schedules, to be the owner and holder thereof by plaintiff in error, and that defendant in error had no notice or actual knowledge or other knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy prior to the discharge of the bankrupts. No notice of the proceedings in bankruptcy was at any time given to defendant in error by, or by the direction of, the bankrupts or either of them. It was decided that the claim of defendant in error was not barred by the discharge in bankruptcy, and judgment was directed for defendant in error.

The judgment was successively confirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court and the court of appeals. 174 N. Y. 112, 66 N. E. 652. Thereupon judgment was entered in the supreme court, in accordance with the direction of the court of appeals. This writ of error was then sued out.

Section 7 of the bankrupt law of 1898 devolves a number of duties upon the bankrupt, all directed to the purpose of a full and unreserved exposition of his affairs, property, and creditors. Among his duties he is required to "prepare, make oath to, and file in court, within ten days . . . a schedule of his property showing the amount and kind of property, the location thereof, its money value in detail, and a list of his creditors, showing their residences, if known; if unknown, that fact to be stated, the amounts due each of them, the consideration thereof, the security held by them, if any, and a claim for such exemptions as he may be entitled to, all in triplicate, one copy of each for the clerk, one for the referee, and one for the trustee. . . ." To the neglect of this duty the law attaches a punitive consequence. Section 17 provides: "A discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts, except such . . . have not been duly scheduled in time for proof and allowance, with the name of the creditor, if known to the bankrupt, unless such creditor had notice or actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy . . ." [30 Stat. at L. 548, 550, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 3424, 3428.]

But plaintiff in error urges that defendant in error did have actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy, and that Congress contemplated that there might be an intentional or inadvertent omission of the names of creditors from the schedule of debts, and provided against it by other provisions of the law; especially by that which makes it the duty of the referee to give notice to creditors (§ 38), and by that which imposes the duty on the bankrupt to appear at the meeting of creditors, for examination. [350]

The finding of the trial court is that defendant in error "had no notice or actual knowledge, or other knowledge, of said proceedings in bankruptcy prior to the discharge of the bankrupt therein." This is made more definite as to time by the court of appeals. Defendant in error, upon making an inquiry by letter November 6, 1899, about Russell & Birkett, was informed that they had gone through bankruptcy; and subsequently (November 17) the northern district was given as the district of the proceedings. The discharge was September 12, 1899. Knowledge, therefore, it is contended, came to defendant in error in time to prove its claim (§ 65), and to move to revoke the discharge of the bankrupt (§ 15). It is hence argued that defendant in error must be held to have had "actual knowledge of the proceedings in bankruptcy," as those words of § 17 must be construed. We do not think so, nor is that construction supported by the other provisions of the law urged by plaintiff in error. Actual knowledge of the proceedings, contemplated by the section, is a knowledge in time to avail a creditor of the benefits of the law,—in time to give him an equal opportunity with other creditors,—not a knowledge that may come so late as to deprive him of participation in the administration of the affairs of the estate, or to deprive him of dividends (§ 65). The provisions of the law relied upon by plaintiff in error are for the benefit of creditors, not of the debtor. That the law should give a creditor remedies against the estate of a bankrupt, notwithstanding the neglect or default of the bankrupt, is natural. The law would be, indeed, defective without them. It would also be defective if it permitted the bankrupt to experiment with it,—to so manage and use its provisions as to conceal his estate, deceive or keep his creditors in ignorance of his proceeding, without penalty to him. It is easy to see what results such looseness would permit,—what preference could be accomplished and covered by it.

Judgment affirmed.

CITY OF SEATTLE, Appt.,

v.

DANIEL KELLEHER, Administrator of John W. Thompson, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 351-360.)

Constitutional law—due process of law in assessments for public improvements—re-assessments—bona fide purchaser.

1. Assessing by the frontage rule the entire cost of a street extension, including a charge for planking, is not manifestly unfair to an abutting owner whose property lies some distance beyond the point where the planking stopped as to render the assessment void as a denial of due process of law.
2. Including in a reassessment for the cost of a street extension a charge for certain work which was not authorized by the ordinance ordering the improvement is not a denial of due process of law to a property owner affected thereby, where the municipality has done or adopted the work, and presumably has paid for it.
3. Due process of law is not denied by a reassessment for the cost of a street extension because it includes a charge or work which, when done, could not be included in a local assessment.
4. A charter provision that the cost of planking is to be paid out of the general taxes does not prevent a later special assessment therefor upon the owners of property abutting on a local improvement, in the carrying out of which such planking was done.
5. The doctrine respecting bona fide purchasers for value cannot be invoked to prevent the enforcement of the lien of a reassessment for a local improvement by one who purchased the property affected after the original attempt to assess had been declared void, and before the new assessment was authorized.

* NOTE.—On constitutionality of frontage rule of assessment—see Raleigh v. Peace, 17 L. R. A. 330, and note.

As to what constitutes due process of law—see Kuntz v. Sumption, 2 L. R. A. 655, and note; Re Gannon, 5 L. R. A. 359, and note; Ulman v. Baltimore, 11 L. R. A. 224, and note; Gilman v. Tucker, 13 L. R. A. 304, and note. And see notes to People v. O'Brien, 2 L. R. A. 255; Pearson v. Yewdall, 24 L. ed. U. S. 436; Wilson v. North Carolina, 42 L. ed. U. S. 865.

[No. 29.]

Argued October 28, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Washington to review a decree enjoining the enforcement of an assessment for a local improvement. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Mitchell Gilliam argued the cause, and, with Mr. Walter S. Fulton, filed a brief for appellant:

The right exists to make a reassessment by a different method than that in force at the time the original assessment was made.

Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 293, 43 L. ed. 452, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Wilson v. Seattle, 2 Wash. 543, 27 Pac. 474.

The question of adopting a method of levying assessments for local improvements lies purely in legislative discretion, and so long as that discretion is exercised in a reasonable manner, and gives parties interested an opportunity to be heard, with the right to appeal to the courts from the determination of the city council, it cannot be said that there is a violation of the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Tonawanda v. Lyon, 181 U. S. 389, 45 L. ed. 908, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Wight v. Davidson, 181 U. S. 371, 45 L. ed. 900, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 325, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 580, 32 L. ed. 545, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Spencer v. Merchant, 125 U. S. 345, 31 L. ed. 763, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 921; Stanley v. Albany County, 121 U. S. 535, 550, 30 L. ed. 1000, 1003, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1234; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691, 26 L. ed. 238; Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 663; United States v. Memphis, 97 U. S. 284, 24 L. ed. 937; Laramie County v. Albany County, 92 U. S. 307, 23 L. ed. 552; Fallbrook Irrig. Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 176, 41 L. ed. 394, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Parsons v. District of Columbia, 170 U. S. 51, 42 L. ed. 946, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 521; Mattingly v. District of Columbia, 97 U. S. 687, 24 L. ed. 1098; Walston v. Nevin, 128 U. S. 578, 32 L. ed. 544, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 192; Shoemaker v. United States, 147 U. S. 282, 37 L. ed. 170, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 361; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750; Fallbrook Irrig. 195 U. S.

Dist. v. Bradley, 164 U. S. 176, 41 L. ed. 394, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616; Kidd v. Parsons, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; People ex rel. Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 266; 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 71; Lexington v. McQuillan, 9 Dana, 513, 35 Am. Dec. 161; Dorgan v. Boston, 94 Mass. 238; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 623; Baltimore v. Johns Hopkins Hospital, 56 Md. 1; Northern Indiana R. Co. v. Connelly, 10 Ohio St. 159; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 2d ed. § 761; Elliott, Roads and Streets, pp. 391, 392; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 644; Whiting v. Townsend, 57 Cal. 515; Hayden v. Atlanta, 70 Ga. 817; Emery v. San Francisco Gas Co. 28 Cal. 345; Bacon v. Savannah, 86 Ga. 301, 12 S. E. 580; Springfield v. Green, 120 Ill. 269, 11 N. E. 261; Palmer v. Stumph, 29 Ind. 337; Amery v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa, 701, 30 N. W. 780; Shcley v. Detroit, 45 Mich. 431, 8 N. W. 52; Farrar v. St. Louis, 80 Mo. 379; State, Sigler, Prosecutor, v. Fuller, 34 N. J. L. 232; O'Reilley v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. 439, 21 N. E. 1004; Roberts v. First Nat. Bank, 8 N. D. 504, 79 N. W. 1049; Upington v. Oviatt, 24 Ohio St. 232; King v. Portland, 2 Or. 147; Magee v. Com. 46 Pa. 358; Harrell v. Storrie (Tex. Civ. App.) 47 S. W. 838; Davis v. Lynehburg, 84 Va. 861, 6 S. E. 230; Austin v. Seattle, 2 Wash. 669, 27 Pac. 557; Weeks v. Milwaukee, 10 Wis. 243.

Mr. Frederick Bausman argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Daniel Kelleher and G. Meade Emory, filed a brief for appellee:

When a tax reaches a point where it violates the principles of taxation itself, it ceases to be a tax, and is mere confiscation.

Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Sears v. Boston, 173 Mass. 71, 43 L. R. A. 834, 53 N. E. 138; 2 Cooley, Taxn. 1209.

No secret lien should be sustained.

Richards v. Lewis L. Arms Shingle & Lumber Co. 74 Mich. 57, 41 N. W. 860; Smith v. Allen, 18 Wash. 1, 39 L. R. A. 82, 63 Am. St. Rep. 864, 50 Pac. 783.

Curative statutes should not be permitted to interfere with the rights of third persons whose investment has meantime been made in good faith.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 3d ed. 539, 540; Williams v. Albany, 122 U. S. 154, 30 L. ed. 1088, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1244.

The state should be estopped, as it was in a case where its officers had erroneously discharged a tax of record, on the faith of which a transfer was made.

Curnen v. New York, 79 N. Y. 511.

District assessments are a tax, but, while they are a tax, it is perfectly clear that they are not a tax in the sense in which the tax is generally understood.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. chap. 20, p. 1153; Scott v. Toledo, 1 L. R. A. 688, 36 Fed. 385; Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a decree of the circuit court, declaring an assessment upon the plaintiff's land void under the 14th Amendment, and enjoining the city against enforcing the same. The facts are these: Weller street, in Seattle, runs east from Elliott bay, and formerly stopped at the east line of Maynard's donation claim. The land now belonging to the appellee, the plaintiff below, is 100 acres to the east of that line, extending to the line of the Jackson street addition. Weller street, if extended eastward, would run through the middle of this land for 2,500 feet. While this land belonged to one Hill, in 1889, he petitioned that Weller street be extended and graded to the Jackson street addition line, and he submitted to the city council, and circulated, although he did not record, [356] plans *showing the extension, with his land on the two sides of it divided into lots and blocks. The plan was approved, and in 1890 the city passed an ordinance that Weller street be graded from the beginning to Jackson street addition, and that sidewalks be constructed on both sides of it, coextensive with the grade. Ordinance No. 1285. The street was graded, and, according to the testimony, had to be cut and filled almost continuously. It also was planked for some distance, but the planking stopped about 1,000 feet before reaching Hill's tract. Then an assessment was levied, but this was held void. The next things that happened were a sale of Hill's land and a mortgage of it in January, 1892, to the appellee, which later was foreclosed. The appellee, who lived out of the state, alleges that he was ignorant of the submission of the plan by Hill.

On March 9, 1893, an act was approved authorizing a new assessment, when the old one had been declared void, upon the lands benefited, to the extent of their proportionate part of the expense of the improvement, based upon its actual value at the time of its completion, and having reference to the benefits received. Notice by publication of a time for hearing objections was provided for, with an appeal to the courts. Laws of 1893, chap. 95. When the improvement in question was ordered, by the charter of Seattle the planking was to be paid for out of the general taxes. Laws of 1885-1886, pp. 238, 241, § 7. The special assessment for the other elements, according to the assessed value of the land, could be imposed upon the abutting property to 128 feet back from the street. This was modified by a new charter, adopted later in 1890, and still in force. Under the latter the assessment was to be by the front foot, with different percentages for four parallel subdivisions at successive distances from the street up to 120 feet. It was to be for the costs of the improvement. To carry out the plan, local improvement districts were to be established, including all the property within the termini of the improvement, and *not more [357] than 120 feet on each side of the margin. Reassessments were authorized. In pursuance of the charter an ordinance was adopted by the city, providing the manner in which the local assessment should be made. Ordinance No. 2085.

In this state of the ordinances and laws a reassessment of the whole cost of the improvement was ordered in January, 1894, in conformity with the act of 1893, the new charter, and the ordinance No. 2085. Ordinance No. 3199. The proper steps were taken and the assessment was confirmed on March 5, 1894. Ordinance No. 3267. By this assessment the whole cost of the improvement, $35,620.60, was levied on the abutting land, and $14,262.68 was fixed as the plaintiff's share. It is alleged that he thus is charged 44 per cent under the present plan, whereas under the one in force when the improvement was made he would have been charged only 32 per cent. It also is alleged that, being absent from the state, he did not know of the reassessment proceedings until they were concluded.

The bill disputed, among other things, that the prolongation of Weller street through the plaintiff's land ever had been dedicated as a street. But, in view of the assumption by the circuit court that the dedication was made out, and the statement by it that the point had been decided by the supreme court of the state, this objection, if open, very properly was not pressed before us. See Seattle v. Hill, 23 Wash. 92, 62 Pac. 446. Therefore we have not gone into details upon that part of the case. We see no cause to doubt that the circuit court was right. The main ground of argument is that the planking could not be included in the assessment. The reasons, as summed up by the circuit court, are that the law in force at the time of doing the work did not authorize a charge for planking upon the abutting property, that the ordinance No. 1285, ordering the improvement, did not authorize any planking, that the city could assess only the land abutting on the improvement, and the plaintiff's land was far [358] away from *the planking, and that such an assessment of the whole cost, including the planking, on the property on Weller street, is absolutely unfair as to the plaintiff's land.

A general attack upon the statute of 1893 is not attempted. It was within the power of the legislature to create, or to authorize the creation of, special taxing districts, and to charge the cost of a local improvement upon the property in such a district by frontage. Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; McNamee v. Tacoma, 24 Wash. 591, 595, 64 Pac. 791; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. 729. The only question of principle, therefore, raised by the inclusion of the planking in the sum of which the plaintiff was to pay his share, is whether it was manifestly unfair in this particular case. Taken by itself it looks like an unwarrantable attempt to make one man pay for another man's convenience.

On the other hand, so far as the work was similar in character throughout the street, we are of opinion that the improvement might be regarded as one. Webster v. Fargo, 181 U. S. 394, 45 L. ed. 912, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623. See Lincoln v. Street Comrs. 176 Mass. 210, 212, 57 N. E. 356. And if this be admitted we cannot say that the assessing board might not have been warranted in thinking that substantial justice was done. There were many cuts and fills made in grading the road. So far as appears, the heaviest work may have been done on the plaintiff's land, which seems to have been the summit of an ascent. Improvement of one sort may have been the greatest there, while that of a different kind, needed where the travel was, was at the other end of the street. It is true that the circuit judge considered that there was manifest injustice in assessing the plaintiff's land, which was empty and unimproved, by the front foot at the same rate as the improved land lower down and nearer to the bay, and that his opinion naturally carries weight, from his probable acquaintance with the condition of the place. But we do not find a sufficient warrant for it on the record. We must consider how things looked at the time. The owner of the land desired the improvements, [359] if carried out *as he wished. The extension of the street helped to bring his land into the market. It was more likely to benefit him than those who were lower down. We cannot invalidate the assessment because the speculation has failed. Assuming, without deciding, that the question is open to the plaintiff in this proceeding, we are of opinion that the record does not justify interference by injunction on the ground that the assessment was manifestly unfair.

195 U. S.

The answer to the other objections may be made in few words. If, as is said, planking was not authorized under the word "sidewalks" in ordinance No. 1285, the city has done or adopted the work, and presumably has paid for it. At the end the benefit was there, on the ground, at the city's expense. The principles of taxation are not those of contract. A special assessment may be levied upon an executed consideration, that is to say, for a public work already done. Bellows v. Weeks, 41 Vt. 590, 599, 600; Mills v. Charleton, 29 Wis. 400, 413, 9 Am. Rep. 578; Hall v. Street Comrs. 177 Mass. 434, 439, 59 N. E. 68. If this were not so it might be hard to justify reassessments. See Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 293, 43 L. ed. 443, 452, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Williams v. Albany, 122 U. S. 154, 30 L. ed. 1088, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1244; Frederick v. Seattle, 13 Wash. 428, 43 Pac. 364; Cline v. Seattle, 13 Wash. 444, 43 Pac. 367; Bacon v. Seattle, 15 Wash. 701, 47 Pac. 1102; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 1280. The same answer is sufficient if it be true that when the work was done the cost of planking could not be included in the special assessment, which again depends on the meaning of the words "sidewalk" and "pave" in the old charter, § 8, taken with the special provision for planking in § 7. Laws of 1885-1886, pp. 238, 241. The charge of planking on the general taxes was not a contract with the landowners, and no more prevented a special assessment being authorized for it later than silence of the laws at the same time as to how it should be paid for would have. In either case the legislature could do as it thought best. Of course, it does not matter that this is called a reassessment. A reassessment may be a new assessment. Whatever the legislature *could authorize if it were ordering an as-[360] sessment for the first time it equally could authorize, notwithstanding a previous invalid attempt to assess. The previous attempt left the city free "to take such steps as were within its power to take, either under existing statutes, or under any authority that might thereafter be conferred upon it, to make a new assessment upon the plaintiff's abutting property" in any constitutional way. Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 293, 43 L. ed. 443, 452, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187, 196; McNamee v. Tacoma, 24 Wash. 591, 64 Pac. 791; Annie Wright Seminary v. Tacoma, 23 Wash. 109, 62 Pac. 444.

We think it unnecessary to consider other questions on the part of the case that we have dealt with. We have said enough in our opinion to show that the enforcement of the assessment lien could not be prevented by the original owner. It is urged, however, that a different rule could be applied in favor of one who purchased the land under the circumstances stated above. But the attempt to liken taxation, whether general or special, to the enforcement of a vendor's lien, and thus to introduce the doctrine concerning bona fide purchasers for value, rests on a fallacy similar to that which we have mentioned above, which would deny the right to tax upon an executed consideration. A man cannot get rid of his liability to a tax by buying without notice. See Tallman v. Janesville, 17 Wis. 71, 76; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 527, 528. Indeed, he cannot buy without notice, since the liability is one of the notorious incidents of social life. In this case the road was cut through the plaintiff's land, and, if he had looked, was visible upon the ground. Whether it had been paid for was for him to inquire. The history of what had happened would have suggested that it was not improbable that sooner or later a payment must be made.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Harlan and Mr. Justice Brown dissent.

On January 3, 1905, Mr. Justice Holmes announced that the decree of November 28, 1904, was modified by striking out the order to dismiss the bill and by remanding the cause for further proceedings in accordance with the opinion.

[361] *UNITED STATES, Appt.,
v.

F. G. EVANS, Claimant of the British Steamship "Blackheath."†

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 361-369.)

Admiralty jurisdiction — collision with beacon.

The admiralty jurisdiction of the Federal courts extends to a libel in rem against a vessel for negligently colliding with and destroying a beacon standing some 15 or 20 feet from the channel, in water 12 or 15 feet deep, though it is built upon piles driven firmly into the bottom.

[No. 34.]

†This case is reported by the Official Reporter under the title of "The Blackheath."

NOTE.—On the question of admiralty jurisdiction—see notes to The Curtis, 3 L. R. A. 711; Case v. Loftus, 5 L. R. A. 684.

As to admiralty jurisdiction of torts—see note to Campbell v. H. Hackfeld & Co. 62 C. A. 279.

236

Argued October 31 and November 1, 1904.
Decided November 28, 1904.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Alabama to review a decree dismissing, for want of jurisdiction, a libel in rem against a vessel for negligently running into and destroying a beacon. Reversed.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 112.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Assistant Attorney General McReynolds argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant.

Mr. Benjamin Carter argued the cause, and, with Mr. R. H. Clarke, filed a brief for appellee.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the district court on the question of jurisdiction, which is certified. The case is a libel in rem against a British vessel for the destruction of a beacon,—Number 7, Mobile ship-channel lights,—caused by the alleged negligent running into the beacon by the vessel. The beacon stood 15 or 20 feet from the channel of Mobile river or bay, in water 12 or 15 feet deep, and was built on piles driven firmly into the bottom. There is no question that it was attached to the realty, and that it was a part of it by the ordinary criteria of the common law. On this ground the district court declined jurisdiction, and dismissed the libel. The Blackheath, 122 Fed. 112.

In The Plymouth, 3 Wall. 20, sub nom. Hough v. Western Transp. Co. 18 L. ed. 125, where a libel was brought by the owners of a wharf burned by a fire negligently started on a vessel, the jurisdiction was denied by this court. See also Ex parte Phenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 30 L. ed. 274, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. In two later cases there are dicta denying the jurisdiction equally when a building on shore is damaged by a vessel running into it. Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254; Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 182 U. S. 406, 411, 45 L. ed. 1155, 1159, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831. And there are a number of decisions of district and other courts since The Plymouth, which more or less accord with the conclusion of the court below. See note to Campbell v. H. Hackfeld & Co. 62 C. A. 287-290. It would be simple, if simplicity were the only thing to be considered, to confine the admiralty jurisdiction, in respect of damage to property, to damage done to property afloat. That distinction sounds like a logical consequence of the rule determining the admiralty cognizance of torts by place.

195 U. S.

On the other hand, it would be a strong thing to say that Congress has no constitutional power to give the admiralty *here as broad a jurisdiction as it has in England or France. Or, if that is in some degree precluded, it ought at least to be possible for Congress to authorize the admiralty to give redress for damage by a ship, in a case like this, to instruments and aids of navigation prepared and owned by the government. But Congress cannot enlarge the constitutional grant of power, and therefore if it could permit a libel to be maintained, one can be maintained now. We are called on by the appellee to say that the remedy for any case of damage to a fixture is outside the constitutional grant.

The precise scope of admiralty jurisdiction is not a matter of obvious principle or of very accurate history. As to principle, it is clear that if the beacon had been in fault, and had hurt the ship, a libel could have been maintained against a private owner, although not in rem. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Philadelphia & H. de G. Steam Towboat Co. 23 How. 209, 16 L. ed. 433; Atlee v. Northwestern Union Packet Co. 21 Wall. 389, 22 L. ed. 619; Panama R. Co. v. Napier Shipping Co. 166 U. S. 280, 41 L. ed. 1004, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 572. Compare The Rock Island Bridge, 6 Wall. 213, 18 L. ed. 753. But, as has been suggested, there seems to be no reason why the fact that the injured property was afloat should have more weight in determining the jurisdiction than the fact that the cause of the injury was. The Arkansas, 5 McCrary, 364, 17 Fed. 383, 387; The F. & P. M. No. 2, 33 Fed. 511, 515; Hughes, Admiralty, 183. And again, it seems more arbitrary than rational to treat attachment to the soil as a peremptory bar, outweighing the considerations that the injured thing was an instrument of navigation, and no part of the shore, but surrounded on every side by water, a mere point projecting from the sea.

As to history, while, as it is well known, the admiralty jurisdiction of this country has not been limited by the local traditions of England (The Lottawanna, 21 Wall. 558, 574, 22 L. ed. 654, 661), the traditions of England favor it in a case like this. The admiral's authority was not excluded by attachment even to the main shore. From before the time of Rowghton's Articles he could hold inquest over nuisances there to [366] navigation, *and order their abatement. 1 Black Book (Twiss) 224, art. 7; Clerke, Praxis; 1 Select Pleas in Adm., 6 Seld. Soc. Publ., xlv., lxxx.; Articles of Feb. 18, 1633, Exton, Maritime Dicæology, pp. 262, 263; 2 Hale, De Port., chap. 7, p. 88, in Hargrave, Law Tracts; Zouch, in Malynes, Lex Merc., 3d ed. 122; 1 Comyns's Digest, Admiralty, 195 U. S.

E. 13. See Benedict, Admiralty, 3d ed. § 151; De Lovio v. Boit, 2 Gall. 398, 470, 471, note, Fed. Cas. No. 3,776. Coke mentions that "of latter times by the letters patents granted to the lord admirall he hath power to erect beacons, seamarks and signs for the sea, etc." 4 Co. Inst. 148, 149. To the French admiral, it is expressly stated, belonged "contraincte et pugnicion, tant en criminel que en civil," in this matter. 1 Black Book, 445, 446. See Crosse v. Diggs, 1 Sid. 158. Spelman says: "The place absolutely subject to the jurisdiction of the admiraltie, is the sea, which seemeth to comprehend publick rivers, fresh waters, creekes, and surrounded places whatsoever within the ebbing and flowing of the sea at the highest water." Eng. Works, 2d ed. 226. Finally, by the articles of February 18, 1633, all the judges of England agreed that the admiralty jurisdiction extended to "injuries there which concern navigation upon the sea." Exton, Maritime Dicæology, ad fin., pp. 262, 263. And "if the libel be founded upon one single continued act, which was principally upon the sea, though part was upon land, a prohibition will not go." Comyns's Digest, Admiralty, F. 5; 1 Rolle, Abr. 533, pl. 18.

What the early law seems most to have looked to as fixing the liability of the ship was the motion of the vessel, which was treated as giving it the character of a responsible cause. Braeton recognizes this as an extravagance, but admits the fact, for the common law. 122a, 136b. 1 Select Pleas of the Crown, 1 Seld. Soc. Pub. 84. The same was true in admiralty. Rowghton, ubi sup. art. 50; 2 Rotulæ Parliamentariæ, 345, 346, 372a, b; 3 Rotulæ Parliamentariæ 94a, 120b, 121a; 4 Rotulæ Parliamentariæ 12a, b, 492b, 493. The responsibility of the moving cause took the form of deodand when it occasioned death, like the steam engine in Queen v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 10 Mees. & W. 59, and innumerable *early instances. [367] but it was not confined to such cases. 2 Black Book (Twiss) 379. But compare 1 Select Pleas in Adm., 6 Seld. Soc. Publ. lxxi., lxxii. The principle has remained until the present day. United States v. The Malek Adhel, 2 How. 210, 234, 11 L. ed. 239, 249; The China, 7 Wall. 53, 19 L. ed. 67.

The foregoing references seem to us enough to show that to maintain jurisdiction in this case is no innovation even upon the old English law. But a very little history is sufficient to justify the conclusion that the Constitution does not prohibit what convenience and reason demand.

In the case of The Plymouth there was nothing maritime in the nature of the tort for which the vessel was attached. The fact that the fire originated on a vessel gave no character to the result, and that circumstance is mentioned in the judgment of the court, and is contrasted with collision, although the consideration is not adhered to as the sole ground for the decree. It has been given weight in other cases. Campbell v. H. Hackfeld & Co. 62 C. C. A. 274, 125 Fed. 696; Queen v. London Court Judge [1892] 1 Q. B. 273, 294; Benedict, Admiralty, 3d ed. § 308. Moreover, the damage was done wholly upon the mainland. It never has been decided that every fixture in the midst of the sea was governed by the same rule. The contrary has been supposed in some American cases (The Arkansas, 5 McCrary, 364, 17 Fed. 383, 387; The F. & P. M. No. 2, 33 Fed. 511, 515), and is indicated by the English books cited above. It is unnecessary to determine the relative weight of the different elements of distinction between The Plymouth and the case at bar. It is enough to say that we now are dealing with an injury to a government aid to navigation from ancient times subject to the admiralty,—a beacon emerging from the water,—injured by the motion of the vessel, by a continuous act, beginning and consummated upon navigable water, and giving character to the effects upon a point which is only technically land, through a connection at the bottom of the sea. In such a case jurisdiction may be taken without transcending the limits of the Constitution or encountering [368] The Plymouth* or any other authority binding on this court. As to the present English law, see The Uhla, L. R. 2 Adm. & Eccl. 29, note; The Swift [1901] P. 168.

Decree reversed.

Mr. Justice Brown, concurring:

I do not dissent from the conclusion of the court, although for forty years the broad language of Mr. Justice Nelson in the case of The Plymouth, 3 Wall. 20, sub nom. Hough v. Western Transp. Co. 18 L. ed. 125, has been accepted by the profession and the admiralty courts as establishing the principle that the jurisdiction of the admiralty does not extend to injuries received by any structure affixed to the land, though such injuries were caused by a ship or other floating body. It received the approval of this court in the case of Ex parte Phoenix Ins. Co. 118 U. S. 610, 30 L. ed. 274, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25, and in that of Johnson v. Chicago & P. Elevator Co. 119 U. S. 388, 30 L. ed. 447, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 254, and has been followed by the courts of at least a dozen different districts, and applied to bridges, piers, derricks, and every other class of structure permanently affixed to the soil.

I do not think this case can be distinguished from the prior ones, as, in my opinion, it makes no difference in principle whether a beacon be affixed to piles driven into the bottom of the river or to a stone projecting from the bottom, or whether it be surrounded by 12 feet or 1 foot of water, or whether the injury be done to a wharf projecting into a navigable water, or to a beacon standing there, or whether the damage be caused by a negligent fire or by bad steering.

I accept this case as practically overruling the former ones, and as recognizing the principle adopted by the English admiralty court jurisdiction act of 1861 (§ 7), extending the jurisdiction of the admiralty court to "any claim for damages by any ship." This has been held in many cases to include damage done to a structure affixed to the land. The distinction between damage done to fixed and to floating structures is a somewhat artificial one, and, in my view, founded upon no sound principle; and the fact that [369] Congress, under the Constitution, cannot extend our admiralty jurisdiction, affords an argument for a broad interpretation commensurate with the needs of modern commerce. To attempt to draw the line of jurisdiction between different kinds of fixed structures, as, for instance, between beacons and wharves, would lead to great confusion and much further litigation.

CITIZENS' NATIONAL BANK OF KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, Plff. in Err.,

v.

M. S. C. DONNELL.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 369-374.)

Usury by national banks.

1. By compounding interest oftener than is permitted by Mo. Rev. Stat. § 3711, a national bank charges interest at a higher rate than that allowed by the laws of the state within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5197, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, fixing the rate which national banks may charge, although the compounded interest is less than the state laws permit to be charged directly, without compounding.
2. A national bank which has made a 12 per cent charge on overdrafts, where 8 per cent is the highest rate of interest permitted by the NOTE.—On forfeiture or other effect of taking or receiving illegal interest by national bank—see note to Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Gentry, 56 L. R. A. 673.

On usury by national banks generally—see note to Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 23 L. ed. U. S. 196.

As to usury in agreement for interest after maturity—see note to Ward v. Cornett, 49 L. R. A. 550.

state laws, cannot escape the forfeiture prescribed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, where a greater rate of interest is charged than the state laws allow, because of the trifling amount, or on the theory that the charge is a penalty because of the failure to pay a debt when due.

3. A national bank whose action on a promissory note is met by the plea of usury may not avoid the forfeiture of the entire interest, imposed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, in absolute terms, by then declaring an election to remit the excessive interest.

[No. 36.]

Argued November 1, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri to review a judgment reversing the judgment of the Circuit Court of Jackson County, in that State, in favor of plaintiff in a suit on a promissory note for the full amount claimed, and directing the trial court to enter up judgment for plaintiff without interest, which it decided was forfeited under the national banking act because usurious. Affirmed.

See same case below, 172 Mo. 384, 72 S. W. 925.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Oliver H. Dean argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William D. McLeod and Hale Holden, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The penalties prescribed by § 5198 of the national banking act are exclusive, and the usury laws of the state have no application to national banks in so far as such penalties are concerned.

Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 96.

To subject a bank to the penalty for taking usurious interest, there must have been not only a larger rate of interest than allowed by the state law, but the larger rate must have been knowingly received.

National banking act (U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493).

And this must not only be alleged, but proved.

Henderson Nat. Bank v. Alves, 91 Ky. 142, 15 S. W. 132.

The question of what is compound interest, and what is not, is necessarily to be determined by this court.

Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 132, 46 L. ed. 118, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

The methods of business to be pursued by a national bank cannot be prescribed by a state statute; they rest upon higher authority.

Tyler, Usury, p. 244.

Promises to pay the highest legal rate of interest semi-annually or quarterly are not usurious.

Hawley v. Howell, 60 Iowa, 79, 14 N. W. 199; Goodrich v. Reynolds, 31 Ill. 490, 83 Am. Dec. 240; Tallman v. Truesdell, 3 Wis. 443; Mowry v. Shumway, 44 Conn. 493; Brown v. Vandyke, 8 N. J. Eq. 795, 55 Am. Dec. 250; Ragan v. Day, 46 Iowa, 240; Mann v. Cross, 9 Iowa, 327.

Usury is not committed by payment of a premium less in amount than the legal interest.

Oyster v. Longnecker, 16 Pa. 269; Upton v. O'Donahue, 32 Neb. 565, 49 N. W. 267; Mills v. Johnston, 23 Tex. 309; Brestle v. Mehaffie, 19 Pa. 117; Dcy v. Dunham, 2 Johns. Ch. 182; Tepoel v. Saunders County Nat. Bank, 24 Neb. 815, 40 N. W. 415; Smith v. Parsons, 55 Minn. 520, 57 N. W. 311; Webb, Usury, § 115; Brown v. Scottish-American Mortg. Co. 110 Ill. 235; Miner v. Paris Exch. Bank, 53 Tex. 561; Camp v. Bates, 11 Conn. 495; Wilcox v. Howland, 23 Pick. 169.

The mere compounding of interest is not of itself usurious.

Mills v. Johnston, 23 Tex. 330; Andrews v. Hoxie, 5 Tex. 194; Miner v. Paris Exch. Bank, 53 Tex. 561; Martin v. Land Mortg. Bank, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 171, 23 S. W. 1032; Brown v. Crow (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 653.

Compound interest at the highest rate allowed by law is not unlawful.

Wilcox v. Howland, 23 Pick. 167; Mosher v. Chapin, 12 Wis. 453; Webb, Usury, §§ 123, 125; Stansbury v. Stansbury, 24 W. Va. 634; Camp v. Bates, 11 Conn. 495; Stewart v. Petree, 55 N. Y. 621, 14 Am. Rep. 352; Kellogg v. Hickok, 1 Wend. 521; Fobes v. Cantfield, 3 Ohio, 18; Hale v. Hale, 1 Coldw. 233.

Penalties on overdrafts are not unlawful.

Hatch v. Douglas, 48 Conn. 116, 40 Am. Rep. 154; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 994; Upton v. O'Donahue, 32 Neb. 565, 49 N. W. 267; Burke v. Raab, 4 Ill. App. 338; Lawrence v. Cowles, 13 Ill. 577; Downey v. Beach, 78 Ill. 53; Fisher v. Otis, 3 Chand. 83, 3 Pinney, 78; Chaffe v. Landers, 46 Ark. 364; Jones v. Hubbard, 6 Call. (Va.) 211; Call v. Scott, 4 Call. (Va.) 402; Pollard v. Baylor, 6 Munf. 433; Wadsworth v. Champion, 1 Root, 393; Tuttle v. Clark, 4 Conn. 153; Cole v. Lockhart, 2 Ind. 631; Gambrell v. Doe, 8 Blackf. 140, 44 Am. Dec. 760; Billingsley v. Dean, 11 Ind. 331; Sumner v. People, 29 N. Y. 337; Bank of Chenango v. Curtiss, 19 Johns. 326; Jordan v. Lewis, 2 Stew. 426; Rogers v. Sample, 33 Miss. 310, 69 Am. Dec. 349; Moore v. Hytton, 16 N. C. (1 Dev. Eq.) 429; Fisher v. Anderson, 25 Iowa, 28, 95 Am. Dec. 761; Watson v. McClanahan, 13 Ala. 57.

The test of usury in such cases is, Has the debtor the absolute and unconditional right to discharge his obligations at maturity by paying the amount of the prescribed and lawful interest?

Gaar v. Louisville Bkg. Co. 11 Bush, 189, 21 Am. Rep. 209.

Where a promissory note provides that, if the principal is not paid when due, a greater rate of interest shall be paid than is allowed by law, and it is made payable on so long a time as not to induce the belief that the interest clause was intended as an evasion of the statute, it will not be held to be usurious from such fact alone.

Wilday v. Morrison, 66 Ill. 532.

In Gould v. Bishop Hill Colony, 35 Ill. 324, it is held that an agreement in a promissory note payable in six months after its date, to pay 25 per cent interest after maturity and until the note is paid, is not usurious.

So, agreements to pay 24 per cent, 50 per cent, and 20 per cent after maturity, have been sustained.

Weyrich v. Hobelman, 14 Neb. 432, 16 N. W. 436; Wight v. Shuck, 1 Morris (Iowa) 425; Conrad v. Gibbon, 29 Iowa, 120.

In Gower v. Carter, 3 Iowa, 244, 66 Am. Dec. 71, it is held that an agreement to pay 2 per cent per month as a penalty in default of payment of a promissory note at maturity is not essentially different from an agreement to pay a gross sum as such a penalty; and it is a settled rule that no other sum can now be recovered, under a penalty, than that which shall compensate the plaintiff for his actual loss.

It is lawful to provide that, if the debt be not paid at maturity, the debtor may pay the creditor's attorneys' fees for the collection of the debt.

Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co. 141 U. S. 384, 35 L. ed. 786, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Smith v. Silvers, 32 Ind. 321; Daniels v. Silvers, 32 Ind. 322; Nelson v. Everett, 29 Iowa, 184; Dunn v. Rogers, 43 Ill. 260.

A parol agreement to pay interest upon interest is valid.

Thayer v. Wilmington Star Min. Co. 105 Ill. 541; Fessenden v. Taft, 65 N. H. 39, 17 Atl. 713; Cameron v. Merchants' & M. Bank, 37 Mich. 242; Brown v. Cass County Bank, 86 Iowa, 527, 53 N. W. 410; Guild v. First Nat. Bank, 4 S. D. 566, 57 N. W. 503; First Nat. Bank v. Fenn, 75 Iowa, 221, 39 N. W. 279.

Where one debt is tainted with usury, and the others are not, and all the debts are incorporated into one obligation, the tainted debt does not poison the whole.

Porter v. Jefferies, 40 S. C. 92, 18 S. E. 229; Smith v. Heath, 4 Daly, 123; Farmers' 240

& M. Bank v. Hoagland, 7 Fed. 159; Burnhisel v. Firman, 22 Wall. 170, 22 L. ed. 766; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Joslyn, 37 N. Y. 353.

By the law of Missouri, if usury is once paid it cannot be collected back.

Ferguson v. Soden, 111 Mo. 208, 33 Am. St. Rep. 512, 19 S. W. 727; Ransom v. Hays, 39 Mo. 445.

Charging interest on overdue interest is not compounding the interest.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1074.

When an action is brought by a national bank on a note executed in its favor, and usury is pleaded, the court will permit such bank to remit the excessive interest stipulated for, and recover the debt, with legal interest. This is especially true when a transaction is in good faith and there was no intention to violate the law.

Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 419, 42 L. ed. 801, 802, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; McBroom v. Scottish Mortg. & Land Invest. Co. 153 U. S. 318-328, 38 L. ed. 729-733, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852.

Mr. Edward P. Garnett argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The supreme court of Missouri found as a matter of fact that, upon each and every item which entered into and formed a part of the note in question, the plaintiff charged interest at a greater rate than was allowed by the laws of the state of Missouri; and it is well settled that the findings of facts in the state courts are, on a writ of error, conclusive in this court.

Jenkins v. Neff, 186 U. S. 230, 46 L. ed. 1140, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 905; E. Bement & Sons v. National Harrow Co. 186 U. S. 83, 46 L. ed. 1064, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747; Gardner v. Boncstell, 180 U. S. 362, 45 L. ed. 574, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 399; Thayer v. Spratt, 189 U. S. 353, 47 L. ed. 849, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Egan v. Hart, 165 U. S. 188, 41 L. ed. 680, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 300; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Call Pub. Co. 181 U. S. 103, 45 L. ed. 771, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 561.

The following well-reasoned cases show how completely foreclosed is all controversy as to the construction of §§ 5197 and 5198 of the national banking act:

Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Danforth v. National State Bank, 17 L. R. A. 622, 1 C. C. A. 62, 3 U. S. App. 7, 48 Fed. 271; Farmers' & M. Bank v. Hoagland, 7 Fed. 159; Daingerfield Nat. Bank v. Ragland, 181 U. S. 45, 45 L. ed. 738, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Barnet v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 98 U. S. 555, 25 L. ed. 212; Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 23 L. ed. 196; First Nat. Bank v. Will, 184 U. S. 155, 46 L. ed. 478, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457;

Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 132, 46 L. ed. 118, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the supreme court of Missouri on the ground that the plaintiff in error is denied the rights with regard to charging interest conferred upon it by the national banking act. Rev. Stat. §§ 5197, 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493. The suit was brought by the plaintiff in error upon a promissory note for $20,000, with interest at 8 per cent. made on April 29, 1892. The facts, shortly stated, are as follows: On October 29, 1892, the plaintiff bought the defendant's note for $15,000, with interest at 7 per cent. On July 12, 1895, the defendant being behindhand with his payments of interest and also having overdrawn a bank account which he kept in the plaintiff's bank, he gave the plaintiff a new note for $17,500, and interest at 7 per cent, in satisfaction of both liabilities. The amount of this note included three semiannual interest charges of $525 each, with a few days' further interest, on the former note, with interest on this interest from the time it was due, and charges of 1 per cent or more a month on the amount overdrawn each month. It left the defendant with a credit on his bank account of $230.50. On April 29, 1896, the note in suit and another note for $2,000 were given in satisfaction of the last note for $17,500, and of another note for $2,500, of October 1, 1895, with interest accrued on both, and of an overdraft of $919.90, and a balance of $2.42. The overdraft item included, as before, charges of about 1 per cent a month on the amounts actually overdrawn.

The supreme court of Missouri held that the plaintiff must forfeit all interest from the beginning of the above transactions, and [373] could recover only the original $15,000, *the actual overdraft on July 12, 1895, $474.24, the bank credit of $230, given the same day, the note of October 1, 1895, for $2,500, the overdraft on April 29, 1896, of $878.81, and the bank credit of $2.42—in all, $19,081.97, less $5,500 collected on account since the action was begun. 172 Mo. 384, 72 S. W. 925.

By the U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5197, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, a bank may charge "interest at the rate allowed by the laws of the state, . . . where the bank is located, and no more." By § 5198 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493), taking, receiving, or charging "a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section, when knowingly done, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon." The Revised Statutes of Missouri fix 6 per cent as the rate of interest in the absence of agreement (§ 3705), but allow parties to agree in writing for not over 8 per cent (§ 3706). They also allow parties to contract in writing for the payment of interest upon interest, "but the interest shall not be compounded oftener than once in a year" (§ 3711). It will be seen that the charge on the overdrafts went beyond § 3706, and the compounding of the semiannual interest on the notes encountered § 3711.

The plaintiff in error denies that the prohibition of compounding oftener than once a year affects the "rate of interest" within the meaning of those words in U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, and contends that so long as the total sums received would not amount to more than 8 per cent on the debt, it has a right to charge them under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5197, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, coupled with Mo. Rev. Stat. § 3706. It disposes of the 12 per cent charge on overdrafts by the suggestion that the amount is trifling, and de minimis non curat lex, and that this charge was a penalty because of a failure to pay a debt *when due, and there- [374] fore not usurious. We are of a different opinion. The rate of interest which a man receives is greater when he is allowed to compound than when he is not, the other elements in the case being the same. Even if the compounded interest is less than might be charged directly without compounding, a statute may forbid enlarging the rate in that way, whatever may be the rules of the common law. The supreme court of Missouri holds that that is what the Missouri statute has done. On that point, and on the question whether what was done amounted to compounding within the meaning of the Missouri statute, we follow the state court. Union Nat. Bank v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 163 U. S. 325, 331, 41 L. ed. 177, 179, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1039. Therefore, since the interest charged and received by the plaintiff was compounded more than once a year, it was at a rate greater than was allowed by U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5197, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, and it was forfeited. The suggestions as to the 12 per cent charge on overdrafts do not seem to us to need answer.

There is no doubt, of course, that the court could go behind the face of the present note, and analyze the sum which it represents into its original elements. Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 132, 135, 136, 46 L. ed. 118-120, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 50. These cases sufficiently show, also, if more is wanted than the words of Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp.

Stat. 1901, p. 3493, that the court below did not err in forfeiting all the interest from the beginning.

We perceive no warrant in the statute or the cases for the contention that the bank, when it brings the action and is met by the plea of usury, may avoid the forfeiture imposed by Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, in absolute terms, by then declaring an election to remit the excessive interest.

Judgment affirmed.

[375]*BALTIMORE SHIPBUILDING & DRY DOCK COMPANY OF BALTIMORE CITY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL OF BALTIMORE et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 375-382.)

Taxes—state taxation as prohibited by Federal interest—taxation of Federal agency.

1. A state tax, though in form levied upon land conveyed by the United States to a corporation for dry-dock purposes, with a reserved right in the grantor to the free use of the dry dock, and a provision for forfeiture in case of the continued unfitness of the dry dock for use, or the use of the land for other purposes, will be held to create a lien upon the company's interest alone, where the highest state court so regards the effect of the tax, although it neglects to modify its judgment sustaining the tax to conform to its views.
2. The United States has no such interest in land conveyed by it to a corporation for dry-dock purposes, with a reserved right to the free use of the dry dock, and a provision for forfeiture in case of the continued unfitness of the dry dock for use, or the use of the land for other purposes, as will prevent the state from taxing the corporation's interest in such land.
3. Land conveyed by the United States to a corporation for dry-dock purposes is not entirely exempted from state taxation, as an agency of the United States, because of a reservation in the conveyance of the right to the free use of the dry dock, and a provision therein for forfeiture in case of the continued unfitness of the dry dock for use, or the use of the land for other purposes.

[No. 39.]

Argued November 2, 3, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

NOTE.—On the limitations of the taxing power arising out of the mutual independence of Federal and state governments—see note to Grether v. Wright, 23 C. C. A. 515.

On the power of the states to tax—see note to Dobbins v. Erie County, 10 L. ed. U. S. 1022.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the State of Maryland to review a judgment which affirmed an order of the Baltimore City Court, confirming the action of the Appeal Tax Court of Baltimore City in assessing for taxation certain property held under a conveyance from the United States for dry-dock purposes, with a reserved right in the grantor to the free use of the dry dock, and a provision for forfeiture in case of the continued unfitness of the dry dock for use, or the use of the land for other purposes. Affirmed.

See same case below, 97 Md. 97, 54 Atl. 623.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. E. P. Keech, Jr., and Leon E. Greenbaum argued the cause, and, with Mr. Archibald H. Taylor, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The estate of the United States in this land may be said to be a right of reverter absolute, subject to the performance of certain continuing conditions for the sole benefit of the reversioner, and conferring upon the reversioner certain valuable present rights of user in the land itself.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

"Property" may be the land or thing itself, or it may be a right, absolute or qualified, in the land or thing.

2 Austin, Jur. (Campbell's Notes), § 1051; 2 Bouvier, Law Dict. (1897) Property, p. 780; Anderson, Law Dict. (1889) Property, p. 835.

All "property" is not of necessity taxed by the state of Maryland.

Buchanan v. Talbot County, 47 Md. 286; Baltimore v. Johnson, 96 Md. 737, 61 L. R. A. 568, 54 Atl. 646; Baltimore & F. Turnpk. Co. v. Appeal Tax Court, Baltimore Daily Record, May 7, 1903.

The state of Maryland has no power to tax the property of the United States, including land in which the United States has an interest or estate.

Black, Tax Titles (1893) § 35; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. 135-139; Howell v. State, 3 Gill, 14; M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670, Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 504, 33 L. ed. 687, 690, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

This doctrine is applicable not only in cases where the United States is vested with full legal and equitable title to the property sought to be taxed, but to all cases of lands in which the United States has any real interest; and it fails to apply only in cases when the United States may be vested with the mere dry legal title, full beneficial or equitable ownership and title being vested in others.

Carroll v. Safford, 3 How. 441, 11 L. ed. 671; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339.

Land of the United States lying within a state is not taxable by the state. If such land has been bought or taken up by an individual, it is not subject to state taxation so long as something remains to be done by the individual to perfect his right to a patent from the United States.

Cooley, Const. L. p. 60; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603, 21 L. ed. 373; Union P. R. Co. v. McShane, 22 Wall. 444, 22 L. ed. 747; Tucker v. Ferguson, 22 Wall. 527, 22 L. ed. 805; Forbes v. Gracely, 94 U. S. 762, 24 L. ed. 313; Central Colorado Improv. Co. v. Pueblo County, 95 U. S. 259, 24 L. ed. 495; Northern P. R. Co. v. Traill County (Northern P. R. Co. v. Rockne) 115 U. S. 600, 29 L. ed. 477, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Hussman v. Durham, 165 U. S. 147, 41 L. ed. 665, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253.

The assessment in the case is laid upon the land as such, and not upon the interest of the plaintiff in error therein.

Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 721 et seq.; Baltimore v. Canton Co. 63 Md. 218; Baltimore v. Boyd, 64 Md. 10, 20 Atl. 1028; Cooper v. Holmes, 71 Md. 20, 17 Atl. 711. See also Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 960 et seq.; Black, Tax Titles (1893) §§ 419-422; Burroughs, Taxn. (1877), p. 346; Textor v. Shipley, 86 Md. 424, 38 Atl. 932; Northern P. R. Co. v. Traill County (Northern P. R. Co. v. Rockne) 115 U. S. 600, 29 L. ed. 477, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Hefner v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 123 U. S. 747, 31 L. ed. 309, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Emery v. Boston Terminal Co. 178 Mass. 172, 86 Am. St. Rep. 473, 59 N. E. 763.

Even if the statutes of Maryland do permit assessments upon partial interests or estates in land, and the court has such an assessment before it in this case, it is none the less void, and the provisions of the statutes in this respect must of necessity be inoperative here from the peculiar conditions of this case, growing out of the interest of the United States in this land.

Moriarty v. Boone County, 39 Iowa, 634.

The state of Maryland may not tax the interest of a private party in lands in which the United States also has an interest, without the consent of the United States.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603, 21 L. ed. 373; Northern P. R. Co. v.
195 U. S.

Traill County (Northern P. R. Co. v. Rockne) 115 U. S. 600, 610, 611, 29 L. ed. 477, 480, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 505, 33 L. ed. 692, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, 40 L. ed. 1057, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885; Northern P. R. Co. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 589, 43 L. ed. 564, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Cooley, Taxn. 3d ed. pp. 137-139.

The land in question, with the dry dock constructed on it, is a Federal agency actually used by the United States in the exercise of its constitutional powers, and hence is not subject to state taxation.

M'Culloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316, 4 L. ed. 579. See also Van Brocklin v. Tennessee (Van Brocklin v. Anderson) 117 U. S. 151, 29 L. ed. 845, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 45, 612, et seq.

Mr. Edgar Allan Poe argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. Cabell Bruce, filed a brief for defendants in error:

It is the settled law of the state of Maryland that taxes are not levied on things, but on the owner of things; the value of the things owned merely fixing the measure of the owner's liability to contribute in taxes towards the support of the government.

Monticello Distilling Co. v. Baltimore, 90 Md. 425, 45 Atl. 210; Carstairs v. Cochran, 95 Md. 500, 52 Atl. 601.

A state has the undoubted power to tax private property having a situs within its territorial limits, and may require the party in possession of the property to pay the taxes thereon. Unless restrained by provisions of the Federal Constitution, the power of the state as to the mode, form, and extent of taxation is unlimited, where the subjects to which it applies are within her jurisdiction.

Carstairs v. Cochran, 193 U. S. 10, 48 L. ed. 596, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

The courts of the United States will construe the grants of the general government without reference to the rules of construction adopted by the states for their grants; but whatever incidents or rights attach to the ownership of property conveyed by the government will be determined by the states, subject to the condition that their rules do not impair the efficacy of the grants or the use and enjoyment of the property by the grantees.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 270, 47 L. ed. 1046, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

By the imposition of the tax there manifestly has been no impairment of the efficiency of the grant, or the use and enjoyment of the property by the grantee.

Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787.

In Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, 40 L. ed. 1057, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885, and in Northern P. R. Co. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 589, 43 L. ed. 564, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276, it was held that the possessory claim of the railroad company to government lands lying within a state was subject to taxation by the state, notwithstanding the fact that the lands might thereafter be determined to be mineral lands, and for that reason excluded from the operation of the grant from the United States to the railroad company.

He who has the right to property, and is not excluded from its enjoyment, shall not be permitted to use the legal title of the government to avoid his just share of state taxation.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 33 L. ed. 687, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341.

The principle of exemption from taxation of governmental agencies does not apply to the property of individuals or corporations which is not in the exclusive use, or under the exclusive control, of the government, although the latter may have a fixed right to a preference in the use of such property when occasion may require.

Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 579, 19 L. ed. 792; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a writ of error to the court of appeals of the state of Maryland, brought to reverse a judgment sustaining a tax upon certain land. The plaintiff in error filed a petition and appeal from an assessment by the appeal tax court of Baltimore in the Baltimore city court, alleging that its land was not subject to taxation, and, if subject, was taxed too high. The city court reduced the tax, but held the land liable, and its judgment was affirmed by the court of appeals. 97 Md. 97, 54 Atl. 623. The land in question formerly belonged to the United States, being part of the property known as Fort McHenry, and is admitted not to have been taxable at that time. Under an act of Congress of June 19, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 167, chap. 310), it was conveyed to the plaintiff in error on March 26, 1879. By the terms of the deed, following the requirements of the act, the consideration of the conveyance and the condition upon which it was made was that the dock company should construct a dry dock upon the land as specified, which it did, and that it should "accord to the United States the right to the use forever of the said dry dock at any time for the prompt examination and repair of vessels belonging to the United States, free from charge for docking, and if at any time said property hereby conveyed shall be diverted to any other use *than that herein[381] named, or if the said dry dock shall be at any time unfit for use for a period of six months or more, the property hereby conveyed, with all its privileges and appurtenances, shall revert to, and become the absolute property of, the United States." This condition is relied upon as still keeping the land outside the taxing power of the state.

It is argued that the United States has such an interest in the land as to prevent the tax, and also that the land is an agency of the government by the terms of the grant. It is noted that this tax originally was levied upon the land, not upon the dock company's interest, and although the language of the final judgment was "the property concerned in the appeal in this case," that is supposed to mean the same thing.

We will deal with the argument drawn from the last consideration first. It is true that commonly taxes on land create a lien paramount to all interest, and that a tax sale often has been said to extinguish all titles, and to start a new one. Hefner v. Northwestern Mut. L. Ins. Co. 123 U. S. 747, 751, 31 L. ed. 309, 311, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; Textor v. Shipley, 86 Md. 424, 438, 38 Atl. 932; Emery v. Boston Terminal Co. 178 Mass. 172, 184, 86 Am. St. Rep. 473, 59 N. E. 763. Perhaps it was assumed that this always was the effect of tax sales, in Northern P. R. Co. v. Traill County, 115 U. S. 600, 29 L. ed. 477, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 201. But it needs no argument to show that a state may do less. It may tax a life estate to one and a remainder to another, and sell only the interest of the party making default. With regard to what the state of Maryland has done and what are the purport and attempted effect of the tax in this case, we follow the court of appeals. That court treated the tax and the lien as going only to the dock company's interest in the land, although, probably by an oversight, it neglected to modify the judgment according to its own suggestion so as to show the fact. That only the company's interest was taxed is shown by the reduction of the assessment on account of the condition. Of course it does not matter what form of words the judgment employs when its meaning is thus declared by the court having the matter under its control.

*In the next place as to the interest of the[382] United States in the land. This is a mere condition subsequent. There is no easement or present right in rem. The obligation to keep up the dock and to allow the United States to use it carries active duties, and is purely personal. The property is subject to forfeiture, it is true, if the obligation is not fulfilled. But it is only by forfeiture that the rights of the United States can be enforced against the res. It would be a very harsh doctrine that would deny the right of the states to tax lands because of a mere possibility that they might lapse to the United States. The contrary is the law. The condition cannot be extinguished by the state, but the fee is in the dock company, and that can be taxed and, if necessary, sold, subject to the condition. See Northern P. R. Co. v. Myers, 172 U. S. 589, 598, 43 L. ed. 564, 567, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276; Maish v. Arizona, 164 U. S. 599, 607-609, 41 L. ed. 567, 570, 571, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Central P. R. Co. v. Nevada, 162 U. S. 512, 525, 40 L. ed. 1057, 1061, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885. The title of the dock company was not inalienable, as that of the railroad was held to be in Northern P. R. Co. v. Townsend, 190 U. S. 267, 47 L. ed. 1044, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671.

Finally, we are of opinion that the land is not exempt as an agency of the United States. The dock company disclaimed that position for itself as a corporation, but asserts it for the land. The position is answered technically, perhaps, by what we have said already. The United States has no present right to the land, but merely a personal claim against the corporation, reinforced by a condition. But, furthermore, it seems to us extravagant to say that an independent private corporation for gain, created by a state, is exempt from state taxation, either in its corporate person or its property, because it is employed by the United States, even if the work for which it is employed is important and takes much of its time. Thomson v. Union P. R. Co. 9 Wall. 579, 19 L. ed. 792; Union P. R. Co. v. Peniston, 18 Wall. 5, 21 L. ed. 787.

Judgment affirmed.

[383]*HELENA WATERWORKS COMPANY, Appt.,
v.

CITY OF HELENA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 383-394.)

Contracts—impairment of obligation—implied contract of municipality not to build waterworks—agreed case.

1. A city does not impliedly contract not to construct its own waterworks system by requiring a waterworks company, as a condition of its franchise, to provide all the inhabitants of the city with a water supply on the terms and conditions therein expressed, when read in connection with a previous provision requiring the company to furnish water to those desiring to purchase it,—at least, after the five years have expired during which the company was bound by such franchise to furnish water to the city at a definite price, for which an appropriation was therein made.

2. Questions respecting the right of a municipality to impose a tax for the purpose of erecting a waterworks plant, or the alleged invalidity of any method of acquiring such works except by purchasing existing works, are excluded from consideration by a stipulation in the agreed statement of facts, on which the case was tried, that if the city has the right to erect and maintain an independent plant of its own, in view of the contract rights of a private waterworks company, it contemplates raising funds and revenues therefor in the manner provided by law, and will raise revenues within the limits of indebtedness authorized by the state Constitution and laws.

[No. 27.]

Argued October 28, 1904. Decided November 28, 1904.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit to review a decree reversing a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Montana, in favor of complainant in a suit to restrain a municipality from acquiring a waterworks system except by purchasing an existing plant, and from incurring any indebtedness therefor, and remanding the cause, with instructions to dismiss the bill. Affirmed.

See same case below, 58 C. C. A. 381, 122 Fed. 1.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This case was begun by a bill filed in the circuit court of the United States by the Helena Waterworks Company, successor to the Helena Consolidated Water Company, to restrain the city of Helena from erecting, purchasing, or acquiring a waterworks system for said city, and from acquiring water for such purpose, except it purchase the plant of the complainant company, and from incurring any indebtedness or expenditure of money for such purpose.

The rights in controversy are alleged to result from a contract made by the passage,

NOTE.—As to what laws are void as impairing obligation of contracts—see notes to Franklin County Grammar School v. Bailey, 10 L. R. A. 405; Fletcher v. Peck, 3 L. ed. U. S. 162; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 20; Montana Ore Purchasing 195 U. S.

Co. v. Boston & M. Consol. Copper & S. Min. Co. 35 C. C. A. 12.

On the privilege of using streets, as a contract within the constitutional provision against impairing contract obligations—see note to Clarksburg Electric Light Co. v. Clarksburg, 50 L. R. A. 142.

and acceptance by the company, of a certain ordinance, number 248, passed and approved in January, 1890.

It is also alleged that the Helena Consolidated Water Company, predecessor of the complainant company, complied with all the terms of the ordinance, and expended large sums of money in erecting and maintaining the plant for supplying water to the inhabitants of the said city of Helena.

[384] It is averred that the said city has adopted certain ordinances and taken certain proceedings to acquire and build a water *system of its own, and that said ordinances and proceedings are in violation of the contract rights of the complainant company, guaranteed by § 11 of article 3 of the Constitution of the state of Montana, and § 10 of article 1 of the Constitution of the United States, and that the proceedings of the city in this behalf will amount to taking the property of the complainant company without just compensation, in violation of § 14 of article 3 of the Constitution of the state of Montana, and that its rights and property will be taken without due process of law, in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

It is further averred that the taxation necessary for the construction of the city plant is in excess of any that can be lawfully levied for such purpose.

The case was tried upon an agreed statement of facts. In the circuit court a decision was rendered in favor of the water-works company. Upon appeal to the circuit court of appeals that court reversed the decision of the circuit court, and remanded the case, with instructions to dismiss the bill. 58 C. C. A. 381, 122 Fed. 1.

The terms of the ordinance relied upon, and so much of the agreed statement of facts as is necessary to a determination of the case, sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. M. S. Gunn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. B. Platt Carpenter and Stephen Carpenter, filed a brief for appellant:

By virtue of the acceptance of ordinance No. 248, a contract resulted by which appellee agreed that it would not engage in the business of supplying water to its inhabitants during the term of said contract.

The power of the city of Helena to make such a contract cannot be controverted.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

If such contract was made, in view of the action already taken by the city and its avowed intention to become a competitor of appellant the decree of the circuit court was proper, and should have been affirmed by the circuit court of appeals.

Ibid.; Vicksburg Waterworks Co. v. Vicksburg, 185 U. S. 65, 46 L. ed. 808, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585.

The powers of a city are divided into two classes, namely, private and public. In the exercise of its private powers it is regarded the same as a private corporation.

Dill. Mun. Corp. § 66; Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; People ex rel. Park Comrs. v. Detroit, 28 Mich. 228, 15 Am. Rep. 202; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Bailey v. New York, 3 Hill, 531, 38 Am. Dec. 669.

A city in providing its inhabitants with a supply of water exercises its private powers,—sometimes termed its business or proprietary powers.

Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Little Falls Electric & Water Co. v. Little Falls, 102 Fed. 663; Baily v. Philadelphia, 184 Pa. 594, 39 L. R. A. 837, 63 Am. St. Rep. 812, 39 Atl. 494; Western Sav. Fund Soc. v. Philadelphia, 31 Pa. 175, 72 Am. Dec. 730; Lynch v. Springfield, 174 Mass. 430, 54 N. E. 871; Pikes Peak Power Co. v. Colorado Springs, 44 C. C. A. 333, 105 Fed. 1; Aldrich v. Tripp, 11 R. I. 141, 23 Am. Rep. 434; White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 693.

In the construction of contracts made with a municipal corporation in the exercise of its private, proprietary, or business powers, the same rules apply as in the construction of a contract with an individual or private corporation.

Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank v. Arkansas City, 34 L. R. A. 518, 22 C. C. A. 171, 40 U. S. App. 257, 76 Fed. 271; Little Falls Electric & Water Co. v. Little Falls, 102 Fed. 663; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; Huidekoper v. Douglass, 3 Cranch, 1, 2 L. ed. 347.

There is no duty devolving upon complainant, independent of contract, to continue the business of furnishing water. Unless the complainant has contracted not to do so, it has the right to remove its pipes and mains from the streets and abandon the operation of its plant at any time.

San Antonio Street R. Co. v. State, 90 Tex. 520, 35 L. R. A. 662, 59 Am. St. Rep. 834, 39 S. W. 926; State ex rel. Knight v. Helena Power & Light Co. 22 Mont. 391, 44 L. R. A. 692, 56 Pac. 685; York & N. Midland R. Co. v. Queen, 1 El. & Bl. 858; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington, 142 U. S.

492, 35 L. ed. 1092, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 283; Baily v. Philadelphia, 184 Pa. 594, 39 L. R. A. 837, 63 Am. St. Rep. 812, 39 Atl. 494.

Where a city contracts for a supply of water for its inhabitants, or confers the right to furnish water to them, it is precluded from acquiring its own supply and system and engaging in the business of furnishing water to the inhabitants, in competition with the person or company with whom it has contracted.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 95 Fed. 539. See also Westerly Waterworks Co. v. Westerly, 75 Fed. 181; White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 695.

What is implied in a statute, pleading, contract, or will is as much a part of it as what is expressed.

United States v. Babbit, 1 Black, 55, 17 L. ed. 94.

Every contract must be construed as if those terms which the law will imply were expressly introduced into it; and where a contract is so framed that it binds the party contracting to do an act, it will imply a correlative obligation on the other party to do what is necessary on his part to enable the party so contracting to fulfil his part.

Manistee Iron Works Co. v. Shores Lumber Co. 92 Wis. 21, 65 N. W. 863. See also Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal Co. 8 Wall. 288, 19 L. ed. 353; Churchward v. Queen, L. R. 1 Q. B. 195; Coghlan v. Stetson, 22 Blatchf. 88, 19 Fed. 727; St. Louis & D. Land & Min. Co. v. Tierney, 5 Colo. 582.

Assuming that the city had the power at the time of the passage and approval of ordinance No. 248 to acquire a water plant and supply to be owned and controlled by itself, and also to enter into a contract with others for a supply for itself and its inhabitants, having made a contract with the Helena Consolidated Water Company for a supply, its power was exhausted; and it could not acquire a plant and supply during the life of such contract. In other words, it could not adopt both methods, and the adoption of one precluded the adoption of the other.

White v. Meadville, 177 Pa. 643, 34 L. R. A. 567, 35 Atl. 695.

The rule that grants by the legislature or by a municipality are to be strictly construed, and any doubt or ambiguity resolved in favor of the public, which was invoked by the circuit court of appeals in this case, does not apply to a contract which is entered into with a municipality in the exercise of its business or proprietary powers. This rule only applies to the construction of grants by the sovereign power, and then only to such grants as are made without consideration.

3 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. p. 173.

It does not follow, from the fact that the franchise is not exclusive, that the city can compete with appellant.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77.

The fact that in the ordinance involved in the Walla Walla Case there was a provision authorizing the city to purchase or condemn the water supply and system of the Walla Walla Water Company does not distinguish that case from the case at bar, as the right to purchase or condemn existed independently of the provisions of the ordinance regarding the matter.

Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718.

Mr. Edward Horsky argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Edwin W. Toole, Thomas C. Bach, E. C. Day, and R. Lee Word, filed a brief for appellee:

This case is controlled by the decision in Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. ed. 585, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400.

There being no express surrender of the public right of appellee to put in its own plant, but, on the contrary, language used which expressly reserves it, how can any obligation be implied by which this right has passed, and appellee is compelled to desist from bringing in its own plant?

Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, p. 338; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 507, 9 L. ed. 808; Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 380, 17 L. ed. 147, 153; Leavenworth L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 23 L. ed. 634; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 437, 28 L. ed. 321, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 46 Fed. 609, 154 U. S. 288, 38 L. ed. 992, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030.

Neither the facts presented nor the language used in the Walla Walla Case can be said to sustain complainant's claim that the appellee in this case agreed not to erect waterworks of its own.

Wright v. Nagle, 101 U. S. 791, 25 L. ed. 921; Bienville Water Supply Co. v. Mobile, 95 Fed. 539, 175 U. S. 110, 44 L. ed. 92, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40; Iron Mountain R. Co. v. Memphis, 37 C. C. A. 410, 96 Fed. 113; Colby University v. Canandaigua, 96 Fed. 449; Little Falls Electric & Water Co. v. Little Falls, 102 Fed. 667. See also North Springs Water Co. v. Tacoma, 21 Wash. 517, 47 L. R. A. 214, 58 Pac. 773; Thompson-Houston Electric Co. v. Newton, 42 Fed. 723; State v. Hamilton, 47 Ohio St. 52, 23

N. E. 935; Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Long v. Duluth, 49 Minn. 280, 32 Am. St. Rep. 547, 51 N. W. 913; Westerly Waterworks Co. v. Westerly, 80 Fed. 611; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 161 N. Y. 154, 46 L. R. A. 687, 55 N. E. 562.

It can hardly be questioned but that, when this appellee granted complainant the franchise contained in ordinance No. 248, it acted as the agent of the state in granting a franchise vested in the state.

Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77; New Orleans Waterworks Co. v. Rivers, 115 U. S. 680, 681, 29 L. ed. 527, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Austin v. Bartholomew, 46 C. C. A. 327, 107 Fed. 349.

And in the construction of all such grants and franchises the rule is well settled that the grant or privilege must be clearly conferred, and that all doubts and implications will be resolved against the grant or privilege claimed, and in favor of the grantor.

Bartholomew v. Austin, 29 C. C. A. 568, 52 U. S. App. 512, 85 Fed. 359; Richmond, F. & P. R. Co. v. Louisa R. Co. 13 How. 71, 81, 14 L. ed. 55, 60; Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 1 Black, 358, 380, 17 L. ed. 147, 153; Stein v. Bienville Water Supply Co. 141 U. S. 67, 80, 35 L. ed. 622, 627, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 892. To the same effect are Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 325, 326, 38 L. ed. 992, 1001, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 696, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit R. Co. 171 U. S. 48, 43 L. ed. 67, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 732; Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 180 U. S. 587, 45 L. ed. 679, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 493.

There is here a franchise contract by which the appellant is allowed to furnish water to the inhabitants, if they desire to take it, at the maximum rate fixed. This brings the question involved squarely within the decision of this court in Joplin v. Southwest Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. ed. 127, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

As the ordinance under consideration contains no express stipulation that the city shall not build a plant of its own to supply water for public and private purposes, and the grant is expressly declared not to be exclusive of the right to contract with another company, this case, unless it can be distinguished, is ruled by recent decisions of this court. Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685-696, 41 L. ed. 1165-1168, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718; Joplin v. [388]

Southwestern Missouri Light Co. 191 U. S. 150, 48 L. ed. 127, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Skaneateles Waterworks Co. v. Skaneateles, 184 U. S. 354, 46 L. ed. 585, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 400. These cases hold that the grant of the franchise does not of itself raise an implied contract that the grantor will not do any act to interfere with the rights granted to the waterworks company, and that, in the absence of the grant of an exclusive privilege, none will be implied against the public, but must arise, if at all, from some specific contract, binding upon the municipality.

As stated by appellant's counsel: "The position taken by appellants is, that by ordinance 248 the city has precluded itself from engaging in the commercial business of furnishing water to its inhabitants. We maintain that by the contract contained in this ordinance the Helena Consolidated Water Company [predecessor of appellant] for itself, its successors, and assigns, expressly agreed to furnish water to all of the inhabitants of the city during the term of twenty years; and that by reason of the contractual obligation thus assumed by the company there is the implied promise or undertaking on the part of the city that it will not, during such period, become a competitor of appellant." A consideration of this contention requires an examination of the sections of the ordinance pertinent to a determination of the question:

"Sec. 1. There is hereby granted to the Helena Consolidated Water Company, and its successors and assigns, for the full term of twenty years from the passage hereof, the license and franchise of laying and maintaining water mains and pipes in and through all of the streets, alleys, avenues, and public grounds of the city of Helena for the purpose of conveying and distributing water throughout the said city, and for the purpose of selling the same to all persons, bodies, or corporations within the said city desiring to purchase the same, and to said city for fire, sewerage, and other purposes, in case said city desires to purchase the same, subject, however, to the provisions of this ordinance, hereinafter contained, establishing maximum rates, and generally to have and exercise all the rights, privileges, and franchises necessary to the proper and successful furnishing of water to the inhabitants of said city if required; provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to give to the said Helena Consolidated Water Company, or its successors or assigns, the exclusive right of occupying the streets, avenues, alleys, and public grounds of said city with water mains and pipes, or the exclusive right of conveying, distributing, or selling the same [389] throughout the said city, or of furnishing the same to said city, except as hereinafter set forth."

"Sec. 3. All pipes and mains, including service pipes connected therewith, shall be laid at the depth of 5 feet below the established grade, and shall be laid under the supervision of the street commissioner of said city as to grade and location in streets; and all repairs and extensions of such pipes and mains shall be done under the supervision of said street commissioner as to grade and location in streets. Nothing contained herein shall preclude said city of Helena from regrading or changing the grade of any street or streets within said city, or from the construction or maintenance of sewer work, or other works or plants of a public nature, or from letting, giving, or granting any franchises, rights, or easements to any person or persons, corporation or corporations, whomsoever, so long as such franchises, rights, and easements do not interfere with the franchises, rights, and easements hereby granted. And that said Helena Consolidated Water Company must and shall look solely and exclusively to the person or persons, corporation or corporations, to whom such franchises, rights, and easements have been given by said city for any and all damages the said Helena Consolidated Water Company may *sustain by reason of any interference with any of its pipes, mains, or hydrants, or any exposure of the same caused by such person or persons, corporation or corporations."

"Sec. 6. The said Helena Consolidated Water Company shall furnish and provide a full, ample, and sufficient supply of good, pure, wholesome, and clear water for the use and wants of the inhabitants of said city, and to provide said city with water for fire, sewerage (maintenance and construction), and for other purposes; and such supply shall be full, ample, and sufficient for the present population of said city, and for the future population of the said city, as the same may be from time to time during the full term of five years; and said water shall be pure, wholesome, and free from animal, vegetable, or mineral substances, such as would render it unhealthy or unfit for domestic use."

"Sec. 26. It is hereby declared and understood to be of the essence of the agreement and the acceptance hereof that the said Helena Consolidated Water Company shall, at all times during the term of such agreement, provide all the inhabitants of the city, whatever their number may be, with a full, ample, and sufficient supply of good, pure, and wholesome and clear water, and shall convey, distribute, and sell to them upon the terms and conditions herein provided and expressed."

By § 8 the company was required to provide 20 miles of mains within the limits of the city, and by § 10 the company was required to lay and maintain additional mains, of such sizes, at such times, and upon such streets as the city council might, from time to time, direct. Section 17 provided that the company shall not refuse to permit connections to be made by, or to sell water to, persons offering to pay for the same.

Section 16 of the ordinance fixes maximum rates for water to be furnished to the inhabitants of the city. Section 21 makes appropriation for the term of five years from and after January 1, 1890, of certain sums for hydrants and the use of water for the benefit of the city. By the 1st section *of [391] the ordinance, the company is granted the use of the streets, alleys, and avenues and public grounds of the city for the laying and maintenance of its pipes and mains for the purpose of conveying water and selling it to those "desiring" to purchase the same, and to the city for fire and other purposes in case the city "desires to purchase the same."

Certainly, there is nothing in this section that savors of a contract beyond the obligation imposed upon the company, in consideration of the franchise and privileges granted, to furnish water at certain maximum rates to private persons or to the city, when such persons or the municipality desire to purchase the same. When we come to consider § 6 we find an engagement whereby the obligation of the company to furnish water to the city is limited to the term of five years; and in § 21 we find an appropriation made to cover the compensation to be paid by the city for the term of five years for the use of water for public purposes. If these sections can be construed to amount to a contract between the city and the company, binding the city to take its entire supply of water from this company for five years, which would be broken by the erection or building of a plant by the city to supply itself with water, it had expired before the beginning of this suit, and the contract, if it existed after the expiration of the term named in § 6, must be found in other sections of the ordinance. The contention is that, as by § 26 the water company was bound during the term of the agreement, which, it is claimed, is twenty years, to provide all the inhabitants of the city, whatever their number, with a water supply, this contract will be impaired, and its benefits to the company destroyed, if the city should erect an independent plant of its own. But, in our view, this section must be read with § 1, which requires the company to furnish water to such inhabitants of the city as desire to purchase the same; and there is nothing in this agreement which binds the city to take water from the company beyond the term of five years, expressly provided in § 6, and for which, upon specific [392] *terms as to prices, an appropriation was made in § 21. There is nothing in § 26 nor in § 1 undertaking to bind the inhabitants of the city to take water from the company. The city has not and, of course, could not undertake to make any contract upon the subject for the private supply of individuals in the city beyond securing a maximum rate of charge for water supplied. The engagement for their benefit requires the company, during the term of the franchise, to supply water at not exceeding certain maximum prices, which were fixed by the ordinance. Properly construed, we think this ordinance shows an agreement upon the part of the company to furnish water to the inhabitants of the city at not exceeding certain maximum rates, and to the city itself, upon terms to be agreed upon, made definite, as far as the city was concerned, for the term of five years. As thus interpreted we do not find anything in this contract that prevents the city, certainly after the expiration of five years, from constructing its own plant. It has not specifically bound itself not so to do, and, as has been frequently held in this court, nothing is to be taken against the public by implication. Hamilton Gaslight & Coke Co. v. Hamilton, 146 U. S. 258, 36 L. ed. 963, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Long Island Water Supply Co. v. Brooklyn, 166 U. S. 685, 41 L. ed. 1165, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 718, and cases cited in the opinion. Had it been intended to exclude the city from exercising the privilege of establishing its own plant, such purpose could have been expressed by apt words, as was the case in Walla Walla v. Walla Walla Water Co. 172 U. S. 1, 43 L. ed. 341, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 77. It is doubtless true that the erection of such a plant by the city will render the property of the water company less valuable, and perhaps, unprofitable; but if it was intended to prevent such competition, a right to do so should not have been left to argument or implication, but made certain by the terms of the contract. The right to tax within certain limits to procure a supply of water for the municipality, which shall be owned and controlled by the city, is authorized by the Constitution of Montana, article 13, § 6. Paragraph 4800 of the Political Code of

[393] Montana provides for the carrying into *effect of this constitutional power to tax for a system of waterworks to be owned and controlled by the municipality. The feature of the law requiring the purchase of existing waterworks instead of building an independent plant by the city was held unconstitutional by the supreme court of Montana in Helena Consol. Water Co. v. Steele, 20 Mont. 1, 37 L. R. A. 412, 49 Pac. 382.

The privilege of building other works was, in the absence of some binding contract forbidding the exercise of the power, clearly within the city's constitutional and statutory rights. We cannot find that the city has precluded itself from exercising this right by anything shown in this case. This conclusion renders it unnecessary to decide whether the city's right to construct a plant of its own was expressly saved in § 3 of the ordinance reserving the right to construct and maintain "sewer work, or other works of a public nature."

This action is also brought by the water company as a taxpayer; and it is claimed that the city had no right to acquire a water supply and build its waterworks except by acquiring the plant of the company.

In the findings of fact it was expressly stipulated:

"That the city of Helena contemplates and intends to do all acts and things necessary to secure a water supply and system to be owned and controlled by the said city of Helena, and that it contemplates and intends to raise funds and revenue therefor in the manner provided by law, and to use the same for said purpose, and to furnish and supply the city of Helena and the inhabitants thereof with water from its said plant, and that it contemplates and intends to purchase and secure a sufficient quantity of water for said purpose, and that complainant does not obtain any of its water supply from either Beaver, McClellen, or Prickly Pear creeks.

"That the ordinances Nos. 467 and 483, mentioned in paragraph 27 of the complainant's bill of complaint, were duly passed and adopted and approved, and that unless said defendant, the city of Helena, is enjoined and restrained from acquiring a water supply, plant, and system, it will proceed *to acquire the same under said [394] ordinances or such others as are necessary for said purpose, as hereinbefore stated, and will engage in furnishing the said defendant, the city of Helena, and its inhabitants, with water, suitable and proper for its use, and that to do so will depreciate the value of complainant's franchise and property, as stated in paragraph 28 of the complaint, but that no injury of which complainant can complain will result therefrom if defendant city has the rights claimed by it. . . . That the revenue for said purpose will be created and raised by borrowing money or raising funds within the limit of indebtedness, as heretofore or hereafter to be extended, in accordance with the requirements of the Constitution and provisions of the statutes of the state of Montana in that behalf, unless it shall be adjudged that it has no legal or equitable right to do so, on account of the facts and admission hereinbefore stated and made."

We agree with the circuit court of appeals that, by this stipulation, the controversy was narrowed to the question of the right of the city to erect and maintain an independent plant of its own, in view of the alleged contract rights of the complainant. For that purpose, if it has the right so to do, it is conceded "it contemplates to raise funds and revenues therefor in the manner provided by law," and will raise revenues within the limits of indebtedness authorized by the Constitution and laws of Montana. This concession renders it unnecessary to notice the allegations of the complaint as to the right to tax for the purpose of erecting such works, or the alleged invalidity of any method of acquiring waterworks for the city except by purchase from the complainant.

Judgment affirmed.

[395] *JOHN F. HILL, Plff. in Err.,

v.

WARREN E. McCORD.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 395-408.)

Courts—conclusiveness of findings of fact—public lands—confirmation of premature commutation entry.

1. The conclusiveness on the courts of a finding of the Land Department, made in allowing a homestead entry, of the sufficiency of settlement, residence, and improvements, is not affected by a later decision, in a second contest between the same parties, that the alienation of the land was a bar to supplemental proofs offered in aid of a premature commutation entry.
2. A finding of a state court that, when a commutation entry under the homestead laws was allowed, neither the entryman nor the land officers had actual knowledge of the amendment of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2301, by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1098, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1406), which made such commutation premature, is a finding of fact, and, therefore, conclusive on the Federal Supreme Court, on a writ of error to the state court.

NOTE.—On the conclusiveness and effect of the decisions of Land Department—see notes to Hartman v. Warren, 22 C. C. A. 38; Carson City Gold & S. Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. 28 C. C. A. 344; Uinta Tunnel Min. & Transp. Co. v. Creede & C. C. Min. & Mill. Co. 57 C. C. A. 207.

On what questions the Federal Supreme
195 U. S.

3. The right to confirmation under the act of June 3, 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 197, chap. 312, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1409), of a commutation entry under the homestead laws, which was only invalid because prematurely made, in actual ignorance of the amendment of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 2301, by the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 1098, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1406), is not defeated by the entryman's subsequent efforts to protect his grantees by taking a reconveyance, and resliding again upon the land, for the purpose of enabling him to make proof to secure the title for them.

[No. 49.]

Argued November 3, 4, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Wisconsin, to review a decree affirming a decree of the Circuit Court of Douglas County, in that State, in favor of plaintiff, in a suit to establish a trust in certain real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 117 Wis. 306, 94 N. W. 65.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This was a suit in equity commenced in the circuit court of Douglas county, Wisconsin, by Warren E. McCord, to obtain a decree adjudging the defendant, now plaintiff in error, John F. Hill, the holder of the legal title to the northwest quarter of section seventeen, in township forty-eight north, of range eight west, in Bayfield county, Wisconsin, in trust for the plaintiff. A demurrer to an amended complaint was sustained by the circuit court, but this ruling was reversed by the supreme court of the state. 111 Wis. 499, 84 N. W. 27, 85 N. W. 145, 87 N. W. 481. Thereafter an answer was filed, a hearing had, resulting in a decree for the plaintiff, which was affirmed by the supreme court (117 Wis. 306, 94 N. W. 65), and thence the case was brought here on error.

The following facts were found by the trial court, and the findings were sustained by the supreme court: One Philip W. Jacobus made an actual settlement on the land in controversy on January 28, 1891, and actually established his residence thereon February 4. The land was not opened for entry until February 23, 1891, and on that day Jacobus made application at the local land office to enter it as a homestead. On Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On the rights acquired by homestead settlements and entries on public lands of the United States—see note to McCune v. Essig, 59 C. C. A. 434.

the same day Hill filed a soldier's declaratory statement for the same tract. A contest was had before the local land officers, resulting in a decision in favor of Jacobus. On [396] appeal *to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, this decision was affirmed. Hill's declaratory statement was canceled, and the entry of Jacobus allowed on July 6, 1892. On September 20, 1892, Jacobus commuted his homestead entry, making and filing in good faith due, regular, and truthful proofs of settlement, occupation, and improvements, paying $400, and receiving a receiver's receipt and a certificate of entry certifying that he had purchased the land, had made full payment, and was entitled, on presentation of the certificate to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, to receive a patent.

On December 27, 1892, McCord and one Daniel McLeod purchased the land in good faith of Jacobus, paying him the sum of $4,250, and receiving a warranty deed. The negotiations between these grantees and Jacobus commenced on or about December 17, 1892, and prior to that time they had no interest in the land, and had no negotiations with him. While negotiating with Jacobus they asked Hill, at the time residing on a part of the tract, whether he had any claim upon the land, and whether Jacobus had good title thereto; and Hill then and there said to them that he had been fairly beaten in his contest with Jacobus, that he had no claim, and that if McCord and McLeod would buy the tract he would make no claim. At that time Hill knew that they were looking at the land with a view of purchasing it from Jacobus, and that the inquiry was made of him with reference to that purchase; and they did in fact rely upon Hill's statement, and purchased the land and paid for the same by reason thereof.

A few days after the deed, and on January 4, 1893, for the purpose of putting the understanding between themselves and Hill in writing, the grantees had this instrument executed and acknowledged by Hill:

For the purpose of making a settlement with John F. Hill, and his relinquishment on the N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of section 17, township 48, range 8 W., we hereby make him a present of a certain lot of logs, now skidded on said land, and give him permission till the 1st day of May, A. D. 1893, in which to enter on [397] said land to remove said logs, and to occupy the house on said land, and to remain on said land until that date, but not thereafter. Said logs amount to about 30,000 feet; and he agrees not to cut, nor allow any of his men to cut or destroy, any other timber. And in consideration of said logs, I, John F.

252

Hill, being duly sworn, on oath, says that he is the man who made a soldier's application for said N. W. $\frac{1}{4}$ of 17-48-8 W.; and I make this affidavit for the purpose of relinquishing all my right, title, and interest in and to said claim, which I do unto the United States. Signed, sealed, and delivered and agreed upon this 4th day of January, A. D. 1893. Daniel McLeod.

In presence of— W. E. McCord. [Seal.]
W. H. Packard. John F. Hill. [Seal.]
Tracy Lyon.

Prior to the commutation, and on March 3, 1891, Congress had passed an act amending § 2301 of the Revised Statutes so as to read as follows:

"Nothing in this chapter shall be so construed as to prevent any person who shall hereafter avail himself of the benefits of § 2289 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1388), from paying the minimum price for the quantity of land so entered, at any time after the expiration of fourteen calendar months from the date of such entry, and obtaining a patent therefor, upon making proof of settlement and of residence and cultivation for such period of fourteen months." 26 Stat. at L. 1098, chap. 561, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1406.

Neither Jacobus nor the land officers had any actual knowledge or information of this enactment at the time of the commutation. On May 15, 1893, the Assistant Commissioner of the General Land Office of the United States, having had his attention called to the act, notified Jacobus that he must furnish supplemental proofs showing residence and cultivation for a period of fourteen months subsequent to July 6, 1892, together with an affidavit that he had not alienated the land. Of course, compliance with this was impossible, for Jacobus had already made a conveyance. On September 1, *1893, [398] McCord and McLeod, with their wives, made to Jacobus a deed of conveyance of the land for an expressed consideration of $4,300, and Jacobus at the same time executed to them a mortgage upon the lands to secure the payment of the purchase money. On or about September 12, 1893, Jacobus caused to be made and filed in the local land office, in response to the order of supplemental proofs, certain affidavits and proofs, from which it appeared that the land was conveyed to McCord and McLeod and reconveyed, as hereinbefore stated; that Jacobus retained 2 acres of the land, and shortly after the sale of the said premises, and on or about February 20, 1893, he again went upon the land, and from that time up to the time of the filing of the affidavits continued to reside upon and improve the land. It did not appear that the purpose of the reconveyance and the return of Jacobus to the land was to obtain a title for the benefit of McCord and McLeod.

On or about September 30, 1893, Hill filed in the local land office contest affidavits and objections to the receiving of said offered supplemental proofs. A hearing was had upon this contest and a large number of witnesses sworn. On August 9, 1894, the local land officers decided the contest in favor of Hill, and filed an opinion, in which they held that the residence of Jacobus up to the time of the sale and conveyance to McCord and McLeod in December, 1892, was fairly satisfactory, but that his residence after the sale and conveyance was for the sole purpose of enabling him to make proof to secure title for them, and that the land was reconveyed to him for that purpose alone. On appeal to the Commissioner of the General Land Office the findings of the local land officers were affirmed. On further appeal to the Secretary of the Interior the prior decisions were, on April 28, 1896, affirmed without any restatement of facts. On June 3, 1896, Congress passed an act containing the following provisions (29 Stat. at L. 197, chap. 312, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1409):

[399] "That whenever it shall appear to the Commissioner of the General Land Office that an error has heretofore been made by the officers of any local land office in receiving premature *commutation proofs under the homestead laws, and that there was no fraud practised by the entryman in making such proofs, and final payment has been made and a final certificate of entry has been issued to the entryman, and that there are no adverse claimants to the land described in the certificates of entry, whose rights originated prior to making such final proofs, and that no other reason why the title should not vest in the entryman exists except that the commutation was made less than fourteen months from the date of the homestead settlement, and that there was at least six months' actual residence in good faith by the homestead entryman on the land prior to such commutation, such certificates of entry shall be in all things confirmed to the entryman, his heirs and legal representatives, as of the date of such final certificate of entry, and a patent issue thereon; and the title so patented shall inure to the benefit of any grantee or transferee in good faith of such entryman subsequent to the date of such final certificate; Provided, That this act shall not apply to commutation and homestead entries on which final certificates have been issued, and which have heretofore been canceled, when the lands made vacant by such cancelation have been re-entered under the homestead act.

195 U. S.

"Sec. 2. That all commutations of homestead entries shall be allowed after the expiration of fourteen months from date of settlement."

Thereupon Jacobus made a motion before the Secretary of the Interior for a review of the decision of April 28, 1896, and also to confirm his entry under the authority of said act of June, 1896, which motions were denied. A patent was subsequently issued to Hill.

Mr. W. F. Bailey argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. H. Stafford, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Louis K. Luse argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Lyman T. Powell and A. L. Sanborn, filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brewer* delivered the opinion. [400] ion of the court:

There are two well-settled rules of decision, invoked respectively by the parties. One, that findings of fact made by the Land Department in the progress of a contest before it are conclusive upon the courts; the other, that questions of fact decided by a state court are not subject to review by this court in proceedings on error.

Upon the record these questions of fact and law appear: First. Was the original entry allowed to Jacobus on July 6, 1892, rightful? In other words, was his evidence of settlement, occupation, and good faith true, and, if so, did it entitle him to priority over Hill, his contestant? Second. If that entry was valid, was the commutation entry made on September 20, 1892, illegal? Third. If so, was the defect which invalidated it subject to removal under the act of June 3, 1896? Fourth. If removable, was there anything in the conduct of Jacobus or his grantees after the original entry to prevent the removal?

With reference to the first question, it appears that the original entry to Jacobus followed a contest between himself and Hill. In that contest testimony was taken before the local land officers upon the question whether Jacobus had performed the acts required of a settler upon public lands, and, upon a review, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on April 29, 1892, found in favor of his settlement, residence, and improvements, and allowed the entry. No appeal was taken from this decision, and if nothing else appeared the findings would obviously be conclusive in the courts as between Jacobus and Hill. It is undoubtedly true that, until the legal title has passed from the government, proceedings in the land office are in fieri, and a question, whether of fact or law, may be reopened for consideration. Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589-592, 42

L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, and cases cited. It is insisted that the validity [401] of the original entry was relitigated *in the land office in pursuance of the contest made by Hill in October, 1893, and a different conclusion reached. While the power of re-examination is not to be doubted, yet a decision upon a question of fact, once made in a special proceeding finally terminated, should not be regarded as overthrown by findings in a subsequent proceeding in the Department unless it appears that those findings directly overrule, or are necessarily inconsistent with, the prior decision. The application of Hill, in 1893, to contest the entry of Jacobus, charged as a basis of contest that Jacobus never settled on the land in good faith, but for the purpose of speculation; that he did not reside on the land during the next six months preceding the making of his final proof, and that he had sold the land to one W. E. McCord. A hearing was had upon this contest before the local land officers, and quite a volume of testimony taken. Their decision was adverse to Jacobus. It was affirmed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and reaffirmed by the Secretary of the Interior. In their decision the local land officers stated the questions to be considered in these words:

"Letter 'H' of November 18, 1893, directed this office to order a hearing on the charges.

"The two questions to be passed upon are: (1) Did Jacobus abandon the land? (2) Was the sale of the land to McCord and McLeod a bar to the offering of supplemental proof?"

And upon the first question they found as follows:

"Upon the first point the testimony of the witness is extremely conflicting. It is admitted by Jacobus that he worked at his trade in Superior and Iron River most of the time during his occupancy of the land, but it seems also fairly well established by the testimony of Mrs. Jacobus and numerous other witnesses that her residence was upon the land, barring certain absences on account of sickness and visits. Their cabin and its housekeeping equipment were superior to those of most homesteaders, and the clear- [402] ing, in extent and *cultivation, compared favorably with that of others in the same neighborhood.

"After learning that supplemental proof would probably be required, Mrs. Jacobus returned to the land in February, 1893, where she remained about a week, when she returned to Iron River and remained for some weeks while being treated for rheumatism. She made a brief visit to the claim in March, went there again in the latter part of May, remaining two weeks, and returned for the same time in July. This was apparently her last stay upon the land until after supplemental proof was offered, September 20. A small crop of vegetables and hay was raised that season, as in the two years before.

"Upon the whole, the residence of Jacobus upon the land was fairly satisfactory until after the offering of his first proof; but it is clear that his subsequent residence was for the sole purpose of enabling him to make proof in order to secure title for his transferees."

After this they considered the effect of the sale of the land to McCord and McLeod, and in so doing commented upon the character of the occupation by Jacobus and his wife during the spring and summer of 1893, closing with a decision in these words: "We are of the opinion therefore, that Jacobus' supplemental proof cannot be sustained, and that the entry should be canceled and a preference right of entry awarded the contestant, Hill."

Apparently the character of the occupation and improvements by Jacobus prior to the original entry of July 6, 1892, was not a matter considered by the local land officers, although it is true that there was some testimony respecting it. They did not pretend to disturb the approval of the sufficiency of Jacobus' occupation and improvements made in allowing that entry after the conclusion of the original contest between Hill and Jacobus. They assumed that that matter was already settled. This is evident from the two questions which they say were presented, and if they considered it at all, they doubtless *thought the testimony was not [403] such as to justify any change in the previous conclusion. This decision was affirmed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office. In his opinion, after reciting the contest, the decision, and the grounds of appeal, the fact of the commutation of the homestead entry, the direction to Jacobus to furnish supplemental proof, as the commutation was premature, he says:

"It is shown by the evidence that defendant had a small log house on the land; that it was well finished and well furnished; that he had about 2 acres cleared; that the improvements were worth about $200. He did not have any stock of any description, no chickens or other poultry; that on December 27, 1892, defendant sold said land to David McLeod and W. E. McCord for $4,250 cash.

"On the question of residence the testimony is very conflicting.

"Defendant's wife stayed on the land a part of the time and defendant worked in his barber shop in the town of Iron River, and stayed there nearly all the time, working at his trade; he made occasional visits to the land on the Sabbath day.

"It also appears that the defendant rented three rooms in Iron River after he had sold the land, and he, with his wife, moved into them; that after defendant learned that he was required to furnish supplemental proof, because his commutation was premature, his wife moved back to the land, but defendant still remained in Iron River, making occasional visits to the land on the Sabbath and returning the same day."

Obviously the time of occupation referred to was after the commutation. This is made clear by a comparison of this opinion with that of the local land officers. If other grounds were relied on than those stated in the opinion of the local land officers, they would have been distinctly stated, and the fact that the decision was based upon the character of the occupation and improvements prior to the original entry would [404] have been made clear. This conclusion is strengthened by the final declaration of the Commissioner:

"The sale and conveyance of the land is clearly proven, and it is also as clearly shown that the land was reconveyed to defendant so that he could submit his final supplemental proof for the benefit of McLeod and McCord; hence your opinion is affirmed."

This decision of the Commissioner of the General Land Office was sustained by the Secretary of the Interior in an opinion which contains no recital of facts, but simply says:

"Said decision fairly sets forth all the facts in this case, and the conclusion therein reached is sustained by the testimony, and is in conformity with law and the decisions of the Department, and is hereby affirmed."

In the final opinion of the supreme court of the state is this statement:

"We still think it plain, therefore, that no questions involving Jacobus' proceedings up to and including the final proof of September, 1892, were passed upon in the consideration of the contest had in 1894. Indeed, this seems to be the view of appellant's counsel as well, for he declares in his brief that 'no question of mala fides was found in the making of proofs [of September, 1892], nor was the subject considered. Simply from the evidence, which was the same as the affidavits, they determined the second question which they stated at the outset, that the sale of the land to McCord and McLeod was a bar to the offering of supplemental proof.'" [117 Wis. 313, 94 N. W. 67.]

While no such admission is found in the brief filed in this court, possibly the omission may have been induced by the stress of the case.

We agree, therefore, with that court, that there is nothing in the record to justify a conclusion that the Land Department ever changed its finding, made in allowing the original entry, of the sufficiency of Jacobus' occupation and improvements up to that time.

It is also worthy of notice in passing that the supreme court, in its opinion, held that [405] the representations and instrument made and executed by Hill estopped him from questioning the validity of the original entry, so far, at least, as against the plaintiff, although they would not bar the United States from reclaiming the land.

We proceed, therefore, to a consideration of the other questions. At the time the commutation was allowed neither Jacobus nor the land officers had actual knowledge of the act of March 3, 1891. Such is the finding of the state court, and, being a question of fact, this finding is conclusive. Prior thereto a commutation made as this was would have been valid, and there is neither finding nor testimony that Jacobus or the land officers acted in bad faith in the matter. There was simply a proceeding, theretofore legal and proper, taken in actual ignorance of a restraining statute. The act of 1896 was obviously passed to reach such a case as this, in which a commutation was allowed within less than fourteen months from the date of the homestead entry, and to do away with the objection on account of the matter of time. Certain provisions were incorporated in order to prevent injustice to other parties. But, as between the government and the entryman, its purpose was to give validity to the commutation if it would have been valid had not the act of 1891 been passed.

Upon what ground did the Land Department set aside the commutation entry, and afterwards refuse to reinstate it? The original entry was July 6; the commutation September 20,—not three months thereafter. The act of 1891 allowed commutation only fourteen months or over after the entry. The commutation, therefore, was illegal. Within less than six months after the original entry, and four months after the commutation, Jacobus sold and conveyed the land, and his grantees became thereafter the parties solely interested. Pre-emption and homestead entries by statute must be made for the exclusive use and benefit of the parties making the entries (Rev. Stat. §§ 2262, 2290), and in each case an affidavit to that effect is required. Whatever Jacobus did after his conveyance in December, 1892, was not for his [406] exclusive use and benefit. He attempted to get around the limitations and requirement of the statute by taking a reconveyance from his grantees, giving to them, at the same time, a mortgage to secure the consideration stated in the deed, and by an affidavit stating that, at the time of his conveyance, in December, he reserved about 2 acres of land where his house and other improvements were located, and that when he heard of the act requiring fourteen months' residence before commutation he again took possession of the tract, and continued in occupation and cultivation. This was held insufficient to avoid the restraint of the statute, and upon this ground the commutation entry was set aside. The local land officers, in their opinion, say:

"The bare statement of facts points to the conclusion that the sale of the land in December, 1892, was absolute, and that the subsequent residence of Jacobus upon the land was as the agent of the transferees, and for the purpose of acquiring title for them. This conclusion is strongly supported by the admission of Jacobus upon cross-examination.

"Jacobus, by the deed executed in December, 1892, divested himself of all right and title to the land. Granting, therefore, that the reconveyance of September 1st, 1893, was made in good faith by all parties, the slender residence of the wife, during the spring and summer of 1893, was not upon the homestead of Jacobus, but upon land in which he had no claim or interest, and the residence, such as it was, could not avail him in making supplemental proof. But we think all the circumstances—the time at which the conveyance from McCord and McLeod to Jacobus was made, the execution of the mortgage, and the evidence of Jacobus himself—show that the land was not reconveyed to Jacobus in good faith, but for the sole purpose of enabling him to make supplemental proof for the benefit of his grantees. We are of the opinion, therefore, that Jacobus' supplemental proof cannot be sustained, and that the entry should be canceled, and a [107] preference right *of entry awarded to the contestant, Hill."

While the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in his opinion, concludes:

"The sale and conveyance of the land is clearly proven, and it is also clearly shown that the land was reconveyed to defendant so that he could submit his final supplemental proof for the benefit of McLeod and McCord; hence, your opinion is affirmed, and defendant's homestead and his cash entry for the land involved is held for cancellation."

While these opinions may have correctly declared the law as it stood when they were delivered, we may remark, in passing, that Jacobus seems to have acted in an honest effort to protect his grantees from the consequences of a mistake made by himself and the local land officers at the time of the commutation.

When the act of 1896 was passed the matter was still pending in the Department, and no entry had been made by Hill. The motions by Jacobus for a review and to confirm his entry were denied by the Secretary of the Interior, the ground of the decision being, as stated in a communication to the Commissioner of the General Land Office:

"The evidence in the cases at bar clearly shows that the entry was not made in good faith, and the proof submitted by the entryman was fraudulent, as fully set out in your office decision of January 23, 1895.

"It is likewise impossible to confirm the entry under the provisions of the act of June 3, 1896, for the same reason; namely, the practice of fraud in making proofs."

The reference in this to the decision of the Commissioner makes it clear that the fraud and the want of good faith mentioned were in the commutation entry and the supplemental proofs. Evidently the Secretary ruled that the act of 1896 did not confirm a previous premature commutation entry if the entryman was guilty of any fraud or wrong subsequent thereto in attempting to make good the title acquired thereby. We do not so understand the law. If, at the time of the commutation *entry, there had [408] been no fraud or lack of good faith, and the only defect was in the matter of time, we do not think the confirmation authorized by the act of 1896 is destroyed by anything like that shown to have been done by Jacobus in his effort to protect the title he had conveyed to McCord and McLeod. In other words, if the commutation entry was rightful save for the fact that it was premature, the act of 1896 does away with that objection and confirms the entry; and the right to that confirmation is not destroyed by that which the entryman may have done in a subsequent effort to protect his title.

We see no error in the proceedings, and the judgment is affirmed.

FANNIE N. DRESSER CRAMER et al.,
Plffs. in Err.,
v.

FRÉDÉRIC R. WILSON, Def. in Err.

(Sec S. C. Reporter's ed. 408-417.)

Error to state court—Federal question—constitutional law—full faith and credit.

1. The contention that a conveyance was either in fraud of creditors under the state law, or that a residuary estate remained in the grantor which would pass under an as-

NOTE.—On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On conclusiveness of judgments generally—see notes to Sharon v. Terry, 1 L. R. A. 572; signee's sale in proceedings in bankruptcy, presents a local, and not a Federal, question, and cannot, therefore, be considered by the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to a state court.

2. Full faith and credit are not denied an order of a court of bankruptcy refusing to set aside the sale by an assignee, for inadequacy of price and want of notice of sale, by the refusal to treat such order as res judicata as to the bankrupt's interest in the property, where the order of sale directed the assignee to sell simply "the interest of such bankrupt and of said assignee," without attempting to adjudicate the amount of that interest, if any.

[No. 47.]

Submitted November 3, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which, on a second writ of error, affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Cook County in that State in favor of defendant, in a suit to establish title to real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 202 Ill. 83, 66 N. E. 869; on first writ of error, 152 Ill. 387, 38 N. E. 888.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a bill originally filed February 1, 1888, in the superior court of Cook county [409] by the plaintiff in error, Cramer,* under her then name of Fannie N. Dresser, against her sister, Lilly B. Dresser, Henry H. Gage, Julia Wilson, and two others for the partition of certain real estate in Chicago, for a settlement of equities or liens thereon, for a receiver, and for the removal of certain clouds upon complainant's title.

The material facts of the case are as follows: Shortly before the beginning of this suit Fannie N. Dresser was the record owner of the property in question through a patent from the United States. On January 31, 1888, the day before this suit was commenced, Fannie N. Dresser conveyed to her sister, Lilly B. Dresser, an undivided one third of the property in question. The court found this deed to have been collusive, and executed by an arrangement with the defendant Gage, who held certain tax deeds to the premises, found to be invalid, and for the purpose of filing this bill for partition, and the removal of a cloud upon the title caused by another tax deed, acquired by Frederick R. Wilson in 1864. His interest in the property was conveyed by him to his sister, Julia Wilson, in 1877. Julia Wilson was made defendant to the bill as the owner of this tax title.

It appeared, however, that Julia Wilson died on December 15, 1887, leaving Frederick R. Wilson her sole legatee and executor. The suit was then abated as to Julia Wilson, and Frederick R. Wilson was substituted as defendant in her place. The deed to this property from Frederick R. Wilson to his sister was a conditional conveyance, but by agreement of the parties it was subsequently treated by them as absolute; and upon the death of Julia Wilson, in December, 1887, the property again became vested in Frederick R. Wilson as her only heir at law and next of kin, and as her sole devisee under her last will and testament. Shortly after the deed to Julia, Frederick R. Wilson went into bankruptcy (August 30, 1878), and Robert E. Jenkins was appointed his assignee. The property was subsequently ordered to be sold, and in 1889 was purchased from the assignee by one Taylor E. Snow for the sum of $250. Both Jenkins, the assignee, and Snow, the purchaser, were *made parties defendant to the [410] bill, and subsequently filed answers and a cross bill.

It appeared that Gage, after the beginning of the suit, bought the interest of Lilly B. Dresser, and also that the purchase by Snow at the bankruptcy sale was made in his interest; so that the real parties to this litigation are Gage upon one side and Wilson upon the other.

Upon the first hearing, the court entered a decree of partition denying Wilson's claim of title, and holding that his interest passed to Snow by the assignee's sale. This decree was reversed by the supreme court of Illinois upon the ground that the plaintiff had not proved her title from the government to the property. Leave was given the parties to amend, and subsequently an amended bill was filed and answered. Upon the second hearing, the court held that the premises were the property of Frederick R. Wilson, and had been his from 1864 until 1877, when he conveyed them to his sister; that at the time of bankruptcy proceedings, in 1878, the title was in Julia Wilson, and that upon the death of Julia Wilson, in 1887, the title again vested in Frederick R. Wilson; that at the time Frederick R. Wilson was adjudged a bankrupt Julia Wilson was alive

Bollong v. Schuyler Nat. Bank, 3 L. R. A. 142; Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L. R. A. 577; Morrill v. Morrill, 11 L. R. A. 153; Bank of United States v. Beverly, 11 L. ed. U. S. 76; Johnson Steel Street R. Co. v. Wharton, 38 L. ed. U. S. 429; Southern P. R. Co. v. United States, 42 L. ed. U. S. 355.

As to full faith and credit to be given to state records and judicial proceedings—see Lindley v. O'Reilly, 1 L. R. A. 79, and note; Cummington v. Belchertown, 4 L. R. A. 131, and note; Rand v. Hanson, 12 L. R. A. 574, and note. And see notes to Wiese v. San Francisco Musical Fund Soc. 7 L. R. A. 578; Darby v. Mayer, 6 L. ed. U. S. 367; Mills v. Duryee, 3 L. ed. U. S. 411.
195 U. S.

and vested with the title to this property, and that the defendant Snow acquired no title when he purchased all of the estate, real and personal, of the bankrupt, Frederick R. Wilson.

This decree was affirmed by the Illinois supreme court (202 Ill. 83, 66 N. E. 869), and it is to reverse that decree that plaintiffs have taken a writ of error from this court.

Messrs. Frederick W. Becker, Robert A. Childs, and Charles Hudson submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. David K. Tone and George Gillette submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

Upon the first hearing, the superior court entered a decree of partition, finding that the Dresser sisters were the owners of the property at the beginning of the suit, through a title derived from the government; that after the suit began Lilly B. Dresser conveyed her interest to Henry H. Gage; that Julia Wilson, to whom her brother, Frederick R. Wilson, had conveyed his interest in the property, died testate, leaving her interest in the property to Frederick R. Wilson, and that this interest subsequently passed to Snow by purchase from the assignee, Jenkins.

This decree was reversed by the supreme court (152 Ill. 387, 38 N. E. 888), which held that there was no evidence of a title in fee in complainants, derived from the government; that, although Frederick R. Wilson showed a deed to himself from the city of Chicago, dated May 24, 1864, and possession under such deed, he conveyed his interest to his sister, Julia Wilson, in 1877; that about a year thereafter he went into bankruptcy, and that at the assignee's sale nothing passed to the purchaser, Snow, but the interest of the bankrupt on August 30, 1878. "But," said the court, "the evidence shows that at that time he had no interest, having, more than a year prior to that date, July 6, 1877, conveyed it to Julia Wilson; and the evidence is undisputed as to the fact that [415] she took possession *under that deed, and retained it by her tenants to the date of her death, and that her tenants remained in such possession when this suit was begun." The court found that there was nothing to show that Julia Wilson had not died seised of the property, and that it was not until her death, in 1887, that defendant became repossessed of it. The case was reversed, and remanded with leave to amend the pleadings and put in additional testimony.

Upon a rehearing in the superior court, a decree was entered in favor of the defendant, Wilson, establishing his title to the premises, subject to the repayment of certain taxes paid by Gage. Upon the second appeal to the supreme court that court held that, it having been shown that defendant and his sister had been in possession of the property for more than twenty years prior to the bringing of that suit, defendant had a good title by limitation, unless it was cut off and defeated by the assignee's sale to Snow; but that, as he had sold to his sister, Julia Wilson, in July, 1877, thirteen months before the bankruptcy, and she had taken possession, he had no title, and none passed to Snow by purchase from the assignee.

Complainants, however, took the position that the deed from Wilson to his sister was not absolute, but was made to secure a debt, and was constructively a mortgage, and that an equity of redemption remained in Frederick R. Wilson, which would pass to Snow as purchaser at the time of the assignee's sale. But the court held that, under the arrangement between the parties, the deed became absolute long before the defendant was adjudged a bankrupt. That, under the law of Illinois, when land has been conveyed by deed, absolute in form, though intended as security for the payment of a debt, the payment of the debt may be abandoned, and the deed treated as an absolute conveyance, although originally intended as a mortgage, and that such arrangement may be made by parol, and be binding. 202 Ill. 83, 66 N. E. 869.

It thus appears that the case turned upon the validity of the deed from the appellee to his sister, Julia Wilson. It was *insisted [416] that the deed was either fraudulent and void as against creditors, or that a residuary interest remained in Frederick R. Wilson, which would pass under the assignee's sale. This was a local, and not a Federal, question. The deed, having been made a year before the proceedings in bankruptcy were begun, and eleven years before the commencement of this suit, was not attacked as invalid under the bankrupt law of 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 517, chap. 176], then in force, but as a fraudulent conveyance under the state law. The question of fraud was ignored by the state court, although it was directly involved in the issue; and, hence, must be treated as overruled. It was admitted that, if the property were that of Julia Wilson at the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings, nothing passed under the assignee's sale; and it was only upon the theory that it was the property of the bankrupt that the assignee could convey anything to the purchaser. To reverse the state court upon this point would be to hold that it improperly construed its own laws with reference to fraudulent conveyances. The assignee's sale as a conveyance of the property of the bankrupt was not attacked in any way. He was a mere conduit through which the interest of Frederick R. Wilson, if he had any for himself or his creditors, passed to Snow. We have repeatedly held that, when the question in a state court is not whether, if the bankrupt had title, it would pass to his assignee, but whether he had title at all, and the state court decided that he had not, no Federal question is presented. Scott v. Kelly, 22 Wall. 57, 22 L. ed. 729; McKenna v. Simpson, 129 U. S. 506, 32 L. ed. 771, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365. The same principle was applied to a different class of cases in Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 523, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715. In Williams v. Heard, 140 U. S. 529, 35 L. ed. 550, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 885, relied upon by the plaintiff in error, the property in dispute belonged admittedly to the bankrupts, and the question was whether it was of such a character as to pass to their assignee. Of course, this involved a construction of the bankrupt act.

[417] If there be any Federal question, it arises from the denial of the petition of the appellee filed in the bankruptcy court *September 17, 1889, about two months after the sale was confirmed, to set aside and vacate such sale for inadequacy of price and want of notice that the sale would take place. It is insisted that this denial was res judicata of Wilson's interest in the property, and that the refusal of the court to so treat it denied to the order of the bankruptcy court the full faith and credit to which it was entitled. But, on referring to the order of sale of June 27, 1889, we find that the assignee was directed to sell simply "the interest of such bankrupt and of said assignee," without attempting to adjudicate what that interest was, or whether he had any interest at all. It was left for other courts in other proceedings to determine what his interest, or that of his creditors, was on August 30, 1878, the day on which he was adjudged a bankrupt. That interest would, of course, pass to the assignee. We have already seen that the supreme court found he had none upon that day. The district court authorized the sale of such as he had, but made no attempt to determine or guarantee that he had an interest that would pass by the sale. The refusal to set aside the sale was largely a matter of discretion, and may have been justified by the consideration that the bankrupt was not injured by the fact that it had taken place. There was certainly no attempt to adjudicate the amount of his interest.

195 U. S.

The circumstance that, nine years after his adjudication in bankruptcy, he took title to the property as the devisee of his sister, does not lend any significance to the fact that, at the date of his bankruptcy, his sister was the owner, in possession by tenants, and that the supreme court found her title to be absolute.

The decree of that court is, therefore, affirmed.

*UNITED STATES, Appt., [418]

v.

CHARLES M. THOMAS. (No. 94.)

CHARLES M. THOMAS, Appt.,

v.

UNITED STATES. (No. 95.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 418-427.)

Navy—equalization of Army and Navy pay—sea service.

1. The allowances of increased pay to Army officers serving in certain insular possessions of the United States and in Alaska, and to such officers serving beyond the limits of the United States, which are given respectively by the Army appropriation bills of May 26, 1900 (31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586), and March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), do not inure to naval officers discharging their ordinary sea duties, by reason of the Navy personnel act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), equalizing the pay of Army and Navy officers, since to hold otherwise would render meaningless the proviso of § 13 of that act, that naval officers when "detached for shore duty beyond seas" shall receive the same pay as Army officers detached for the same duties.
2. A naval officer is not entitled to sea pay while occupied in traveling on duty partly on a merchant steamer and partly on land, and in reporting to the Navy Department, since this is not sea service within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1571, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1079, declaring that "no service shall be regarded as sea service except such as shall be performed at sea, under the orders of a department, and in vessels employed by authority of law."

[Nos. 94, 95.]

Argued October 11, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

A PPEALS from the Court of Claims to review a decree made on rehearing allowing in part, and disallowing in part, claims for additional pay to a naval officer, under the Navy personnel act. Reversed and remanded, with directions to reinstate the original judgment.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 113. On motion for new trial. 38 Ct. Cl. 719.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a petition for certain allowances claimed to be due petitioner as a captain in the United States Navy, under act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1007, chap. 413, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1072), equalizing the pay of Army and Navy officers, and known as the Navy personnel act. The findings of fact are too long to be here reproduced, but the several items claimed by petitioner, and from the disposition of which these appeals are taken, are cited by counsel in their brief and by the court of claims as follows:

1. From May 26, 1900, to March 1, 1901, he was paid sea pay of a captain, at $4,500 a year, and claims 10 per cent increase of this pay for services in the Philippines and in China, under the acts of May 26, 1900, and March 2, 1901. 31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586, and 31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896.

2. From March 2, 1901, to June 11, 1901, he was paid the sea pay of a captain,—[419] $4,500 a year,—and claims 10 per cent *increase of this pay for service outside the United States, under the provisions of the act of March 2, 1901.

3. From June 12, 1901, to September 30, 1901, he was paid sea pay at $4,500 a year, and claims 10 per cent increase under the act of March 2, 1901, for service outside the United States. During this time he was in the waters of the San Francisco bay, traveling from San Francisco to Puget sound, and in the waters of Puget sound. This claim is made provisionally in case his service in Chinese and Philippine waters is not considered to be service "in China" and "in the Philippine islands," entitling him to 10 per cent increase from May 26, 1900, to March 1, 1901. In that event he would claim that his service in waters of the United States was beyond the limits of the states comprising the Union.

4. Between December 2, 1899, when relieved as commanding officer of the U. S. S. Lancaster, and ordered to report to the Navy Department, and February 7, 1900, when he took command of the U. S. S. Baltimore at Hong Kong, China, he was paid only shore pay,—$3,825 a year,—15 per cent less than sea pay. He claims sea pay,—$4,500 a year, during that time.

The last item was disallowed. The first three items were at first disallowed, but, on a rehearing, were allowed and final judgment rendered for $568.29. 38 Ct. Cl. 113, 719. Both parties appealed to this court.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt argued the cause, and, with Mr. John Q. Thompson, filed a brief for the United States.

Messrs. George A. King and William B. King argued the cause and filed a brief for Thomas.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

This case depends upon the construction given to § 13 *of the Navy personnel act, de-[420] clarating that "after June 30, 1899, commissioned officers of the line of the Navy and of the medical and pay corps shall receive the same pay and allowances, except forage, as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law for officers of corresponding rank in the Army." The object of this act can best be understood by considering the prior legislation of Congress upon the same general subject, and the circumstances under which the act was passed. By the act of July 16, 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 585, chap. 183] (Rev. Stat. § 1466, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1030), the relative rank of Army and Navy officers was fixed by declaring that rear admirals shall rank with major generals, commodores with brigadier generals, captains with colonels, commanders with lieutenant colonels, lieutenant commanders with majors, lieutenants with captains, etc.

It was, however, a source of dissatisfaction to Navy officers that some of them did not receive the same pay as corresponding officers of the Army, although others received a larger pay. Thus, by §§ 1261 and 1556 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 893, 1067), the highest pay of a rear admiral, when at sea, was $6,000, while a major general received $7,500; a commodore received $5,000 when at sea, while a brigadier general received $5,500. A captain, however, when at sea received $4,500, while a colonel received but $3,500.

To remove this dissatisfaction Congress passed the Navy personnel act, assimilating the pay of Navy officers to Army officers of corresponding rank, with a proviso, however, "that no provision of this act shall operate to reduce the present pay of any commissioned officer now in the Navy; and in any case in which the pay of such an officer would otherwise be reduced he shall continue to receive pay according to existing law."

The effect of this legislation was to raise the pay of certain Navy officers to that received by Army officers of corresponding rank, and to leave undisturbed the present pay of certain other Navy officers, who were already receiving higher pay than Army officers of the same rank.

The intention of Congress was evidently to put officers of *the Army and Navy on the[421] same footing with respect to their general pay, and to make the act prospective in its application to future legislation, so that if Congress should thereafter raise the general pay of Army officers as fixed by Revised Statutes, § 1261, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 893, a like increase should apply to Navy officers. It does not, however, follow that Congress may not increase the pay of Army officers for services in particular places or under special circumstances, without thereby intending that the same increase shall apply to naval officers performing the same service under like circumstances. Thus, if the act should allow Army officers increased pay when ordered to sea or to a foreign port, it would not follow that naval officers would be entitled to a like increase, since such service would be wholly exceptional in the case of Army officers, while it is the natural and normal duty of Navy officers to engage in sea service, cruise in foreign waters, and lie up in foreign ports. It never could have been the intention of Congress to disable itself from awarding to a particular class of Army officers an increase of pay for exceptional services without thereby increasing the pay of Navy officers, whose lives are largely passed in performing like services.

Confirmation of this view is found in the 2d proviso of § 13, "that when naval officers are detailed for shore duty beyond seas they shall receive the same pay and allowances as are or may be provided by or in pursuance of law for officers of the Army detailed for duty in similar places." Here is a distinct recognition of the fact that when naval officers are detailed for a special or unusual duty beyond seas, they shall receive the same pay as Army officers detailed for the same duties. This provision, however, would be wholly unnecessary if the act were given the broad application contended for, since the increased pay allowed to Army officers for duty beyond seas would apply to naval officers, without a special proviso to that effect. Shore duty beyond seas being an exceptional duty, both to officers of the Army and Navy, and being probably attended by increased expenditures, and dangers incident [422] to *a tropical climate, it is very natural that Congress should award them both increased compensation.

The principal questions in this case, however, arise from the Army appropriation bills of May 26, 1900, and March 2, 1901, making appropriation for the support of the Army for the year ending June 30, 1901, and 1902, the first of which contains the following proviso:

"Provided, That hereafter the pay proper of all officers and enlisted men serving in Porto Rico, Cuba, the Philippine islands, Hawaii, and in the territory of Alaska, shall be increased 10 per cent for officers and 20 per cent for enlisted men, over and above the rates of pay proper as fixed by law in time of peace." 31 Stat. at L. 211, chap. 586.

195 U. S.

Here is an increase of 10 per cent allowed to Army officers serving in certain designated places. Doubtless if naval officers were detailed for shore duty in any of these islands they would receive a like increase of pay, under the proviso of § 13 of the personnel act, heretofore quoted. But, unless they are detailed for shore duty, it is impossible to hold that they are entitled to extra pay, without treating as obsolete the above proviso requiring such detail.

The act of March 2, 1901 (31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 896), making appropriation for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1903, contains the following proviso:

"Provided, That hereafter the pay proper of all officers and enlisted men serving beyond the limits of the states comprising the Union, and the territories of the United States contiguous thereto, shall be increased 10 per centum for officers and 20 per centum for enlisted men, over and above the rates of pay proper as fixed by law for time of peace, and the time of such service shall be counted from the date of departure from said states to the date of return thereto:

"Provided further, That the officers and enlisted men who have served in China at any time since the 26th day of May, 1900, shall be allowed and paid for such service the same increase of pay proper as is herein provided for."

*Under this proviso an Army officer ordered [423] to the Philippine islands receives an increase of pay from the day he leaves San Francisco until he returns there. This allowance was undoubtedly based upon the consideration that service, both in the Philippines themselves and upon the voyage going and returning, was an exceptional service, attended by peculiar hardships; but to say that Navy officers shall be entitled to the same increase is practically to add 10 per cent to their sea pay from the moment they leave a port of the United States until they return thereto; in other words, to increase their normal sea pay 10 per cent whenever they are serving beyond the limits of the states.

So far as applied to naval officers, it goes further than this. The act of 1901 does not, as did the act of 1900, limit the increase of pay to officers serving in our island possessions and in Alaska, but extends it to all serving beyond the limits of the United States, so that, if applied to naval officers, whenever a vessel is ordered to sea beyond the 3-mile limit, be it only upon a practice cruise or a voyage from Pensacola to New York, every officer on such vessel is entitled to a 10 per cent increase of his ordinary pay from the day he sets sail until the day he returns.

It is not for a moment to be supposed that Congress contemplated any such sweeping innovation. This construction would not only render nugatory and obsolete the proviso of the personnel act that officers, to be entitled to Army pay, shall be detailed for shore duty, but largely discriminates in favor of naval officers by adding 10 per cent to their pay for their normal sea duties without a corresponding addition to the pay of Army officers for the performance of their normal duties, which are upon land; in other words, instead of assimilating the pay of Army and naval officers, it actually dissimilates them.

In our opinion the proviso that naval officers shall be entitled to Army pay "when detailed for shore duty beyond seas" is not repealed or rendered inoperative by anything [424] contained in the acts of May 26, 1900, and March 2, 1901, and that naval officers are not entitled to an increase of pay while discharging their ordinary sea duties.

It is significant in this connection to notice that in the appropriation act of March 2, 1901, for the support of the Army for the fiscal year of 1902, there was an item of $500,000, for an "additional 10 per centum increase on the pay of officers serving at foreign stations." 31 Stat. at L. 903, chap. 803. This was followed by a similar provision in the appropriation act of June 30, 1902, for the year of 1903, the amount appropriated being $451,456 (32 Stat. at L. 507-512, chap. 1328), and in the Army appropriation act of March 2, 1903, for the year 1904, there was also an item of $200,000, for the same purpose. 32 Stat. at L. 933, chap. 975. So also in the appropriation act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stat. at L. 259-266), for the year 1905, there is an item for an additional 10 per centum increase on the pay of commissioned officers serving in the Philippine islands, the island of Guam, Alaska, China, and Panama, of $167,426.30.

Notwithstanding these repeated provisions for the increase of Army pay, Congress has never made an appropriation for the largely increased pay to which naval officers would be entitled under the acts of 1900 and 1901, or otherwise recognized their claim for increased pay to which such officers would be entitled upon the theory of the petitioner in this case. This omission lends support to the theory that Congress supposed that the ordinary sea services of naval officers were sufficiently compensated by the addition of 15 per centum to their shore pay.

2. Different considerations apply to the claim of petitioner to sea pay from December 2, 1899, to February 7, 1900. Claimant was relieved as commanding officer of the Lancaster, then at Barbadoes, December 2, 1899, and ordered to report to the Navy Department, where he arrived, by merchant steamer, December 12, 1899. Upon the following day he was ordered to proceed to Hong Kong, for duty on the Asiatic station, and sailed by merchant steamer from San Francisco, *January 6, 1900. He reported in [425] obedience to his orders, and was assigned to the command of the Baltimore at Hong Kong, February 7, 1900. Between December 2, 1899, and February 7, 1900, petitioner was occupied in traveling on duty, partly on merchant steamer and partly on land, and in reporting to the Navy Department. During this time his pay was reduced 15 per cent from the regular sea pay, in accordance with the first proviso of the personnel act, which declares that "such officers, when on shore, shall receive the allowances, but 15 per centum less pay than when on sea duty."

The order detaching him from the Lancaster was as follows:

Sir: You are hereby detached from duty in command of the U. S. T. S. Lancaster, will proceed immediately to Washington, D. C., and report at the Navy Department, at that place, for special temporary duty.

Hold yourself in readiness for orders to sea duty.

This employment on shore duty is required by the public interest.

Respectfully,

(Sgd.) A. S. Crowinshield,

Acting Secretary.

Captain Charles M. Thomas, U. S. N., U. S. T. S. Lancaster.

The next day, after reporting to the Navy Department under this order, he was ordered to proceed to San Francisco, California, and thence to Hong Kong. It thus appears that while he was not regularly detailed for shore duty, he was ordered to report at the Navy Department for a special temporary duty, and the final sentence of the letter indicates that it was regarded as an employment on shore duty. He was allowed by the Department $50 traveling expenses from Barbadoes to New York, but was not allowed either mileage or sea pay. The court of claims, however, allowed him mileage under § 13 of the Navy personnel act, and *a clause of the [426] Army appropriation act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. at L. 1034, 1068, chap. 423), providing "that hereafter the maximum sum to be allowed and paid to any officer of the Army shall be seven cents per mile, distances to be computed over the shortest usually traveled routes;" but mileage seems not to have been claimed for his traveling from Washington to Hong Kong, by reason of the further provision of the same act "that actual expenses only shall be paid to officers when traveling to and from our island possessions in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans." The government apparently acquiesced in this allowance of mileage, as it made no appeal therefrom.

But the court of claims further held that, under Rev. Stat. § 1571, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1079, he was not entitled to sea pay, because, by that section, "no service shall be regarded as sea service except such as shall be performed at sea, under the orders of a department, and in vessels employed by authority of law."

This construction must necessarily be correct, unless we are prepared to hold that a steamer upon which a naval officer takes passage under the orders of the Department is a "vessel employed by authority of law." Obviously, it does not admit of this construction. A person who takes passage upon a steamer or a seat in a railway carriage does not "employ" such steamer or carriage in any just sense. We think the term "vessels employed by authority of law" is restricted to vessels owned or chartered by the government, or otherwise engaged in the service of the United States.

Sea duty being duty at sea upon such vessels, an allowance for mileage is obviously inconsistent with such duty, as the pay of the officer necessarily includes travel upon such vessels; while it is appropriate to shore duty, since travel upon such duty is performed either upon land or upon vessels not engaged in government service.

There is nothing in the Navy personnel act inconsistent with or repealing Rev. Stat. § 1571, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1079, and the case of Gibson v. United States, 194 U. S. 182, 48 L. ed. 926, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613, is not in point. In that case it was held that the personnel act did repeal §§ 1578 [427] and 1585 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 1083, 1085), allowing sea rations, because the later act covered the same subject, and superseded the provisions of those sections. There is no such conflict between § 1571 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1079) and the personnel act.

The ruling of the Court of Claims in this last particular was correct; but for the error in the previous ruling the decree must be reversed.

On January 3, 1905, Mr. Justice Brown announced that the judgment of December 5, 1904, was amended by remanding the case with directions to reinstate the original judgment for $97.42.

195 U. S.

HENRY LOCKHART, Appt.,
v.

H. C. LEEDS, J. A. Johnson, Julia Johnson, et al., Appellees.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 427-438.)

Pleading--definiteness of allegations--general and special prayers for relief--trustees ex maleficio -- injunction pendente lite.

1. The failure to file notice of a mining location within ninety days after discovery is stated with sufficient certainty to have been due to the failure to discover, until after that time, a conspiracy to defeat complainant's rights, whereby his partner was to fail in his duty to file such notice, by averments in the bill that the location was made July 10, that the conspiracy was secret, and was entered into about October 1, and that the complainant would have complied with the mining laws had it not been for such conspiracy.
2. Relief under a general prayer in a bill which states all the facts should not be denied because it is asked upon a different theory of the law than that upon which a special prayer for relief is based, where both prayers are based upon the same facts, clearly set forth in the bill.
3. A bill makes a sufficient showing to entitle complainant to treat the legal holders of a mine as trustees ex maleficio, and to recover from them, as such trustees, the materials taken from the mine, where it avers that their title was acquired under a relocation made in pursuance of a fraudulent conspiracy with complainant's partner, whereby that partner was to fail in his duty to perfect the original location.
4. A case for an injunction restraining further mining during the pendency of the suit is made by a bill which seeks to treat as constructive trustees persons, some of whom are insolvent, who have acquired title to a mining claim by a relocation made in pursuance of an alleged fraudulent and secret conspiracy with complainant's partner, whereby that partner was to fail in his duty to perfect the original location.

[No. 10.]

Argued October 20, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the District Court for Bernalillo County, in that Territory, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill filed for the purpose of obtaining relief against persons whose title to NOTE.—On the right of tenant, agent, or person standing in other fiduciary relation to relocate a mining claim for his own benefit to the exclusion of the other party—see note to McCarthy v. Speed, 50 L. R. A. 184.

As to when the relation of trustee ex maleficio arises—see note to Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 38 L. ed. U. S. 55.

mining property was acquired by virtue of a relocation made in pursuance of an alleged fraudulent conspiracy to defeat complainant's rights, whereby his partner was to fail in his duty to perfect the original location. Reversed and remanded, with directions to overrule the demurrer and grant leave to answer.

See same case below (N. M.) 63 Pac. 48.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

[428] The appellant filed his bill in this suit, in the proper court of New Mexico, for the purpose of obtaining relief against the defendants mentioned therein. The defendants demurred on several grounds, among which was that the complainant's remedy, if any, was at law, and that the bill did not state a case for a court of equity. The demurrer was sustained and the bill dismissed, and the judgment of dismissal was affirmed by the supreme court of New Mexico, and the complainant thereupon appealed to this court. Among other things the bill averred that, about May 7, 1893, the complainant and one Johnson and the defendant Pilkey entered into an agreement in Bernalillo county, New Mexico, by which they were to become partners in the enterprise mentioned in the agreement; and that, for the consideration mentioned therein, Pilkey was to start out to discover, if possible, and to locate for the purpose of operation by the parties, any mining claim of gold, silver, or other metal; and that, in order to enable Pilkey to carry out his portion of the agreement, he was to be furnished certain tools, etc., and some money. If he discovered any such mine, it was his duty to locate the same, and to send in to the other partners specimens of the ore, in order that its value might be determined. Work was to be begun within twenty days after the signing of the agreement. Any fraud by Pilkey was to forfeit his share, which was to be one-third interest in any mine discovered and worked.

The agreement was to continue for a year, and all discoveries and locations of any mines during that time by Pilkey were to be under the agreement mentioned. After the making of this agreement, Pilkey started out to prospect and to discover, if possible, a mining claim of the character mentioned. The parties were aware, at the time of the execution of the agreement, of the existence of the place where Pilkey went for the purpose of prospecting and discovering a mine, and that there possibly might be a valuable claim at that place. Accordingly, Pilkey at once went to the spot, and, on or about the 10th of July, 1893, he discovered the claim at that place, and it turned out to be a valuable mine. He located the mine according to the agreement, and posted the notice thereon provided by the laws of the United States and New Mexico, and proceeded to do work thereon pursuant to the provisions *of those laws, [429] but did not do all the work made necessary by them. The bill then alleges that Pilkey commenced to sink a shaft or cut upon the mineral-bearing lode, and did work enough thereon to arrive at mineral-bearing ore in place, within less than ninety days from the time of taking possession of the lode; and it is then averred that the parties were ready, able, and willing in all things to comply with the laws spoken of, "and would have so done except for the wrongful, fraudulent, and unlawful acts of the defendants hereinafter mentioned." Some time about the 1st of October, 1893, Pilkey, while so in possession of the lode, wrongfully and fraudulently conspired, combined, and confederated with the defendants to defraud plaintiff; and they agreed that said Pilkey, in violation and fraud of the rights of the plaintiff in and to the mine, should transfer, convey, and deliver possession of the mine to the defendants, or one of them, without the knowledge or consent of plaintiff and the said Johnson. This was done. It was also agreed that they should do all other acts necessary to transfer the right to defendants. Pilkey was to have a certain proportion of interest in the mine, and the defendants, the balance. The defendants also caused and procured the defendant Pilkey to stop work upon the mine, under the agreement already referred to; and it was also agreed that Pilkey should fail and neglect to record, in the proper office, a copy of the location notice posted by him on the ground. The defendants also covered up and concealed the work which had been done on the ground by Pilkey; and they posted another notice thereon, and called the mine the "Washington" mine, and filed a copy of the same for record, December 13, 1893, without the knowledge or consent of the plaintiff or his copartner, Johnson; and they made the location for the benefit of themselves as locators, under the mining laws of the United States. For the purpose of concealing the interest of Pilkey in such pretended location, it was agreed that each of the four defendants named should be entitled to a fifth interest, and that Pilkey should be entitled to the remaining fifth, which last-named interest should *be claimed and held by Walker [430] in trust for Pilkey. Johnson subsequently transferred all his interest, under the agreement of copartnership between plaintiff, Johnson, and Pilkey, to the complainant, who was, at the time of the commencement of the suit, the owner of Johnson's interest under the assignment. The bill further states that, after the removal by the defendants of the original location notice posted by Pilkey, as already stated, the complainant procured a copy thereof, and had the same recorded in the office of the recorder of the county, on December 9, 1893. The complainant averred that, by virtue of the premises, he became and was, at the commencement of the suit, the equitable owner of said mine, and of the gold and silver ores therein contained, so discovered and located by Pilkey under the agreement; and that he was equitably entitled, as against the defendants, to the possession and enjoyment of the same, and to the preferential right to acquire the legal title from the United States; and that the pretended location of the mine under the name of the Washington mine, by and in the names of the defendants named, was wholly inoperative and void; and that Pilkey, by reason of his participation in a fraudulent conspiracy with the defendants, forfeited all right or interest in the said mine pursuant to the agreement made by Pilkey with complainant and Johnson; and complainant averred that he was equitably the owner of and entitled to such interest. He further averred that the defendants refused to permit complainant to enter upon the property or to work the same; and that the defendants claim title to the mining property under and by virtue of their agreement with Pilkey, and their pretended location of the same as the Washington lode. It is further averred that the defendants were engaged in mining, extracting, and converting to their own use, the ores and minerals contained in the mine, and had mined and removed ores and minerals of great value therefrom, and had converted to their own use all such mineral; and that, unless enjoined, they would remove all the ores and minerals, and thereby the entire substance *and value of the property would be destroyed, and the complainant would sustain irreparable injury, as the defendants, or some of them, were wholly insolvent. To this bill the defendants demurred, as already stated.

Mr. J. H. McGowan argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

If there be any one ground upon which a court of equity affords relief with more unvarying uniformity than on any other, it is an allegation of fraud, whether proven or admitted.

Atkins v. Dick, 14 Pet. 114, 10 L. ed. 378.

In United States v. American Bell Teleph. Co. 128 U. S. 315, 32 L. ed. 450, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90, this court held that it is sufficient, in stating the facts constituting fraud in a bill in equity, if the main facts or incidents which constitute the fraud be fairly stated, so as to put the defendant upon his guard and apprise him what answer may be required of him.

195 U. S.

The rule is also given in Gould's Eq. Pr. § 176, to the effect that where the facts constituting the cause of action are supposed to lie in the knowledge of the defendant, but not of the plaintiff, less particularity of statement is required than would otherwise be necessary.

In Enc. Pl. & Pr. § 271, it is laid down that where the facts to be alleged are peculiarly known, or presumed to be known, to the opposite party, less certainty and particularity are required than in ordinary cases.

See also Shipman, Eq. Pr. § 231.

It is a rule of equity pleading, that if the special prayer does not warrant a decree for the complete relief which the case discloses should be granted, the court may yet afford a relief under the general prayer agreeable to the case made by the bill.

Story, Eq. Pl. § 40.

In cases where the facts established by proofs or admission clearly indicate to the court the character of the relief equity should apply, the court will grant the relief under a general prayer, although such relief is not specially prayed.

Stanley v. Valentine, 79 Ill. 544; Hopkins v. Snedaker, 71 Ill. 449; Espinola v. Blasco, 15 La. Ann. 426; Hilleary v. Hurdle, 6 Gill, 105; McIntyre v. Philadelphia, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 439; Van Voorhis v. Bond, 110 Mich. 3, 67 N. W. 974; Webster v. Harris, 16 Ohio, 490; Holden v. Holden, 24 Ill. App. 106.

Mr. W. B. Childers argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees:

The bill should state the right, title, or claim of the complainant with accuracy and clearness, and should in like manner state the injury or grievance of which he complains, and the relief which he asks of the court.

Story, Eq. Pl. §§ 241, 242, 246.

The facts which determine whether the remedy is at law or in equity are not distinctly alleged.

Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 437, 22 L. ed. 676.

The recovery must be had on the case made by the pleadings, or not at all.

Grosholz v. Newman, 21 Wall. 488, 22 L. ed. 472.

There must be a sufficient equity apparent on the face of the bill to warrant the relief prayed for; and the material facts on which the complainant relies must be so distinctly alleged as to put them in issue.

Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. 103, 6 L. ed. 429; Harrison v. Nixon, 9 Pet. 483, 9 L. ed. 201.

No decree can be founded on matters not in issue between the parties. If the bill sets up a case of fraud, the complainant is not entitled to relief by establishing some one or more of the facts independent of fraud, although the facts might create a case under a wholly distinct head in equity.

Bradley v. Converse, 4 Cliff. 366, Fed. Cas. No. 1,775.

The objection is by demurrer.

Pelham v. Edelmeyer, 15 Fed. 262. See also Foster v. Goddard, 1 Black, 506, 17 L. ed. 228; Socola v. Grant, 15 Fed. 487; Eyre v. Potter, 15 How. 42, 14 L. ed. 592; Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co. 2 Black, 715, 17 L. ed. 339.

It is not permissible for a complainant to unite in his bill two inconsistent causes for equitable relief.

Wilkinson v. Dobbie, 12 Blatchf. 298, Fed. Cas. No. 17,670.

As to what particularity is necessary in allegations of fraud, see—

United States v. Atherton, 102 U. S. 372, 26 L. ed. 213; Ambler v. Choteau, 107 U. S. 589, 27 L. ed. 324, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 556; Voorhees v. Bonesteel, 16 Wall. 16, 21 L. ed. 268; 9 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 687.

Charging generally that what was done was "colorable," a "fraud," a "breach of trust," and a "scheme," constitutes allegations of legal conclusions merely, which a demurrer does not admit.

Fogg v. Blair, 139 U. S. 127, 35 L. ed. 107, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 476. See also St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Johnston, 133 U. S. 577, 33 L. ed. 686, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

Mere words in and of themselves, and even as qualifying adjectives of more specific charges, are not sufficient ground of equity jurisdiction, unless the transactions to which they refer are such as, in their essential nature, constitute a fraud, or a breach of trust, for which a court of chancery can give relief.

Van Weel v. Winston, 115 U. S. 237, 29 L. ed. 384, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 22. See also Brooks v. O'Hara Bros. 2 McCrary, 644, 8 Fed. 532; Phelps v. Elliott, 35 Fed. 455; Lafayette Co. v. Neely, 21 Fed. 744.

Under the prayer for general relief, only such relief as is agreeable to the case made by the bill can be granted.

English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. 612, 7 L. ed. 531; Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. ed. 388; Wilson v. Graham, 4 Wash. C. C. 53, Fed. Cas. No. 17,804; Allen v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 662, 35 L. ed. 305, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 682; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 614, 24 L. ed. 857; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 77, 18 L. ed. 725; 1 Dan. Ch. Pr. 386; Story, Eq. Pl. § 42; 3 Enc. Pl. & Pr. 350.

Pilkey had a right to convey a one-third interest in the Sampson,—there was nothing in his contract prohibiting it. A conveyance of any greater interest under the allegations of the bill, while the Sampson location was in force, was simply void. It did not constitute a cloud on the title of his cotenants.

Hartford & S. Ore Co. v. Miller, 41 Conn. 112, 3 Morrison, Min. Rep. 353.

The rule applicable to this class of cases is that equity will interpose only when the pretended title which it is alleged constitutes a cloud, or the proceeding which it is apprehended will create one, is apparently valid on its face.

6 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 153.

There is no occasion for resort to a court of equity.

Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 150, 34 L. ed. 874, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

Where the complainant himself has no title, or a doubtful title, he cannot have this relief.

Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 374, 375, 25 L. ed. 856, 857; Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 557, 30 L. ed. 1012, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1129.

The legislature had no power to dispense with possession as a prerequisite to maintain such suits.

Whitehead v. Shattuck, 138 U. S. 151, 34 L. ed. 874, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 276.

The prayer that the defendants be enjoined from working the lode, and that complainant be declared the equitable owner, is nothing but a prayer to eject defendants and give the claim to complainant.

Fussell v. Gregg, 113 U. S. 554, 555, 28 L. ed. 994, 995, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 631; Hipp v. Babin, 19 How. 271, 15 L. ed. 633; Parker v. Winnipiscogee Lake Cotton & Woolen Co. 2 Black, 545, 17 L. ed. 333; Grand Chute v. Winegar, 15 Wall. 373, 21 L. ed. 174; Lewis v. Cocks, 23 Wall. 466, 23 L. ed. 70; Killian v. Ebbinghaus, 110 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 246, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

Prior possession by Pilkey, and surrender of that possession as alleged in the bill, would, if proved, make a case for recovery in a suit at law. But if complainant had actual prior possession of the land, this is strong enough to enable him to recover it from mere trespassers who entered without any title.

Christy v. Scott, 14 How. 282, 14 L. ed. 422; Burt v. Panjaud, 99 U. S. 180, 25 L. ed. 451; Campbell v. Rankin, 99 U. S. 262, 25 L. ed. 436.

Upon proof of the Sampson location, and the sale of an interest in it by Pilkey, and the entrance of the defendants into possession, and the exclusion of complainant, a prima facie case would have been made out.

Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. v. Taylor, 100 U. S. 40, 25 L. ed. 342; Freeman, Cotenancy & Partition, §§ 166, 167, 290; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 534, 28 L. ed. 1115, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Belk v. Meagher, 195 U. S.

104 U. S. 284, 26 L. ed. 737; Welsh v. Barker, 7 Colo. 178, 2 Pac. 921; Morton v. Solambo Copper Min. Co. 26 Cal. 527.

A court of equity will not specifically enforce this contract, as it lacks mutuality.

Geiger v. Green, 4 Gill, 472, 13 Morrison, Min. Rep. 329; Radcliffe v. Warrington, 12 Ves. 331; German v. Machin, 6 Paige, 292; Boucher v. Vanbuskirk, 2 A. K. Marsh. 346; Moore v. Fitz Randolph, 6 Leigh, 185, 29 Am. Dec. 208; Pierce v. Pierce, 55 Mich. 629, 22 N. W. 81, 13 Morrison, Min. Rep. 675; Ducie v. Ford, 138 U. S. 588, 34 L. ed. 1091, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 417.

If Pilkey abandoned this location, and permitted others to locate the ground, whether he took an interest with them or not, the complainant acquired no interest, and his remedy is for breach of contract, if any, at law.

Johnstone v. Robinson, 3 McCrary, 42, 16 Fed. 903; First Nat. Bank v. Bissell, 4 Fed. 698; Tuck v. Downing, 76 Ill. 71, 7 Morrison, Min. Rep. 83.

The original locator can treat his failure to perform or resume work as the basis of a valid relocation.

Warnock v. De Witt, 11 Utah. 324, 40 Pac. 205; Saunders v. Mackey, 5 Mont. 523, 6 Pac. 361.

A cotenant in the previous location can relocate and leave out his cotenants.

Strang v. Ryan, 46 Cal. 33, 1 Morrison, Min. Rep. 48; Doherty v. Morris, 11 Colo. 12, 16 Pac. 911; Saunders v. Mackey, 5 Mont. 523, 6 Pac. 361; Hunt v. Patchin, 13 Sawy. 304, 35 Fed. 816; Page v. Summers, 70 Cal. 121, 12 Pac. 120.

The failure to record the location notice worked a forfeiture of any rights which may have been acquired by posting the notice on the claim and doing the other acts of ownership.

Lindley, Mines, §§ 273, 330, 390; King v. Edwards, 1 Mont. 236, 4 Morrison, Min. Rep. 480; Sisson v. Sommers, 24 Nev. 379, 77 Am. St. Rep. 815, 55 Pac. 829; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Mallett v. Uncle Sam Gold & S. Min. Co. 1 Nev. 188, 90 Am. Dec. 484; Barringer & Adams, Mines & Mining, 300; Hamilton v. Huson, 21 Mont. 9, 53 Pac. 101.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

One phase of this controversy has already been before this court in Lockhart v. Johnson, 181 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 979, 21 Sup. Ct. [433] Rep. 665, which was an action *of ejectment brought by the plaintiff (who is the complainant herein) to recover possession of the mine above mentioned from the defendants herein.

195 U. S.

It was there held that the plaintiff could not maintain an action, as the facts showed that he had no legal title, and that the remedy he might have, if any, was in equity.

Upon the trial of the ejectment action the plaintiff offered to prove, in substance, the same facts as are set forth in this bill in regard to Pilkey's action under the agreement with plaintiff and Johnson, and the fraudulent conspiracy entered into by the defendants for the purpose of defrauding the plaintiff out of his right to such mine. The evidence was objected to and excluded on the ground that it did not show any legal title in the plaintiff, assuming its truth; that, in the courts of the United States, an action of ejectment was based upon the strict legal title, and if the plaintiff failed to show that it was in him, he must fail in such action. The defendants now contend that, if the plaintiff have any remedy, it is at law; and also that there is no cause of action stated in the bill. At the time of the trial of this suit, the ejectment action had not been decided by this court, the action having been here decided May 13, 1901. It must be regarded as determined by the decision in that case, that the complainant herein has no remedy at law, and, if he has none in this suit, he is without remedy for the gross fraud set out in the bill. All facts well pleaded in the bill are admitted by the demurrer, and the question, therefore, is whether the bill states facts sufficient to entitle him to relief in a court of equity.

The court below has held that the bill does not state with sufficient certainty the time when plaintiff discovered the alleged fraud set forth in the bill, in that it does not appear by any certain averment that the plaintiff did not discover such fraud before the expiration of the ninety days after the discovery of the lode, in which to file a copy of the notice of location in the recorder's office, which, if he had done, he might, by himself filing the copy, have thereby fulfilled all the provisions *of the statute relating to the lo-[434]cation and recording of the notice of claim. We entirely agree with the court below that the facts constituting the cause of action in equity must be distinctly alleged, so that the defendant may know what he has to meet, and so that he may, if he choose, put them in the issue. The rule must receive a reasonable interpretation, and must be so enforced as to further, and not obstruct, the administration of justice. We think the court below erred in holding that there was no sufficient averment as to the time of the discovery by plaintiff of the alleged fraud set forth in the bill, assuming such averment to have been necessary. He averred that Pilkey, acting under the agreement with plaintiff and Johnson, discovered the mine, and located the same by posting the requisite notice on the ground on the 10th of July, 1893. He also averred that some time about the 1st of October (the exact time, however, he could not state) the defendants entered into the conspiracy and combination referred to. This was but a few days before the expiration of the statutory time in which to file a copy of the notice of claim in the recorder's office of the county. He averred that the conspiracy and combination was secret, and that, while the plaintiff and his copartner Johnson were able and willing to comply with all the laws of the United States and territory, they failed to do so because of the wrongful, fraudulent, and unlawful acts of the defendants thereafter mentioned. Those acts were a secret effacement of the work done by Pilkey, the taking down of the notice of claim posted on the ground by him, the failure to file a copy thereof, the posting of a claim on the part of the defendants, and the filing of a copy of such notice in the recorder's office on December 13, 1893.

We think the plain import of these averments is that the conspiracy and combination did not become known to the plaintiff until after the expiration of the ninety days from the discovery of the mine, in which to file a copy of the notice posted on the ground, in the recorder's office of the proper county. That is a sufficiently definite averment of [435] time, and *it is enough to show that the failure to file a copy of the notice within the necessary time was owing to the action of the defendants.

Under the agreement first mentioned between plaintiff, Johnson, and Pilkey, as copartners, it became the duty of Pilkey, in order to complete the location it was his duty to make, to file a copy of the notice in the recorder's office; and the parties to the agreement had the right to rely upon Pilkey to file the necessary copy for record; and it is plain that the failure to file on the part of the plaintiff was because of his ignorance of such failure on the part of Pilkey, consequent upon Pilkey's fraudulent conspiracy and agreement with the other defendants not to file it. After the discovery of the conspiracy, the plaintiff did procure a copy of the original notice posted by Pilkey on the ground, and filed the same in the office of the recorder on the 9th of December, 1893. Taking these allegations together, we think it hypercritical to hold that the bill does not, with sufficient distinctness, allege the fact that the plaintiff did not discover the fraud until after the expiration of the ninety days mentioned, and hence did not himself file the copy of the notice within that time.

All pleadings must be construed reasonably, and not with such strictness as to refuse to adopt the natural construction of the pleading because a particular fact might have been more distinctly alleged, although its existence is fairly, naturally, and reasonably to be presumed from the averments made in the pleading.

The agreement between the plaintiff, Pilkey, and Johnson shows it to have been the duty of Pilkey to make the necessary filing for record, in order to complete the location of the mine, which he, in the agreement, was to do. The plaintiff had the right to rely upon Pilkey carrying out that agreement, and fulfilling his duty thereunder by making the necessary filing; and plaintiff alleges that he would have done all things made necessary by law had it not been for this fraudulent combination and conspiracy on the part of the defendants. We regard the allegations of the bill as sufficient in these particulars. [436]

Again, it is alleged that the bill prays that the location of what is called the Washington lode by the defendants be declared void, and that the plaintiff may have the possession of the claim; while the plaintiff now asks to have the defendants treated as constructive trustees, etc., which is inconsistent, as alleged, with the former prayer for relief. The bill contains a prayer for general relief in addition to the prayer for special relief, and under such prayer this relief may be given. It is objected that, under the prayer for general relief, no relief of that nature can be granted, inasmuch as it is opposed to the special relief asked for by the bill, and also because the general allegations in the bill do not justify such relief. All the facts upon which the plaintiff seeks relief from a court of equity are clearly stated in the bill. The facts constituting the fraud are set forth, and it is alleged that the parties doing the acts mentioned concealed them from the plaintiff for the purpose of defrauding plaintiff out of his interest and ownership in the mine. Having set out all the facts upon which the right to relief is based, the plaintiff asks specially for the possession, and also for the proceeds, of the mine, because, by reason of the facts, the location made by the defendants was a void location. Whether it was a void location or not was matter of law, arising from the facts appearing in the bill. Those facts were not changed in the slightest degree, nor were any inconsistent facts set up thereafter. The plaintiff now, under his prayer for general relief, contends that, although the location of the Washington lode by the defendants may have been so far valid as to create a title in the defendants, yet that, by reason of the fraud already distinctly set forth in the bill, the plaintiff was entitled to avail himself of that title, and to hold them as trustees ex maleficio, for his benefit.

There is nothing in the intricacy of equity pleading that prevents the plaintiff from obtaining the relief under the general prayer, to which he may be entitled upon the facts [437] plainly *stated in the bill. There is no reason for denying his right to relief, if the plaintiff is otherwise entitled to it, simply because it is asked under the prayer for general relief, and upon a somewhat different theory from that which is advanced under one of the special prayers. The cases of English v. Foxall, 2 Pet. 595, 7 L. ed. 531; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. 177, 9 L. ed. 388; Hobson v. M'Arthur, 16 Pet. 182, 10 L. ed. 930; Hayward v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 611, 24 L. ed. 855; Georgia v. Stanton, 6 Wall. 50, 18 L. ed. 721, are not opposed to the views just stated.

We agree that the relief granted under the prayer for general relief must be agreeable to the case made by the bill; and that, in substance, is what is held by the above cases. The case made by the bill consists of the material facts therein stated; and where all the facts are stated, it is no reason for denying relief under a general prayer, because it may differ from the theory of the law upon which the special prayer for relief is based, where both prayers are based upon the same facts, clearly set forth in the bill.

The defendants contend that, if Pilkey, under the fraudulent agreement alleged, and pursuant thereto, surrendered possession to the defendants, the latter became cotenants with the plaintiff, and he could maintain an action at law to recover possession from his cotenants. We have already held that the plaintiff could not, upon the facts, maintain ejectment. When Pilkey surrendered possession to defendants under this fraudulent agreement, and they entered and posted the notice and filed the copy, they did not enable plaintiff to maintain ejectment against them as upon his ouster of possession by defendants.

Neither plaintiff nor Johnson had ever had anything but a constructive possession through the possession of Pilkey; and when he fraudulently surrendered it to the other defendants, and they entered and completed their location, the plaintiff could not then sustain ejectment, as we have already held. This is not in opposition to the case of Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 528, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560. The question whether the relief should be at law or in equity was not there raised. The action was commenced [438] *in Colorado, and was in accordance with the usual form in actions for mining claims under the procedure in Colorado, and was brought to recover possession of a mine. There was no discussion as to the forum. The complaint simply followed the usual practice. Here we have already held, in the ejectment suit (181 U. S. 516, 45 L. ed. 195 U. S.

979, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 665), that the relief is not to be had by ejectment, but must be obtained in equity if at all. Under the circumstances we think it immaterial whether Pilkey surrendered possession before or after the expiration of ninety days from the discovery of the mine, July 10, 1893. All the acts of fraud set up in the bill, committed by the defendants, are, if proved, sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to treat them as trustees ex maleficio, and to recover from them, as such trustees, all the materials taken from the mine. See Saunders v. Mackey, 5 Mont. 523, 6 Pac. 361; Doherty v. Morris, 11 Colo. 12, 16 Pac. 911. Upon the case made by the bill, some of the defendants being insolvent, we think the plaintiff entitled to an injunction restraining the defendants from further mining during the pendency of the suit; an injunction to issue upon such security as may seem appropriate to the court below.

We decide this case solely upon the questions raised by the demurrer.

The judgments of the Supreme Court of New Mexico and of the trial court must be reversed, and the case remanded to the Supreme Court, with directions to remand it to the District Court for the Second Judicial District of the Territory of New Mexico, within and for the county of Bernalillo, with directions to overrule the defendants' demurrer, and with leave to answer upon such terms as may seem proper to that court.

So ordered.

*NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COM-[439]
PANY, Appt.,

v.

AMERICAN TRADING COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 439-469.)

Carriers—contract to forward by designated vessel of connecting carrier — power of railway receivers — authority of general agent — excuse for nonperformance.

1. A special agreement by a carrier to transport a through shipment by the vessel of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated date results from the acceptance of a through rate for a shipment "to be forwarded" via such steamer, which rate was quoted with notice that it was of vital importance that

NOTE.—On the powers and duties of receivers—see notes to Davis v. Gray, 21 L. ed. U. S. 447; McNulta v. Lochridge, 35 L. ed. U. S. 797.

As to the authority of freight agent to make contracts for transportation—see note to Miller v. South Carolina R. Co. 9 L. R. A. 833.

Respecting bills of lading as contracts—see notes to Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Wilson, 4 L. R. A. 244; Browning, K. & Co. v. Goodrich Transp. Co. 10 L. R. A. 416; National Bank of Commerce v. Chicago, B. & N. R. Co. 9 L. R. A. 263.

the shipment should be transported promptly, and should go forward by the earliest possible steamer without delay, in order to enable the shipper to fulfil a proposed agreement which it was about to make for the sale of the goods at the final destination, and which would require delivery there at a fixed date.

2. The general agent of the receivers of a railway company is acting as agent for such receivers, and not as the agent of a connecting steamship company, in agreeing to forward a through shipment by a steamer sailing on a specified day, where his only authority as agent of the steamship company was created by a contract between the railway and steamship companies, under which the railway company was to appoint agents, who should act for the steamship company to quote through rates and issue through bills of lading, and the application for a rate for such shipment was made to him as agent for the receivers, and the rate was quoted by him as such agent, and as such he signed a letter confirming the rate, and so described himself when informing the steamship company's agents at the connecting point that he had made a contract guaranteeing delivery by the designated steamer.
3. The making of a special agreement to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day is within the authority of the receivers appointed, in a suit to foreclose a railway mortgage, to continue to carry on the railway business.
4. The "general eastern agent" of the receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, who were ordered to continue its business, has the general powers of such an officer when acting for the railroad company itself, which includes the authority to make a special agreement to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day.
5. A special agreement in behalf of railway receivers to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day is not modified by the mere receipt, without objection, and the subsequent hypothecation, of the bill of lading containing, as a part of numerous conditions printed in small type, the statements that the carrier is not to be liable for any loss not occurring on its own road, and that the contract as executed is accomplished, and all liability thereunder terminates, upon the delivery of the property to the vessel, where the bill was not examined or read, and was accepted after the goods had passed from the control of the shipper, by a clerk who had no knowledge of these conditions, and no authority to consent to a modification of the contract already made.
6. Nonperformance of a special agreement of a carrier to forward a through shipment by the steamer of a connecting carrier sailing on a designated day is not excused by the refusal of the deputy collector of the port to grant a clearance while the freight was on board because it was contraband of war, where the contract was not unlawful when made, and was not rendered unlawful by any subsequent legislation, and was made with knowledge that difficulties might arise in the course of transportation because of the character of the freight.

7. The mistaken refusal of the deputy collector of a port to grant a clearance while certain freight was on board because it was contraband of war does not constitute a "restraint of princes, rulers, or people," within the meaning of a clause in the bill of lading, so as to excuse nonperformance of the agreement to forward the shipment by that vessel.

[No. 24.]

Argued October 26, 27, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

A PPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit to review a decree which reversed a decree of the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of New York dismissing a petition in intervention in a suit to foreclose a railway mortgage, which seeks to require the receivers to pay damages for their failure to perform a special contract for the transportation of goods. Affirmed.

See same case below, 57 C. C. A. 533, 120 Fed. 873.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company made a certain mortgage which was foreclosed, and the Northern Pacific Railway Company purchased the property of the former company under the mortgage at the foreclosure sale, and, by the order of the court, the purchaser was required to pay all obligations or liabilities contracted or incurred by the court's receivers, who had been appointed in the foreclosure suit. The American Trading Company, the appellee herein, intervened in that suit, and, by its petition, asked that, by virtue of the decree in foreclosure, the purchaser, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, be required to pay damages for the failure of the receivers to perform a special contract for the transportation of goods from Newark, New Jersey, to Yokohama, in Japan. The case was tried before the United States circuit court, in New York city, which dismissed the petition. This decision was reversed by the circuit court of appeals for the second circuit, and the railroad company was directed to pay the damages therein stated to the American Trading Company, the intervening petitioner. The railroad company has appealed from such decree or order to this court. The case was tried upon the agreed statement of facts which follows:

1. In September, 1894, Thomas F. Oakes, Henry C. Payne, and Henry C. Rouse were receivers of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, under an order made in a suit bearing the same title as the present suit, in the United States circuit court for the [441] eastern district of Wisconsin, to which this suit is ancillary. Under that order the receivers were authorized to continue, and were continuing, to carry on the business of the railroad in their charge.

2. The line of railroad in the possession of the receivers extended from Duluth, Minnesota, to Tacoma, Washington. The receivers had contracts with various carriers reaching points on their line, by which through bills of lading were issued from and to points not upon the line of the receivers' railroad, where the freight passed over some part of that line in transit. Among the carriers with whom the receivers had such arrangements was the Northern Pacific Steamship Company. This was an English company, operating a line of steamers between Tacoma and points in Japan and China, including Yokohama. The contract between the steamship company and the receivers was the contract originally made on March 30, 1892, between the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, and ratified and adopted by the receivers, under the authority of an order of the circuit court of the United States, made on September 13, 1893.

The receivers held no stock in the steamship company, and had no other express contract relation with the steamship company. This stipulation is not to be accepted as an admission by the railroad company, or the receivers, or their counsel, that there were any relations between the receivers and the steamship company other than those growing out of the facts herein agreed upon.

For convenience in transacting their freight business in the eastern part of the United States, the receivers maintained an office in the city of New York, which was, in September, 1894, in charge of one George R. Fitch, who was their general eastern agent, and made arrangements for the transportation of freight over the receivers' line of railway and connections, including transportation to China and Japan.

[442] At the time of the transactions referred to in this statement *of facts, the said Fitch had not received, nor did he receive, any direct or independent appointment or authority from the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, to act as agent of that company. His only authority as agent of the steamship company was that created by, or arising from, the contract, exhibit A. Fitch knew that an arrangement had been concluded by the receivers and the steamship company, by which contracts for through shipment to Yokohama might be made by the agents of the receivers, and through bills of lading issued, and he had been instructed by the receivers to solicit freight for through transportation upon bills of lading, of which exhibit C, hereto annexed, is a copy; but Fitch did not know the terms of the contract between the steamship company and the receivers, and the trading company did not know what company operated the steamships between Tacoma and Yokohama, or that the steamship company was a separate and independent company or that there was any contract between the receivers and the steamship company.

195 U. S.

It is further stipulated that Fitch had no express general authority to make contracts for through transportation, except as provided by the said bills of lading, and no authority to make the contract in question, unless such express authority be found in the telegrams, of which copies are hereinafter set forth; that the American Trading Company did not know the terms of his express authority, and that this stipulation is not to be taken as an admission by the railroad company, or the receivers, or their counsel, that his implied authority was greater than his express authority.

4. The American Trading Company is, and was in September, 1894, a corporation organized under the laws of the state of Connecticut, having its principal office in the city of New York, and carried on a general commercial business with Asiatic ports.

5. In September, 1894, the trading company applied to Fitch for a rate upon a proposed shipment of pig lead from New York to Yokohama, Japan, and informed him that it *was of vital importance that [443] the lead should be transported promptly, and go forward by the earliest possible steamer, without delay, in order to enable the trading company to fulfil a proposed agreement, which it was about to make for the sale of the lead in Japan, and which would require its delivery there at a fixed date. Fitch thereupon named a rate, and undertook to forward the lead from New York on or before September 29th, and via the Northern Pacific steamer Tacoma, sailing from Tacoma October 30, 1894.

6. Thereupon the trading company cabled to its agents at Yokohama, naming a price, and a date at which the lead could be delivered there; and thereupon its agents in Yokohama made a contract for the sale of the lead, which contract provided that it should be delivered in Yokohama by overland route, and the most direct connection at San Francisco, Tacoma, or Vancouver, and that, in case of unusual or extraordinary delay in transit, the contract should be null and void. Neither Fitch nor the receivers knew, until September 24th, that any contract for the sale of lead in Japan had been concluded by the trading company, and, except as hereinbefore and hereinafter stated, they never received any information in regard to its terms, as made or proposed.

Upon the conclusion of its Japanese contract, the trading company purchased 200 tons of pig lead in bond, from the Balbeck Smelting & Refining Company.

7. On September 19, 1894, Fitch, in confirmation of his previous statement, wrote and sent to the trading company the following letter:

Northern Pacific Railroad Company.
Thomas F. Oakes, Henry C. Payne, Henry C. Rouse, Receivers.

Geo. R. Fitch, General Eastern Agent, 319 Broadway.

Traffic Department.

New York City, Sept. 19, 1894.

American Trading Co. 182 Front St., City.

Gentlemen:—

I hereby confirm rate quoted you this [444] day, *and accepted by you on shipment of pig lead for export to Japan, as follows:

Pig lead, New York to Yokohama, Japan, $15.00 per ton of 2,000 lbs., shipment not to consist of less than 400,000 lbs., and to be forwarded from New York on or before Sept. 29th, in accordance with shipping instructions given you by me, and to be forwarded from Tacoma, Wash., via Northern Pacific steamer sailing from thence October 30th. Kindly forward your acceptance of the above as early as possible. Thanking you for the favor, I remain,

Yours truly,
Geo. R. Fitch,
G. E. Agent.

The trading company wrote and sent in reply (accepting the proposition) the following letter:

Sept. 20th, 1894.

The Northern Pacific R. R. Co., New York City.

Dear Sirs:—

In reply to your esteemed favor, Sept. 19th, we beg to accept the rate quoted to us in your letter of Sept. 19th, namely, on 200 tons of pig lead, N. Y. to Yokomaha, Japan, $15.00 per ton of 2,000 lbs., shipment not to consist of less than 400,000 lbs., to be forwarded from N. Y. on or before September 29th, in accordance with shipping instructions to be given by you, and to be forwarded from Tacoma, Washington, via Northern Pacific steamer sailing from that port Oct. 30th. Kindly let us know as soon as possible the shipping instructions, so that we can forward them to our supplier, and oblige, with best respects,

Very truly yours,
The American Trading Co.
(Signed) Frank P. Ball.

On September 22, 1894, Fitch wrote and sent to the trading company the following letter, giving shipping instructions:

*Northern Pacific Railroad Company. [445]
Thomas F. Oakes, Henry C. Payne, Henry C. Rouse, Receivers.

Geo. R. Fitch, General Eastern Agent, 319 Broadway.

Traffic Department.

New York City, Sept. 22, 1894.

American Trading Co., No. 182 Front St., City.

Dear Sir:—

I hereby confirm routing given you over the telephone yesterday on your shipment of pig lead for export to Yokohama, Japan, as follows: To be shipped from Newark, N. J., via Penn. R. R., marked Anchor Line rail and Lake, care Northern Pacific, care A. O. Canfield, agent N. P. R. R., Tacoma, Wash. Please advise me, as soon as possible, who the shippers will be, that I may order the cars, and also see that same are rushed through without delay to connect with our steamer at Tacoma.

Yours truly,
Geo. R. Fitch, G. E. Agent.
A. H. P.

8. Before naming a rate for the transportation of the lead, Fitch had expressed some doubt as to whether it might not be excluded from transportation as contraband, in view of the war then existing between China and Japan. In fact the shipment of pig lead was not prohibited by the Treasury Department at Washington during the war between China and Japan, and on September 25th, 1894, the trading company made another shipment of pig lead via Pacific Mail steamer sailing from San Francisco, which was, without trouble or delay, transported and delivered in Yokohama.

9. In September, 1894, J. B. Baird was the second assistant general freight agent of the receivers and J. M. Hannaford was the general freight agent of the receivers; and telegrams of which the following are copies, relating to proposed shipments of pig lead, including the shipment in question, passed between the said Fitch and Baird and Hannaford, but were not disclosed to the American Trading Company:

*New York, September 14, 1894. [446]
J. B. Baird, second A. G. F. A.:—

Please wire quick lowest rate one hundred ton lots pig lead from Chicago and Duluth to Yokohama.

George R. Fitch.

September 14, 1894.

Geo. R. Fitch, 319 Broadway, New York, N. Y.:—

You may quote as low as sixty cents from
195 U. S.

Duluth and seventy cents from Chicago to Yokohama on pig lead in one hundred ton lots. Get more if possible.

J. B. Baird.

New York, September 17, 1894.

J. B. Baird, 2d A. G. F. A.:—

Your wire fourteenth. Shall I accept fifty cents on pig lead Duluth to Yokohama? Also name lowest rate on two hundred tons St. Louis to Yokohama.

Geo. R. Fitch.

September 18th, 1894.

Geo. R. Fitch, 319 Broadway, New York:—

Cannot accept less than sixty cents on pig lead Duluth to Yokohama. Will quote from St. Louis later.

0.900.

J. B. Baird. WDB.

September 19, 1894.

G. R. Fitch, 319 Broadway, New York:—

You may quote seventy cents on the pig lead in one hundred ton lots St. Louis to Yokohama. Advise if accepted.

0.900.

J. B. Baird. WDB.

New York, September 22, 1894.

J. B. Baird, N. P. R'y, St. Paul, Minn.:—

Wire best rate two hundred fifty tons pig lead Duluth to Shanghai.

Geo. R. Fitch.

September 22, 1894.

[447]*G. R. Fitch, 319 Broadway, New York:—

N. P. Steamship Co. have now declined to handle lead for Yokohama, Kobe, Hong Kong, or Shanghai. Please cancel your quotation.

0.900.

J. B. Baird. WDB.

On September 24, 1894, Fitch informed the trading company that he declined to ship the lead upon the ground that it might be contraband of war, and thereupon on the same day, the trading company wrote him a letter stating that they would hold his company responsible for any loss from failure to fulfil the contract, which letter is as follows:

September 24th, 1894.

Geo. R. Fitch, Esq., General Eastern Agent

N. P. R. R., No. 319 Broadway, City.

Dear Sir:—

Respecting your notice just received by us through your Mr. Post, that your company now decline to ship for us, via Tacoma, the 200 tons of pig lead specified in your contract with us, under date Sept. 19th, and confirmed by us under date Sept. 20th, we beg to advise that we shall hold your company responsible for any loss or damage we may suffer from the nonfulfilment of this contract with you.

We remain, dear sirs,

Very truly yours,

The American Trading Co.

(Signed) Wm. H. Stevens, Treas.

195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Thereupon, telegrams, of which the following are copies, were sent and received as indicated, in relation to the shipment in question, but were not disclosed to the trading company:

New York, Sept. 24, 1894.

J. B. Baird, N. P. R'y, St. Paul, Minn.:—

Shipment, lead to Yokohama, is now being made; shippers *refuse to accept with-[448]drawal; we have given shippers written contract.

Geo. R. Fitch.

New York, Sept. 24, 1894.

J. M. Hannaford, N. P. R'y, St. Paul, Minn.:—

Have notified American Trading Co. that shipment will be refused. They state they will hold us to contract. They are shipping hundred tons from Denver to Yokohama by steamer City of Rio from San Francisco, Oct. fourth, and expect to forward this shipment same way; will charge us difference in rate. Advise quick.

Geo. R. Fitch.

Sept. 25, 1894.

G. R. Fitch, 319 Broadway, New York:—

Your wire this date to Mr. Hannaford: Dodwell, Carlill, & Co. have consented to accept the lead already contracted. Do not contract for any more. Advise quick number of pounds contracted by you and say how it will be routed. Think we should receipt for lead subject to delay.

0/900.

J. B. Baird. WDB.

Dodwell, Carlill, & Co., mentioned in the last telegram, represented the steamship company.

10. Thereupon the refusal to accept the shipment was withdrawn, and the shipment was made under the contract, and the lead, consisting of 200 tons, was, in accordance with the shipping instructions given in Fitch's letter of September 22, 1894, shipped at Newark, New Jersey, in September 27th, 1894, by the Balbeck Smelting & Refining Company for the account of the American Trading Company. This was the first shipment ever made by the American Trading Company over the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and its connecting carriers. The shipment was made in bond, for exportation at Tacoma, and was secured upon the cars by government locks and customs seals. On the afternoon *of [449] September 27, 1894, the shipment left Newark, and started on its journey, and was transferred via the Anchor Line, a carrier operating between eastern points and points on the Lakes, to Duluth, and carried from Duluth via the receivers' railroad to Tacoma, which it reached in time for shipment by the steamship company's steamer,

Tacoma, sailing October 30, 1894. On September 28th, a check for the freight upon the lead from Newark to Yokohama was handed by the trading company to Fitch, of which check, with its indorsements, the following is a copy:

The American Trading Co.

Check.

New York, Sept. 28th, 1894. No. 6096.
The National Bank of North America.
Pay to the order of the Northern Pacific
R. R. $3,360.05. Thirty-three hundred and sixty & 05/100 dollars.

The American Trading Co.
Wm. H. Stevens, Treas'r.

A. Proctor, Jr.,
Cashier.

Indorsements.

For deposit in Ninth National Bank
to Cr. of Geo. R. Fitch, Gen. East'n Ag't.

Ninth Nat'l Bank,
Indorsement,
guaranteed
of the City of N. Y.

The amount of the check was credited at the Ninth National Bank to the account of "George R. Fitch, General Eastern Agent," which was the style of the account opened by Fitch as agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad; and the account was never drawn upon in favor of the Northern Steamship Company; but all through freights received [450] *were deposited to the credit of this account and remitted to the railroad company, or its receivers, and were divided and distributed by them under their contract with the steamship company.

11. On September 28, 1894, a shipping receipt for the shipment was issued to the Balbeck Smelting & Refining Company, of which shipping receipt a copy is hereto annexed marked exhibit "B," and was delivered by the Balbeck Smelting & Refining Company to the American Trading Company, and was forthwith surrendered by the trading company to Fitch.

A bill of lading in the usual printed form, a copy of which is hercin annexed marked "C," was subsequently issued by Fitch to the American Trading Company. It was received by the clerk of the trading company without stated objection to its terms, but was not read or examined by him, or by any officer of the company, and was immediately hypothecated with the Hong Kong and Shanghai bank, as collateral security for moneys borrowed thereon by the trading company. The original of the bill of lading was negotiable and did not have stamped upon it the words "Not negotiable; shipper's copy," which appear on the shipper's copy hereto annexed, but was similar to the shipper's copy in all other respects.

On September 29th, 1894, Fitch sent a copy of this bill of lading to Dodwell, Carlill, & Co., with a letter (not disclosed to the American Trading Company) of which the following is a copy:

Northern Pacific Railroad Company.
Thomas F. Oakes, Henry C. Payne, Henry C. Rouse, Receivers.

George R. Fitch, General Eastern Agent, 319 Broadway.

Traffic Department.

New York City, Sept. 29, 1894.

Dodwell, Carlill, & Co., Tacoma, Wash.

Gentlemen:—

I hand you herewith my B/L 1507 covering shipment of pig lead for export to Amer. Trading Co. Yokohama, Japan. As I have previously advised you, I have made*contract[451] guaranteeing delivery of this supplement at Yokohama by our S. S. Tacoma sailing Oct. 30th. Will you kindly see that this connection is made without fail.

Yours truly,

(S'g'd) Geo. R. Fitch, G. E. A.

The previous letter of advice, referred to by Fitch in the foregoing letter, is lost, and no copy of it exists. It appears, however, from the following letter of acknowledgment to have borne date on September 27th:

Tacoma, Wn., October 2nd, 1894.

George R. Fitch, Esq., G. E. A., N. P. R. R., 319 Broadway, New York.

Dear Sir:—

We beg to own receipt of and thank you for your favor of the 27th ultimo, and advising the engagement of 40 tons of condensed milk and 225 tons of pig lead for our steamer Tacoma, sailing hence the 30th instant. Please keep us frequently advised of freight engagements, as we have applications now for more space for flour than our steamers will carry, and we are shutting out considerable of the latter every voyage.

Yours truly,

(Sig.) p. p. Dodwell, Carlill, & Co.
A. T. Pritchard.

12. At Tacoma the lead was delivered by the receivers to the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, and was loaded upon the Tacoma, the vessel of the steamship company which was to sail on October 30th; but about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of that day the deputy collector of the United States at that port refused to clear the vessel while the lead was on board, upon the ground that it was contraband of war, and telegraphed to the collector at Port Townsend for instructions. On the following day, which was the 31st of [452] October, the deputy collector at Tacoma received a telegram *from the collector of the United States at Port Townsend, which was as follows:

"Department advises that, unless you have evidence tending to show that the pig lead at Tacoma, and referred to in your telegram of yesterday, is to be used in the war between China and Japan, no reason is perceived why shipment should not be permitted."

In the meantime, however, the master of the vessel unloaded the lead, which delayed the ship until 9 A. M. on the morning of October 31st, when he sailed without it.

The petitioner was not notified of the delay in the transshipment of the lead until November 5th, 1894.

The next vessel on the line was the Sikh, which did not belong to the steamship company, but was a chartered ship. Her captain declined to take the lead on the ground that it was contraband. The Northern Pacific Steamship Company cabled to the owners of the vessel in London, and they adhered to the position taken by the captain.

13. The lead went forward on the next vessel, the Victoria, on December 11, 1894, and did not arrive in Yokohama until on or about January 4, 1895, instead of on or about November 18, 1894, when it would have arrived had it gone forward on the 30th of October, 1894.

14. In the meantime hostilities between China and Japan had ceased, the price of lead had fallen very considerably, and the purchaser of the shipment refused to accept it, and declared the contract null and void in consequence of the failure to deliver it promptly in accordance with the terms of the contract.

15. The price of the lead under the contract would have been $38,610.17. The lead was delivered to the trading company in Yokohama upon the surrender of the bill of lading, and, in consequence of the failure of its vendee to accept the lead, the trading company sold it for $11,331.60, which was the best price obtainable therefor at the time of the sale. The sale was made as soon [453] as a purchaser could be found. *The value of the lead on January 4, 1895, in Japan, was $11,906.16.

16. Upon the case arising on the foregoing facts, the American Trading Company has duly presented to the receivers, and to the Northern Pacific Railway Company, its claim, amounting to the sum of 26,704.02, with interest thereon from the 4th day of January, 1895, and has demanded payment thereof; but payment has been refused, and no part thereof has been paid.

195 U. S.

Mr. C. W. Bunn argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The general doctrine as to transportation by connecting lines amounts to this: That each road, confining itself to its common-law liability, is only bound, in the absence of a special contract, safely to carry over its own route and safely to deliver to the next connecting carrier, but that any one of the companies may agree that over the whole route its liability shall extend. In the absence of a special agreement to that effect, such liability will not attach; and the agreement will not be inferred from doubtful expressions or loose language, but only from clear and satisfactory evidence.

Myrick v. Michigan C. R. Co. 107 U. S. 102, 27 L. ed. 325, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; Taylor v. Maine C. R. Co. 87 Me. 302, 32 Atl. 905; Burroughs v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 100 Mass. 26, 1 Am. Rep. 78; Washburn & M. Mfg. Co. v. Providence & W. R. Co. 113 Mass. 490.

The ordinary and usual business of the railroad company the receivers had the right to do; but contracting for transportation beyond its own line is an unusual and extraordinary service, not, according to American law, pertaining or belonging to the duties of a common carrier, but requiring a special and express contract. Therefore the making of such guaranties is no part of the necessary, or even the usual, business of operating a railroad, and does not come under the authority of receivers.

Chicago Deposit Vault Co. v. McNulta, 153 U. S. 554, 38 L. ed. 819, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 915; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Wentworth, 87 Tex. 311, 28 S. W. 277.

There can be no more ground for saying that the receivers could lawfully guarantee the performance of service by the ocean carrier between Tacoma and Yokohama, than for holding that the receivers themselves could buy or charter ships, and by their operation transport the freight themselves, or that they could guarantee the earnings of ships operated by others. And will it be contended for a moment that the receivers, under the ordinary power to operate this railroad, could have set up a steamship line across the Pacific Ocean, and subjected the trust fund in their charge to the risks and liabilities of such an enterprise, or that they could have guaranteed earnings to the steamship company?

See Green Bay & M. R. Co. v. Union S. B. Co. 107 U. S. 98, 27 L. ed. 413, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Keokuk & H. Bridge Co. 131 U. S. 371, 385, 33 L. ed. 157, 161, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770; Swift v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 106 N. Y. 206, 12 N. E. 583.

The bill of lading expresses the only contract covering the rights of the parties, and the plain agreement of the bill of lading, that the receivers should not be liable beyond their terminus at Tacoma, is a part of that contract.

Seitz v. Brewers' Refrigerator Co. 141 U. S. 510, 35 L. ed. 837, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 46; De Witt v. Berry, 134 U. S. 306, 33 L. ed. 896, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 536; Shelton v. Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. 59 N. Y. 258; Hill v. Syracuse, B. & N. Y. R. Co. 73 N. Y. 351, 29 Am. Rep. 163; Germania F. Ins. Co. v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 72 N. Y. 90, 28 Am. Rep. 113; Rubens v. Ludgate Hill S. S. Co. 48 N. Y. S. R. 732, 20 N. Y. Supp. 481.

The collector's action in refusing the boat to carry the lead made the performance of the agreement not only impossible, but unlawful, and absolved the carriers from the agreement to carry by that boat.

Brewster v. Kitchell, 1 Salk. 198; Baily v. De Crespigny, L. R. 4 Q. B. 180; Leake, Contr. 710-713.

Probably the deputy collector erred. Contraband as the lead doubtless was, trade therein was lawful.

Kent Com. 14th ed. *142, 143 and notes (c) and 1; The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. 283, 340, 5 L. ed. 454, 468; Richardson v. Maine F. & M. Ins. Co. 6 Mass. 102, 4 Am. Dec. 92; 11 Ops. Atty. Gen. 408; The Helen, L. R. 1 Ad. & Eccl. 1.

But, rightly or wrongly, the United States officers charged with authority did withhold the clearance, and for the ship to sail without clearance would have been an offense against the laws of the United States.

It is indeed true that a party may bind himself to do an act in such a way that a subsequent arising impossibility is no defense; but that is not this case.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 149 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 625, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779.

That the performance of a contract to traffic with an enemy is excused by a declaration of war, and that an embargo excuses performance, are well settled.

Dermott v. Jones (Ingle v. Jones) 2 Wall. 1, 7, 17 L. ed. 762, 764; Hanger v. Abbott, 6 Wall. 532, 535, 536, 18 L. ed. 939, 941, 942; Baylies v. Fettyplace, 7 Mass. 325.

Parties will be presumed to have contracted with reference to the necessity of obeying the laws of their own country, and performance is for that reason excused, where obedience becomes illegal.

Leake, Contr. 4th ed. pp. 497, 501.

Appellee suggests that the captain should have sailed without a clearance. Not only would that have been a violation of the statute, but it would have involved the ship in other troubles.

Abbott, Shipping, 9th ed. 288, 289; Lushington, Naval Prize Law, 24-28, 29-34.

Mr. F. B. Jennings argued the cause, and, with Mr. Howard van Sinderen, filed a brief for appellee:

A common carrier has power to contract for transportation beyond the terminus of its line, even though such carriage extend into another state or country.

Elliott, Railroads, § 1434; Redf. Railways, §§ 189, 191; Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 151, 152; Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123, 22 L. ed. 827; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 693.

With respect to such contracts and transportation the receivers were liable to third parties, in all respects, to the same extent as the railroad company would have been liable by law.

Beers v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 34 Fed. 247; Elliott, Railroads, § 567; Hutchinson, Carr. § 67a; Beach, Receivers, § 371; Central Trust Co. v. New York City & N. R. Co. 110 N. Y. 257, 1 L. R. A. 260, 18 N. E. 92; Little v. Dusenberry, 46 N. J. L. 614, 50 Am. Rep. 445; Wall v. Platt, 169 Mass. 400, 48 N. E. 270; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Bayles, 19 Colo. 348, 35 Pac. 744.

The real authority of an agent is equal to his apparent authority, and he can make any contract relative to the business under his management, which could be made by his principal.

Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wilkinson, 13 Wall. 222, 235, 20 L. ed. 617, 623; Goldwater v. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. 39 Hun, 178, 109 N. Y. 618, 15 N. E. 895; Pechner v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 65 N. Y. 195; Lowenstein v. Lombard, 164 N. Y. 324, 58 N. E. 44; Isaacson v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 94 N. Y. 278, 46 Am. Rep. 142; Talcott v. Wabash R. Co. 159 N. Y. 461, 54 N. E. 1; Porter, Bills of Lading, § 159; Hutchinson, Carr. § 267.

A general freight agent has authority to contract for the carriage of goods beyond the limit of the carrier's line.

Ray, Negligence of Imposed Duties, p. 400; White v. Missouri P. R. Co. 19 Mo. App. 400; Grover & B. Sewing Mach. Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 70 Mo. 672, 35 Am. Rep. 444.

The agent of a railroad has power to stipulate for carriage within a specified time.

Strohn v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 23 Wis. 126, 99 Am. Dec. 114.

Fitch had authority to bind his principals to forward the goods per steamship "Tacoma," sailing October 30th.

Goddard v. Mallory, 52 Barb. 87; Goodrich v. Thompson, 44 N. Y. 324.

The consent of both parties was just as essential to the annulment or modification of the contract as to its inception.

Wheeler v. New Brunswick & C. R. Co.

115 U. S. 34, 29 L. ed. 343, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1061, 1160.

Assent to the modification of a shipping contract under which goods have gone forward will never be implied from the subsequent receipt of a bill of lading without stated objection to its terms.

Bostwick v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 45 N. Y. 712; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Beeson, 30 Kan. 298, 2 Pac. 496; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 319, 21 L. ed. 297; Swift v. Pacific Mail S. S. Co. 106 N. Y. 206, 12 N. E. 583; Mobile & M. R. Co. v. Jurey, 111 U. S. 584, 28 L. ed. 527, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Park v. Preston, 108 N. Y. 434, 15 N. E. 705; Guillaume v. General Transp. Co. 100 N. Y. 491, 3 N. E. 489; Strohn v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 21 Wis. 555, 94 Am. Dec. 564; King v. Woodbridge, 34 Vt. 565; Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 246, 247; McAbsher v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 108 N. C. 344, 12 S. E. 892; Hamilton v. Western N. C. R. Co. 96 N. C. 398, 3 S. E. 164; Central R. Co. v. Dwight Mfg. Co. 75 Ga. 609; Baker v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. 42 Ill. 73; Merchants' Despatch Transp. Co. v. Furthmann, 149 Ill. 66, 41 Am. St. Rep. 265, 36 N. E. 624; Michigan C. R. Co. v. Mineral Springs Mfg. Co. 16 Wall. 318, 329, 21 L. ed. 297; Pollard v. Vinton, 105 U. S. 8, 26 L. ed. 999.

The trading company's dealings with the bank could not affect the carrier's obligation to the trading company.

Gaines v. Union Transp. & Ins. Co. 28 Ohio St. 418.

The deputy collector's act in refusing clearance is conceded to have been unlawful, and, clearly, it was so.

Treasury Decisions, August, 1865-1883; Hendricks v. Gonzales, 14 C. C. A. 659, 35 U. S. App. 127, 67 Fed. 351.

There can be no such thing as illegality subsequently arising which could take the case out of the operation of the rule as laid down in respect to impossibility of performance subsequently arising.

Davis v. Wallace, 3 Cliff. 123, Fed. Cas. No. 3,657.

The performance of this contract did not become illegal in consequence of the unlawful interference by the collector; and even under the English law it is well settled that under such circumstances the carrier would not be excused, but would be liable to the shipper, and would then have its action for damages against the official who unlawfully and improperly interfered.

Gosling v. Higgins, 1 Campb. 481; Evans v. Hutton, 12 L. J. C. P. N. S. 17.

Where the collector, unlawfully and in violation of his duty as prescribed by this section, refused to grant a clearance, the vessel would be justified in sailing without it, subject of course to the payment of the fine fixed by the act, which it could then recover from the collector.

Hendricks v. Gonzales, 14 C. C. A. 659, 35 U. S. App. 127, 67 Fed. 357; Schell v. Cochran, 107 U. S. 625, 27 L. ed. 543, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 827; Cruikshank v. Bidwell, 176 U. S. 73-81, 44 L. ed. 377-381, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 280; United States v. Sherman, 98 U. S. 565, 25 L. ed. 235.

Even if the receivers were prevented from a literal compliance with the terms of the contract, they were still bound to perform it in substance.

Williams v. Vanderbilt, 28 N. Y. 217, 84 Am. Dec. 333.

Impossibility of performance arising subsequently to the making of a contract constitutes no defense.

Jacksonville, M. P. R. & Nav. Co. v. Hooper, 160 U. S. 514, 527, 40 L. ed. 515, 524, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 379; Hutchinson, Carr. § 317; Jones v. United States, 96 U. S. 24, 29, 24 L. ed. 644, 646; Robson v. Mississippi River Logging Co. 61 Fed. 900, 16 C. C. A. 400, 32 U. S. App. 520, 69 Fed. 777; The Harriman (The Harriman v. Emerick) 9 Wall. 161, 19 L. ed. 631; Beebe v. Johnson, 19 Wend. 500, 32 Am. Dec. 518; Blight v. Page, 3 Bos. & P. 295 note; Barker v. Hodgson, 3 Maule & S. 271; Medeiros v. Hill, 8 Bing. 235; Ashmore v. Cox [1899] 1 Q. B. 436; 1 Parsons, Contr.* p. 566; Addison, Contr. *pp. 1195, 1198; Atkinson v. Ritchie, 10 East, 530; Harmony v. Bingham, 12 N. Y. 99, 62 Am. Dec. 142; Hale v. Rawson, 4 C. B. N. S. 85; Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray, 165; Splidt v. Heath, 2 Campb. 57 note; Spence v. Chadwick, 10 Q. B. 517; Hayward v. Scougall, 2 Campb. 56; Story, Contr. § 1334.

The damages which have been suffered by the appellee were those clearly due to the negligent omission of the carriers to exercise that degree of diligence in the interest of shippers which the law requires.

Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 186, 188, 208, 209; Robinson v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 16 Fed. 57.

Even if the negligence were that of the steamship company, the receivers, having contracted for through transportation, would still be liable.

Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 693; Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123, 22 L. ed. 827.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The objections to the recovery, herein made on the argument, were—

(1) That no contract was shown, on the part of the receivers, to assume any responsibility for the transportation of the lead beyond the line of the railway in their charge.

[458] * (2) That there was no proof that the court had authorized the receivers to assume any such responsibility, and they could not do so without any such authority.

(3) That if Fitch, the agent, made such agreement, it was not within his authority, real or apparent.

(4) That the bill of lading is the controlling contract, and by its terms the receivers were not liable beyond their own line.

(5) That the damages were caused solely by the act of the collector, representing the authority of the United States; and the receivers are not liable for damages so caused.

In regard to the first objection, we think the facts agreed upon clearly show a special agreement for the transportation of the lead to Yokohama by the steamship of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company, which was to leave Tacoma on the 30th of October, 1894. The opening of the negotiation was made by the American Trading Company, which applied to Fitch for a rate upon the proposed shipment from New York to Yokohama, Japan. The trading company knew nothing of his steamship agency, and he was informed that it was of vital importance that the lead should be transported promptly, and go forward by the earliest possible steamer without delay, in order to enable the trading company to fulfil a proposed agreement which it was about to make for the sale of the lead in Japan, and which would require its delivery there at a fixed date. Fitch thereupon named a rate, and undertook to forward the lead from New York to Yokohama, on or before September 29, via the Northern Pacific steamer sailing from Tacoma October 30, 1894. The trading company thereupon made its proposed agreement through its agents at Yokohama. Although Fitch, the agent, was not thereafter specially informed of the fact that the proposed agreement had been made, yet he was informed that the company intended to make it if a rate could be agreed upon for the transportation of the lead. It is clear that his furnishing of the rate was with reference to the [459] proposed agreement, *and that he understood that, if his terms were accepted, he was entering into an agreement to transport to Japan the lead in question over the Northern Pacific railroad to Tacoma, and by the steamship which would leave Tacoma on the 30th of October, 1894. His letter of September 19, 1894, to the trading company, confirming the rate, is a plain agreement, not alone to deliver the lead in time for the sailing of the steamer, October 30, but an agreement that the lead should be forwarded from Tacoma, Washington, via the Northern Pacific steamer sailing on that day. Fitch in that letter asking the trading company to forward their acceptance of this proposed agreement as early as possible. On the next day, September 20, the trading company, by letter, did accept the rate "for a shipment of pig lead, to consist of not less than 400,000 pounds, to be forwarded from New York to Tacoma, and from Tacoma via the Northern Pacific steamer sailing from that port October 30." There is no doubtful expression in these letters. They form a clear and specific contract. It is entirely different from Myrick v. Michigan C. R. Co. 107 U. S. 102, 27 L. ed. 325, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. The receipt in that case was plainly not one which established a contract for transportation on the part of the railroad company (defendant) beyond its own line. This court held that while a company might, by a contract to that effect, be held liable for the transportation and delivery of freight beyond its own line, yet the contract to do so must be clear; and that the mere stating of a through fare on the receipt of the freight does not establish such contract or liability.

In the case at bar we hold that a special agreement is set forth in the statement of facts, to forward to Yokohama by the steamer leaving Tacoma on October 30, 1894. If it had been made by the proper officer of a railroad company in the general course of business we have no doubt, under the authorities, of the validity of the contract. Ogdensburg & L. & C. R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123, 22 L. ed. 827; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 24 L. ed. 693; Myrick v. Michigan C. R. Co. 107 U. S. *102, 27 L. ed. 325, [460] 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 425. Whether the fact that it was made by an agent of the receivers of a railroad company makes any difference will be discussed later.

Appellant urges, however, that, as Fitch was also agent for the steamship company, his contract, if there was one, to forward by the steamship sailing October 30, was in behalf of the steamship company. Fitch had never received any direct or independent appointment or authority from the Northern Pacific Steamship Company to act as its agent. His only authority as agent of that company was created by the contract made between the two companies. By that agreement the railroad company was to have the exclusive right (with certain exceptions) to appoint agents in the United States, etc.; and the steamship company thereby authorized the railroad company and its appointed agents to act as agents for the steamship company, and to issue bills of lading and passenger tickets, and to make and name rates on all traffic for Asiatic points, etc. The trading company did not know what company operated the steamships between Tacoma and Yokohama, or that the steamship company was a separate and independent company, or that there was any contract between the receivers and the steamship company. When the trading company, therefore, applied to Fitch for a rate, they applied to him as the agent of the receivers of the railroad company. The letter of Fitch of the 19th of September, confirming the rate already given orally that day, is written on the paper used by the receivers of the railroad company, which paper is headed by the names of the receivers under the words "Northern Pacific Railroad Co.;" and in it Fitch describes himself as "general eastern agent," and his department as the "Traffic Department in New York city," and he signs his name, and adds the words "G. E. Agent." In his letter of September 29, 1894, to the steamship agent at Tacoma, Washington, he writes on the same kind of paper, with the same heading, and describes himself as "general eastern agent;" and in the letter he says: "As I have previously advised you, I [461] have made contract *guaranteeing delivery of this shipment at Yokohama by our S. S. Tacoma, sailing October 30. Will you kindly see that this connection is made, without fail." He signs his name, and adds the letters G. E. A., meaning, of course, thereby "general eastern agent." It is contended that, by the statement of facts, it appears that Fitch was acting for two principals, and that the plaintiff must establish that Fitch made the alleged guaranty on behalf of the receivers. We do not think he was acting in behalf of two principals. From all the facts, we think it plain that he was acting for the receivers of the railroad company. He was their general eastern agent; he was applied to, and he made his rates, as such, and as such he signed the letter confirming those rates, and containing the agreement to forward the lead on the steamship as already stated. Subsequently, and on the 29th of September, while acting and signing himself as the general eastern agent of the receivers, he writes to the steamship agents at Tacoma the letter in which he says he has guaranteed delivery at Yokohama, by "our steamer" sailing October 30. All this shows the fact that he was acting as agent for the receivers.

We have no difficulty in determining the capacity in which Fitch acted, nor that he made the special agreement, as contended by the trading company.

(2) Neither do we doubt that the court had authorized the receivers to make such a contract.

Under the modern methods of foreclosing railroad mortgages, it has been the custom to appoint receivers to take charge and conduct the business of the railroad mortgagor during the pendency of the suit. The possession of such receivers frequently lasts for years.

195 U. S.

It would be in the highest degree disadvantageous to all interested in the railroad company, as well as to the public having occasion to do business with it, if the same power which the company possessed to make special contracts for transportation should not be given to and exercised by the receivers of the company in continuing to run the road in substance as a going concern, so far as these *kinds of contracts are concerned. Such con-[462] tracts are not of the character spoken of by Mr. Justice Jackson in Chicago Deposit Vault Co. v. McNulta, 153 U. S. 554, 38 L. ed. 819, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 915, as so extraordinary or unusual as not to be included in the authority to carry on the business of the company. On the contrary, this contract is one of that class which we regard as so included.

(3) We are also of opinion that Fitch had the right to make the agreement in question, and, if there could be any doubt on that point, nevertheless the agreement was in fact thereafter ratified by the officers representing the receivers, who had power so to do. Goodrich v. Thompson, 44 N. Y. 324.

A railroad company has the power, as we have seen, to make such a contract of carriage beyond its lines. A general agent would be presumed to have such power. If the company have the power, some individual must exercise it. It would not be supposed that the board of directors would be consulted, and authority given by it every time such a contract was to be made. Who is a more proper or fit person to make the contract than the general agent of the company? He must necessarily have large powers in order to conduct the business of his office, and, prima facie, such power is within the scope of such agency. When the railroad company passes into the hands of a receiver, appointed by the court in a foreclosure suit, and the receiver is directed to conduct and continue the business of the company, the power to appoint general agents necessarily goes with the order to conduct the business of the company; and when the general agent is appointed by a receiver, he will be presumed to have the general powers of such an officer when acting for the railroad itself. The words "general eastern agent" for a western railroad company only limit the exercise of the agency to the place so described.

(4) It is urged that the bill of lading constitutes the sole contract. But there was a plain, valid contract existing between the parties before the lead was shipped, and before any bill of lading was issued. That special contract was to forward *the lead by [463] the steamship leaving Tacoma on the 30th of October. The next day after the lead was shipped at Newark, a bill of lading was delivered to one of the clerks of the trading company, and that bill of lading contains the absolutely inconsistent statement that the carrier is not to be liable for any loss not occurring on its own road, and that the contract, as executed, is accomplished, and all liability thereunder terminates, upon the delivery of the property to the steamship.

It is said that the trading company, by receiving this bill of lading and obtaining money on it as the representative of the property therein described, has acquiesced in the total abolition of the special contract the company made with Fitch, and has agreed that the railroad company shall be under no liability after the delivery of the lead to the steamship.

We regard it as entirely clear that no such effacement of the original contract was meant by the receipt of the bill of lading. The railroad company had no power alone to alter that contract, and it could not alter it by simply issuing a bill of lading, unless the other party assented to its conditions, and thereby made a new and different contract.

At the time when the bill of lading was issued the lead had been shipped at Newark, and had departed for its destination. It was impossible for the trading company to recall it. The particular conditions in the bill are set out in subdivision 3 and subdivision 12 of the conditions printed in small type, and they form part of numerous other printed conditions in regard to the freight received.

Where the acceptance of the bill of lading, under these circumstances, is sought to be made an equivalent to an assent to the change of contract, it is proper to look at these facts in order to determine what weight should be given to such acceptance. At the time it was received the lead was out of the possession of the trading company, on its way West. That company needed the bill of lading as evidence of title to the property described in it, upon the security of which [464] it *desired to raise money, which it could not do without the possession of the bill. Under these circumstances, we refuse to hold that the trading company, in accepting the bill of lading, thereby consented to the complete alteration of its original contract, and without any consideration whatever, agreed to release the railroad company from all liability on that contract, and to take in its stead the reduced liability provided for in the bill of lading.

Of course the company expected a bill of lading, for such an instrument is the usual accompaniment in shipping merchandise. The bill showed the amount of the lead, the marks and numbers, etc., and so identified the goods as to enable the shippers to show their amount and general value, and to enable them to negotiate the bill and obtain money on its security.

It is agreed in the statement of facts that this bill of lading was received by a clerk of the trading company without stated objection to its terms, but was not read or examined by him, or by any officer of the company, and was immediately hypothecated with a bank as collateral security for the money borrowed thereon by the trading company. We do not state the fact that the bill of lading was not examined, for the purpose of insisting that an examination of such an instrument must always be shown before a contract can be predicated thereon. But where there is a valid contract already in existence, and it is urged that such contract has been abrogated or changed by the receipt of a bill of lading, after goods have passed from the control of the shipper, we think it is important, upon the question of whether such original contract has, in fact, been abrogated, to show that the bill was never read in fact; that the conditions abrogating the original contract were among a number of other conditions printed in the bill in smaller type than the rest of the bill, and that the alleged acquiescence of the trading company in the change of the contract, by virtue of these conditions, is based upon the mere reception of the bill of lading by a clerk without any knowledge of the existence of these conditions, and without evidence *of [465] any authority in him to consent to a modification of the contract already made by his employer. The fact, that, in such ignorance, that company hypothecated the bill of lading, adds nothing to the alleged acquiescence. What the contract meant as between the railroad company and the bank or other assignee of the bill of lading is not important here; but, upon these facts, we are unable to see that the receipt and holding of the bill of lading changed the original contract as claimed by the railroad company. See Bostwick v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 45 N. Y. 712, where it was held, under the circumstances of that case, the mere acceptance of a bill of lading did not alter a previously made oral contract in relation to the shipment.

(5) Even if the receivers of the railroad company contracted to forward the lead by the steamer sailing from Tacoma October 30, it is still insisted that the action of the deputy collector, at Tacoma, in refusing to grant a clearance to the steamship while the lead was on board, made the performance of the agreement not only impossible, but unlawful; and, for that reason, the receivers were absolved from their agreement to forward by that vessel. The contract was not unlawful when made. It may be assumed that the lead was contraband of war; but that fact did not render the contract of transportation illegal, nor absolve the carrier from fulfilling it. It is legal to export articles which are contraband of war; but the articles, and the ship which carries them, are subject to the risk of capture and forfeiture. The Santissima Trinidad, 7 Wheat. 283, 340, 5 L. ed. 454, 468. Neither any law of the United States, nor any provision of international law, was violated by the making of this contract, nor by an attempt to export the lead pursuant to its provisions. The case does not come within the principle of Brewster v. Kitchell, 1 Salk. 198, where it was said that, if one covenants to do a thing which is lawful, and an act of Parliament comes in and hinders him from doing it, the covenant is repealed.

No act of Congress was passed, subsequently [466] to the making* of the contract, which made it unlawful, and it was lawful when made. It is true that the sailing of the vessel without a clearance would have been unlawful, and the deputy collector refused to grant that necessary document while the lead was on board the steamship. But that did not render unlawful the contract to transport. He had the power to refuse to grant the clearance, and he did refuse unless the lead were taken off. In so doing he undoubtedly violated his duty. He was not justified in exacting any such condition for granting the clearance.

Upon the facts in this case, we are of opinion that this refusal of the deputy collector constituted no defense to the action on the contract. It is not within the exception referred to by Mr. Justice Jackson, in delivering the opinion of the court in Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hoyt, 149 U. S. 1, 37 L. ed. 625, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779. This contract, in view of all the facts, we think was made in contemplation of trouble arising from the character of the lead as contraband of war.

The statement of facts shows that the question of whether the lead might not be excluded from transportation as contraband in view of the war then existing between China and Japan was fully understood before the contract was made, and after it was made, and the steamship refused to carry the lead, the trading company, upon being so informed by Fitch, notified him that they would hold the receivers responsible for failure to fulfil the contract; and thereafter, with the attention of all the parties directed to the subject, it was finally agreed that the lead should be received and transported, and the refusal was then withdrawn.

It is true that the special and particular difficulty was first made by the steamship company which refused to transport the lead, yet, still, the attention of all the parties was, from the very first, directed to the peculiar character of the freight as contraband of war, and whether the contract should on that account be made, or, having been made, whether the shipment should not be refused. The receivers, therefore, knew *that there might be difficulty in relation to [467] the transportation, and yet, after full knowledge on the subject, they agreed to, and did, withdraw their refusal; and they thereupon took the lead for transportation under the contract.
195 U. S.

Under these circumstances, it ought not to be held that the mistaken action of the deputy collector in refusing to give the clearance should operate as an excuse for the nonperformance of the contract, which was not thereby rendered illegal. It cannot be affirmed that such possible refusal was not within the contemplation of the contracting parties when the contract was made. Many causes, it was known, might operate to obstruct the transportation of articles contraband of war: This particular form of impediment may not have been actually within the minds of the parties to the contract, but there was, as the agreed facts show, present to their minds the fact that there might be trouble in procuring the transportation of the lead because of its character as contraband of war, and in the light of those facts the contract was made, and, in substance, ratified after it was made. The railroad receivers took the risk of this, as of other obstructions, in making the contract, and they ought to be held to it.

As the act of the deputy collector was an erroneous one, and a clearance should have been given while the lead was on board the steamship, we think his refusal should not be at the expense of the shippers, who had obtained this contract for transportation while all parties actually knew the difficulties that might concern the exportation of the lead from Tacoma. The state had not intervened to prevent the performance of the contract, as was the case in Touteng v. Hubbard, 3 Bos. & P. 291, where Lord Alvanley held that in such circumstances the party will be excused. In that case there was an embargo laid by the British government, after the contract was made, on all Swedish vessels.

Here there was no intervention of the government of the United States. The exportation of lead was never prohibited by the Treasury Department during the war between China *and Japan. There was no [468] change in the law or the policy of this government subsequently to the making of the contract, by which its performance was excused. The exportation of the lead was legal when the contract was made, and continued to be so after the execution of such contract, although the deputy collector mistakenly refused to grant the clearance unless the lead was taken off the vessel. Such mistaken decision did not render the original loading of the lead on the ship unlawful, nor would it have been unlawful for the ship to proceed with the lead on board provided the clearance had been had. It was not an act of the state, therefore, which prevented the sailing of the vessel, within the true meaning of such a term, but a mistaken act of a subordinate official, not justified by law, and not sufficient as an excuse for the nonperformance of the contract in question under the circumstances already detailed. If the bill of lading were regarded as applicable for this purpose, the refusal of the clearance did not constitute a "restraint of princes, rulers, or people," within that clause of the bill.

It was one of the contingencies of which the receivers undertook by their special contract of transportation to take the risk. It was not a contract that they should violate the law, but they took the risk of its misapplication, believing of course, that such contingency was most remote, and that, if the steamship company would receive the lead for transportation, the chief obstacle to the fulfilment of the contract would be thereby removed.

[469] After the lead had been unshipped, and within half an hour after the sailing of the vessel, the telegram which the deputy collector had sent to the collector in regard to the matter was answered by the latter in such terms that, undoubtedly, if the ship had been still in port, the lead would have been placed thereon and transported to Japan. The master, however, as soon as the determination of the deputy collector was given, immediately, and without appealing to the collector, unshipped the lead, and sailed for his destination at once. *The result of the failure thus to carry the lead on that vessel was that it did not arrive in Yokohama until on or about January 4, 1895, instead of on or about November 18, 1894, which it would have done had it gone forward as contracted for. In the meantime, the war between China and Japan ceased, the value of the lead fell, and the trading company was damaged as stated in the finding of facts.

We think the objections made to this recovery are untenable, and the decree of the court below is, therefore, affirmed.

UNITED STATES and the Kiowa Indians, Appts.,
v.

JUAN B. MARTINEZ, Administrator of Julio Martinez, Deceased.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 469-480.)

Pleading—amendment in Indian depredation cases—limitation.

A petition in an action under the Indian depredation act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758), in which the wrong was alleged to have been committed by a particular Indian tribe, cannot be amended after the three years' limitation prescribed by that act has expired, by stating another and different tribe as the wrongdoer, since it is manifestly intended by the statute, taken as a whole, that the tribe by whom the depredation was committed shall be joined in the petition where it can be identified, though it does not in terms provide for service of process upon such tribe.

[No. 15.]

Argued October 21, 24, 1904. Decided December 5, 1904.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review an award of damages in an action under the Indian depredation act. Reversed, with directions to dismiss the petition.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This action was brought in the court of claims on October 24, 1891, to recover damages against the United States and the Ute tribe of Indians, in the sum of $1,400, the value of certain sheep alleged to have been taken and destroyed or used in June, 1873, by the said Indians. The petition was filed under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891, entitled "An act to Provide for the Adjudication and Payment of Claims Arising from Indian Depredations." 26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758. On February 5, 1902, the Assistant Attorney General of the United States answered the allegations of the petition *by a [470] general denial. On November 4, 1902, the claimant filed a motion for leave to file an amended petition, charging the depredation to have been committed by the Kiowa Indians, which motion was allowed, and upon the same day the amended petition was filed. On November 5, 1902, the Assistant Attorney General, appearing on behalf of the United States and the Kiowa Indians, filed a plea to the amended petition, setting up that no action had been commenced against the Kiowa Indians within three years after the passage of the act of March 3, 1891. On November 11, 1902, this plea in bar was overruled, and, upon the general issue being pleaded and trial had, the court found as a matter of fact: At the time of the depredation the claimant's decedent was a citizen of the United States. In June, 1873, in Mora county, New Mexico, Indians belonging to the Kiowa tribe took and drove away property of the kind and character described in the petition, the property of claimant's decedent, which was reasonably worth the sum of $690. At the time of said depredation defendant Indians were in amity with the United States.

As a conclusion of law, the majority of the court decided that the claimant recover a judgment against the United States and the Kiowa Indians, in the sum of $690.

The defendants appealed to this court.

Mr. Lincoln B. Smith, by special leave, argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Thompson, filed a brief for appellants:

It is not permissible to bring in a new party defendant by an amendment after the statute of limitations has run in his favor.

Miller v. M'Intyre, 6 Pet. 61, 8 L. ed. 320; Sicard v. Davis, 6 Pet. 124, 8 L. ed. 342; Crowl v. Nagle, 86 Ill. 437; Dunphy v. Riddle, 86 Ill. 22; Clark v. Manning, 95 Ill. 580.

Supposed hardships do not affect limitation.

Jones v. Lemon, 26 W. Va. 629; Kendall v. United States, 107 U. S. 123, 27 L. ed. 437, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 277; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 320, 32 L. ed. 953, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537.

The statutory provision which applies in this case is not identical with the ordinary statutes of limitation, but in this respect is stronger than such statutes, inasmuch as its prescription does not merely apply to the right of action on the claim, but declares the demand barred, so that the court will interpose the statute in bar of a suit, whether or not it is pleaded by counsel for the defendants.

Kendall v. United States, 14 Ct. Cl. 122.

Mr. William H. Robeson argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The tribe is not a necessary party to the suit.

Kemp v. United States, No. 4,777 Ct. Cl. Duran v. United States, 31 Ct. Cl. 357, 29 Ct. Cl. 97; United States v. Gorham, 165 U. S. 316, 41 L. ed. 729, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382; Graham v. United States, 30 Ct. Cl. 318; Woolverton v. United States, 29 Ct. Cl. 107.

Where suits must be brought within a fixed jurisdictional period, the court will not allow a meritorious cause of action to fail because of a mistake of parties or attorneys, if it can be saved by amendment.

195 U. S.

Cowan Infants' Case, 5 Ct. Cl. 107; Thomas's Motion, 15 Ct. Cl. 335, 360.

A suit brought in the name of one partner as the sole owner may be amended, after the expiration of the statutory period, by the bringing in of the other partners so that they may participate in the judgment.

Garcia v. United States, 37 Ct. Cl. 243.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This claim arises under the Indian depredation act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 851, chap. 538, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 758), and presents the question whether, after the expiration of three years from the filing of the petition in the court of claims, a tribe of Indians not originally named in the petition can be brought into the action by amended petition, with a view to proceeding against such tribe to judgment. The record discloses that the original petition was filed on October 24, 1891; the amended petition on November 4, 1902. The Attorney General filed a plea setting up the bar of the statute, which plea was overruled, and thereafter, upon issue joined and testimony taken, judgment was rendered against the tribe of Indians so brought in by the amended petition.

The act in question was before this court in United States v. Gorham, 165 U. S. 316, 41 L. ed. 729, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382, and in that case it was held that, where the Indian tribe cannot be identified, a judgment for the amount of the claim can be rendered against the United States. In the opinion of the court in that case, the act was analyzed and its various sections construed; and it only remains to consider so much of the act and its purposes as will lead to a solution of the question now under consideration.

The provisions of the 1st section of the act are positive,—that all claims existing at the time of the taking effect of the act shall be presented to the court by petition, as therein *provided, within three years after the passage of the act, or be forever barred. This section, by itself considered, would seem to conclude the right of the petitioner to bring in a new party to the proceeding after the expiration of three years, in such wise as to preclude the right to rely upon the bar of the statute. For obvious reasons, a party brought into court by an amendment, and who has, for the first time, an opportunity to make defense to the action, has a right to treat the proceeding, as to him, as commenced by the process which brings him into court. Miller v. M'Intyre, 6 Pet. 61, 8 L. ed. 320. Conceding this proposition as applied to ordinary actions, it is urged that this proceeding is so peculiar in character as to take it out of the general rule. Section 3 of the act provides:

"That all claims shall be presented to the court by petition, setting forth in ordinary and concise language, without unnecessary repetition, the facts upon which such claims are based, the persons, classes of persons, tribe or tribes or band of Indians by whom the alleged illegal acts were committed, as near as may be, the property lost or destroyed and the value thereof, and any other facts connected with the transactions, and material to the proper adjudication of the case involved."

The 5th section of the statute provides:

"That the court shall determine, in each case, the value of the property taken or destroyed at the time and place of the loss or destruction, and, if possible, the tribe of Indians or other persons by whom the wrong was committed, and shall render judgment in favor of the claimant or claimants against the United States, and against the tribe of Indians committing the wrong, when such can be identified."

Section 4 provides for service upon the Attorney General, whose duty it is to appear and defend for both the interests of the government and the Indians, and giving to any Indian or Indians interested in the proceedings the right to appear and defend by an attorney employed with the approval of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. By [474] the 6th section the *amount of the judgment is charged against the tribe by which or the members of which the depredation was committed; and if no annuity, fund, or appropriation is available as provided, the judgment is to be paid from the treasury of the United States, to remain a charge against the tribe, and to be deducted from any annuity, fund, or appropriation thereafter due from the United States to such tribe. It is contended that, inasmuch as the Indian tribes are not necessary parties to the proceeding, and are not required to be served with process except so far as the notice to the Attorney General is such service, and are only to be described "as near as may be," they may be brought in at any time before judgment, whenever such tribe "can be identified," as set forth in the 5th section of the act. The reasons for this conclusion are fully set forth in the opinion of the court of claims in Duran v. United States, 31 Ct. Cl. 353. But we are unable to concur in the conclusions therein reached. In our view, the act provides for a recovery of depredation claims in two classes of cases: the one where the persons, classes of persons, tribe or tribes or band of Indians cannot be identified, in which event the United States may be held liable, upon proof complying with other terms of the act, though failing to identify the particular depredators; the other, where the persons or tribe described in the act can be identified, in which event they must be named in the petition, and the judgment will go against the United States and the tribe committing the wrong, to be satisfied primarily out of the funds of the Indians. As was said in the Gorham Case, 165 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 731, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384: "It may be fairly claimed that, reading all the provisions together, the act makes it necessary, when known, to join with the United States the Indians or tribe of Indians by whom the illegal acts are alleged or are supposed to have been committed."

Whichever form the action takes, it must be brought within three years after the passage of the act, as provided by the 1st section. In requiring the band or tribe of Indians to be described as near as may be, it is the purpose of the act to *require such [475] tribe, primarily liable for the injury, to be brought before the court, when they can be identified, for the purpose of the judgment authorized in the 5th section. All the sections are to be read together to effectuate the purpose of the law; and when the tribe "can be identified," it must be described as near as may be; that is, with reasonable accuracy, sufficiently identifying the party for the purposes of the action and judgment, resorting to the liability of the United States alone only in cases where the offending parties cannot be identified. The claimant, under the statute, has three years for the purpose of investigating his cause of action, and, in cases where it can be done, identifying the tribe sufficiently for the purposes of pleading and judgment against both the United States and the Indian tribe, or, in the alternative, proceeding against the United States alone. It is true that the act does not, in terms, provide for service upon the Indian tribes, their agents or attorneys, and the Attorney General is required to appear for them as well as for the United States. Of this provision, Mr. Justice Peckham, speaking for the court in the Gorham Case, 165 U. S. 321, 41 L. ed. 731, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 384, said: "Although the 4th section provides for the defense of the claim by the law officer of the government, under any circumstances, yet, as the interest of the Indians is embraced in the inquiry before the court because of their liability to a judgment against them if identified, and to a payment of that judgment out of the annuities or otherwise, as provided for in the 6th section, it is proper to allow them to appear, and defend also by their own attorney." When brought into court they may give, by special counsel, more careful attention to their particular defense than could be given by the law officer of the government charged with the defense of thousands of similar claims. But it is said that the Attorney General, by failing to promptly raise, by plea, the defense of misjoinder, is quite as much in fault as the petitioner, in permitting more than three years to elapse before the new party is brought in; and it is said that, at the common law, this objection could only be raised [476] by such plea seasonably *interposed. At common law, where it was sought to bring in another party jointly liable, a plea by the defendant, setting forth the nonjoinder, and giving the name of such party, was the proper method of procedure. 3 Chitty, Pl. [901] and notes. But such is not the present case. The original petition charged positively that the depredation was committed by the Ute Indians. It was sufficient for the Attorney General to plead the general issue to put the plaintiff upon proof of his allegations. It is said that eleven thousand of these cases have been begun; and it is not to be presumed that the Attorney General would know the facts of each case, and be in possession of information to fulfil the requisite of a good plea, and furnish the name of the party to be impleaded. It was for the plaintiff to make such investigation as would warrant the beginning of the action against the proper tribe, or against the United States alone, averring that the particular tribe could not be identified.

It is further insisted that it is the purpose of the act, as provided for in the 5th section, to require the judgment to be rendered against the Indian tribe, if it can be identified, at any time before judgment, and that this construction is required to protect the interests of the United States. But we think this section should be read in connection with the other sections of the act, and the manifest purpose is to join in the petition, when it can be identified, the tribe by whom the depredation was committed, and to limit the presentation of the claim to three years from the passage of the act. If this be not so, the Indians may be made parties to the proceeding and judgment without being brought into court in any manner until years after the alleged wrong was committed, and when it may be impossible, by reason of the lapse of time, or the death or disappearance of witnesses, to make adequate defense. The construction herein put upon the statute will give to the three years' limitation the effect of other statutes of limitation, and will, in our judgment, best effectuate the purpose of the act. This act

[477] is extremely liberal in permitting *presentation of claims for Indian depredations. All limitations are swept away except the requirement as to the time of filing the petition. In the present case the depredation is alleged to have been committed eighteen years before the action was commenced. Under these liberal provisions we think it was the purpose of the law to require parties to be duly prosecuted within the three years allowed for the filing of petitions; and the liberality of the act should not be extended by construction. As the case was prosecuted against the wrong tribe until after the three years had expired, it cannot be maintained against the Indians sought to be brought in by the amendment, nor can it be sustained against the United States, which is liable by itself only in cases where the depredating Indians or other persons are unknown.
195 U. S.

It follows that the judgment of the Court of Claims must be reversed and the petition directed to be dismissed, and it is so ordered.

Mr. Justice White, with whom concurs Mr. Justice McKenna, dissenting:

Under the Indian depredation act of March 3, 1891, the United States was sued by one Gorman, in the court of claims, and it was averred in the petition that the damage complained of had been inflicted by the Comanche and Kiowa tribes of Indians, who were in amity with the United States. After hearing, the court of claims, finding it to be established by the proof that the loss complained of had been occasioned by Indians in amity with the United States, but that the proof did not show that the Comanche and Kiowa tribes were the wrongdoers, nevertheless, without any amendment of the petition, rendered a judgment solely against the United States. The action of the court of claims was sustained by this court in United States v. Gorham, 165 U. S. 316, 41 L. ed. 729, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 382.

In considering the power conferred by the statute it was said (p. 320, L. ed. p. 731, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 384):

*"In conferring jurisdiction in this class [478] of cases upon the court of claims, it will be seen that Congress conferred it in regard to all claims for property of citizens of the United States, taken or destroyed by Indians belonging to any band, tribe, or nation in amity with the United States, without just cause or provocation on the part of the owner or agent in charge. So long as the depredations were committed upon the property of citizens of the United States, and by Indians in amity with the government, without just cause, etc., jurisdiction and authority to inquire into and finally adjudicate upon such claims was granted to the court. This broad ground of jurisdiction would, unless circumscribed by the subsequent provision of the act, permit an adjudication against the United States alone. There is nothing in any other portion of the act which provides, in terms, for joining, as codefendants with the United States, the tribes or bands of Indians by whom the alleged illegal acts were committed. The 3d section of the act merely provides for the contents of the petition; and by such section it is made the duty of the petitioner to state in his petition 'the persons, classes of persons, tribe or tribes or band of Indians by whom the alleged illegal acts were committed, as near as may be,' etc. This is for the obvious purpose of giving some notice to the government of the alleged facts upon which the claim is based, so that the proper defense, if any exist, may be made to the claim."

Again, after pointing out that the statute made it "the duty of the court to determine in each case, if possible, the tribe of Indians or other persons by whom the wrong was committed, and to render judgment in favor of the claimant or claimants against the United States, and against the tribe of Indians committing the wrong when such can be identified," it was observed (p. 321, L. ed. p. 731, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 384):

"But the 5th section provides for judgment in favor of claimant, and against the United States, in any event where the property of a citizen has been destroyed under the circumstances provided in the statute, but [479] only against the tribe *of Indians committing the wrong 'when such can be identified;' and of course it follows that, if they cannot be identified, no judgment can go against them. The United States would then be left as alone responsible for the property destroyed, provided the proofs were of the character mentioned in the 1st section of the act; that is, the claimant would be bound to prove that he was a citizen of the United States at the time of the taking or destruction of his property; that it had been taken by Indians belonging to some band or tribe or nation in amity with the United States, without just cause or provocation on the part of the owner or agent in charge; and that it had not been returned or paid for."

To my mind this decision clearly establishes that, under the act of Congress, the Indian tribe by whom the depredation was committed was not an essential party to give the court jurisdiction over the claim. This conclusion, it seems to me, is inevitable from the ruling that, although it was alleged in the petition that a particular tribe was the wrongdoer, it was competent for the court to conform to the proof, and render a judgment against the United States, in a case where the proof did not establish the truth of the averment as to the tribe committing the injury, if only it was shown that the wrong complained of must have been committed by some Indian tribe which was in amity with the United States. Now, the question on this record is simply whether a petitioner who has alleged that the wrong was committed by a particular tribe can, after the three years' limitation, amend by stating another and different tribe as the wrongdoer. It is decided that such amendment cannot be allowed, because to allow it would amount to a fatal departure; that is, the substitution of a new and wholly different cause of action.

Consistently with the ruling previously made, my mind cannot assent to this conclusion. To adopt it without specifically overruling the Gorham Case, it seems to me, is to declare, on the one hand, that it is not essential to prove the allegation that the wrong was committed by a particular tribe, and, on *the other hand, to say that [480] the allegation as to the tribe committing the wrong was essential to the cause of action. That is to declare that a particular allegation is, at the same time, both essential and nonessential,—essential to be alleged, but not essential to be proved.

As it is considered by me that the Gorham Case is conclusive of this, and as the opinion now announced does not purport to overrule that case, it is not necessary for me to enter into a statement of my reasons for believing that, even if that case did not exist, the construction now given to the statute is not only repugnant to its text, but conflicts both with the rights of individual claimants and those of the United States, as shown by the purpose and spirit of the act.

I therefore dissent.

JOHN A. HUMBIRD and Frederick Weyerhaeuser
v.

WALDO A. AVERY et al.

(See S: C. Reporter's ed. 480-510.)

Public lands—railroad land grants—conflicting claims—vested rights—court's interference with Land Department.

1. Sales or contracts made by the Northern Pacific Railway Company after its acceptance of the act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 597, 620, chap. 546), cannot defeat the operation of the provisions of that act, enacted to settle disputes arising out of conflicting rulings in the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting the Northern Pacific land grant, by permitting any purchaser or settler claiming, in good faith, under any law of the United States or ruling of the Land Department, any land so situated that a right thereto in the railroad grantee or its successor in interest attached by reason of definite location or selection, to elect whether to retain or transfer his claim, and requiring the Secretary of the Interior to furnish the company with a list of the lands so retained, and allowing the company to select other lands in lieu thereof upon executing a proper relinquishment, although the statute contains a provision that the railroad grantee or its successor in interest shall not be bound to relinquish lands sold or contracted by it.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

2. A waiver of the objection that vested rights of the railroad company under the Northern Pacific land grant are interfered with by the provisions of the act of July 1, 1898, enacted to settle disputes arising out of conflicting rulings in the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting its land grant, results from the acceptance of that act by the successor in interest of the railway grantee.

3. A court of equity will not undertake to determine, in advance of the final action of the Land Department, the respective rights of grantees from the Northern Pacific Railway Company of land claimed to be within the indemnity limits of the land grant of July 2, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217), and settlers and purchasers from the United States or their grantees, whether holding patents or not, who claim the protection of the act of July 1, 1898, enacted to settle disputes arising out of conflicting rulings in the Land Department with reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad as affecting the Northern Pacific land grant, by permitting any purchaser or settler claiming, in good faith, under any law of the United States or ruling of the Land Department, any land so situated that a right thereto in the railroad grantee or its successor in interest attached by reason of definite location or selection, to elect whether to retain or transfer his claim, and requiring the Secretary of the Interior to furnish the company with a list of the lands so retained, and allowing the company to select other lands in lieu thereof upon executing a proper relinquishment.

[No. 7.]

Argued October 23, 26, 1903. Decided December 12, 1904.

ON A CERTIFICATE from, and an order to, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit bringing up a case pending in that Court on an appeal from a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota dismissing without prejudice, except as to lands for which patents have been issued, a bill in a suit involving the title to certain tracts of land situated on the line of the Northern Pacific Railway. Modified by adjudging that the dismissal must be without prejudice to any suit that may be rightfully instituted by a claimant after the jurisdiction of the Land Department in respect to any particular lands has ceased, and, as so modified, affirmed.

195 U. S.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William W. Billson and C. W. Bunn argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Chester A. Congdon, H. Oldenburg, and James B. Kerr, filed a brief for Humbird et al.:

The act of 1898 is inapplicable to land patented before its passage.

28 Land Dec. 103; Re Northern P. R. Co.'s Grant, 28 Land Dec. 470; Wasmund v. Northern P. R. Co. 29 Land Dec. 244.

The only titles over which the Interior Department has generally, or normally, jurisdiction, are those of which the fee is in the United States. Its jurisdiction is wholly incident to the determination by the government of the disposition properly to be made of its legal title to public lands. When that title is transferred by patent, the jurisdiction of the Department is extinct.

Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 533, 24 L. ed. 848, 850; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 402, 26 L. ed. 167, 173.

The fact that for a portion of these lands the patents have not issued does not withdraw such lands from the jurisdiction of the court, under the peculiar circumstances of this case:

(a) Because none of these controversies are in fieri in the Department.

Cornelius v. Kessel, 128 U. S. 456, 32 L. ed. 482, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 122; Witherspoon v. Duncan, 4 Wall. 210, 18 L. ed. 339; Polk County v. Hunter, 42 Minn. 312, 44 N. W. 201; Berthold v. McDonald, 22 How. 334, 16 L. ed. 318; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 24 L. ed. 848; Orchard v. Alexander, 157 U. S. 372, 39 L. ed. 737, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 635; Bockfinger v. Foster, 190 U. S. 116, 47 L. ed. 975, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 1064, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

(b) Because complainants are at least entitled to an injunction against trespass.

La Chapelle v. Bubb, 69 Fed. 481; Thompson v. Lyman, 1 Del. Ch. 64; Camp v. Bates, 11 Conn. 51, 27 Am. Dec. 707; Webb v. Boyle, 63 N. C. 271; McLure v. Sherman, 70 Fed. 190.

The imminence of the act sought to be restrained may, in appropriate cases, be as readily inferred upon the score of intrinsic probability as upon the strength of overt acts or threats.

Johnson v. Peterson, 59 N. C. (6 Jones Eq.) 12; Maclean v. Fitzsimons, 80 Mich. 336, 45 N. W. 145; Lloyd v. Gurdon, 2 Swanst. 189; Smith v. Haytwell, 1 Ambl. 66; Patrick v. Harrison, 3 Bro. Ch. 477; Zeigler v. Beasley, 44 Ga. 56; Mocckly v. Gorton, 78 Iowa, 202, 42 N. W. 648; Belohradsky v. Kuhn, 69 Ill. 547; Thurman v. Burt, 53 Ill. 129; Ferguson v. Fisk, 28 Conn. 501; Wilhelmson v. Bentley, 25 Neb. 473, 41 N. W. 387; Merritt v. Thompson, 3 E. D. Smith, 283.

The indemnity selections of the railroad company were made under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and were not defeated in favor of subsequent entrymen by failure of the Secretary of the Interior to approve them.

Groock v. Southern P. R. Co. 42 C. C. A. 144, 102 Fed. 32.

A capricious or arbitrary failure of the Secretary to approve is unimportant.

McHenry v. Nygaard, 72 Minn. 2, 74 N. W. 1106; Southern P. R. Co. v. Wiggs, 43 Fed. 333.

Neither is it important that the Secretary has failed to approve, by mere neglect.

Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 591, 43 L. ed. 820, 822, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 498, 30 L. ed. 1041, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

So, if the Secretary's failure to approve is due to error of law.

St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 732, 733, 28 L. ed. 872, 876, 877, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Sage v. Swenson, 64 Minn. 517, 67 N. W. 544.

If the Department is induced by legal error to pursue a course which has made it impracticable for the person having prior claim upon a tract of public land to perform the acts legally necessary to the perfection of his right and to the earning of the title, he can enforce his right to the land without showing the performance of such acts.

Bisson v. Curry, 35 Iowa, 72; Cunningham v. Ashley, 14 How. 377, 14 L. ed. 462; Lytle v. Arkansas, 9 How. 328, 13 L. ed. 158; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Wright v. Roseberry, 121 U. S. 498, 30 L. ed. 1041, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985.

Mr. Benton Hanchett argued the cause, and, with Mr. H. H. Hoyt, filed a brief for Avery et al.:

The action cannot be maintained by the claimants to remove a cloud upon the title to these lands, when they are not in possession and no patents have yet been issued; the legal title to the lands being still in the government, and the title to these lands still in fieri.

Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 25 L.

ed. 800; Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 20 L. ed. 485; Bockfinger v. Foster, 190 U. S. 116, 47 L. ed. 975, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836.

Before a court of equity by its decree would declare that a party holds the legal title to a tract of land in trust for another, the party setting up such claim must make it appear that he is entitled to the land, and that the government should have recognized his right.

Bohall v. Dilla, 114 U. S. 47, 29 L. ed. 61, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 782; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636-646, 26 L. ed. 875-879; Sparks v. Pierce, 115 U. S. 408, 29 L. ed. 428, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 81; Lee v. Johnson, 116 U. S. 48, 29 L. ed. 570; Boggs v. Merced Min. Co. 14 Cal. 279.

It seems of some concern to the defendants whether they are to be harassed and annoyed with an expensive litigation, prematurely brought, over the title to lands in which, at the time of bringing the action, the complainants had not such an interest as would entitle them to a decree that the defendants hold said lands for them in trust.

Ankeny v. Clark, 148 U. S. 345, 37 L. ed. 475, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 617; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Prescott, 16 Wall. 603, 21 L. ed. 373; Union P. R. Co. v. McShane, 23 Wall. 444, 22 L. ed. 747.

The jurisdiction to determine the facts which determine the rights of the parties under the act of July 1, 1898, in respect to the dates and character of their claims, as well as the rights of the railway company to the selection of the lands under the land grant, is vested in the Secretary of the Interior.

United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 37 C. C. A. 290, 95 Fed. 864; James v. Germania Iron Co. 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 475, 476, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; Steel v. St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. 106 U. S. 447, 450, 451, 27 L. ed. 226, 227, 228, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Quinby v. Conlan, 104 U. S. 420, 425, 26 L. ed. 800, 802; Barden v. Northern P. R. Co. 154 U. S. 288, 326-331, 38 L. ed. 992, 1001-1003, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1030; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 176, 178, 181, 35 L. ed. 974, 979-981, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; St. Louis Smelting & Ref. Co. v. Kemp, 104 U. S. 636, 640, 641, 26 L. ed. 875, 876; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 585, 34 L. ed. 1063, 1068, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 511, 33 L. ed. 687, 694, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; United States v. Missouri K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 375, 35 L. ed. 766, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Catholic Bishop v. Gibbon, 158 U. S. 155, 166, 39 L. ed. 931, 936, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; United States v. California & O. Land Co. 148 U. S. 31, 43, 37 L.

ed. 354, 360, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458; Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 535, 24 L. ed. 848, 850; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 477, 43 L. ed. 772, 774, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 210, 46 L. ed. 1128, 1131, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 61 L. R. A. 230, 50 C. C. A. 79, 112 Fed. 4; Savage v. Worsham, 104 Fed. 18; King v. McAndrews, 50 C. C. A. 29, 111 Fed. 860; Bockfinger v. Foster, 190 U. S. 116, 47 L. ed. 975, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836; Kirwan v. Murphy, 189 U. S. 35, 47 L. ed. 698, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 382, 41 L. ed. 754, 755, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

Title to lands within either the first or second indemnity limits of the grant is not acquired by the railroad company unless and until the selections made by the railroad company are approved by the Secretary of the Interior.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 386, 25 L. ed. 305; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 419, 28 L. ed. 794, 796, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 512, 33 L. ed. 687, 695, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 407, 29 L. ed. 928, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 367, 374-376, 35 L. ed. 766, 768, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, 183 U. S. 675, 46 L. ed. 383, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232; Groecck v. Southern P. R. Co. 183 U. S. 690, 46 L. ed. 390, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268; Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 103, 47 L. ed. 726, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 209, 46 L. ed. 1128, 1130, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872; Re Northern P. R. Co. 2 Land Dec. 820; Northern P. R. Co. v. Miller, 7 Land Dec. 100; Northern P. R. Co. v. Walters, 13 Land Dec. 230; Northern P. R. Co. v. Blain, 27 Land Dec. 361; Meister v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 14 Land Dec. 624; Walker v. Southern P. R. Co. 24 Land Dec. 172; Re Oregon & C. R. Co. 28 Land Dec. 363; Re Southern P. R. Co. 28 Land Dec. 281; Oregon & C. R. Co. v. Bales, 28 Land Dec. 231; Grandin v. La Bar, 3 N. D. 446, 57 N. W. 241; Southern P. R. Co. v. Wood, 124 Cal. 475, 57 Pac. 388; Resser v. Carney, 52 Minn. 397, 54 N. W. 89; Northern P. R. Co. v. Fly, 27 Land Dec. 464; Dunnigan v. Northern P. R. Co. 27 Land Dec. 467; Musser v. McRae, 38 Minn. 409, 38 N. W. 103, 44 Minn. 343, 46 N. W. 673; Elling v. Theaton, 7 Mont. 330, 16 Pac. 931; 195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Jackson v. La Moure County, 1 N. D. 238, 46 N. W. 449.

Until there has been an adjustment of the grant within the place limits, the extent to which the indemnity lands may be required to supply the deficit cannot properly or legally be determined.

Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 103, 47 L. ed. 726, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

Assistant Attorney General Campbell and Mr. A. C. Campbell argued the cause, and, with Mr. F. W. Clements, filed a brief for the United States, intervener:

Until the legal title passes from the government, inquiry as to all equitable rights comes within the cognizance of the Land Department.

Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 476, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

Until the title has passed to an individual the equities subject to which he holds it cannot be enforced in the courts.

Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 475, 25 L. ed. 800, 801.

Until the legal title to public land passes from the government the Land Department has jurisdiction to determine the question whether or not the equitable title has passed.

Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 593, 42 L. ed. 591, 592, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 488-490, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1162, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

But pending the determination of this question by the Land Department, the courts will not pass upon the same in controversies between individuals, but will leave it to be determined by the Land Department.

Litchfield v. Register & Receiver (Litchfield v. Richards) 9 Wall. 575, 578, 19 L. ed. 681, 682; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 396, 26 L. ed. 167, 171; New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 261, 264, 37 L. ed. 162, 163, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 477, 43 L. ed. 772, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 308, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1070, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692.

After the Land Department has passed upon all disputed questions of fact, and has finally determined that the equitable title to public lands has passed from the government, but not before, the courts may inquire into and determine controversies between individuals in respect to the validity of such equitable title, together with individual rights claimed thereunder; and the courts will accept the findings of the Land Department as conclusive upon all questions of fact.

Moore v. Robbins, 96 U. S. 530, 534, 24 L. 19 289

ed. 847, 850; Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 476, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; Johnson v. Drew, 171 U. S. 93, 99, 43 L. ed. 88, 90, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 800; Clark v. Herington, 186 U. S. 206, 210, 211, 46 L. ed. 1128, 1131, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 872.

While it is true that, when the right to a patent once becomes vested, it is equivalent, so far as the government is concerned, to a patent actually issued (Barney v. Dolph, 97 U. S. 652, 656, 24 L. ed. 1063, 1064; Stark v. Starr, 6 Wall. 402, 418, 18 L. ed. 925, 929; Simmmons v. Wagner, 101 U. S. 260, 261, 25 L. ed. 910, 911), it is equally true that the right to a patent to public land does not become vested, as against the United States, until all the prerequisites for the acquisition of the title have been complied with (Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 338, 23 L. ed. 424, 427); nor until conflicting claims, if any, to the lands, have been finally determined by the Land Department (Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co. 190 U. S. 301, 311, 312, 47 L. ed. 1064, 1071, 1072, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 692; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 488, 490, 491, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1161-1163, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 478, 43 L. ed. 772, 774, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 593, 594, 42 L. ed. 591-593, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 176-178, 35 L. ed. 974, 979, 980, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258).

It is settled law that the Land Department retains jurisdiction in respect to public lands until patent has issued, and that the Secretary of the Interior, at any time before the issuance of patent, "may review, reverse, amend, annul, or affirm" any proceeding in the Land Department looking to the acquisition of public lands.

See United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 396, 401; 402, 26 L. ed. 171, 173, 174; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 35 L. ed. 974, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258.

Whether the erroneous decision of the Secretary of the Interior with respect to the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific land grant involved merely a question of law, a mixed question of law and fact, or only of fact, the entries in question made because of such erroneous decision are, nevertheless, subject to inquiry by the Land Department, and may be and should be canceled by it if found to be illegal.

Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 475, 476, 25 L. ed. 800, 801; United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 401, 402, 26 L. ed. 173, 174; Knight v. United Land Asso. 142 U. S. 161, 177, 178, 182, 35 L. ed. 974, 979, 980, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 258; New Orleans v. Paine, 147 U. S. 261, 266, 267, 37 L. ed. 162, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 303; Michigan Land & Lum- ber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592-595, 42 L. ed. 591-593, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Beley v. Naphtaly, 169 U. S. 353, 364, 42 L. ed. 775, 779, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 354; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 488, 44 L. ed. 1157, 1161, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 478, 476-478, 43 L. ed. 772-774, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

It is established law that the issuance of a patent terminates the jurisdiction of the Land Department over public lands, and exhausts its power to examine and decide conflicting claims thereto.

United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 401-403, 26 L. ed. 167, 173, 174; Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 383, 41 L. ed. 754, 756, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

The Land Department, therefore, has lost jurisdiction to pass upon and determine the validity of the selections to the extent that they embrace patented lands. It does not follow, however, that the judiciary has power to pass upon and determine the validity of said railroad indemnity selections, or to determine conflicting claims to such patented lands. Where conflicting claims depend upon questions of fact, the determination of which has been committed to the Land Department, it, and not a court of equity, is the tribunal intrusted by the law with jurisdiction over such matters; and the latter may not inquire what ought to have been the determination of the former, but whether it has been wrongfully deprived of the power to make such determination.

Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

The determination of these facts has been committed by Congress to the Land Department. It has not determined them.

Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 157, 158, 45 L. ed. 463, 472, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309; Re Northern P. R. Co. 25 Land Dec. 511; Northern P. R. Co. v. Streib, 26 Land Dec. 589.

In respect to the patented lands it has been deprived of the power to do so. It is not the function of the court to pass upon these facts, but it can restore to the Land Department the power to do so.

Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337.

It is settled law that, where jurisdiction of the Land Department over public lands has been lost through mistake in the issuance of a patent, and it appears that the government is under an obligation to any party in respect to the land so patented, the courts will restore such lost jurisdiction.

Germania Iron Co. v. United States, 165 U. S. 379, 41 L. ed. 754, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 337; San Pedro & C. D. A. Co. v. United States, 146 U. S. 120, 132, 133, 36 L. ed. 912, 915, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

Mr. M. H. Stanford filed a brief for the Lesure Lumber Company.

Mr. Luther C. Harris filed a brief for the Olean Land Company and Alger, Smith, & Company.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was brought before us upon questions certified by the circuit court of appeals. Subsequently, the United States was allowed to intervene upon the general ground that the case involved important questions affecting the administration of the public land laws, including the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company then in process of adjustment. And on motion of the government, the plaintiffs and defendants concurring, the whole record was ordered to be sent up for our consideration.

The case involves the title to numerous tracts of land situated on the line of the Northern Pacific Railway between Duluth and Ashland. The lands are described in an exhibit attached to the bill.

The plaintiffs, Humbird and Weyerhaeuser, sue as grantees of the Northern Pacific Railway Company, a Wisconsin corporation, which, it is claimed, succeeded, in respect of the lands in dispute, to all the rights, interests, and ownership of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, created by the act of Congress of July 2d, 1864 (13 Stat. at L. 365, chap. 217). They allege that the claims of the defendants constitute clouds upon their title.

[482] *The defendants assert title under the land laws as settlers and purchasers from the United States, or grantees of such settlers and purchasers. But the bill alleges that the lands here in dispute are part of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and that the Land Department wrongfully and unlawfully permitted the entries under which the defendants severally claim. The circuit court dismissed the bill, but without prejudice, except as to all lands here involved for which patents had been issued. 110 Fed. 465.

It seems both appropriate and necessary that the facts be fully stated. That statement we now proceed to make, premising that the present controversy had its origin, as will be presently shown, in conflicting orders or rulings in the Land Department as to what was the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

By the above act of July 2d, 1864, chap. 217, Congress made a grant of lands to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company in aid of the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from some point on Lake Superior, in Minnesota or Wisconsin, to some point on Puget sound, with a branch, via Columbia river, to a point at or near Portland. The act established indemnity limits not more than 10 miles beyond the limits of the alternate sections granted. 13 Stat. at L. 365.

By a joint resolution approved May 31st, 1870, second indemnity limits were established within 10 miles on each side of the road, beyond the limits prescribed in the company's charter. 16 Stat. at L. 378, Resolution 67. The effect of this resolution was to allow the company, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to go into second indemnity limits in order to supply any deficiency in lands on its main line or branch.

On the 3d day of July, 1882, the company transmitted to the Secretary of the Interior a map of definite location covering the proposed line from Thompson Junction, on the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad, near Duluth, Minnesota, to Ashland, in Wisconsin. That map was duly approved by the *Secretary of [483] the Interior, and the lands embraced by it were withdrawn from sale or entry.

By resolution of the board of directors of the company, adopted August 28th, 1884, Ashland was declared to be the eastern terminus of the road; and that resolution was accepted by the Secretary on December 3d, 1884, as establishing such terminus.

The part of the road delineated on the map of definite location was constructed and was duly accepted; and in conformity with the directions of the Secretary the company, the circuit court states, filed lists of selections of lands, some in the first and others in the second indemnity limits, in lieu of lands lost to it in its place limits,—such lists including all the lands in controversy in this suit. But the bill avers that no final action has ever been taken by the Land Department upon such lists; and they have not yet been approved by the Department.

Subsequently, on August 12th, 1896, the Secretary of the Interior ruled that Duluth, not Ashland, was the eastern terminus of the railroad, and therefore that the land grant of 1864 did not embrace any lands between Duluth and Ashland. The company's lists of selections were thereupon canceled by order of the Secretary, and the lands covered by them were thereafter treated by the Department as unappropriated public lands, and were opened for sale and entry.

This appears from an official communication addressed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to the register and receiver at Duluth. In that communication the Commissioner said: "On August 27th, 1896, the Secretary of the Interior rendered a decision wherein he held that the initial point on Lake Superior, or the eastern terminus of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, was at Duluth, Minnesota, and on December 24th, 1896, he approved a diagram prepared by this office showing the eastern terminal of the grant. On January 23d, 1897, a copy [484] of so much of said *diagram as related to or affected lands within your district was transmitted to you for the use and guidance of your office. The decision of the Secretary aforesaid had the effect of restoring to the public domain all lands lying east of said terminal, which had theretofore been withdrawn on account of the grant to said railroad company. Therefore to the end that all persons interested may have an opportunity to present any claims they may have to any of these lands, you will cause to be published for the period of thirty days, in some newspaper of general circulation in their vicinity, a notice referring to said Secretary's decision, which in effect declared that all lands previously withdrawn on account of the grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and lying east of the terminal established at Duluth, are restored to the public domain and are subject to disposal at your office."

Under the above ruling of the Secretary as to the eastern terminus, the defendants were allowed to make entries and purchases on the line of the railroad between Duluth and Ashland, despite the company's map of definite location and the lists of selections filed by it with the Secretary. In reference to the action of the Interior Department, the circuit court said: "By reason of the erroneous ruling of the Secretary of the Interior as to the location of the eastern terminus of said railroad, and his revocation of his prior approval of lawful selections by the railroad company of indemnity lands, and permitting sales and entries of such selected lands, as unappropriated, he had introduced confusion and conflict in respect to the right to such lands, which was beginning to be litigated in the courts. . . . The fact that patents had issued in a few instances would not end such disputes as to the lands so patented, as courts would adjudge the patentee in any case to hold the title in trust for the other party, wherever the other party had clearly the right to the land." 110 Fed. 465, 469.

Such was the situation when Congress incorporated into the body of the sundry civil appropriation act of July 1st, 1898
[485] * (30 Stat. at L. 597, 620, chap. 546), subdivision, Surveying the Public Lands, certain provisions relating to the Northern Pacific land grant. As these provisions disclose a scheme or plan for the settlement of the disputes arising out of the conflicting rulings in the Land Department in reference to the eastern terminus of the railroad, and its action in reference to the public lands between Duluth and Ashland, they should all be examined in order to ascertain the intention of Congress. They are therefore here given in full.

By that act—dividing it, for convenience, into paragraphs—it was provided:

"That where, prior to January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, the whole or any part of an odd-numbered section, in either the granted or the indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, to which the right of the grantee or its lawful successor is claimed to have attached by definite location or selection, has been purchased directly from the United States, or settled upon or claimed in good faith by any qualified settler under color of title or claim of right under any law of the United States or any ruling of the Interior Department, and where purchaser, settler, or claimant refuses to transfer his entry as hereinafter provided, the railroad grantee or its successor in interest, upon a proper relinquishment thereof, shall be entitled to select in lieu of the land relinquished an equal quantity of public lands, surveyed or unsurveyed, not mineral or reserved, and not valuable for stone, iron, or coal, and free from valid adverse claim, or not occupied by settlers at the time of such selection, situated within any state or territory into which such railroad grant extends, and patents shall issue for the land so selected as though it had been originally granted; but all selections of unsurveyed lands shall be of odd-numbered sections, to be identified by the survey when made, and patent therefor shall issue to and in the name of the corporation surrendering the lands before mentioned, and such patents shall not issue until after the survey:

*2. "Provided, however, That the Secretary of the Interior shall from time to time ascertain, and, as soon as conveniently may be done, cause to be prepared and delivered to the said railroad grantee or its successor in interest a list or lists of the several tracts which have been purchased or settled upon or occupied as aforesaid, and are now claimed by said purchasers or occupants, their heirs or assigns, according to the smallest government subdivisions. And all right, title, and interest of the said railroad grantee or its successor in interest, in and to any of such tracts, which the said railroad grantee or its successor in interest may relinquish hereunder, shall revert to the United States, and such tracts shall be treated, under the laws thereof, in the same manner as if no rights thereto had ever vested in the said railroad grantee, and all qualified persons who have occupied and may be on said lands as herein provided, or who have purchased said lands in good faith as aforesaid, their heirs and assigns, shall be permitted to prove their titles to said lands according to law, as if said grant had never been made; and upon such relinquishment said Northern Pacific Railroad Company or its lawful successor in interest may proceed to select, in the manner hereinbefore provided, lands in lieu of those relinquished, and patents shall issue therefor:

3. "Provided, further, That the railroad grantee or its successor in interest shall accept the said list or lists so to be made by the Secretary of the Interior as conclusive with respect to the particular lands to be relinquished by it, but it shall not be bound to relinquish lands sold or contracted by it, or lands which it uses or needs for railroad purposes, or lands valuable for stone, iron, or coal:

4. "And provided, further, That whenever any qualified settler shall in good faith make settlement in pursuance of existing law upon any odd-numbered sections of unsurveyed public lands within the said railroad grant to which the right of such railroad grantee or its successor in interest has attached, then, upon proof thereof satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior,
[487] *and a due relinquishment of the prior railroad right, other lands may be selected in lieu thereof by said railroad grantee or its successor in interest, as hereinbefore provided, and patents shall issue therefor:

5. "And provided, further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as intended or having the effect to recognize the Northern Pacific Railway Company as the lawful successor of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company in the ownership of the lands granted by the United States to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, under and by virtue of foreclosure proceedings against said Northern Pacific Railroad Company in the courts of the United States, but the legal question whether the said Northern Pacific Railway Company is such lawful successor of the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, should the question be raised, shall be determined wholly without reference to the provisions of this act, and nothing in this act shall be construed as enlarging the quantity of land which the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company is entitled to under laws heretofore enacted:

6. "And provided, further, That all qualified settlers, their heirs or assigns, who,
195 U. S.

prior to January first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, purchased, or settled upon or claimed in good faith, under color of title or claim of right under any law of the United States or any ruling of the Interior Department, any part of an odd-numbered section in either the granted or indemnity limits of the land grant to the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, to which the right of such grantee or its lawful successor is claimed to have attached by definite location or selection, may in lieu thereof transfer their claims to an equal quantity of public lands, surveyed or unsurveyed, not mineral or reserved, and not valuable for stone, iron, or coal, and free from valid adverse claim, or not occupied by a settler at the time of such entry, situated in any state or territory into which such railroad grant extends, and make proof therefor as in other cases provided; and in making such proof, credit shall be given for the period of their bona fide residence and *amount of [488] their improvements upon their respective claims in the said granted or indemnity limits of the land grant to the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, the same as if made upon the tract to which the transfer is made; and before the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be prepared and delivered to said railroad grantee or its successor in interest any list or lists of the several tracts which have been purchased or settled upon or occupied as hereinbefore provided, he shall notify the purchaser, settler, or claimant, his heirs or assigns, claiming against said railroad company, of his right to transfer his entry or claim, as herein provided, and shall give him or them option to take lieu lands for those claimed by him or them, or hold his claim and allow the said railroad company to do so under the terms of this act." 30 Stat. at L. 597, 620.

The provisions of that act were formally accepted in writing by the Northern Pacific Railway Company on the 13th of July, 1898, in writing, and such written acceptance was promptly transmitted by the company to the Secretary of the Interior.

In a case in the supreme court of Wisconsin, determined shortly before the act of 1898, it was held, contrary to the ruling of the Interior Department in 1896, that Ashland, and not Duluth, was the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific Railway. Northern P. R. Co. v. Doherty, 100 Wis. 39, 75 N. W. 1079. Upon writ of error to this court that judgment was affirmed. Doherty v. Northern P. R. Co. 177 U. S. 421, 44 L. ed. 830, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 677, and United States v. Northern P. R. Co. 177 U. S. 435, 44 L. ed. 836, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 706.

After the above decisions by this court—which were rendered April 16th, 1900—the Secretary of the Interior revoked the order canceling the company's above lists of selections, and reinstated them. Shortly before those cases were argued here, namely, on January 19th, 1900,—and apparently to meet the contingency of a reversal by this court of the judgment of the supreme court of Wisconsin,—the Northern Pacific Railway Company made conveyances with warranty to the *plaintiffs, Humbird and Weyerhaeuser, of all the lands aggregating more than 10,000 acres, the title to which is here in dispute. As appears from the record, these conveyances were made after the Land Department had issued regulations to facilitate the adjustment of claims under the act of July 1st, 1898. It should be recalled here that the lands covered by those conveyances were placed on the above list of selections filed by the railroad company, but those lists had not then, nor have they since, received the approval of the Secretary.

It is contended by the plaintiffs that the result of the above decisions in this court, adjudging the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad to be at Ashland, Wisconsin, and not at Duluth, Minnesota, was that the odd-numbered alternate sections between Duluth and Ashland, on either side of the railroad, as definitely located, to the extent and within the limits prescribed, and not excluded from the grant of July 2d, 1864, were to be deemed public lands from which that grant could be supplied, and to which neither the defendants nor their grantors after the definite location of the road as shown by the company's accepted map of location could have acquired any valid title by entry or settlement, or by purchase, except from the railroad grantee, and that the defense cannot be maintained without violating the rights that were vested in the company in virtue of such definite location.

The defendants, of course, combat this view of the rights of the parties, and insist that they are fully protected in their claims by the act of 1898, all the provisions of which, as we have seen, were accepted by the railroad company.

In the statement accompanying the certified questions it is set forth that prior to the passage of the act of July 1st, 1898, the Secretary of the Interior had, pursuant to his original ruling as to the eastern terminus of the railroad, caused patents to be delivered to defendant settlers or their grantors for about 3,400 acres of the lands involved in this suit; that at the time of the passage of that act about 2,800 acres of the lands in question had been entered [490] by defendant settlers or their *grantors prior to January 1st, 1898, but no patents therefor had been issued; that after January 1st, 1898, the settlers or their grantors were permitted to enter about 5,000 acres of the lands here in controversy. The situation is thus described in the statement sent up by the circuit court of appeals: Of the lands claimed by the plaintiffs as successors in interest of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company about 3,400 acres thereof were held by the appellees under patents issued by the government prior to July 1st, 1898; for the residue of the lands the settlers held final receipts and final certificates, such final receipts and final certificates, as respects about 5,000 acres, being for tracts entered subsequent to January 1st, 1898. In reference to the lands for which final receipts and certificates have been issued nothing, so far as appears, remains to be done by the Land Department except the issuing of patents.

The relief sought is a decree declaring, among other things, that the lands described in the exhibit attached to the bill, and all the timber standing or lying thereon, belong to the plaintiffs; that the entries, locations, final certificates, Land Office receipts, and patents, under which the several defendants claim, be adjudged to be void and removed as clouds from the titles of the plaintiffs, and the defendants severally enjoined from asserting any title by virtue thereof; and that such of the defendants as hold patents may be declared to hold as trustees for the plaintiffs in respect of any title conveyed by such patents, or any timber, cut or uncut, on such lands.

The questions propounded to this court by the circuit court of appeals are these:

"Is the act of July 1st, 1898, applicable to the determination of the rights of the parties to the 3,400 acres of land which were patented to the appellees or their predecessors in interest prior to the adoption of the act of July 1st, 1898?"

"Has the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, or any court, jurisdiction as respects the lands in controversy entered subsequent to January 1st, 1898, and for which the settlers hold final receipts or certificates, *to adjudicate [491] the rights of the parties to this action in respect to said lands in advance of the issuance of patents therefor by the executive branch of the government, or should the courts decline jurisdiction until the government has divested itself of the legal title to the lands by the issuance and delivery of patents?"

It is appropriate at the outset to refer to certain allegations of the bill, which bring the determination of the case within a very narrow compass, and make it unnecessary to consider some matters referred to by counsel. After setting out in detail the various steps taken by the railroad company to acquire a right to the lands in dispute, the bill alleges that "but for the vested rights" of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company and its grantees the several tracts of land in question would have been unappropriated public lands open to the several kinds of entries or location made with respect to them, severally; also, that "the several applications and proceedings with respect to the said several entries were in due form, and regularly conducted, as required by law, and, in the absence of the vested rights of the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company and its grantees in the said premises, would have been operative and effectual to invest the several entrymen of said lands with complete equitable title thereto, each of such entries and locations having been finally receipted for, allowed, and approved by the proper land officers of the United [499] States; the only act *remaining for the United States or its officers to perform with respect to such entries being the issuance of the patent in cases where the patent has not already issued;" and that all of the said entries and locations of lands referred to in the exhibit filed with the bill were allowed, and the final certificates (and, so far as issued, the patents) issued therefor, "under a mistake of law founded upon a certain erroneous ruling by the Secretary of the Interior, to the effect that the said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, and their successors in interest, were not entitled to any lands by virtue of said act of Congress approved July 2d, 1864, and said joint resolution, approved May 31st, 1870, granting lands to said Northern Pacific Railroad Company, east of that point on the line of said Northern Pacific Railroad where the same crosses the line of the St. Paul & Duluth Railroad, known as Thompson Junction."

Obviously, the first inquiry should be as to the object and scope of the act of 1898. Upon that point we do not think any doubt can be entertained, if the words of the act be interpreted in the light of the situation as it actually was at the date of its passage. Here were vast bodies of land, the right and title to which was in dispute between a railroad company holding a grant of public lands, and occupants and purchasers,—both sides claiming under the United States. The disputes had arisen out of conflicting orders or rulings of the Land Department, and it became the duty of the government to remove the difficulties which had come upon the parties in consequence of such orders. The settlement of those disputes was therefore, as the circuit court said, a matter of public concern. If the disputes were not accommodated, the litigation in relation to the lands would become vexatious, extending over many years and causing great embarrassment. In the light of that situation Congress passed the act of 1898, which opened up a way for an adjustment upon principles that it deemed just and consistent with the rights of all concerned,—the government, the railroad grantee, and individual claimants. The railroad company evinced its approval of this *action of the legislative department by [500] a prompt acceptance of the act in its entirety. By such unqualified acceptance the railroad company agreed that, so far as it had any claim to the lands in dispute, whatever the act of Congress required to be done might be done.

Promptly after the passage of that act the Land Department set about to administer its provisions, and to that end, as we have said, issued regulations for the guidance of all concerned.

During the progress of this work of administration, the railroad company, by conveyances to the present plaintiffs, assumed to pass such interest as it had in the lands here in question, with the effect—it is now claimed by the plaintiffs—to withdraw or exempt all the lands so sold from the operation of the act. The plaintiffs rest this claim upon that part of the act providing that the railroad grantee or its successor in interest "shall not be bound to relinquish lands sold or contracted by it, or lands which it uses or needs for railroad purposes, or lands valuable for stone, iron, or coal." See above, par. 3.

We have seen that the act (par. 1 above) made it the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain from time to time, and cause to be prepared and delivered to the railroad grantee or its successor in interest, a list or lists of the several tracts purchased, settled upon, or occupied, and claimed, at the date of the act, by such settlers, purchasers, or occupants, their heirs and assigns, according to the smallest government subdivisions. And the act provided that the railroad grantee or its successor should accept said list or lists "as conclusive, with respect to the particular lands to be relinquished by it." The contention of the plaintiffs, stated more fully, is, in effect, that it was competent for the company, notwithstanding its acceptance of the act, to take out of its operation any lands embraced by its terms, by simply selling or contracting to sell them before the delivery to it, or to its successor in interest, of the lists above mentioned. In other [501]*words,—for the contention comes to that,—the railroad company, so far as the act of 1898 was concerned, could, notwithstanding the acceptance of its provisions, and on the day after such acceptance, have sold or contracted to sell its right, title, and interest in and to all the lands embraced by those provisions. This would have left no lands whatever to which the act could apply. Such a result would have left unsettled all the disputes relating to any lands which the company chose, in its own interest, to sell while the Land Department was proceeding under the statute. We do not believe that Congress intended that it should be in the power of the railroad company in any such mode to defeat the operation of the act. Congress, manifestly, had reference to the situation as it was when the act of 1898 was passed.

If any rights had become vested in the Northern Pacific Railroad Company which could not, against or without its consent, be affected by an enactment like that of 1898, then the objection to legislation on the ground that it interfered with vested rights, was waived by the acceptance of the act by its successor in interest; for it was entirely competent for the latter company, if it succeeded to all the rights of the railroad grantee, to agree to such a settlement as that devised by Congress. The rights acquired by the definite location of the road, and any selection of lands based thereon, became, upon the acceptance of the act, and so far as that company was concerned, subject to such settlement as the Land Department might legally make under that act. It could not, by any sale or contract made after the acceptance of the act, interfere with the full execution of its provisions. And the plaintiffs, who claim to have purchased from the successor in interest of the railroad grantee, can occupy no better position than the company from which they purchased. They were in a sense purchasers pendente lite; for the Secretary of the Interior was, at the time, as he is now, engaged in administering the act of Congress. By him or under his direction must be as-

[502]inquiry whether *the lands in question are within the indemnity limits of the land grant to the railroad company, and so situated that a right to them attached by reason of the definite location of the road. He must also inquire whether such lands were purchased, by the respective defendants, directly from the United States, or were settled upon or claimed in good faith by qualified settlers under color of title or claim of right under a law of the United States or ruling of the Interior Department, and whether the purchaser, settler, or claimant refuses to transfer his entry. Upon these facts also depends the right of the railroad grantee or its successor in interest (its rights being relinquished as provided in the act) to select, in lieu of the lands relinquished, an equal quantity of surveyed or unsurveyed public lands, not mineral or reserved, and not valuable for stone, iron, or coal, and free from any adverse claim, or not occupied by settlers at the time of such selection, situated within any state or territory into which the railroad grant extends.

Now it is sought, in advance of final action by the Land Department in execution of the act, to have it adjudged, as between the parties to this suit, that the lands in dispute, claimed by the defendants, cannot properly be placed on the lists which the Secretary may deliver to the railroad grantee or its successor in interest. But that is a question the solution of which depends, in part at least, on facts within the province, primarily, of the Secretary of the Interior to find. In short, he, and he alone, must ascertain the facts which enter into the question as to what lands are to go on the lists to be delivered to the railroad grantee or its successor in interest. The court should not, by any decree, as between parties who have no contract relations with each other, attempt indirectly to control the authority and discretion of that officer to determine what lands shall and what lands shall not be included in the lists to be prepared under his direction. The plaintiffs cannot invoke the aid of the court to have these questions concluded, even as between them and the defendants, by an admission, made in their bill for the purposes of this case, that the final *certificates and final[503] receipts held by the respective defendants will entitle them to the lands they claim but for the "vested" rights acquired by the railroad company in virtue of the definite location of its road. The court should not assume that they are embraced by the act, in order simply that it may have an opportunity, as between the present parties, to decide a question of law which cannot appropriately arise until at least all the facts are ascertained by the Land Department, and final action is taken under the statute of 1898. Although it may be true, as alleged in the bill, that the defendants, not holding patents, have received and hold final certificates or final receipts, and that, so far as they are concerned, nothing more remains to be done in the Department except to issue patents, yet it is in the power of the Department, even after decree here, in this suit, to reopen the case as to each defendant of that class, and, sufficient grounds existing therefor, recall or cancel such certificates or receipts. The whole matter, in respect of the lands in dispute, is yet in the hands of the Department, undisposed of finally under the act of 1898. Congress intended that the Department should, within the limit and according to the rules prescribed by the act of 1898, settle the disputes that had arisen between the railroad grantee and settlers, although, after the matter has passed beyond the jurisdiction of the Department, such settlements may become the subject of judicial inquiry for the protection of the rights of parties against any error of law committed by the Department.

Those views are in entire accord with the former decisions of this court. In Johnson v. Towsley, 13 Wall. 72, 87, 20 L. ed. 485, 488, it was said: "This court has at all times been careful to guard itself against an invasion of the functions confided by law to other departments of the government; and in reference to the proceedings before the officers intrusted with the charge of selling the public lands it has frequently and firmly refused to interfere with them in the discharge of their duties, either by mandamus or injunction, so long as the title remained in the *United States and the matter was rightfully before those officers for decision. On the other hand, it has constantly asserted the right of the proper courts to inquire, after the title had passed from the government, and the question became one of private right, whether, according to the established rules of equity and the acts of Congress concerning the public lands, the party holding that title should hold absolutely as his own, or as trustee for another." So, in Marquez v. Frisbie, 101 U. S. 473, 475, 25 L. ed. 800, 801: "We have repeatedly held that the courts will not interfere with the officers of the government while in the discharge of their duties in disposing of the public lands, either by injunction or mandamus. . . . After the United States has parted with its title and the individual has become vested with it, the equities subject to which he holds it may be enforced, but not before. . . . We did not deny the right of the courts to deal with the possession of the land prior to the issue of the patent, or to enforce contracts between the parties concerning the land. But it is impossible thus to transfer a title which is yet in the United States." What was said in the case just cited, as to the power of the court to interfere, in certain cases, in advance of the issuing of the patent, was no doubt in the mind of the circuit court when, in its opinion in this case, it said: "It is unnecessary to decide whether a case may not arise, when, even while the disputed question as to the rights of contesting parties to a tract of public land is pending or cognizable before the Land Department, a court of equity may properly interfere by injunction, at the suit of one of the claimants, to prevent the other claimant from despoiling the land by waste, and appropriating its substantial value, by denuding it of all its merchantable timber, before any final decision upon the disputed claims by the Land Department, which is only rendered by issuing the patent."

[504]

195 U. S.

So, again, in United States v. Schurz, 102 U. S. 378, 395, 26 L. ed. 167, 171: "The Constitution of the United States declares that Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules *and regula-[505] tions respecting the territory and other property belonging to the United States. Under this provision the sale of the public lands was placed by statute under the control of the Secretary of the Interior. To aid him in the performance of this duty a bureau was created, at the head of which is the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with many subordinates. To them, as a special tribunal, Congress confided the execution of the laws which regulate the surveying, the selling, and the general care of these lands. Congress has also enacted a system of laws, by which rights to these lands may be acquired and the title of the government conveyed to the citizen. This court has with a strong hand upheld the doctrine that so long as the legal title to these lands remained in the United States, and the proceedings for acquiring it were as yet in fieri, the courts would not interfere to control the exercise of the power thus vested in that tribunal. To that doctrine we still adhere." As late as Bockfinger v. Foster, 190 U. S. 116, 126, 47 L. ed. 975, 979, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 836, 840, we reaffirmed the principle "that the courts will not interfere with the Land Department in its control and disposal of the public lands, under the legislation of Congress, so long as the title in any essential sense remains in the United States."

These principles are applicable to the particular scheme devised by the act of 1898 in reference to the lands in dispute. When the Land Department shall have done all that it can do in execution of the act of Congress, as to any particular lands in dispute, it will be time enough for interested private parties claiming an interest in them to invoke the aid of the courts for the determination of such questions of law as may arise out of the action of the Department. It is true that no order is asked here that will, directly or in terms, operate upon the Land Department. But a decree is asked, as between the parties now before the court, which must necessarily control or affect the action of the Department in respect of matters committed to it by Congress. Such interference by the court, although between private claimants only, [506] would be inappropriate,—*especially as to lands covered by the act of 1898.

What has been said is peculiarly applicable to the unpatented lands in dispute. It is equally applicable to lands patented both before and after the passage of the act, if such lands are in dispute and belong to either of the classes described in the act of 1898. We agree with the circuit court that the act "gives the option to keep or relinquish the disputed land, to the individual claimant in every instance. If he elects to retain that land, it is to be listed by the Secretary in lists to be furnished to the railroad claimant, who must relinquish, and whose consent to this was given by its acceptance of the act." In case of such relinquishment by the railroad company, it acquires a right to select other lands in place of those retained by the individual claimant. If the individual claimant, having a patent, elects to surrender his right, then he must reconvey to the United States, and will then be entitled to select other lands in lieu of those surrendered. So that the statute embraces both patented and unpatented lands, in respect of which the railroad company or its successor in interest claims that a right thereto attached by the definite location of its road or by selection, provided they are also such lands as were originally "purchased directly from the United States, or settled upon or claimed in good faith by any qualified settler under color of title or claim of right under any law of the United States or any ruling of the Interior Department." The duty of a court of equity not to interfere with parties in the prosecution of their rights under the act, whereby the execution of its provisions in advance of final action by the Department would be embarrassed by judicial decision, is quite as imperative in cases of the patented lands in dispute as in the cases of unpatented lands. This view is not at all in conflict with those cases in which it has been held that after a patent issued for public lands the only remedy for one who claims the land as against the patentee is to bring a suit against the person holding the patent, and obtain a decree declaring [507] *the patentee a trustee for the party suing. This general principle does not apply to cases embraced by the act of 1898. That act is peculiar in its provisions, and contemplates that the individual claimant of one of the classes described in it may hold the land patented to him, if he elects to retain it, and that the railroad grantee or its successor in interest can be made whole by taking lieu lands in place of those claimed in virtue of definite location or selection.

For the reasons stated; neither the claim of vested rights in behalf of the railroad grantee, nor the contention that the lands in dispute, having been sold to the plaintiffs, were not for that reason embraced by the act of 1898, furnishes any ground for interference by a court of equity, or for the granting of the relief asked.

This conclusion is fortified, if not absolutely demanded, by another consideration, namely, that no title to indemnity lands is vested until a selection be made by which they are definitely ascertained, and the selection made approved by the Secretary of the Interior. This principle is firmly established. A full statement of it is found in Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 511, 33 L. ed. 687, 694, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341, 347. The court there said: "He [the Secretary] was required to determine, in the first place, whether there were any deficiencies in the land granted to the company, which were to be supplied from indemnity lands; and, in the second place, whether the particular indemnity lands selected could be properly taken for those deficiencies. In order to reach a proper conclusion on these two questions he had also to inquire and determine whether any lands in the place limits had been previously disposed of by the government, or whether any pre-emption or homestead rights had attached before the line of the road was definitely fixed. . . . Until the selections were approved there were no selections in fact, only preliminary proceedings taken for that purpose; and the indemnity lands remained unaffected in their title. Until then the lands which might be taken as indemnity were incapable of identification; the proposed selections remained the *property of the United States. The [508] government was, indeed, under a promise to give the company indemnity lands in lieu of what might be lost by the causes mentioned. But such promise passed no title, and, until it was executed, created no legal interest which could be enforced in the courts." In New Orleans P. R. Co. v. Parker, 143 U. S. 42, 57, 36 L. ed. 66, 70, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 364, 369, it was said: "As to lands within the indemnity limits, it has always been held that no title is acquired until the specific parcels have been selected by the grantee and approved by the Secretary of the Interior." And in Michigan Land & Lumber Co. v. Rust, 168 U. S. 589, 592, 593, 42 L. ed. 591-593, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208, 209, the court said: "Generally speaking, while the legal title remains in the United States, the grant is in process of administration and the land is subject to the jurisdiction of the Land Department of the government." To the same effect are Sioux City & St. P. R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 406, 408, 29 L. ed. 928, 929, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 790; United States v. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. 141 U. S. 358, 374, 35 L. ed. 766, 771, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Brown v. Hitchcock, 173 U. S. 473, 479, 43 L. ed. 772, 775, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 112 U. S. 414, 421, 28 L. ed. 794, 797, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208; Barney v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 117 U. S. 228, 232, 29 L. ed. 858, 860, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 654; Grinnell v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 739, 26 L. ed. 456; St. Paul & S. C. R. Co. v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 112 U. S. 720, 731, 28 L. ed. 872, 876, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 334; Cedar Rapids & M. River R. Co. v. Herring, 110 U. S. 27, 28 L. ed. 56, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

Now, the lands here in dispute and claimed by the plaintiffs as grantees of the Northern Pacific Railway Company (the alleged successor in interest of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company) are lands admittedly within indemnity, as distinguished from granted or place, limits. The mere filing of lists of selections, after the acceptance of the map of definite location of the railroad line between Duluth and Ashland, gave the company no such title as could be enforced by the courts in a suit between private parties. It is true the government was under a promise to give the railroad company lands in the indemnity limits to supply losses in place limits. But, as adjudged in the above cases, that promise passed no title. The promise will [509] no doubt be fulfilled by the government *in due time and in its own way. The selections not having been approved by the Secretary, the title remains in the government. So that the plaintiffs, having no greater rights than those of the railroad grantee or its successor, have no such interest in the particular lands specified in the railroad company's lists of unapproved selection as entitles it, while the title remains in the United States, and while these lands are being administered by the Land Department, to ask a court of equity to decide, as between them and the defendants, that the latter could not by any entry or purchase acquire an interest after the acceptance by the Secretary of the railroad's map of definite location.

But it is suggested that the final action of the Department may be indefinitely postponed, to the great injury of the railroad grantee and those claiming under it. Delay in such matters was a contingency which the alleged successor in interest of the railroad grantee must have taken into account when accepting the act and assenting to the plan of settlement embodied in it. The Land Department was not required to complete its administration of the statute within any designated time. The act, upon its face, directs that the required lists be prepared and delivered to the railroad company "as soon as conveniently may be done." It cannot be assumed upon this record that the Department has not progressed with the work of administration as rapidly as all the circumstances and its convenience permitted. Even if the fact be otherwise, it is not for a court of equity by its decree to decide, in the first instance, that the selections made by the railroad company of lieu lands shall be approved by the Secretary, or to decide what lands should be on the lists required to be furnished to the railroad, granted under the act of 1898, or to control directly or indirectly the work which Congress, with the assent of the railroad grantee, has committed to one of the Departments of the government, or by an order interfere with the prosecution by the defendants of their claims under the act of 1898.

*We are of opinion that the bill should [510] have been dismissed upon the ground that a court of equity should not, in advance of the final action by the Secretary of the Interior in respect of lands embraced by the act of 1898, interfere with the regular and orderly administration of its provisions by means of a decree directed against claimants under that act. And without now expressing any opinion as to what questions may be raised by a claimant after such final action by the Land Department under that act, we adjudge that such dismissal must be without prejudice to any suit that may, according to established principles, be rightfully instituted by a claimant after the jurisdiction of the Department in respect of any particular lands has ceased. Thus modified, the decree of the Circuit Court must be affirmed.

It is so ordered.

Mr. Justice Brewer took no part in the decision of this case.

CITY OF SAN JUAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ST. JOHN'S GAS COMPANY, Limited.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 510-523.)

Contracts—medium of payment—accord and satisfaction—refusal of requested instructions—harmless error—effect of general charge.

1. References in a contract for street light-

NOTE.—On accord and satisfaction by paying to the sums due thereunder as to be paid in currency, without any qualification, cannot be permitted to counterbalance the showing which the prior negotiations and the context of the contract itself otherwise makes, that current foreign money was to be the medium of payment.

2. Error in instructing the jury that the time of making the contract for lighting the street lamps in San Juan, Porto Rico, was alone to be considered in determining the current foreign money which the contract provided was to be the medium of payment, is not prejudicial, where it is conceded that, if current foreign money was required by the contract, money of the United States current at the time the contract was made was within the contemplation of the parties, and that such money was also current in the island at the time when performance was due.
3. An accord and satisfaction results from the receipt, under protest, in discharge of a particular payment, of a different money medium from that which was required by a contract.
4. An agreement that payment in United States currency should extinguish a larger amount due under a street-lighting contract estimated in Porto Rican currency is binding where there was a bona fide dispute between the parties as to the medium of payment, the municipality insisting that it was Porto Rican money, and the lighting company that it was current foreign money.
5. Error in refusing to instruct the jury that parties who differed as to the medium of payment under a contract would be bound by a stipulation, by way of compromise, to extinguish, by a payment in United States currency, a larger amount due under the contract, estimated in Porto Rican currency, is not cured by instructing the jury, in the general charge, that the compromise evidenced by the agreement must be treated as inefficacious as to the particular items to which it related unless it was found that the minds of the parties had met on an entirely new and independent contract.

[No. 41.]

*Argued and submitted November 3, 1904.
Decided December 12, 1904.*

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico, to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in a suit to recover for services in lighting the street lamps in the city of San Juan, in that island. Reversed.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The gas company, defendant in error, an English corporation, sued the city of San Juan, the plaintiff in error, to recover $14,600.60, alleged to be due for services in lighting 485 street lamps from November, 1899, to September 16, 1900. Annexed to the petition was an account showing the items from which the balance resulted. The city generally denied, and pleaded that, under the contract for lighting, it had at various times imposed fines upon the company for neglect of its contract duty, which fines were a set-off, and extinguished the sum sued for. A statement of account was also filed by the city, showing the alleged set-off. Both the accounts credited the gas company for lighting with $15,125.70. In the account of the gas company, that company credited itself with several small items for labor and materials supplied to, and materials appropriated by, the city, aggregating $246.42, and for interest calculated at 12 per cent up to September 16, 1901, the items in question and the interest amounting to $2,215.96, making the total credited to the company $17,588.08. These sums were not in the account of the city. Whilst the credit items in both accounts, therefore, agreed except as above stated, there was this further difference: The account of the gas company stated that the sums to its credit were payable in gold or United States money; whilst the account of the city stated such items as payable in Porto Rican currency, declared to be worth 40 per cent less than United States gold or currency. The gas company debited itself with various payments made to it by the city on account of the services rendered and for the sum of a certain ground rent, all amounting to $2,987.42, leaving in its favor the balance sued for. The city's account, whilst debiting the company with payments in United States gold to the amount stated in the gas company's account, treated the debt as being due in Porto Rican currency, and figured the payments in gold as extinguishing a larger amount by 40 per cent than the face value* of [512] the gold. In addition the gas company was debited with certain fines imposed and other charges, and was moreover debited in Porto Rican money with two sums aggregating $8,836.88, amounting, if paid in gold, to $5,332.13. These two debits, it was recited in the account, were the sums in Porto Rican money or its equivalent in gold, which the city was bound to pay to the firm of Mullenhoff & Korber, to which firm the gas company, with the consent of the city, had transferred a portion of its claims against the city in Porto Rican money, to be paid in its equivalent in gold. By the result of the debits against the gas company the items credited to it were extinguished and the account balanced. Thus, the substantial difference between the two accounts arose from the fact that one stated the debt to be payable in gold or United States money, the ment of less sum for greater—see notes to Fulcr v. Kemp, 20 L. R. A. 785; Cglesby v. Attrill, 300 other treated it as payable in Porto Rican currency.

26 L. ed. U. S. 1186; and Jaffray v. Davis, 11 L. R. A. 710.

Subsequently, the city pleaded that it had paid to Mullenhoff & Korber the sum of $5,196.80 in United States gold, and was entitled to due credit therefor, and it was thereafter agreed between counsel that this amount had been paid under the transfer in question. As will hereafter appear, $4,337.32 of the sum was paid as the equivalent of $7,228.20 in Porto Rican currency, the amount due for street lighting up to June 1, 1900, if estimated in Porto Rico, while the balance of $859.48 was paid as satisfying the charge made for street lighting in the month of June, 1900, also consisting of a larger sum in Porto Rican money.

At the trial the undisputed proof showed that in 1875 the city made a contract, to last for twenty-five years, with one Steinacher for the lighting of the city, which contract, about 1878, was assigned to the gas company; that shortly after there was a difference between the parties as to whether the sums due under the contract were payable in Porto Rican money or in current foreign money. As a result, all the payments up to and exclusive of the items embraced in the suit were received by the gas company, under protest, in Porto Rican currency. So far as any payments made on account of the *items embraced in the suit and stated in both accounts, it was undisputedly shown that they were made in United States gold. There was proof tending to show that the city, in making them, insisted that the gold should extinguish its equivalent amount in Porto Rican currency, whilst the company claimed that the payments should only extinguish a sum equal to the face value of the United States gold.

Concerning the transfer to the firm of Mullenhoff & Korber, and the payment made by the city to that firm, it was indisputably shown as follows: That the gas company, being in want of funds, had agreed to transfer to the firm a given portion of its claim, and applied to the city to recognize the assignment, and to pay to the transferees the sum assigned, and that action was taken on this request by the city, and was accepted in writing by Scott, representing the gas company, as follows:

I, Ramon Negron Flores, secretary of the city council of the city of San Juan, hereby certify, that at the meeting held by the city council of San Juan, on the eighteenth day of this month, the following resolution was passed:

20.—The president of the city council declared that Mr. Scott, the contractor of the public lighting for the city, and Mr. Korber, 195 U. S.

a member of the firm of Mullenhoff and Korber of this city, had called on his office and stated that the amount of seven thousand two hundred and twenty-eight pesos and eighty-seven cents, Porto Rican currency, total amount of the credit due to Mr. Scott, on account of his services as contractor from November of the year one thousand eight hundred ninety-nine, to last May, being deducted the amounts already collected by the said contractor, should be delivered to the above said firm, to the credit of which Mr. Scott wishes this amount to be passed.

The city council agreed with the declarations of the president, and passed the resolution considering the said balance of seven thousand two hundred and twenty-eight pesos with eighty cents equivalent of four thousand three hundred and *thirty-seven[514] dollars and thirty-two cents in favor of the firm Mullenhoff & Korber, being therefore the municipal corporation relieved from any compromise with Mr. Scott concerning the said amount, without any prejudice to the resolutions to be passed some time in the future, about the claims previously filed by the said contractor.

And to begin the respective proceedings, I write and sign this declaration in San Juan of Puerto Rico this twenty-second day of June of the year one thousand nine hundred.

(Signed) R. Negron.

On twenty-second June, being present Mr. Scott and Mr. Korber, the latter acting as representative of the firm, of which he is a partner, I notified them the above resolution, and they affixed their signature as a proof of their acquiescence to the same, declaring at the same time, that the amount of the account of the month of June of this year should be recognized as due to the same firm, to which the said amount must be paid. I certify it.

(Signed) R. Negron.

(Signed) Mullenhoff & Korber.

(Signed) L. A. Scott.

San Juan, June 19th, 1900.

Let it be done. The Mayor, Egozcue.

There was testimony, admitted without objection, tending to show that at the time the city accepted this transfer it was understood that the reservation made in the written agreement related only to fines which it was contended the city had unjustly imposed on the company. The court rejected the offer of the city to prove that the parties, by their conduct prior to the period covered by the items sued for, had interpreted the contract as meaning that the payments were to be made in Porto Rican money, and not otherwise. The court also refused to instruct, at the request of the city, that the contract was payable in Porto Rican money, and charged that *it provided for payment in foreign money, exclusive of Spanish gold, which was current in the island at the time the contract was made. The court further instructed that the payments made by the city to Mullenhoff & Korber in gold should be debited to the city at the face value of those payments, unless the jury found that the minds of the parties had met on a new contract to substitute Porto Rican currency for the foreign current money stipulated by the contract. The court, moreover, refused the request of the city to charge that if, at the time of the transfer to Mullenhoff & Korber, there was a compromise entered into between the parties by which the payment to the firm of a given amount in United States currency should extinguish a larger amount of the debt due the company in Porto Rican money, that the parties were bound thereby, as to such payment. Besides, the jury were instructed that, as there was no proof concerning the fines imposed by the city upon the company, as stated in the account of the city, such items must be disregarded, and that interest, as calculated in the account of the city, not being exigible under the local law, must also be disregarded.

There was a verdict and judgment thereon against the city for $8,761.35, and this writ of error was prosecuted.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill submitted the cause for plaintiff in error:

If a contract is made payable in terms of currency or current money, oral evidence is always admissible as to the meaning of those terms as between the parties.

Thorington v. Smith, 8 Wall. 1, 19 L. ed. 361.

In the absence of such evidence, where the performance of the contract extends through many years, the actual construction put upon the contract by the parties, and the medium in which partial payments have been made, is conclusive as to their intention.

Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. 50, 19 L. ed. 594; Cook v. Lillo, 103 U. S. 792, 26 L. ed. 460; District of Columbia v. Gallaher, 124 U. S. 505, 510, 31 L. ed. 526, 527, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 585; The Confederate Note Case (Atlantic, T. & O. R. Co. v. Carolina Nat. Bank) 19 Wall. 548, 22 L. ed. 196; Bissell v. Heyward, 96 U. S. 580, 24 L. ed. 678. See also Dearing v. Parker, 4 Dall. Appx. xxiii., 1 L. ed. 925; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121, 131, 30 L. ed. 1110, 1114, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1057.

A party is bound by his conduct in accepting and acting upon the proposals and conduct of the other party, irrespective of any express consent or acquiescence; and the rights of the parties are determined upon principles of estoppel, rather than of the meeting of the minds in a new contract.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 539; Savage v. United States, 92 U. S. 382, 23 L. ed. 660; United States v. Justice, 14 Wall. 535, 20 L. ed. 753; Mason v. United States, 17 Wall. 67, 21 L. ed. 564; Baird v. United States, 96 U. S. 430, 24 L. ed. 703; Washington v. Opie, 145 U. S. 214, 36 L. ed. 580, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 822; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Clark, 178 U. S. 353, 44 L. ed. 1099, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 924.

It is no doubt true that the payment by a debtor of a part of his liquidated debt is not a satisfaction of the whole, unless made and accepted upon some new consideration; but it is equally true that where the debt is unliquidated and the amount is uncertain this rule does not apply. In such cases the question is whether the payment was in fact made and accepted in satisfaction.

Baird v. United States, 96 U. S. 430, 24 L. ed. 703.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Francis H. Dexter and John Spalding Flannery, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Payments must, under the French Civil Code, have as a basis the nominal value of the medium of payment on the day when effected or paid, though the legal value of the coin may have changed during the interval which has elapsed between the day on which the obligation was contracted and that on which the payment was made.

4 Aubry et Rau, Cours de Droit Civil Français, pp. 158, 159; 2 Mourlon, Répétitions écrites sur le Code Civil, p. 749; 8 Hue, Commentaire Théorique et Pratique du Code Civil, p. 62; 2 Baudry-Lecantinerie, Précis de Droit Civil, p. 748.

The opinions and sentences of Spanish jurists are to like effect, as plainly appears from the various references thereto under article 57 of the Code of Commerce in force in Porto Rico, page 24 of the War Department translation (Government printing office, 1899).

And so also is the prevailing law of the United States as settled by this court.

Butler v. Horwitz, 7 Wall. 258, 19 L. ed. 149; Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 557, 574, 19 L. ed. 501, 506; Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 687, 20 L. ed. 460.

And it is well settled that a contract made abroad to pay in "dollars," where performance is contemplated in an American port, is payable in currency of the United States.

Trecartin v. The Rochambeau, 2 Cliff. 465, Fed. Cas. No. 14,163; The Quintero, 1 Low. Dec. 38, Fed. Cas. No. 11,517.

And so, a bond given in 1859, payable in "dollars," was held to be payable in gold and silver only.

Williamson v. Richardson, Fed. Cas. No. 17,754.

The same rule has been upheld, in the absence of statutory provisions, by most, if not all, of the states of the United States.

39 American Digest, Century ed. title Payment, p. 54.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

In order to come to the principal controversy covered by the assignments of error we dispose of certain contentions which we deem of minor importance. We think the court was right in instructing the jury that [516] it must disregard the *items as to fines charged by the city against the gas company, because no proof was offered on the subject. Whilst it is true, as asserted in the argument, that some reference was made to such fines in the testimony of one or more of the witnesses, such reference in no sense tended to establish that the fines had been legally imposed. As to the assignment of error relating to the refusal of the court to allow testimony for the purpose of showing that even if, under the contract, payment in foreign current money was required, the contract was tacitly modified, we deem it unnecessary to express an opinion, for the following reasons: The record shows that, subsequent to the ruling complained of, without objection, testimony was admitted establishing that, although all the payments made up to the first of the items embraced in the claim in suit, were made by the city to the gas company in Porto Rican money, nevertheless that such payments were only received by the gas company under protest, asserting its right to be paid in foreign current money. However conclusive on the gas company may have been the receipt by it of payment in a different medium from that which it asserted the contract required, the fact of the protest operated to prevent the inference that the medium actually received was admitted to be the one in which future payments should be made.

With the questions just referred to out of the way, it is apparent from the statement which we have made of the case that the record requires us to decide only two questions: First, in what money were the sums due under the contract payable? and, second, the effect of the agreement concerning payment made by the city to Mullenhorf & Korber.

1st. In what currency were the sums due under the contract payable?

The contract, of which only a translation is in the record, was passed before a notary, 195 U. S.

and is voluminous, containing in minute detail a recital of all the occurrences which took place from the date of the first steps taken to make a contract, and its consummation.

*Excluding irrelevant details, it appears [517] as follows:

Some time in 1874 the city advertised for bids for a contract for lighting. Proposals were received from a Mr. Steinacher and Mr. Olney. Steinacher, whilst proposing to bind himself to light lamps for $3 monthly for each lamp, suggested that the city modify its request for proposals in several particulars, one of which was that there should be included in the contract the purchase by the contractor of gas works then owned by the city. This suggestion was accepted, and preparatory to making a call for bids, after obtaining the authority of the provincial deputation of Porto Rico, the city directed that the gas works be appraised by certain city officials. This appraisement was made as follows:

Recapitulation:	Pesetas.
Value of the buildings.....	19,176.25
Fixed and loose materials in the gas works	48,908.85
Fixed materials in the city.....	10,624.00

Total amount 78,709.10

The present appraisement amounting to 78,709.10 pesetas, or $31,741.82 of the currency in commerce.

Porto Rico, 26th of May, 1875.

The municipal architect.

(Signed) Domingo Sesmero.

The city thereupon called for new proposals. Among the many conditions exacted were, first, that the bidder should agree to light street lamps at $3 monthly for each lamp, and that payment for the same "will be made in the circulating foreign money in commerce for the value that it is received, without any premium that will equalize it to the Spanish official current money;" that he should buy the gas works, appraised, as we have above stated, at $78,709.10, Porto Rico money, at its equivalent in foreign currency,—$31,741.82; that the bidder should furnish a guarantee of $6,000 in cash or a bond for $9,000, to be secured by first mort-[518]gage on a house in the city, satisfactory to the municipality. Many details were provided in the conditions; as to the manner in which the contractor should perform his duties; as to fines to be imposed by the city for neglect in the quality and character of the light furnished, and for various other delinquencies, and it was also provided "the penalties for faults in the service and supply of gas to the public will be imposed by the alcalde without appeal."

Steinacher was the only bidder in answer to this call for proposals. He offered "to take charge of the city service for the amount of $3 currency for each lamp," and to buy the buildings and apparatus, etc., for the sum of $22,000 in currency, instead of $31,741.82, as required by the requests for bids made by the city. In his proposition, moreover, Steinacher tendered two houses, stating the fact to be that one of them was encumbered by a prior mortgage in favor of the municipality, which he, Steinacher, had given to guarantee a prior contract existing between himself and the municipality. In addition, his bid suggested various modifications in the administrative provisions enumerated by the city in its conditions. The bid, not being in accord with the proposition submitted by the city, was rejected. Negotiations then ensued, the result of which was that the city yielded as to the administrative provisions, and Steinacher yielded as to the price to be paid for the gas works, it being recited in the proceedings of the city on the subject that, in order to terminate the difficulties, "Mr. Steinacher expresses himself disposed to the acquisition of the said buildings, etc., as published in the Official Gazette of the 8th of June last, for the amount of $31,741.82 in currency, and to take under his charge the public light at $3 monthly for each lamp, at same currency, according to the price published." The houses tendered to secure the bond were accepted by the city, and, in order to give the city a first mortgage, a liquidation [519] was had between Steinacher *and the city under the prior contract, and by this liquidation it was established that Steinacher owed the city $203 in "foreign currency," which he paid. To ascertain whether the value of the houses was equal to the requirements of the city, they were appraised by the city officials in Porto Rican money, and this sum was reduced to foreign currency, and, as the amount in foreign currency equaled the $9,000 required by the conditions of the city, the houses were accepted and a new mortgage for that amount was given. Under these proposals and acceptance the contract was executed, conforming in all respects to the proposals and bids as modified by the proceedings which we have narrated.

The contention that the $3 per month for lighting street lamps was payable in Porto Rican money is based on the fact that sometimes in the contract the sum to be paid is referred to as in currency, without any qualification. The arguments would have cogency if the passages in the contract relied upon stood alone; but its unsoundness becomes apparent by a consideration of the context of the contract. The estimate of the property to be sold in Porto Rican money and its liquidation in foreign currency; the terms of the bid; the proposition of Steinacher, which was accepted, to pay for the gas works at the sum of the foreign current money to which the Porto Rican money was reduced, and to do the lighting at $3 per lamp in the same currency; the action of the city concerning the liquidation of the prior account, and the mortgage upon the house,—all demonstrate that both the proposals of the city, the acceptance by Steinacher, and the contract fixed current foreign money, exclusive of Spanish gold, as the medium in which the service for lighting the street lamps was to be paid. The court, therefore, was right in its instruction as to the medium of payment required by the contract. We find, however, nothing in the contract to support the construction that it required the payment to be made in foreign current money circulating in the island at the time the contract was made, instead of money of that character circulating at the time *the payments [520] were to be made. The general rule, under both the common and the civil law, is that, in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, the character of money which is current at the time fixed for performance of a contract is the medium in which payments may be made. Butler v. Horwitz, 7 Wall. 258, 19 L. ed. 149; Willard v. Tayloe, 8 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 501; Trebilcock v. Wilson, 12 Wall. 687, 20 L. ed. 460; Commercial Code of Porto Rico, art. 312; Spanish Civil Code of Porto Rico, arts. 1091, 1157, 1170; Code Napoleon, art. 1246; Aubrey & Rau, vol. 4, p. 158; Mourlon, vol. 2, p. 749.

There was, therefore, error in instructing that the time of making the contract was to be alone considered in determining the foreign current money for which the contract provided. We think, however, such error was in no sense prejudicial. This follows, because it was conceded that, if foreign current money was required by the contract, money of the United States current at the time the contract was made was within the contemplation of the parties, and that such money was also current in the island at the time when performance was due. From this it results that the rights of the parties were in no way affected by the erroneous ruling.

2d. The effect of the agreement concerning the payment made by the city to Mullenhoff & Korber.

On the face of the written agreement between the city and the gas company it undoubtedly appears that a stated sum of money, to be paid in United States currency, was to extinguish a larger sum in Porto Rican money.

As we have seen, there was testimony tending to show, and none tending otherwise, that the reservation in the written document concerning "claims previously filed by the said contractor," and which were to be "passed some time in the future," solely related to claims for fines which the city had assessed against the gas company, and the justice of which the company disputed. The city asked the court to instruct that if it was found that at the time of the agreement it was stipulated by way of com-[521]promise that the larger sum owing *at the time should be extinguished by the payment of the lesser amount, the parties were bound. This request was refused and excepted to. The court, in its general charge, in the fullest manner instructed the jury that, as the medium of payment required by the contract was foreign current money, payment in that money extinguished simply the amount paid in foreign money, unless it was found that the minds of the parties had met on an agreement engendering an entirely new contract, substituting Porto Rican money for foreign currency.

It is urged by the city that error to its prejudice resulted from refusing to give the requested instruction. To sustain this proposition the doctrine is invoked that where one receives in payment a different thing or medium from that called for in the contract, such receipt is binding. Undoubtedly the general rule obtains, and is based on the premise that the discharge of a contract in a different thing from that for which the contract provides, necessarily is an accord and satisfaction as to the particular payment concerning which the different thing is received. Sheehy v. Mandeville, 6 Cranch, 263, 3 L. ed. 218; Very v. Levy, 13 How. 357, 14 L. ed. 179; Bull v. Bull, 43 Conn. 455; Neal v. Handley, 116 Ill. 418, 56 Am. Rep. 784, 6 N. E. 45; Dimmick v. Sexton, 125 Pa. 334, 17 Atl. 345.

True also is it that it has been settled by this court (Savage v. United States, 92 U. S. 382, 23 L. ed. 660) that this doctrine is applicable to the receipt under protest, in discharge of a particular payment, of a different money medium from that which was required by the contract. Whilst we have not been referred to any Spanish authority showing that these principles obtained under the law in force in Porto Rico, as the doctrine rests upon principles known to the Roman law (L. 17, C. De Solut.) enforced under the Code Napoleon (Journal de Palais Répertoire, v. 10, verbo paiement, p. 10, No. 117; Toulier, t. 12, p. 355; Duranton, t. 12, Nos. 79 and 80), we cannot hesitate to conclude that the doctrine in question prevailed also in the Spanish civil law in force in Porto Rico. Whether it is applicable to the facts of this case is, then, the question.
195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

*Now, whilst it may be at once conceded[522] that the doctrine in question is applicable to the payments made in Porto Rican money before the date of the first item sued for, it is equally clear that it cannot be applied to the payments thereafter made, including those to Mullenhoff & Korber, since they were made in United States currency. The contention that these payments in such money extinguished a larger sum than the par value of the money paid reduces itself to this: that a larger sum was satisfied by the payment of a lesser sum, because there was an agreement to that effect. The gas company in effect insists that this cannot be sustained, because of the well-established rule "that where a liquidated sum is due, the payment of a less sum in satisfaction thereof, though accepted as satisfaction, is not binding as such, for want of consideration." Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Clark, 178 U. S. 364, 44 L. ed. 1105, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 928, and authorities there cited.

Conceding, without so deciding, that such rule was controlling in Porto Rico, we think it is not applicable to the case in hand. As pointed out by this court in the case just previously cited, the rule in question is subject, among others, to the well-established exception that it does not apply where, at the time of the agreement, there was a dispute between the parties, the subject-matter of which dispute is embraced in the agreement to extinguish a greater by a less amount. True it is, as pointed out in Fire Ins. Asso. v. Wickham, 141 U. S. 564, 35 L. ed. 860, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84, it must appear that the alleged dispute really existed, and did not arise merely from an arbitrary denial by one party of an obligation which was obviously due. Despite the construction which we have given the contract, we think it is quite clear that the proof established that there was a bona fide dispute in this case. As we have seen, from the very inception of the contract the parties differed as to the medium of payment,—the one, the city, insisting that it was Porto Rican money; the other, the gas company, that it was foreign current money. During a period of fully twenty years this controversy continued, and in every instance the gas *company, although protesting, ac-[523]cepted the city's view of the contract, and, by taking a different medium, bound itself as to those payments despite its protest. When the period arrived when the company was no longer willing to so act, and stood upon its rights as it understood them, naturally the city stood upon its asserted rights, and thus the parties were at arm's length, disputing their respective rights. If there had been no agreement, the solution would have required judicial action. When, in view of this dispute, an agreement was reached that the payment should be made in United States currency, and that the payment should extinguish a larger amount estimated in Porto Rican currency, there was necessarily a compromise and settlement as to that payment which put the transaction so settled exactly in the position which had resulted from the action of the parties concerning the payments made during the preceding period of more than twenty years.

It follows from the foregoing that the court below erred to the prejudice of the city in refusing the instruction asked by it as to the result of the compromise, and that this error was not cured by the general charge, which instructed the jury that the compromise evidenced by the agreement must be treated as inefficacious as to the particular items to which it related unless it was found that the minds of the parties had met on an entirely new and independent contract.

The judgment of the court below is reversed, and the cause is remanded with directions to set aside the judgment, and grant a new trial.

Reversed.

[524]

*UNITED STATES, Appt.,

v.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, & ST. PAUL RAILWAY COMPANY et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 524-539.)

Railway land grants—erroneous certification by Secretary of Interior—bona fide purchaser.

1. A certification to the state of Minnesota, made by the Secretary of the Interior, for the benefit of a railway company, of land within the indemnity limits of the railway land grant act of July 4, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 87, chap. 168), even if erroneous, is not absolutely void because of a previous application to enter the land as a homestead after a prior homestead entry had been canceled for abandonment, which application was refused because the land in question had then been withdrawn from market by the Land Department, where this refusal was acquiesced in and an entry was then made under an amended application, which did not cover the land in question, although the entryman thereunder made use of such land in connection with his own, but without laying claim to it as land which he had attempted to enter, and which had been improperly or wrongfully refused him.

2. A purchaser of land certified by the Secretary of the Interior to the state of Minnesota in aid of railway construction, and conveyed by that state to a railway company, occupies the position of a purchaser in good faith, protected as such by the act of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), § 4, although the certification was erroneous, and might have been avoided and the land recovered back by the government while in the hands of the railway company, where such purchaser had no notice, actual or constructive, of the claim of the government.

[No. 54.]

Submitted November 4, 1904. Decided December 12, 1904.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota, dismissing a bill to set aside a certification under a congressional land grant, made by the Secretary of the Interior to the state of Minnesota, for the benefit of a railway company, and to set aside the conveyance of such land by the state to the railway company, and by the company to one of the individual defendants. Affirmed.

See same case below, 54 C. C. A. 545, 116 Fed. 969.

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The United States, on the 6th day of March, 1893, filed this bill in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Minnesota, for the purpose of setting aside the certification, under the land grant of Congress (14 Stat. at L. 87, chap. 168), made by the Secretary of the Interior, of the land described in the bill, to the state of Minnesota, for the benefit of the railroad company, and also to set aside the conveyance thereof by the state to the railroad company, and by the company to one of the individual defendants. A supplemental bill was filed, by leave, March 4, 1901, bringing in by service of the subpœna other individual defendants.

The suit was brought under and pursuant to the act of Congress of March 3, 1887 (24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595), entitled "An Act to Provide for the Adjustment of Land Grants made by Congress *to Aid in the Construc-[525]tion of Railroads, and for the Forfeiture of Unearned Lands, and for Other Purposes."

Upon trial in the circuit court the bill was dismissed, and the decree of dismissal

195 U. S.

NOTE.—As to land grants to railroads—see note to Kansas P. R. Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 28 L. ed. U. S. 794.

was affirmed by the United States circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit (54 C. C. A. 545, 116 Fed. 969), and from that decree of affirmance the government has appealed here.

The facts upon which the controversy arose are, in substance, as follows: On the 4th day of July, 1866, Congress passed an act making an additional grant of lands to the state of Minnesota (14 Stat. at L. 87, chap. 168), to aid in the construction of railroads in that state. The Southern Minnesota Railroad Company was, at the time of the passage of the act of Congress, a corporation organized under the laws of Minnesota, with the power to construct a line of railroad, as mentioned in that act. The legislature of Minnesota, on the 25th day of February, 1867, transferred the land granted to it by the act of Congress to the railroad company, subject to the provisions of that act and also of the state statute.

Among the lands thus transferred was a lot 80 acres in extent, in Faribault county, Minnesota, being the property in dispute in this suit. The land was within the indemnity limits of the grant by Congress to the state, as determined by the map of definite location of the railroad, which became effective February 25, 1867. The deficiency in what are termed the "place" lands was largely in excess of 80 acres. On the 29th day of November, 1870, the Southern Minnesota Railroad Company selected this tract, in section 35, in lieu of part of the land lost in the granted limits; and the land was certified to the state of Minnesota by the Secretary of the Interior, March 25, 1871, for the benefit of the railroad company; and on the 8th day of August, 1871, the state of Minnesota conveyed it by deed to the railroad company. In March, 1868, the company had mortgaged all of its property, including the land granted under the act of Congress and all subsequently ac-
[526]quired property, to secure *the payment of its bonds. This mortgage was foreclosed, and the property sold and conveyed to a new corporation by the name of the Southern Minnesota Railway Company, and the land was conveyed to that company. On the 5th day of January, 1885, the railway company, by contract in writing, agreed to sell the land in dispute to one A. Boyeson, for the sum named in that contract. Boyeson assigned his interest in the contract, on the 6th of January, to Fredericksen, who, on the 1st day of April, 1885, assigned it to the defendant, Thomas S. Thompson, and, in turn, on the 3d day of February, 1888, the latter assigned it to Ericksrud, who paid the balance due upon the contract, and received the warranty deed for the land from the railway company on the 20th day of March, 1888.
195 U. S.

Ericksrud died intestate on March 27, 1888, and on November 6, 1888, the land was decreed by the probate court to be the property of the widow and heirs at law of Ericksrud, and they remained in possession, and, on the 24th of May, 1899, these heirs at law, still being in possession, conveyed the same to the defendant Woodwick for the sum of $2,000 cash. This is the title of record coming from the United States to the state, thence to the railroad company, and, by mesne conveyances, to the defendant Woodwick; and there was nothing of record showing that any other person was entitled to the land at the time when Woodwick paid the $2,000 to the heirs of Ericksrud, and took the deed therefor. The defendant Donovan, however, lays claim to the land in question pursuant to the facts now to be stated.

Prior to the passage of the granting act of Congress, above referred to, one Luman Barclay had, on the 21st day of June, 1866, entered this land in controversy, and also the 80 acres in section 26, adjoining, as a homestead. In the following year (1867) Barclay abandoned the land and went to Canada. Some time after his departure, and in the same year (1867), Donovan, the defendant, sought to acquire a homestead on government land. He examined the land for *which Barclay had made his entry, and [527] decided to enter it as a homestead. He went to the United States local land office for the purpose, and was informed by the register of the land office that he could not make the entry until Barclay's entry was canceled. He was also informed that, if he wished to make a claim that Barclay had abandoned his interest, he should publish notice of the time and place where he would make proof upon that matter. He published a notice accordingly, for three weeks, and paid $9 as the cost thereof, and, in the fore part of August, 1867, made proof that Barclay had abandoned his homestead claim. Donovan insists that he was given to understand that he could enter the land as a homestead as soon as the local land office received notice from the General Land Office, at Washington, that Barclay's entry was canceled. He thereupon made one application to enter both tracts of land,—the 80 acres in section 26, and the 80-acre tract in question in section 35, but left the date of application blank, because he could make no entry for the lot in section 35 until Barclay's entry had been canceled. He did this, as he or his witness Bullis said, to head off any other applicant for the land, and he left the application with the local land office. He then went into possession of section 26, and commenced the erection of a house thereon; and he says he commenced the cultivation of a small part of the tract in section 35. This was in the fall of 1867. The Barclay entry was duly canceled at Washington on the 14th of January, 1868, and notice thereafter given to the local land office, and Donovan was notified of the fact. On the 6th day of June, 1868, Donovan went to the local land office, and applied to enter the two tracts of land. He was there informed that the odd-numbered sections within 20 miles of the road had been withdrawn from market; and that such withdrawal included the section in question; and that he could not, therefore, enter the 80 acres in section 35 as a part of his homestead.

[528] Donovan acquiesced in this determination of the local land *office, and made his entry for the 80 acres in section 26. The old application for the two lots was destroyed, and a new one made out for the lot in section 26. He thereafter used the land in section 35, in connection with his own in section 26, and cut grass upon and ploughed some of it; but it does not appear that he laid any claim to it as land which he had attempted to enter, and which had been improperly or wrongfully refused him. His house and other permanent improvements were on section 26. At the time he made proof (in 1875) for the 80 acres in section 26, Donovan says he offered to make proof also as to the land in section 35, but his offer was rejected because, among other reasons, he had not entered the land in that section. He has obtained his patent for the 80 acres in section 26.

On the 26th day of June, 1883, Donovan applied at the local land office to enter this tract of land in section 35 as an additional homestead, under the act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. at L. 472, chap. 191, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1401); and the register certified that the application was for surveyed lands of the class the applicant was legally entitled to enter under the homestead act of 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 392, chap. 75]; in other words, unappropriated public lands of the United States. The application was rejected upon the ground that the land so applied for had been certified to the state of Minnesota, for the benefit of the railroad company. Donovan appealed from this rejection to the Commissioner of the General Land Office, where, it is stated, the matter is still pending and undetermined.

In 1885 the defendant Thompson, an assignee of the contract made by the railway company with Boyeson, went into possession of the 80 acres in section 35, and ordered Donovan off the same, and Donovan left the land accordingly. After Thompson took possession of the land,—April 1, 1885,—

Donovan, in the same year, commenced a suit in the district court of Faribault county to obtain possession of the land; and, on or about the 24th of March, 1887, the state court decided that Donovan had no title to the land, or *right to the posses-[529] sion of the same, and that Thompson had the right to the possession thereof under the contract already mentioned. This judgment against him in the state court was never appealed from by Donovan, nor has it ever been vacated, modified, or reversed. In 1888 Donovan applied to the Land Department at Washington for relief, by reason of the act of Congress of March 3, 1887, heretofore referred to. In relation to that application the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on February 14, 1889, addressed a letter to the Secretary of the Interior, and therein spoke of Donovan's application for the institution of proceedings under that act of Congress, and said that Donovan had no title to the land; but he sent all the papers to the Secretary, for review by him. On the 1st of April, 1889, the Secretary replied to the communication of the Commissioner of the General Land Office, and therein reversed his holding, and directed the latter to make a demand of the railway company for the reconveyance of the land, as provided for in the act. On the 12th of April, 1890, the Commissioner sent a communication to the Secretary, informing him that a demand for the reconveyance of the land had been made April 9, 1889, upon the railroad company, and that no answer had been made, although more than a year had elapsed since the demand. On the 16th of April, 1890, the Secretary of the Interior transmitted the letter to the Attorney General, with a request that suit might be instituted to have the certification of the land in question by the Land Department to the state of Minnesota set aside and canceled if, in the opinion of the Attorney General, the suit could be maintained. After waiting three years, and on the 6th of March, 1893, the United States filed its bill against the Chicago, Milwaukee, & St. Paul Railway Company as successor in interest of the former companies, and also against the Southern Minnesota Railway Company, Michael Donovan, Thomas S. Thompson, and C. C. Ericksrud. On August 11, 1894, the companies answered the bill. Donovan did not answer it until March 6, 1901, and then confessed the same, *and prayed that the relief[530] asked for might be granted. On March 4, 1901, the United States filed a supplemental bill, wherein it was stated that no service had ever been made upon Thompson or Ericksrud, and that, on May 24, 1899, the heirs of Ericksrud had joined in a deed conveying the land in question to Louis K.

Woodwick. Process was prayed against the defendants, the heirs of Ericksrud, and also against Woodwick, and subpoenas were served on them, and on May 2, 1901, they answered the supplemental bill. A special examiner was appointed to take testimony; and on the 13th of January, 1902, he submitted his report of the testimony taken in the suit, to the court.

Assistant Attorney General Purdy submitted the cause for appellant:

Where a tract of land in the place or granted limits is subject to a homestead or pre-emption claim at the date of the grant, it is thereby forever excepted from the grant.

Bardon v. Northern P. R. Co. 145 U. S. 535, 36 L. ed. 806, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 856.

Land along the indemnity limits of a railroad grant, if subject at the time of the grant to a homestead or pre-emption claim which is afterwards canceled, then becomes subject to selection by the railroad company or any other legal applicant.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Price County, 133 U. S. 496, 511, 512, 33 L. ed. 687, 694, 695, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 341; Hewitt v. Schultz, 180 U. S. 139, 45 L. ed. 463, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 309.

Where Congress provides for withdrawal of lands from market, any withdrawal which is contrary to such provision is absolutely void.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Davis, 19 Land Dec. 87.

Where land is subject to a homestead or pre-emption claim at the date of the passage of a granting act, such land is excepted from an order withdrawing the lands from market.

St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Iverson, 14 Land Dec. 79.

Where a homestead or pre-emption claim is attached to land, such land is thereby segregated from the public domain, and for the time being is withdrawn from the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior and the Land Department, and so continues until the entry is canceled.

Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 25 L. ed. 305; Southern P. R. Co. v. Bell, 183 U. S. 675, 46 L. ed. 383, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 232.

Unless otherwise expressly declared by Congress, no right of the railroad company attaches or can attach to specific lands within indemnity limits until there is a selection under the direction or with the approval of the Secretary.

Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 103, 112, 116, 47 L. ed. 726, 730, 732, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

195 U. S.

Where a party applies to enter, under the homestead or pre-emption laws of the United States, a tract of land which is subject to be so taken, and he is qualified to thus acquire the same, and his application is erroneously rejected by the government officials, his right thereto attaches as though his application had been allowed; and if he continues in possession and complies with the law so as to be entitled to a patent, he acquires a vested interest of which he cannot be deprived even by an act of Congress.

Shepley v. Cowan, 91 U. S. 330, 23 L. ed. 424; Arđ v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 537, 39 L. ed. 524, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 40 L. ed. 253, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Goodale v. Olney, 12 Land Dec. 324.

An application to enter or pre-empt land, which is erroneously rejected, secures to the applicant the same rights as if his application had been allowed.

Goodale v. Olney, 12 Land Dec. 324; Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549; Coder v. Lotridge, 12 Land Dec. 643.

As Donovan had complied with all the requirements of the law, including payment for the land, to entitle him to a certificate and patent for the same, he thereby acquired a vested interest in the land, of which he could not be deprived by any act of Congress.

Gonzales v. French, 164 U. S. 338, 346, 41 L. ed. 458, 461, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102; Newkirk v. Marshall, 35 Kan. 77, 10 Pac. 571; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

Donovan's entry and occupation of the lands in controversy, and cultivation of the same up to 1871, with the purpose of entering the same as his homestead, had the legal effect of so withdrawing such lands from the control of the Land Department that the officers thereof had no authority to issue a certification to the state of Minnesota; and their acts in so doing were void with respect to this tract of land.

Doolan v. Carr, 125 U. S. 618, 624, 31 L. ed. 844, 846, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1228; Burr v. Greeley, 3 C. C. A. 357, 10 U. S. App. 409, 52 Fed. 926; Weeks v. Bridgman, 159 U. S. 541, 40 L. ed. 253, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 72; Gertgens v. O'Connor, 191 U. S. 237, 48 L. ed. 163, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 94.

Messrs. Burton Hanson and W. H. Norris submitted the cause for the railway companies:

The withdrawal of the Southern Minnesota Railroad grant by the Secretary at his discretion, in advance of the definite location, was neither premature nor ineffectual.

Wolscy v. Chapman, 101 U. S. 768, 769, 25 L. ed. 919, 920; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 39 L. ed. 528, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

Any withdrawal made before June 6, 1868, and then unrevoked, precluded Donovan's attempted entry, however completely he may then or afterwards have complied with all formal particulars of statutory requirement; and his attempt initiated no right in him.

Bullard v. Des Moines & Ft. D. R. Co. 122 U. S. 167, 30 L. ed. 1123, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1149; St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 139 U. S. 1, 18, 35 L. ed. 77, 83, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 551, 39 L. ed. 528, 529, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410; United States v. Holmes, 105 Fed. 41.

It is a matter of common knowledge that many go upon the public domain, build cabins, and establish themselves, temporarily, at least, as occupants, but having in view simply prospecting for minerals, hunting, trapping, etc., and with no thought of acquiring title to land.

Tarpey v. Madsen, 178 U. S. 221, 44 L. ed. 1045, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849.

Donovan never acquired as against the state, or its grantee or assigns, any approach to a vested right.

Norton v. Evans, 27 C. C. A. 168, 49 U. S. App. 669, 82 Fed. 804; Wagstaff v. Collins, 38 C. C. A. 19, 97 Fed. 3; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566; Hastings & D. R. Co. v. Whitney, 132 U. S. 364, 33 L. ed. 366, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Tarpey v. Madsen, 178 U. S. 215, 44 L. ed. 1042, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 849; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

The selection was justified.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 949; Ryan v. Central P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 388, 25 L. ed. 395.

Neither the Land Department nor the courts should disturb an adjustment made in accordance with a uniform construction which prevailed at the time.

Hahn v. United States, 107 U. S. 402, 27 L. ed. 527, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494; Brown v. United States, 113 U. S. 568, 28 L. ed. 1079, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 648; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 30 L. ed. 559, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413; United States v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 98 U. S. 341, 25 L. ed. 200.

The certification was not absolutely void, and conveyed title.

United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 15 C. C. A. 96, 32 U. S. App. 272, 67 Fed. 948; Ard v. Brandon, 156 U. S. 540, 39 L. ed. 525, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 406; United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368.

Mr. Andrew C. Dunn submitted the cause for appellees Erichsrud, Anderson, Remington, and Woodwick:

The order of withdrawal operated at once to prevent any initiation of a homestead entry on this land, and was effectual to prevent Donovan from acquiring any right in this land after that withdrawal, which was over a year prior to his claim of settlement, in 1867, and nearly two years prior to his claim of application to enter, in 1868.

Spencer v. McDougal, 159 U. S. 62, 40 L. ed. 76, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1026; Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 147 U. S. 531, 37 L. ed. 267, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Wolcott v. Des Moines Nav. & R. Co. 5 Wall. 681, 18 L. ed. 689; Wood v. Beach, 156 U. S. 548, 39 L. ed. 528, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410.

The case of United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 480, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368, is apparently decisive as to the matter of good faith in these defendants.

Titles to public land cannot be acquired by merely squatting upon it. Some actual notice must be given to the world, through the legal channels of the Land Department, within the periods and in the mode and manner limited and provided by law.

Kansas P. R. Co. v. Dunmeyer, 113 U. S. 629, 28 L. ed. 1122, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 566.

Courts do not overturn decrees and land titles upon disputed, doubtful evidence.

Maxwell Land-Grant Case (United States v. Maxwell Land-Grant Co.) 121 U. S. 325, 30 L. ed. 949, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1015; United States v. San Jacinto Tin Co. 125 U. S. 273, 31 L. ed. 747, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 850.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The Attorney General contends that, before the passage of the act of Congress granting the land (July 4, 1866), Barclay had made legal entry upon the books of the local land office, of the land in question, under the homestead laws of Congress, and that such legal entry was in existence at the time of the passage of the act of Congress of July 4, 1866; that, by reason of such entry, the land was excepted from the grant under that act, and that when Barclay abandoned his homestead claim upon the land, it immediately became public land of the United States, and did not then pass under the grant to the state pursuant to the act of July 4, 1866, and it was *therefore not legally withdrawn from market by any act of the Land Department, nor could it be certified to the state; and that the attempt to do so was not only erroneous, but absolutely void; that, at the time when Donovan made application to enter the land, in June, 1868, it was part of the public lands of the United States, open to entry, and his application, although he had done all that he could, was wrongfully denied by the local land office; that thereafter the filing of the map of definite location by the railway company, and its selection of the land in question, and the certification of the land by the Secretary of the Interior to the state, and the conveyance by the state to the railway company, and the contract and conveyances following thereon,—conveyed no interest in or title to the premises in question, but that they rightfully belonged to Donovan, and therefore the certification by the Land Department, etc., should be set aside, to the end that the land may be transferred to Donovan, as demanded in the bill.

On the other hand, it is insisted on the part of the defendant Woodwick, that the action of the Land Department officials in withdrawing the land in question from market was valid, and within the jurisdiction of that department; that the selection of the land by the railway company was proper, as being within the indemnity limits of the grant by Congress; and that its certification by the Secretary of the Interior to the state was within the power of that officer, and the act was not, therefore, beyond his jurisdiction; and that his certification and the action of the state conveyed a good title, or, at any rate, that the defendant Woodwick was a bona fide purchaser of the land, and as such his rights were preserved under the act of March 3, 1887. 24 Stat. at L. 556, chap. 376, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1595.

If Woodwick is protected under that act, as a purchaser in good faith, even against Donovan, it is unnecessary to pursue an inquiry as to the existence of any other defense. We are of opinion that Woodwick is protected under the 4th section of the [536]act. The plain intent of that section *is, as stated by Mr. Justice Brewer in delivering the opinion of the court, in United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 463, 41 L. ed. 789, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 368, to secure one who, in good faith and as an honest transaction, purchases the land, and to leave to the government a simple claim for money against the railroad. The justice said (pp. 480, 481, L. ed. p. 796, 797, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 372):

"It will be observed that the technical term 'bona fide purchaser' is not found in this section, and while it is provided that a mortgage or pledge shall not be considered a sale so as to entitle the mortgagee or pledgee to the benefit of the act, it does secure to every one who, in good faith, has made an absolute purchase from a railroad company, protection to his title, irrespective of any errors or mistakes in the certification or patent.

195 U. S.

" . . . These being the provisions of the act of 1887, the act of 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 42, chap. 39, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1603),—confirming the right and title of a bona fide purchaser, and providing that the patents to his lands should not be vacated or annulled, must be held to include one who, if not in the fullest sense a 'bona fide purchaser,' has nevertheless purchased in good faith from the railroad company."

The counsel for the government, while strenuously denying that the legal title to this land passed to the state of Minnesota by virtue of the certification, in 1871, admits in his brief that, if Woodwick bought the land as a bona fide purchaser in 1899, and acquired the legal title to the same, then, at that present time, not only was the right of the United States to recover the land defeated, but Donovan was precluded from thereafter asserting his claim to the land, as against such bona fide purchaser. His denial that the legal title passed is based upon the contention that Donovan, before the year 1871, when the Secretary of the Interior certified this land to the state, had, as stated by counsel, initiated proceedings to obtain this land in section 35 as a homestead, and had done all he could to make entry thereof, and had been in possession for three years before this certification; and that *prior to 1871 an initiatory title [537] had passed from the United States to Donovan, by reason of his possession and offer to enter the land, and his payment of the fees and expenses to the local land officers, so as to prevent the passage of the legal title to the state, by virtue of the certification referred to, which, by reason of the acts of Donovan, was rendered wholly void. It is also asserted that, if the United States, in 1871, did retain title in itself, notwithstanding Donovan's occupation and cultivation of the land, yet such occupation and cultivation withdrew the land from the jurisdiction of the Land Department, so far as any right or power to issue a certification to the railroad company was concerned, just as effectually as though the land had been reserved or otherwise appropriated specifically by an act of Congress.

We think that, in 1871, when the certification was made, jurisdiction over this land remained in the Land Department, to be exercised by the Secretary of the Interior, notwithstanding the acts of Donovan as shown by this record. It is shown by the testimony of Donovan himself and of his witness Bullis, putting it all together, that there never was, in fact, any entry of this land at the local land office, in the name of Donovan, before the certification in 1871. The facts as to what took place in that office, in regard to the applications of Donovan in 1867, before the Barclay entry was canceled, and in June, 1868, when the entry was made for the lot in section 26, are set forth in the statement of facts herein, and need not be repeated. The statement shows no such facts as put Donovan in the place of one who, having done all he could to enter the land, had been refused such entry, but had nevertheless not acquiesced in such decision, and had taken possession of it as a homestead. On the contrary, Donovan did acquiesce in that decision, and amended his application.

[538] There was no entry made on the books of the local land office for this land, under the amended application, and the power of the Secretary of the Interior to make the certification, even if we assume that it was erroneously exercised, *was not an act which was beyond the jurisdiction of the Secretary. The legal title was thus transferred by the government to the state, and, at the most, it was an erroneous certification within the meaning of the act of 1887. Although under such circumstances, if the certification were erroneous and might have been avoided, and the land recovered back by the government while in the hands of the railroad company, yet, Woodwick, if a purchaser in good faith of the lands, was entitled to them under the provisions of the act. He had no notice, actual or constructive, of the claim of the government in regard to this land. The record title was plain. No suit had been commenced when Ericksrud took his title from the government, and went into possession thereunder. He died within a week thereafter, and his heirs thereupon took possession. They were in possession when the government commenced this suit, in 1893, but were never served with process therein until 1901; which was two years after Woodwick had purchased the property from them, and had in good faith paid them the sum of $2,000 in cash for the land.

Counsel for the government admits that it is futile to maintain that Woodwick had constructive notice of the defects in his title by reason of the pendency of this suit, which had been commenced by the government in 1893, but in which the railroad companies alone had been served with process.

Whatever equities Donovan may have had as against the government, by virtue of his so-called attempt to make entry for the 80 acres in section 35, they do not override the plain provisions of the statute of 1887, and also that of 1896 (29 Stat. at L. 42, chap. 39, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1603), which save the rights of one who purchased from the railroad in good faith.

As was observed by Mr. Justice Brewer, in the case already referred to (United States v. Winona & St. P. R. Co. 165 U. S. 312 480, 41 L. ed. 796, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 372): "It matters not what constructive notice may be chargeable to such a purchaser, if, in actual ignorance of any defect in the railroad company's title, and in reliance upon *the action of the government in the [539] apparent transfer of title by certification or patent, he has made an honest purchase of the lands."

Donovan is not brought within the case of Winona & St. P. R. Co. v. United States, immediately following the above-cited case, at page 483 (L. ed. p. 798, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 381), because, among other facts, it appears herein that there was no record of any entry in Donovan's case for this land, on the books of the local land office, and it is conceded that he had been out of any possession of the land since 1885. The above-cited case is not, therefore, in point. The same may be said of Duluth & I. Range R. Co. v. Roy, 173 U. S. 587, 43 L. ed. 820, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 549, and Oregon & C. R. Co. v. United States, 189 U. S. 103-116, 47 L. ed. 726-732, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 615.

Donovan cannot be regarded as having by his action secured a vested interest in this land, so as to make the certification to the state a wholly void act, as an act beyond the jurisdiction of the Secretary. Assuming that it may have been erroneous and voidable, it was not void. We do not decide it was erroneous. In 1871 the legal title, still remaining in the government, was transferred to the state by the certification of the Secretary, and, as we have said, Woodwick occupied the position of a purchaser in good faith under the acts of Congress.

The judgment is affirmed.

*WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COM-[540]
PANY, Appt. and Petitioner,
v.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY and United New Jersey Railroad & Canal Company.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 540-594.)

Eminent domain—rights of telegraph companies on railway rights of way.

1. Telegraph companies were not granted the right of eminent domain, or any right to enter upon and occupy the rights of way of railway companies without the latter's consent, by the act of July 24, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230; Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579), giving telegraph companies the right to construct, maintain, and operate telegraph lines through and over the public domain, and "over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States," since such statute must be deemed but an exercise by Congress of its power to withdraw from state interference interstate commerce by telegraph.

NOTE.—On the rights of telegraph companies on railway rights of way—see note to American Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Smith, 7 L. R. A. 200.

2. Railway rights of way are not made public property by charter provisions declaring the railways "public highways," so as to subject such rights of way to occupation by telegraph companies without the consent of the railway company, under the act of July 24, 1866, giving telegraph companies the right to construct, maintain, and operate telegraph lines through and over the public domain, and "over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States."

[Nos. 89, 199.]

Argued October 19, 20, 1904. Decided December 12, 1904.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a case pending in that court on an appeal from a final decree of the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey dismissing a bill to enjoin any interference with the use by the Western Union Telegraph Company of railway rights of way for telegraph purposes. Affirmed. Also—

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a decree which reversed an order of the Circuit Court for the District of New Jersey granting a preliminary injunction in the same suit. Affirmed.

See same case below on appeal from order granting preliminary injunction, 59 C. C. A. 113, 123 Fed. 33.

Statement by Mr. Justice McKenna:

This is a bill in equity filed in the circuit court of the District of New Jersey by the appellant against the appellee, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to prevent the latter from removing from various railroad companies' rights of way the telegraph lines of the appellant. The bill was filed in aid of a petition on the law side of the court, praying the court to issue its process or take [541] such modes of procedure as might be agreeable to the principles and usages of law, to determine the amount of compensation to be paid by appellant to appellee for the use of the right of way of the appellee, and its branches and connecting lines, to construct, maintain, and operate a line of telegraph over and along such railways, subject to the conditions and provisions named in the act of Congress of July 24, 1866. 14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230, Rev. Stat. §§ 5263 et seq. U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579.

The construction of this act of Congress is the main question in the case.

The appellant, which we shall designate the telegraph company, contends that under certain acts of Congress the roads of the railroad company and all other railroads in the United States are made post roads, and that by the act of July 24, 1866, the telegraph company has the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph along said roads upon the payment of compensation to the railroad company. In other words, the contention is that by the act of 1866 the telegraph company is given the power of eminent domain to acquire the right to occupy with its telegraph lines the rights of way of the railroad company.

A summary of the bill is as follows: The telegraph company is a New York corporation; the railroad company is a Pennsylvania corporation. The New Jersey Railroad & Canal Company was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, and is the owner of a railroad extending from Jersey City, in the state of New Jersey, to the Delaware river at the city of Trenton, in said state, with certain branches, which the bill describes. The railroad company is the owner of a line of railroad extending from the city of Philadelphia to the city of Pittsburgh, in the state of Pennsylvania, and in possession and control of the railroads of the New Jersey Railroad & Canal Company in New Jersey, under a lease or leases for a period of 999 years from the 1st of July, 1871. By the laws of New Jersey the said railroads were created and made and are now public highways, and hence are subject to occupation and use of telegraph companies *under the provisions and conditions [542] of the act of Congress of July 24, 1866.

The telegraph company was organized in 1851, and began then to construct and has constructed and acquired a continuous system of telegraph lines, which extends through all of the states and territories of the United States, and connects with telegraph lines in the Dominion of Canada, and with lines also in the Republic of Mexico and South American Republics, and with and by submarine cables with the systems of all telegraph lines of foreign countries.

The system operated directly by the telegraph company consists of over 192,000 miles of poles and cables, and over 900,000 miles of wire; and an important part of the system and connected with its main office in New York city, and with other lines leading to the important cities of the West, is the lines of telegraph over and along the lines of railway operated by the railroad company, connecting Jersey City with Philadelphia, and connecting with other lines of the system.

The lines of telegraph along the railways in New Jersey were originally constructed by the American Telegraph Company, a corporation of the state of New Jersey, with the consent of, or under contracts and arrangement with, the railway company then owning the said lines of railway, and were constructed more than forty years ago; and since the 20th of September, 1881, the telegraph lines over the right of way of said railroads have been maintained and operated and compensation paid therefor under the provisions of a contract between the telegraph company and the railroad company. The contract granted to the telegraph company the right to place, maintain, and use upon the line of the right of way of the railroad company, and of the railroads owned, operated, or leased by it, a single line of telegraph poles (in certain cases two were authorized), with the privilege of erecting and maintaining thereon such number of wires as the telegraph company might from time [543] to time elect, said lines *to be located and placed under the direction of an officer of the railroad company.

The telegraph company agreed to pay annually for the privileges granted the sum of $75,000, in monthly instalments of $6,250, and to deliver to the railroad company certain poles and wire, which were then on certain of their roads. The telegraph company also agreed to transmit the messages of the railroad company at a compensation which was stated.

The provisions for the termination of the agreement and in the event of its termination are as follows:

"Thirteenth. This agreement is to continue in force for and during the term of twenty years from its date, and shall be binding upon the respective companies, their successors and assigns, and neither party shall have the right to assign the whole, or any part hereof, without the consent of the other, given in writing.

"Fifteenth. If any monthly payment herein provided for be not made within sixty days after it shall have become due, and shall have been demanded by written notice, delivered to the treasurer, or an executive officer of the party in default, or if any other covenant herein made shall not, after sixty days' written notice of default and demand made by either party in the manner herein provided, be fulfilled by the other party, the contract may, at the option of the party demanding such fulfilment, be rescinded, and such rescission shall not relieve the party in default from liability for any amount due, or for damages for nonfulfilment of such covenant or of any other covenant.

"Sixteenth. If no new agreement be made by the parties hereto, the telegraph company shall, at the termination of this contract, or at any time hereafter, upon receiving written notice from the railroad company, remove, within six months from the receipt of said notice, all of its poles and wires, and leave the property of the railroad company in good condition *and free from the encumbrance thereof to the satisfaction of the general manager or other proper officer of the railroad company, and if not so removed the railroad company may remove them at the expense of the telegraph company: Provided, however, That the payment agreed to be made by the telegraph company to the railroad company in the sixth clause hereof, and by the railroad company in the eighth clause, shall not apply to the said six months, the companies respectively hereby expressly agreeing to waive the same."

The agreement contains the following provision:

"Any easement or right of way heretofore acquired by the telegraph company upon any of the roads embraced in this agreement, either directly by contract or by assignment of contracts or agreements made by other companies with the railroad company, or with any of the companies whose roads or property are embraced in the schedule hereto attached, is hereby relinquished and abandoned, and the rights and easements of the telegraph company upon the right of way of said railroad company shall be such only as are granted by this agreement, and shall cease with its termination."

The agreement was carried out and the payments made as provided, the last being made on the 20th of June, 1902.

On the 14th of May, 1902, the railroad company notified the telegraph company in writing to remove its poles, wires, and other property from the right of way and property of the railroad company and of the other companies mentioned in the agreement, within six months from the 1st day of June, 1902. The notice stated that in default of compliance the railroad company would itself cause such poles, wires, and other property of the telegraph company to be removed from the right of way at the expense of the latter company.

It is alleged in the bill that, by reason of the facts set forth, and by reason of the receipt of payments after the 21st of September, 1901, and after the notice of removal, the agreement was continued in force, and that the railroad company had no right, notwithstanding the notice of May 14, *1902, to [545] remove or cause to be removed from the line of its railways the poles, wires, and telegraph property of the telegraph company at the end of six months from the 1st day of June, 1902.

It is also alleged that the lines of telegraph have been maintained and operated over the lines of railway without interfering with the ordinary use and operation thereof, or the ordinary travel thereon, and, as now located, maintained, and operated, can be continued so as not to interfere with the future operation and maintenance of the said railways, or the ordinary travel upon them, subject only to such slight changes of some of the poles of said lines as may be incident to the construction of additional tracks upon said right of way, or shifting the tracks already existing on said railways.

May 20, 1902, the president and general manager of the telegraph company, in a letter addressed to the president of the railroad company, acknowledged receipt of the notice of removal of May 14, and stated that he understood that negotiations had been in progress between the officers of the respective companies for a renewal of the contract of September 20, 1881, and declared that he would be glad to take up the matter actively either in New York or in Philadelphia, at the convenience of the president of the railroad company. The following day the president of the railway company replied, stating that none of the companies named "desires to renew or extend its contract with the Western Union Telegraph Company," and that the contract between the companies had terminated under its terms on the 20th of September, 1901, and the notice to the telegraph company to remove its poles had been given in accordance with the provisions of the contract. A willingness to discuss any temporary arrangement which might be necessary during the time allowed for the removal of the poles of the telegraph company was expressed. A somewhat lengthy reply was made, in which the telegraph company claimed that since some of the contracts referred to by the [546] railroad company were perpetual *in their terms, or ran during the life of the parties, they could not be terminated by one party without the consent of the other; asserted a right, under the laws of Congress and the laws and Constitution of the state of Pennsylvania, to maintain and operate its lines of telegraph on the railroad company's roads, subject only, at most, to make a fair and reasonable compensation for such right, which it offered to pay, and requested, if the railroad company declined to contract further with it, a meeting for the purpose of agreeing upon the amount of such compensation, or to submit the matter to arbitration. The railroad company replied that the meeting requested would be useless, as the telegraph company asserted rights upon the lines of the railroad company which could not be conceded. It was stated in the reply that the railroad company had agreed and contracted with the Postal Telegraph Cable Company covering the railroads included in the contract with the telegraph company, and that the Postal Telegraph Cable Company would immediately commence transacting a commercial telegraph business at the stations of the railroad company. The railroad company offered to permit the telegraph company to do business at the railroad stations until September 30 next ensuing (1902); and for the purpose of avoiding unnecessary loss to the telegraph company, incident to the removal of its poles, the railroad company expressed a willingness to purchase, at a fair valuation, such of the lines as it could make use of.

195 U. S.

It is alleged in the bill that the notice given to the telegraph company to remove its poles from the railroads, and the refusal of the railroad company to negotiate further with the telegraph company, were not induced from any compulsion or necessity to use the space occupied by the telegraph lines, but that the purpose of the railroad company is to place upon the lines of railway telegraph lines to be owned or used by another telegraph company; and it is alleged that the lines of the telegraph company will not interfere with the ordinary travel and use of the railways.

*The directors of the telegraph company [547] accepted the act of July 24, 1866, and filed an acceptance with the Postmaster General of the United States June 8, 1867.

The acts of Congress hereinafter mentioned and set out are referred to in the bill, and a full compliance therewith alleged, whereby, it is further alleged, the telegraph company became and is entitled to maintain its lines on the railroads of the railroad company upon paying just compensation, the payment of which was offered. The prayer is that the court order and decree the amount of compensation to be paid by the telegraph company, or, if the court order compensation to be ascertained at law, it then be decreed that upon payment of such compensation a perpetual injunction issue.

A preliminary injunction was ordered. 120 Fed. 981. It was reversed by the circuit court of appeals. 59 C. C. A. 113, 123 Fed. 33.

A controversy ensued upon the form of the decree. The circuit court of appeals simply reversed the order of the circuit court granting a preliminary injunction. The telegraph company moved that the decree be modified so as to direct the dismissal of the bill. The motion was refused, and the telegraph company took an appeal to this court. Subsequently the circuit court sua sponte entered an order dismissing the bill, and the telegraph company appealed therefrom to the circuit court of appeals.

The case was then removed to this court by certiorari.

Messrs. H. D. Estabrook, Rush Taggart, and John F. Dillon argued the cause, and, with Mr. Richard Vliet Lindabury, filed a brief for the Western Union Telegraph Company:

A telegraph company accepting the provisions of the act of July 24, 1866, is a direct agency of the government of the United States, and is also an instrument of foreign and interstate commerce.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961.

The post roads of the United States are made subject to occupation and use by such telegraph company as such public agency of the government of the United States, by this act of Congress.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708.

The owner of such post road cannot arbitrarily prohibit the occupation and use by such telegraph company under the conditions and restrictions named in the act, but such owner is entitled to reasonable compensation for the property or the use of the property which is occupied.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485.

In the determination of the amount of such reasonable compensation to be paid for such occupation and use, the determination of the owner of the property is not conclusive or binding upon the telegraph company, but the courts may determine the amount of such compensation upon hearing and proof.

Ibid.

By no form of agreement or stipulation can the owner of such post road prohibit any telegraph company which has accepted the provisions of the act of Congress of July 24, 1866, from occupying, pursuant to its provisions and under its restrictions, such post road with its telegraph lines, and maintaining and operating the same thereon.

United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190.

No exclusive method of procedure to enforce and secure to the telegraph company the benefit of the provisions of the act has been adopted. The mode of procedure to fix the amount of compensation may be varied to meet the requirements of each case.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Southern R. Co. 89 Fed. 190; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 104 Fed. 623, 114 Fed. 787; Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449; Mississippi & R. River Boom

Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 27 L. ed. 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; High Bridge Lumber Co. v. United States, 16 C. C. A. 460, 37 U. S. App. 234, 69 Fed. 320; D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 U. S. 248, 37 L. ed. 155, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; New York v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 46 L. ed. 820, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; Galway v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 128 N. Y. 132, 13 L. R. A. 788, 28 N. E. 479; Shepard v. Manhattan R. Co. 117 N. Y. 442, 23 N. E. 30; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 55 C. C. A. 263, 118 Fed. 497; McElroy v. Kansas City, 21 Fed. 257.

The suggestion is made that little importance is to be attached, either to the title of the act or to the proceedings in Congress relating to the bill, in order to determine its meaning. This court, however, has taken a different view of a matter of this sort, where the meaning of the act is uncertain or doubtful.

Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Coosaw Min. Co. v. South Carolina, 144 U. S. 559, 36 L. ed. 541, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689; Priece v. Forrest, 173 U. S. 410, 43 L. ed. 749, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 434; Emerson v. Hall, 13 Pet. 409, 413, 10 L. ed. 223, 225; Wilson v. Spaulding, 19 Fed. 304; Hahn v. Salmon, 20 Fed. 801.

While to ascertain the meaning of an act the mere discussion in Congress is not given special weight in some of the decisions of this court, yet reference is frequently made to reports of committees for the purpose of confirming the construction adopted by the court.

Hepburn v. Griswold, 8 Wall. 610, 19 L. ed. 522; Untermeyer v. Freund, 50 Fed. 80; Northern P. R. Co. v. United States, 36 Fed. 285; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 37 Fed. 554.

A report of a committee of either House of Congress, unanimous in its character, submitting an accompanying amendment to the bill, may be considered by the court in construing such amendment, in case of doubtful interpretation.

Austin v. United States, 25 Ct. Cl. 454.

So, likewise, the actual proceedings of Congress may be looked to, and were considered in the case of the United States v. Burr, 159 U. S. 85, 40 L. ed. 84, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1002, as practically determining whether the statute under consideration in that case had a retrospective action, or a prospective effect only.

Evidently Congress intended to confer something which the telegraph company accepting the provisions of the act did not have prior to acceptance.

If, in the case of a highway which is a post road of the United States by act of Congress, the right to construct, maintain, and operate telegraph lines thereon is dependent upon the will of the state or the city, as the owner of the highway, and the telegraph company can construct only after receiving the consent of such owner or custodian, then Congress has granted nothing, because the act means simply the permission to the telegraph company to construct its lines if it acquires the permission of the owner of the post road. Having the permission of the owner, the telegraph company would not need the permission of Congress, and therefore the act upon this construction confers nothing upon the telegraph company.

On the other hand, if in the case of the post road—a line of railway—the telegraph company can construct, operate, and maintain a line of telegraph only upon the consent of the railway company, owner of such post road, first obtained, and upon such terms as such railway company sees fit to grant, then nothing is granted to the telegraph company by the act of Congress, because having the consent of the railway company to build along its lines, and being an agency of interstate commerce, as held by the Supreme Court (Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. 168, 19 L. ed. 357; Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067), it would not need an act of Congress to enable it to construct, maintain, and operate its telegraph lines, even in a state foreign to its creation and organization,—a construction which would make the pretended grant in the 1st section of the act of Congress meaningless.

The railways over and along which it is desired to acquire the right to continue to maintain and operate telegraph lines are public highways.

Civil Rights Cases, 109 U. S. 3, 27 L. ed. 836, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Lake Superior & M. R. Co. v. United States, 93 U. S. 442, 23 L. ed. 965; Trunick v. Smith, 63 Pa. 18; People's Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Berks & D. Turnp. Road, 199 Pa. 411, 49 Atl. 284.

Mr. John G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for the railroad company:

In Pennsylvania, as in many of the other states, there are two kinds of highways. Both are public highways in a certain sense; but in the one case the highway is public property, used by the public directly, while in the other case the ownership of the highway is in a private corporation which owes, subject to the condition that it will use the same for the benefit of the public. In the first case the legislature can authorize a user without compensation. In the latter it cannot.

Turnpike companies often occupy public highways at one time owned by the state, which they improve by paving and on which they are allowed to collect tolls; but the public use them directly. They constitute in the country districts the ordinary thoroughfares.

Northern C. R. Co. v. Com. 90 Pa. 305; People's Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Berks & D. Turnp. Road, 199 Pa. 415, 49 Atl. 284.

A railroad is not a public highway in the sense in which those words are used in the acts authorizing telegraph companies to appropriate lands and other property.

The right of way acquired by a railroad company is exclusive at all times and for all purposes.

Junction R. Co. v. Philadelphia, 88 Pa. 427.

A railway company is a purchaser, in consideration of public accommodation and convenience, of the exclusive possession of the ground paid for to the proprietors of it.

Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Hummell, 44 Pa. 375, 84 Am. Dec. 457.

The title of the company is not a mere easement, but a fee in the surface and so much beneath as may be necessary for support.

Pennsylvania S. Valley R. Co. v. Reading Paper Mills, 149 Pa. 18, 24 Atl. 205; Philadelphia v. Ward, 174 Pa. 45, 34 Atl. 458.

It is a great deal more than a right of way. It has the actual possession of the property, and that possession is exclusive at all times and for all purposes, except where a way crosses it.

Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. v. Peet, 152 Pa. 488, 19 L. R. A. 467, 25 Atl. 612.

It is thoroughly well settled by the Pennsylvania decisions that a right of way appropriated by a corporation for a quasi-public use cannot be appropriated by another quasi-public corporation for its uses, by implication.

Pennsylvania R. Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. 150; Pittsburgh Junction R. Co.'s Appeal, 122 Pa. 511, 9 Am. St. Rep. 128, 6 Atl. 564; Sharon R. Co.'s Appeal, 122 Pa. 533, 9 Am. St. Rep. 133, 17 Atl. 234; Groff's Appeal (Groff v. Bird in Hand Turnp. Co.) 128 Pa. 621, 5 L. R. A. 661, 18 Atl. 431; Twelfth Street Market Co. v. Philadelphia & R. Terminal R. Co. 142 Pa. 580, 21 Atl. 902; Pittsburgh Junction R. Co. v. Allegheny Valley R. Co. 146 Pa. 297, 23 Atl. 313; Perry County R. Extension Co. v. Newport & S. Valley R. Co. 150 Pa. 193, 24 Atl. 709; Pennsylvania S. Valley R. Co. v. Schuylkill Nav. Co. 167 Pa. 576, 31 Atl. 858; Youghiogeny Bridge Co. v. Pittsburg & O. R. Co. 201 Pa. 457, 51 Atl. 115; Pennsyl- vania Teleph. Co. v. Hoover, 24 Pa. Super. Ct. 96.

No right is conferred upon telegraph companies by the act of 1866 to appropriate any portion of the right of way of railroad companies.

Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867.

Mr. Justice McKenna, after stating the case as above, delivered the opinion of the court:

By an act of Congress approved July 7, 1838 [5 Stat. at L. 271, chap. 172], and by subsequent acts (March 3, 1853, 10 Stat. at L. 255, chap. 146; Rev. Stat. § 3964, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2707; June 8, 1872 [17 Stat. at L. 283, chap. 335]), railroads within the limits of the United States were made post routes or roads.

By act of March 1, 1884, it is provided "that all public roads and highways, while kept up and maintained as such, are hereby declared to be post routes." 23 Stat. at L. 3, chap. 9, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2708.

The act of 1866 is as follows:

[558] *"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That any telegraph company now organized, or which may hereafter be organized under the laws of any state in this Union, shall have the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph through and over any portion of the public domain of the United States, over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States which have been or may hereafter be declared such by act of Congress, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States: Provided, That such lines of telegraph shall be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct the navigation of such streams and waters, or interfere with the ordinary travel on such military or post roads. And any of said companies shall have the right to take and use from such public lands the necessary stone, timber, and other materials for its posts, piers, stations, and other needful uses in the construction, maintenance, and operation of said lines of telegraph, and may pre-empt and use such portion of the unoccupied public lands subject to pre-emption, through which its said lines of telegraph may be located, as may be necessary for its stations, not exceeding forty acres for each station; but such stations shall not be within fifteen miles of each other.

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That telegraphic communications between the several departments of the government of the United States and their officers and agents shall, in their transmission over the lines of any of said companies, have priority over all other business, and shall be sent at rates to be annually fixed by the Postmaster General.

"Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the rights and privileges hereby granted shall not be transferred by any company acting under this act, to any other corporation, association, or person: Provided, however, That the United States may at any time after the expiration of five years from the passage of this act, for postal, military, or other purposes, purchase all the telegraph lines, property, and effects of any or all of said companies at an appraised value, to be ascertained *by five competent, disinterested [559] persons, two of whom shall be selected by the Postmaster General of the United States, two by the company interested, and one by the four so previously selected.

"Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That before any telegraph company shall exercise any of the powers or privileges conferred by this act, such company shall file their written acceptance, with the Postmaster General, of the restrictions and obligations required by this act."

The construction of this act is the fundamental question in the case. The telegraph company contends that the necessary implication from the provisions of the act is that telegraph companies may enter and appropriate for their poles and lines a part of the rights of way of railroads in invitum upon paying just compensation. In other words, that the act invests telegraph companies with the right of eminent domain. The railroad company denies this construction, and asserts that the act gives the consent of the government to telegraph companies to construct lines through its public domain and over and along its military and post roads, which are not the property of private corporations, and across navigable streams and waters. The act gives no right, the railroad company contends, to appropriate private property, but is an exercise by Congress of the national power over interstate commerce to secure telegraph companies from "hostile state legislation or contracts violative of an announced public policy." In other words, the contention of the railroad company is that, after the act of 1866 was passed, it "became impossible for the states, by any legislation, to exclude telegraph companies from the post roads." The contentions of the parties are opposed, therefore, only as to the degree of right conferred by the act. It is asserted by one party, and unqualifiedly admitted by the other, that Congress has power to grant the power of eminent domain to corporations organized for national purposes, and the arguments of the parties are [560] addressed only to the considerations which serve to determine *the intention of Congress. Both parties also claim authority for their respective contentions.

1. The act of 1866 came before this court for consideration over twenty-five years ago, in Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708. The language of the court defining the rights conferred by the act has recently been repeated and sanctioned in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867. In both cases the judgment of the court was adverse to the rights claimed under that act by the telegraph company in the case at bar. A review of those cases, therefore, and a consideration of the arguments directed against them and in support of them will constitute the most appropriate discussion of the questions now presented, and apply immediately to their solution the authority of this court.

In Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708, the legislature of Florida in 1866 granted to the Pensacola Telegraph Company "the sole and exclusive privilege and right" of maintaining and operating lines of telegraph through certain counties of the state. In 1872 the property of the Alabama & Florida Railroad Company was transferred to the Pensacola & Louisville Railroad Company. On the 14th of February, 1873, the legislature of Florida passed an act, which was amended in 1874, authorizing the last-named company to construct and maintain a telegraph line along its railroad, and to connect with lines in and out of the state. This was in the territory embraced by the exclusive grant to the Pensacola Telegraph Company.

On the 24th of June, 1874, the Pensacola & Louisville Railroad Company granted to the Western Union Telegraph Company the right to erect a telegraph line upon its right of way, and transferred to it all the rights and privileges conferred by the act of February, 1873, and 1874. The Western Union Company immediately commenced the erection of the line, but before its completion the Pensacola Telegraph Company filed a [561] bill to enjoin the work, on account *of the alleged exclusive right of that company under its charter. Upon the hearing a decree was passed dismissing the bill, and an appeal was taken to this court. The Western Union Telegraph Company had accepted the act of 1866, and claimed to erect and maintain a telegraph line under its agreement with the Pensacola & Louisville Railroad Company, and under the provisions of that act. The case, therefore, presented an issue between rights asserted under a statute of Florida and rights given and protected by the act of 1866. The issue was important.

195 U. S.

The act of 1866 was presented for the first time for interpretation, and upon it depended not only the private rights of the contending companies, but the more serious conflict of powers derived from the national and state governments. The questions, therefore, which bore on these issues called for, and, it is evident from the opinion of the court, received, careful attention.

The first of these questions was whether the act of 1866 was a grant to telegraph companies of portions of the public domain and of rights in the public domain, or a grant of rights having a broader field of exercise,—a grant of rights having operation and to be exercised throughout the whole of the United States. There was a marked difference in the rights contended for, and they depended upon different powers. In the public domain the government was proprietor as well as sovereign, elsewhere only sovereign, and on its powers as sovereign there were limitations, arising not only from the rights of the states, but arising from the ownership of private property and the necessity of a grant of eminent domain to appropriate it. These limitations were of consequence in fixing exactly the rights conferred by the act of 1866, and were regarded by the court in its construction of that act.

The court declared, through Chief Justice Waite, that the act of 1866 was an exercise of the power of Congress over interstate commerce, and the power to establish post-offices and post roads, and, like other powers of the national government, could be exercised "upon every foot of territory under [562] its jurisdiction." It was held, therefore, that the act was not a grant of rights only in the public domain, and the character of the rights was made unmistakable. The statute, the court said, "in effect amounts to a prohibition of all state monopolies" in commercial intercourse by telegraph. This is expressed more than once as the fundamental idea and sole purpose of the statute. The court further said: "It [the statute] substantially declares, in the interest of commerce and the convenient transmission of intelligence from place to place by the government of the United States and its citizens, that the erection of telegraph lines shall, so far as state interference is concerned, be free to all who will submit to the conditions imposed by Congress, and that corporations organized under the laws of one state for constructing and operating telegraph lines shall not be excluded by another from prosecuting their business within its jurisdiction, if they accept the terms proposed by the national government for this national privilege. To this extent, certainly, the statute is a legitimate regulation of commercial intercourse among the states, and is appropriate legislation to carry into execution the powers of Congress over the postal service."

And this construction, making the act of 1866 merely an exercise of national power to withdraw from state control or interference commercial intercourse by telegraph, is further emphasized in the opinion and the objections to it completely answered, which were based on the ownership of the post roads by individuals or corporations, and the necessity of implying a grant of the power of eminent domain to telegraph companies to appropriate them. The court said:

"It [the act of 1866] gives no foreign corporation the right to enter upon private property without the consent of the owner, and erect the necessary structures for its business; but it does provide that, whenever the consent of the owner is obtained, no state legislation shall prevent the occupation of post roads for telegraph purposes by such corporations as are willing to avail themselves of its privileges."

[563] *And again:

"No question arises as to the authority of Congress to provide for the appropriation of private property to the uses of the telegraph, for no such attempt has been made. The use of public property alone is granted. If private property is required, it must, so far as the present legislation is concerned, be obtained by private arrangement with its owner. No compulsory proceedings are authorized. State sovereignty under the Constitution is not interfered with. Only national privileges are granted."

This language and the distinctions imported by it were approved in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867. It was a bill in equity filed in the circuit court of Benzie county, Michigan, by a telegraph company against a railway company to restrain the latter from interfering with the rights of the telegraph company in a certain telegraph line along the right of way of the railroad. It was removed to the circuit court of the United States. The circuit court dismissed the bill, and its action was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals. 33 C. C. A. 113, 61 U. S. App. 741, 90 Fed. 379. The Western Union Telegraph Company brought the case here. The decrees of both courts were reversed, and the case remanded to the circuit court, with directions to remand the case to the state court. This was decreed on the ground that, by the statement of the complainant's (telegraph company) own case, it was not brought "within the category of cases arising under the laws or Constitution of the United States." We said that the bill was in effect for the specific performance of a contract. "It is not argued," we said, by the Chief Justice, "by counsel for the telegraph company that the telegraph company had any right under the statute, and independently of the contract, to maintain and operate this telegraph line over the railroad company's property; and it has been long settled that that statute did not confer on telegraph companies the right to enter on private property without the consent of the owner, and erect the necessary structures for their business; *but it does provide that, when-[564] ever the consent of the owner is obtained, no state legislation shall prevent the occupation of post roads for telegraph purposes by such corporations as are willing to avail themselves of its privileges."

And further: "As we have said, it was not asserted in argument that the telegraph company had the right, independently of the contract, to maintain its line on the railroad company's property, and, in view of the settled construction of the statute, we could not permit such a contention to be recognized as the basis of jurisdiction." In other words, by the decision in the Pensacola Case no such Federal question remained to be based on the act of 1866.

Counsel, however, pronounce the extracts quoted from the Pensacola Case and their repetition in the Ann Arbor Case as dicta, and urge, besides, that the irresistible logic of other cases overthrows the authority of both. Neither proposition is tenable. We have said enough to demonstrate that the language we have quoted was the deliberate resolution of the court, and we might content ourselves by observing that, as the Ann Arbor Case is the last expression of this court interpreting the act of 1866, prior cases, if not reconcilable with its exposition of that act, are superseded. We think they are so reconcilable.

One of the cases which is relied on (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961) asserted the very valuable right obtained by telegraph companies under the act of 1866, and vindicated it against a statute of Massachusetts, which provided for an injunction against the prosecution of business by the company as a means of enforcing the payment of taxes. This is the very essence of the effect given to the act of 1866 by the Pensacola and Ann Arbor Cases. The telegraph company was in occupation of the post roads of the state of Massachusetts, whether railroads or the ordinary highways does not appear. Its right to be there was not controverted, and how it got there was of no consequence. Its right to do business after and during such occupation was *in-[565] volved and was decided, and to this right the language of the court was addressed, and receives limitation from it. The language of the court was substantially the same as that of the act of Congress. It enforced the right given by that act, and gave to the telegraph company the protection of the national power and supremacy, and differs only in the instance, not in the principle, declared in the Pensacola Case. The telegraph company, indeed, sought for more than the mere exercise of a right. It sought to turn the act of 1866 from a mere permission to exercise a right to the creation of such an instrumentality of the national government as to be exempt from state taxation. The court rejected that view.

So also must be limited the language in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067, and United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190. In the first the distinction which was necessary to make was between intra- and inter-state commerce, and to determine what rights as to the latter were conferred by the act of 1866. In the second case the efficacy of the act to prevent binding contracts against its policy was involved. The case called for that, but no more, as far as the act of 1866 was concerned. Such an agreement was set up, and under it the Western Union Telegraph Company claimed the right to exclude all other telegraph companies from the roadway of the railway company, notwithstanding the act of 1866. Mr. Justice Harlan, speaking for the court, said that such an agreement "directly tended to make the act of July 24, 1866, ineffectual, and was, therefore, hostile to the object contemplated by Congress. Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 11, 24 L. ed. 708, 711."

We need not dissent from these views, or qualify the general language by which they were amplified and supported. Whatever rights were granted by the act of 1866 were granted to all telegraph companies, and could not be defeated by a binding contract with some one company; nor could such an agreement be used to evade or escape the [566] commands of the statute "constituting the Union Pacific Railway, passed in 1862 [12 Stat. at L. 489, chap. 120], or the supplementary act of 1888 [25 Stat. at L. 382, chap. 772, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3583], which was passed by virtue of a power reserved in the act of 1862. The suit was brought to enforce the duties and obligations imposed by those statutes on the railway company. The statutes are quoted in the opinion, and the act of 1866 is referred to only as reinforcing the provisions of the statute of 1862. It was only necessary, therefore, to declare the policy of the act of 195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

1866 as a grant of rights to all telegraph companies. The consideration of the court was not directed to anything else. The extent of the rights granted as presented in the case at bar could not have been in contemplation. They were not in issue, and it could not have been intended to anticipate and decide the controversies which might be based upon them.

St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 93, 37 L. ed. 381, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485, is also urged by the telegraph company as inconsistent with the Ann Arbor Case. It is clearly not so. The case involved the validity of a charge or rental made by the city of St. Louis for the use of its streets by the telegraph company. The charge was imposed by the same ordinance that gave permission to the telegraph company to occupy the streets of the city. The telegraph company resisted the charge upon several grounds, among which were the provisions of the act of 1866, and its acceptance by the company. The charge was held to be a valid one, but on no ground which involved the consideration of the right of the telegraph company to occupy the streets. The right was not disputed. The ordinance of the city conferred it. The claim made under the act of 1866 was that it exempted the telegraph company from a payment of any compensation. But compensation was decreed on the ground that the franchise or privilege granted by the act of 1866 could only be exercised in subordination to public as well as private rights, and, as entry upon the latter could only be made upon the payment of just compensation, entry upon the former was subject to the same payment. This was all that was necessary to decide to sustain the charge made by the *city. In [567] other words, it was all that was necessary to decide to meet the extreme contention made by the telegraph company, that under the act of 1866 it was entitled to occupy the streets without charge, notwithstanding its occupation was exclusive and permanent, as the court said it was. It is manifest, to hold that there can be no entry upon property without payment of compensation is not to decide that such entry can be made upon tender of compensation. Certainly, as to private property or rights, the nonconsent of the owner is a factor to be dealt with. Nonconsent, if resolute, can only be overcome by power conferred by law; in other words, by the exercise of eminent domain. The act of 1866 was not considered in that regard.

By this review of the cases it is evident that there is no inconsistency between them and the Pensacola Case and the Ann Arbor Case, and we are brought to the discussion of the general considerations urged against the latter cases. Construed as they construe the act of 1866, it becomes meaningless, counsel say. If the act grants no rights, it is urged, except by permission of the railroad companies, it confers no more than can be obtained from the railroad companies. The objection is best answered by examples. The telegraph company had such permission in the Pensacola Case. It needed, however, the act of 1866 to make its exercise effectual against the legislation of the state of Florida. In the Union Pacific Case a claim of a monopoly by one telegraph company was answered by the act construed as a grant of rights to all companies. These examples show important results achieved by the act, and the principles of the cases may come to be applied to prevent other hostile action of states or individuals.

This court, when it came to consider the act of 1866 in the Pensacola Case, was confronted, as we are confronted now, with the serious nature of the right of eminent domain. It is indeed "inseparable from sovereignty," but it is accompanied and restrained by inexorable limitations. The property taken must be for a public use, and [568] there must be compensation *made for it, and compensation, whether it be regarded as part of the power or a limitation upon the power, is so far essential that the absence of a provision for it has been regarded as important in determining the intention of the legislature when a grant of such power is claimed. 1 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 240, and cases cited. We said in Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 399, 40 L. ed. 196, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48, by Mr. Justice Harlan: "It is a condition precedent to the exercise of such power [eminent domain] that the statute make provision for reasonable compensation to the owner." Many state cases were cited, and also Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965. The act of Congress under review in the latter case, it was contended, did not provide for compensation for the property taken. In reply, Mr. Justice Harlan, delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The objection to the act cannot be sustained. The Constitution declares that private property shall not be taken 'for public use without just compensation.' It does not provide or require that compensation shall be actually paid in advance of the occupancy of the land to be taken. But the owner is entitled to reasonable, certain, and adequate provision for obtaining compensation before his occupancy is disturbed. Whether a particular provision be sufficient to secure the compensation to which, under the Constitution, he is entitled, is sometimes a question of difficulty." The requirements of the Constitution were held to be fully met because the act which was under consideration provided that, before the railway which was authorized should be constructed through any of the lands proposed to be taken, full compensation should be made to the owner for all property taken, or damage done by reason of the construction of the road, and in the event of an appeal from the finding of the referee the railway company should pay into court double the amount of the award to abide the judgment.

In Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449, acts of Congress were considered, one providing for the acquisition of a site *for a public building, the other an [569] appropriation act. The appropriation made by the latter was "for the purchase, at a private sale or by condemnation, of ground for a site" for the building. The real controversy in the case was whether the acts of Congress intended the site to be obtained under the authority of the state government in the exercise of its power of eminent domain, or by the United States government in its own right and by virtue of its own eminent domain. The court held the latter, and, commenting on the sufficiency of the acts to give the right, said: "The authority here given [the first act] was to purchase. If that were all, it might be doubted whether the right of eminent domain was intended to be invoked. . . . That Congress intended more than this is evident, however, in view of the subsequent and amendatory act passed June 10, 1872 [17 Stat. at L. 352, chap. 415, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2457], which made an appropriation 'for the purchase, at private sale or by condemnation, of the ground for a site' for the building."

But in the act of July, 1866, there is not a word which provides for condemnation or compensation. The rule that when a right is given all the means of exercising it are given does not, as we have seen, apply to the extent contended for by the telegraph company. The exercise of the power of eminent domain is against common right. It subverts the usual attributes of the ownership of property. It must, therefore, be given in express terms or by necessary implication; and this was the reasoning in the Pensacola Case, and applied directly to the act of 1866. We may repeat the language of the court: "If private property is required it must, so far as the present legislation is concerned, be obtained by private arrangement with its owner. No compulsory proceedings are authorized."

In Sweet v. Rechel, Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., and Kohl v. United States, the property to which the constitutional protection was applied was property in private use. Their doctrine applies as well to private property devoted to a public use. There is no difference whatever in principle arising from the difference in the [570]uses. *A railroad right of way is a very substantial thing. It is more than a mere right of passage. It is more than an easement. We discussed its character in New Mexico v. United States Trust Co. 172 U. S. 171, 43 L. ed. 407, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128. We there said that if a railroad's right of way was an easement it was "one having the attributes of the fee, perpetuity and exclusive use and possession; also the remedies of the fee, and, like it, corporeal, not incorporeal, property." And we drew support for this from a New Jersey case, in which state the rights of way in the case at bar are situated. We quoted New York, S. & W. R. Co. v. Trimmer, 53 N. J. L. 1, 3, 20 Atl. 761, as follows: "Unlike the use of a private way,—that is, discontinuous,—the use of land condemned by a railroad company is perpetual and continuous." And it is held in Pennsylvania "that a railway company is a purchaser, in consideration of public accommodation and convenience, of the exclusive possession of the ground paid for to the proprietors of it." Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Hummell, 44 Pa. 375, 84 Am. Dec. 457. It is "a fee in the surface and so much beneath as may be necessary for support. . . . But whatever it may be called, it is, in substance, an interest in the land, special and exclusive in its nature." Pennsylvania S. Valley R. Co. v. Reading Paper Mills, 149 Pa. 18, 4 Atl. 205; Philadelphia v. Ward, 174 Pa. 45, 34 Atl. 458; Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. O. R. Co. v. Peet, 152 Pa. 488, 19 L. R. A. 467, 25 Atl. 612.

A railroad's right of way has, therefore, the substantiality of the fee, and it is private property, even to the public, in all else but an interest and benefit in its uses. It cannot be invaded without guilt of trespass. It cannot be appropriated in whole or part except upon the payment of compensation. In other words, it is entitled to the protection of the Constitution, and in the precise manner in which protection is given. It can only be taken by the exercise of the powers of eminent domain; and a condition precedent to the exercise of such power is, we said in Sweet v. Rechel, that the statute conferring it make provision for reasonable compensation to the owner of the property taken. This condition is expressed [571]*with even more emphasis in Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co.

A few words more may be necessary to avoid all possible misunderstanding of the purpose for which we have cited those cases and Kohl v. United States. We have cited 195 U. S.

them, not as tests of the validity of the act of 1866, but as tests of its meaning, supporting the authority of the Pensacola Case and Ann Arbor Case. We have no occasion to consider the validity of the act of 1866 as an attempt to grant the power of eminent domain. We decide the act to be an exercise by Congress of its power to withdraw from state interference interstate commerce by telegraph. As such, of course, the act is an efficient and constitutional enactment.

Certain cases decided at circuit are cited for our consideration, and we will close this branch of our discussion by a brief review of them.

In Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 104 Fed. 623, and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 114 Fed. 787, there were views expressed favorable to the contentions made in the case at bar by the telegraph company, but the judgments in both cases were ultimately rested upon the local statutes,—Idaho and Montana,—which granted the right of eminent domain to telegraph companies. We may also observe that the first case went to the circuit court of appeals of the ninth circuit. That court sustained the judgment of the circuit court, upon the statute of Idaho and upon general legal principles. It did not refer to the act of 1866. 49 C. C. A. 663, 111 Fed. 843.

In Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Southern R. Co. 89 Fed. 190, and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 94 Fed. 234, the act of 1866 was more directly passed on. Both cases were proceedings in eminent domain,—one brought in the courts of North Carolina and removed to the circuit court of the United States; the other brought in the circuit court of the United States for the *northern district of Ohio. In [572] passing on the sufficiency of the petition in the first case, Judge Simonton said that the right of petitioner to construct its lines along the right of way of post roads of the United States was given under the act of Congress of 1866; but, he observed, the mode or method of exercising the right conferred was fixed by the laws of the several states, and it was exclusive in its character in ascertaining the amount of compensation to be allowed. The right of the telegraph company was, therefore, considered and adjudged under the North Carolina statutes.

In the second case a motion was made to dismiss on the ground that the power of eminent domain was not conferred by any law of the United States or the state of Ohio. The motion was sustained. District Judge Ricks said: "The act of July 24, 1866, made no provision for compensation or payment for property to be taken; hence the proce-ture cannot be sustained by virtue of that act." He cited the Pensacola Case, 96 U. S. 1, 11, 24 L. ed. 708, 711.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 33 C. C. A. 113, 61 U. S. App. 741, 90 Fed. 379, and St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 55 C. C. A. 263, 118 Fed. 497, were respectively decided by the circuit court of appeals of the sixth circuit and the circuit court of appeals of the eighth circuit. It is difficult to reconcile them. In one it was decided, following the authority of the Pensacola Case, that the telegraph company could not occupy the line of the defendant's railroad without its consent or that of some predecessor in title. This was wanting. In the other it was conceded that the right of entry upon private property was not conferred by the act of 1866, without the owner's consent, yet held that, as consent had been given, no reason could be perceived why a court of equity should compel a removal of the telegraph company's lines from the railway's right of way,—“especially where it appears that no express agreement was made that they should be removed when its lines were erected.”

[573] *2. It is contended by the telegraph company that the charters under which the several railway companies constituting the system of the railroad company were organized expressly created them “public highways,” and that in the acquisition of land for their purposes they were public agents, “and the land was taken by the government, and in the eye of the law as completely subject to public uses as though it had been taken by the state itself,”—that is to say, if we understand the argument, have become highways in the full sense of that word. And counsel further say the difference between them and ordinary highways “is not a legal difference, but is the difference of the kind of use to which the highway is subject,—in the one case, wheel vehicles drawn by horses; in the other, to steam vehicles drawn by locomotives along and upon iron rails.” They are subject, therefore, it is urged, as ordinary highways and streets of a city are subject, to the control of Congress by virtue of its power over interstate commerce.

Counsel in advancing the argument exhibits a consciousness of taking an extreme position. It would seem, certainly if considered with other parts of their argument, to make a railroad right of way public property. To that extreme we cannot go, for the reasons which we have already indicated. The right of way of a railroad is property devoted to a public use, and has often been called a highway, and as such is subject, to a certain extent, to state and Federal control; and for this many cases may be cited. But it has always been recognized, as we have pointed out, that a railroad right of way is so far private property as to be entitled to that provision of the Constitution which forbids its taking, except under the power of eminent domain and upon payment of compensation. The right of way of a railroad was recognized as private property in the Pensacola Case, and we are brought back to the main question,—the interpretation of the act of July, 1866, and upon that we have sufficiently dilated.

It follows from these views that the act of 1866 does not *grant the right to telegraph [574] companies to enter upon and occupy the rights of way of railroad companies, except with the consent of the latter, or grant the power of eminent domain. Nor does the statute of New Jersey make those rights of way public property so as to subject them to such occupation under the provisions of the act of 1866.

It is admitted that the statutes of New Jersey do not confer the right of eminent domain upon the telegraph company.

3. In view of our conclusion, it is not necessary to consider the question whether, if the power of eminent domain were granted by the act of 1866, it would be within the competency of a court of equity to ascertain compensation, or that compensation might be determined at law. That question was pertinent in Kohl v. United States. It is not pertinent in this case. The acts of Congress passed on in Kohl v. United States, as we have seen, provided for the appropriation of a site for a public building by purchase or by condemnation. By the act of 1866 power of condemnation is not given, and, of course, methods of procedure are not involved in its construction.

It is equally unnecessary to consider the questions which might arise if the state of New Jersey gave the right of eminent domain to the telegraph company. It is conceded by counsel that such right does not exist, and it happens that under the policy of New Jersey the right of way of the railroad company enjoys in that state immunity from compulsory proceedings instituted by the telegraph company. But this has no bearing on the act of 1866, nor does it make that act, as construed by us, a grant to railroads of greater power over commercial intercourse by telegraph than the states have. Indeed, we think, a comparison between the states and railroads in that regard is misleading, and overlooks the essential difference between restraints on the legislative power of the states and the rights of property.

On account of those restraints, it may be, and finding no *impediment in the rights of [575] property, interstate commerce by telegraph has marched to a splendid development, although in the acquisition of the means for its exercise it has relied on the consent of the owner of private property, or the power of eminent domain conferred by the states. We cannot but feel, therefore, that there is something inadequate in the argument which is based on the apprehension that the act of July 24, 1866, construed as we construe it gives a sinister power to railroad companies. It gives no power to those companies but that which appertains to the ownership of their property.

Decree affirmed.

Mr. Justice Harlan, dissenting:

In view of the importance of these cases I do not feel that any dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court should be expressed unless the grounds of such dissent be fully disclosed.

The controlling question before the court is whether the Western Union Telegraph Company is entitled, in virtue of any existing acts of Congress, to keep and maintain its telegraph lines upon the right of way of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, assuming that the ordinary travel on that road will not be thereby interfered with.

Congress, having power to establish post-offices and post roads, has declared all railroads in operation within the limits of the United States to be post roads and post routes. 5 Stat. at L. 263, chap. 172; 10 Stat. at L. 255, chap. 146; Rev. Stat. § 3964, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2707; 23 Stat. at L. 3, chap. 9, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 2708.

[576] There was, for many years, as all know, and therefore as the court may judicially know, a widespread belief that the government and the people of the country were at great disadvantage in matters of business and intercourse as involved in the use of the telegraph. The conviction was strong and universal that the control of the post roads of the country was being exerted by great railroad corporations in such way as to subserve private and corporate interests at the expense of the United States and without any regard for the convenience of the general public. As a remedy for those evils Congress passed the act of July 24th, 1866, entitled "An Act to Aid in the Construction of Telegraph Lines, and to Secure to the Government the Use of the Same for Postal, Military, and Other Purposes." 14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3579. By that act Congress conferred upon any telegraph company organized under the laws of any state "the right to construct, maintain, and operate lines of telegraph," not only through and over the public domain, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States, but "over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States." By the same act it is declared that on the lines of such companies telegraphic communications between the several departments of the government should be at rates to be annually fixed by the Postmaster General, and have priority over all other business. § 2. To the exercise of the right thus given, Congress annexed several conditions, but the only one pertinent to the present discussion is the condition that the telegraph lines erected by any company accepting the provisions of the act should be so constructed and maintained as not to obstruct the navigation of the navigable streams and waters of the United States, or "interfere with the ordinary travel on such military or post roads."

The object of the act, this court has said, all its members concurring, "was not only to promote and secure the interests of the government, but to obtain for the benefit of the people of the entire country every advantage in the matter of communication by telegraph which might come from competition between corporations of different states:" that "it was very far from the intention of Congress, by any legislation, to so exert its power as to enable one telegraph corporation, Federal or state, to acquire exclusive rights over any post road;" and that "no railroad company operating a post road of the United States over which interstate commerce is carried on can consistently with the act of July 24th. 1866, bind itself by agreement to exclude from its roadway any telegraph company incorporated under the laws of a state, which accepts the provisions of that act, and desires to use such roadway for its line in such manner as will not interfere with the ordinary travel thereon." United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 44, 49, 40 L. ed. 319, 334, 336, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190, 206, 208. Yet, by its present construction of the act of 1866, the court—if we do not misapprehend its opinion—holds that the right which that act gives to construct, maintain, and operate a telegraph line upon a post road cannot, in virtue of that act, or under any existing legislation, be exercised by the Western Union Telegraph Company, against the will of the railroad company operating such road; and this, notwithstanding it be absolutely clear that the occupancy of the post road by the telegraph lines of the particular company proposing or desiring to erect them would not, in the slightest degree, interfere with the ordinary travel on such road. It is now held, in effect, that, so far as that act is concerned, and despite its explicit provisions, even the government cannot, except with the assent of the railroad company, enjoy the advantages sought to be secured by its passage. I think it was intended by the act of 1866, in the interest of the postal service and of interstate trade and intercourse, to throw open all the post roads of the country to the use of telegraph companies accepting its provisions, subject to the condition that such use should not interfere with ordinary travel on the post roads so occupied. And that intention is in harmony with the doctrine often announced by this court, that "a railroad is a public highway, established primarily for the convenience of the people and to subserve public ends, and therefore subject to governmental control." Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 657, 34 L. ed. 295, 302, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Olcott v. Fon [578] du Lac County, 16 *Wall. 676, 694, 21 L. ed. 382, 388; United States v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25; Wisconsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 45 L. ed. 194, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115.

But it is suggested that the telegraph company has not been expressly invested with the power of eminent domain. Nevertheless, it has been given, by express words, the right to construct, maintain, and operate its lines on any post road of the United States; and, as it is not contended that Congress has exceeded its power in granting that right, the question is whether the right so given can be made effective by any mode of procedure known to our jurisprudence. I have always supposed it to be competent for a court of the United States having general jurisdiction of suits at law and in equity, in some efficient mode, by some process or form of procedure, to enforce and protect any right constitutionally conferred by the legislative department. The principle is illustrated in D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 U. S. 248, 259, 37 L. ed. 155, 161, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299, 303, which was an action to enjoin the construction of a track along a public street, because of irreparable damage to be thereby inflicted on the plaintiff. This court, following the decision of Judge Brewer, now of this court, in McElroy v. Kansas City, 21 Fed. 257, said: "If the defendant had an ultimate right to do the act sought to be restrained, but only upon some condition precedent, and compliance with the condition was within the power of the defendant, the injunction would almost universally be granted until the condition was complied with; but, if the means of complying with the condition were not at defendant's command, then the court would adjust its order so as to give complainant the substantial benefit of the condition while not restraining defendant from the exercise of its ultimate rights. Inasmuch as, while the statutes of Missouri provided for the assessment of damages resulting from the taking of property for public use, there existed no provision to attain that result where the property was merely damaged, an injunction was granted, with leave to the defendant to apply for the appointment of a board of commissioners to ascertain and report the damages which complainant would *sustain, upon payment of which the injunc-[579] tion would be vacated." This principle was recognized in the recent case of New York v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 46 L. ed. 820, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592.

It is said by counsel that the right given by the act of 1866 is necessarily subject to the condition prescribed by the constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation, and that the property interest of the railroad company in its right of way cannot be permanently taken from it for public purposes, against its will, without making such compensation.

Upon the subject of compensation the court reproduces from the opinion in Sweet v. Rechel, 159 U. S. 380, 399, 40 L. ed. 188, 196, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43, 48, this detached sentence: "It is a condition precedent to the exercise of such power [eminent domain] that the statute make provision for reasonable compensation to the owner." But the court does not apply any such rule to the present case, and holds that the act of 1866 is invalid as not making provision for compensation. Besides, the above sentence, taken in connection with the one immediately preceding it, shows clearly that what was said had reference to the taking of private property for public use without provision being made in the statute for compensation. The entire paragraph from which the above sentence was taken reads: "When, however, the legislature provides for the actual taking and appropriation of private property for public uses, its authority to enact such a regulation rests upon its right of eminent domain,—a right vital to the existence and safety of government. But it is a condition precedent to the exercise of such power that the statute make provision for reasonable compensation to the owner." What was said in Sweet v. Rechel plainly had no reference to property of a public or quasi public nature. The same observations may be made in reference to the quotation made from Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641, 34 L. ed. 295, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965. What was said in that case had also reference to the taking of private property. If the court were now of opinion that the act of 1866 was invalid *as not making [580] provision for compensation, then the object of citing Sweet v. Rechel and Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. would be both manifest and appropriate. But the court does not hold that the act of 1866 is objectionable on any such ground. On the contrary, it holds a railroad right of way to be private property, and yet, despite its citation of the above cases, recognizes the validity of the act, although it makes no provision for compensation to the owner. It may not be appropriate for me to say that I adhere to what was said in Sweet v. Rechel and Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co., the opinions in both of which cases were written by myself, speaking for the court. Whether a railroad right of way over a post road of the United States—such road being a public highway established primarily for the public convenience and subject to governmental control—is private property within the rule that a statute authorizing private property to be taken for public use must make provision for compensation, is a question not wholly free from doubt, and it need not be here discussed; for the court does not hold that the act of 1866 is subject to that objection.

But let it be granted, for the purposes of this case, that a railroad company has such a property interest in its right of way that it is entitled to compensation if such right of way be appropriated to the use of a telegraph company accepting the act of 1866; still, the question remains, In what way or by what mode may such compensation be legally ascertained? May it not be ascertained by a court of general jurisdiction, when all parties in interest are regularly being brought in? Here the telegraph company comes into the circuit court of the United States, and seeks, in virtue of the act of Congress, to enforce the right expressly granted to it, of occupying the post road in question with its lines. It expresses its readiness to make such compensation to the railroad company as the law requires, and informs the court that it has instituted an action at law to ascertain the amount of such compensation. The bill alleges:

[581] *"Your orator says further that it is diligently prosecuting said action on the law side of this court for the ascertainment of the amount of compensation to the said railway companies defendant herein, for the right to the use of said railroads to maintain and operate its telegraph line along and over the lines of said railways as prescribed in said act of Congress of July 24th, 1866; and that it will continue to prosecute the same to a final determination as rapidly as the business in said court will permit the said cause to be heard and determined, and without any unnecessary delay."
195 U. S.

"Your orator prays that this court ascertain, order, adjudge, and decree the amount of compensation to be paid by your orator to the defendants, as their rights may severally appear, for the construction, maintenance, and operation of your orator's telegraph lines over and along the right of way of the defendants' said railroads, under the terms, provisions, and restrictions of said acts of Congress hereinbefore mentioned, or, if this court shall order and determine that the amount of such compensation to the defendants shall be such amount as shall be determined or adjudged in the said action at law, that upon due payment of such compensation by your orator to the defendants this court will order, adjudge, and decree that your orator is entitled to a perpetual injunction against the defendants herein and each of them, restraining them and each of them from in any manner interfering with the location, construction, maintenance, and operation of your orator's said lines of telegraph upon the roadway or right of way of the said defendants, under and subject to the provisions and restrictions of the said act of Congress of July 24th, 1866, and meanwhile and until the final decree of this court that a temporary injunction be issued against the defendants, prohibiting and restraining them and each of them from in any manner interfering with the use and operation of the telegraph lines of your orator upon the said roadway and right of way of the defendants pending the determination of the said action at law, or until the further order of this court in the premises. *And for such other and further [582] relief as the case may require and to your honors may seem just."

Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 375, 376, 23 L. ed. 449, 452, 453, was an application filed in pursuance of acts of Congress authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to purchase a site for a public building. A site was selected, but the Secretary and private owners could not agree as to price, and the acts of Congress did not direct the particular mode by which the land should be condemned and the compensation to be made by the government ascertained. The Secretary of the Treasury, in order to carry out the will of Congress, did not institute formal proceedings of condemnation, as one of the acts, under which he proceeded, authorized him to do. But he instituted a suit in a circuit court of the United States to appropriate a certain parcel of land for the proposed building. It was objected that the circuit court was without jurisdiction, but that objection was overruled. It was contended in argument that, while the United States had the right of eminent domain, Congress had not given to the circuit court jurisdiction of a proceeding for the condemnation of property brought by the United States in the assertion or enforcement of that right; and that the act of Congress meant that the land for the proposed public building was to be obtained under the authority of the state government, in the exercise of its right of eminent domain. It was further contended that if the proceeding was properly instituted in the circuit court, then the act of Congress required that it should conform to the provisions of the state law in a like proceeding in the state court. This court said: "Doubtless Congress might have provided a mode of taking the land and determining the compensation to be made, which would have been exclusive of all other modes. They might have prescribed in what tribunal or by what agents the taking and the ascertainment of the just compensation should be accomplished. The mode might have been by a commission, or it might have been referred expressly to the circuit court; but this, we think, was not necessary. The in-

[583] *vestment of the Secretary of the Treasury with power to obtain the land by condemnation, without prescribing the mode of exercising the power, gave him also the power to obtain it by any means that were competent to adjudge a condemnation . . . It is quite immaterial that Congress has not enacted that the compensation shall be ascertained in a judicial proceeding. That ascertainment is in its nature at least quasi judicial. Certainly no other mode than a judicial trial has been provided. . . . But there is no special provision for ascertaining the just compensation to be made for land taken. That is left to the ordinary processes of the law; and hence, as the government is a suitor for the property under a claim of legal right to take it, there appears to be no reason for holding that the proper circuit court has not jurisdiction of the suit under the general grant of jurisdiction made by the act of 1789."

In United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 518, 519, 27 L. ed. 1015, 1017, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346, which was a proceeding to condemn property for the use of the United States, this court, referring to a certain proposition advanced by counsel, said: "There is in this position an assumption that the ascertainment of the amount of compensation to be made is an essential element of the power of appropriation; but such is not the case. The power to take private property for public uses, generally termed the right of eminent domain, belongs to every independent government. It is an incident of sovereignty, and, as said in Mississippi & R. River Boom Co. v. Patterson, 98 U. S. 403, 25 L. ed. 206, requires no constitutional recognition. The provision found in the 5th Amendment to the Federal Constitution and in the Constitutions of the several states, for just compensation for the property taken, is merely a limitation upon the use of the power. It is no part of the power itself, but a condition upon which the power may be exercised. . . . But there is no reason why the compensation to be made may not be ascertained by any appropriate tribunal capable of estimating the value of the property. There is nothing in the nature of the matter to be determined which calls for the establishment of any special tribunal by the *appropriating power.[584] The proceeding for the ascertainment of the value of the property and consequent compensation to be made is merely an inquiry to establish a particular fact as a preliminary to the actual taking; and it may be prosecuted before the commissioners, or special boards, or the courts, with or without the intervention of a jury, as the legislative power may designate. All that is required is that it shall be conducted in some fair and just manner, with opportunity to the owners of the property to present evidence as to its value, and to be heard thereon."

The vital object of the present suit was to secure the recognition and enforcement of the right of the telegraph company, under the act of 1866, to keep and maintain its lines upon the railroad's right of way. If it had such a right,—the authority to confer the right is, we repeat, not disputed,—then this suit in equity was an appropriate mode by which the right could be adequately protected and compensation secured to the railroad company. To assert the right and to ask that the amount of compensation shall be ascertained made the proceeding a suit or controversy within the meaning of the judiciary acts, and made the case one—in legal effect—for condemnation. I perceive no reason why the court, in advance of a final decree recognizing and enforcing that right, could not have instituted, as it was asked to do, an inquiry in respect of the compensation which the railroad company was entitled to receive for the proposed use of its right of way, and have made the payment of such compensation a condition precedent to the exercise by the telegraph company of the right given by the act of 1866. Having all the parties interested before it, could not the court have directed a jury to be impaneled to inquire, under the direction of the court, as to the amount of compensation to be paid to the railroad company? Could it have done any more under regular proceedings of condemnation? Instead of adopting that course, the circuit court proceeded upon the ground that even if the use of the defendant's road by the telegraph company would not interfere with ordinary travel on [585] and *over it, it was compelled by the former decisions of this court to hold that neither in virtue of the act of 1866, nor of any other existing Federal statute, could the telegraph company occupy the railroad's right of way without the consent of the railroad company.

The cases in this court which, it is supposed, adopted this view of the act of 1866, are Pensacola Telég. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708, and Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 243, 44 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867. But the utmost ingenuity is inadequate to show that the present question was involved in either of those cases, or that the decision in either case depended in the slightest degree on its solution.

It appears from the Pensacola Case that the Western Union Telegraph Company had the right to place and operate its lines upon the right of way of a certain railroad company between points in Alabama and points in Florida. There was no controversy in that case between the railroad company and the telegraph company as to the right of the latter to have its lines on the railroad right of way. The railroad company, as the report of the case shows, had consented to the occupancy of its right of way by the lines of the telegraph company, and that fact was not disputed. The railroad company was not even a party to the suit. It had no quarrel with the telegraph company. What need, then, had the court to consider the rights of the Western Union Telegraph Company, under the act of 1866, when it was conceded that that company had the consent of the railroad company to occupy its right of way? This view of the case was distinctly announced by this court when it said in the Pensacola Case that "the present case is satisfied if we find that Congress has power, by appropriate legislation, to prevent the states from placing obstructions in the way of its [the telegraph's] usefulness." The sole question in the case was as to the validity of a Florida statute, under which a Florida telegraph company was given exclusive telegraphic rights over the route to be occupied by the Western Union Telegraph Company with the consent of the [586] railroad *company; and the charter of the Florida company authorized it to locate and construct its lines within certain named counties of Florida, "along and upon any public road or highway, or across any water, or upon any railroad or private property for which permission shall first have been obtained from the proprietors thereof." This court held that the attempt of the state to exercise exclusive control over telegraphic communications between it and other states was in conflict with the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, and that the Florida statute was void so far as it assumed to grant exclusive privileges to a particular telegraph company.

Referring to the act of 1866 the court said: "It substantially declares, in the interest of commerce and the convenient transmission of intelligence from place to place by the government of the United States and its citizens, that the erection of telegraph lines shall, so far as state interference is concerned, be free to all who will submit to the conditions imposed by Congress, and that corporations organized under the laws of one state for constructing and operating telegraph lines shall not be excluded by another from prosecuting their business within its jurisdiction, if they accept the terms proposed by the national government for this national privilege. To this extent, certainly, the statute is a legitimate regulation of commercial intercourse among the states, and is appropriate legislation to carry into execution the powers of Congress over the postal service. It gives no foreign corporations the right to enter upon private property without the consent of the owner, and erect the necessary structures for its business; but it does provide that, whenever the consent of the owner is obtained, no state legislation shall prevent the occupation of post roads for telegraph purposes by such corporations as are willing to avail themselves of its privileges." What was meant by the words, "but it [the act] does provide that, whenever the consent of the owner is obtained," I cannot understand. The act of 1866 does not contain any such provision, nor anything like it. Not a single word is to be found in it *that refers to the consent [587] of the owner of the property to be taken. The court proceeds: "It is insisted, however, that the statute extends only to such military and post roads as are upon the public domain; but this, we think, is not so. The language is, 'through and over any portion of the public domain of the United States, over and along any of the military or post roads of the United States, which have been or may hereafter be declared such by act of Congress, and over, under, or across the navigable streams or waters of the United States.' There is nothing to indicate an intention of limiting the effect of the words employed, and they are, therefore, to be given their natural and ordinary signification. Read in this way, the grant evidently extends to the public domain, the military and post roads, and the navigable waters of the United States. These are all within the dominion of the national government to the extent of the national powers, and are, therefore, subject to legitimate congressional regulation. No question arises as to the authority of Congress to provide for the appropriation of private property to the uses of the telegraph, for no such attempt has been made. The use of public property alone is granted. If private property is required, it must, so far as the present legislation is concerned, be obtained by private arrangement with its owner. No compulsory proceedings are authorized. State sovereignty under the Constitution is not interfered with. Only national privileges are granted."

This language, it seems to me, has not been correctly interpreted. Undue stress has been laid upon the words "private property without the consent of the owner," and the words "private property . . . obtained by private arrangement with its owner." They have been so interpreted as to make the court decide a question not before it, not necessary to the decision, not involved in the issues made, and never suggested by counsel. The briefs of counsel in that case show that no such question was in their minds; for they as well as the court knew, from the record before them, and as we may know from an examination of that record, that the Western Union Company [588]* was entitled, so far as the consent of the railroad company was concerned, to maintain its lines on the railroad right of way. Upon the above-quoted words the contention is based that the court intended to decide that no railroad right of way could, in virtue of the act of 1866 be occupied by any telegraph company without the consent of the railroad company first obtained. I cannot believe that any such question was intended to be decided. As already shown, the court expressly said that the only question to be decided was whether Congress had power to prevent a state from obstructing interstate telegraphic communications, by granting exclusive privileges to a particular telegraph company of its own creation. It is a mistake to say that the court declared that the sole purpose of the act of 1866 was to prevent state monopolies, or that the act was merely an exercise of national power to forbid state interference with telegraphic communications. It did say that the case then before the court would be satisfied if the question as to state interference was decided, that is, that the case involved no other question. Besides, the whole context of the opinion in the Pensacola Case shows that the court did not include railroad property employed in commerce when it used the above-quoted words.

It was argued in that case that the act of 1866 had reference only to the "public domain," that is, to the public lands owned by the United States. This view was distinctly rejected, and post roads were placed by the court, so far as the privileges granted by the act were concerned, on the same plane as the public domain, so that not even a state could interfere with the national privilege granted by Congress, if the telegraph company accepted the terms of the act. The court said that any telegraphic company accepting the provisions of the act could put its lines on any post road, if ordinary travel thereon was not interfered with, and that not even the state could stand in the way. It then added, as if out of abundant caution, and to show that Congress had no purpose to interfere with the rights of private owners, that no attempt was made by Congress to provide for the [589] appropriation of private property, and that "the use of public property alone is granted." That meant that the act had not granted any right to telegraph companies to occupy private property with telegraph lines. Having said that the act granted the use of post roads for telegraphic purposes, that it embraced the use of such roads equally with the public domain, and that "the use of public property alone is granted," it is inconceivable that the court employed in the same connection the words "private property" as embracing post roads, or the use of such roads. To relieve the minds of those who apprehended danger arising from the act of 1866 to state sovereignty and to rights that were strictly private, the court took care to say that neither state sovereignty nor private rights were interfered with; that only national privileges were granted; but that, in respect of the use of the public domain and military and post roads, Congress had power to pass the act of 1866, and in dealing with the use of post roads by telegraph companies it dealt with public property.

When the court held in the Pensacola Case that telegraphic communications between the states could be regulated by Congress under its power to regulate commerce, and that the statute of Florida which assumed to give to a Florida telegraph company an exclusive right in respect of telegraphic communications over certain territory in that state was inconsistent with the act of 1866, that was an end of that case, and nothing remained to be done except to dismiss the suit. The court itself so declared. Nothing more was in issue between the parties. The case involved, I confidently insist, no question as to the previous assent of the railroad company being a condition of the exercise by the Western Union Telegraph Company of the rights given by the act of 1866.

Nor is the case of Western Union Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 243, 244, 44 L. ed. 1052, 1054, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867, 869, an authority for the action of the circuit court. That was a case in which the only relief sought was the specific performance of a contract under which a telegraph company claimed the right to remain in the [590] occupancy *of the right of way of a railroad company. The court pertinently observed in that case that it was not claimed that "the telegraph company had any right under the statute, and independently of the contract, to maintain and operate this telegraph line over the railroad company's property." It was, however, claimed that, as the telegraph company was in the discharge of public duties, the circuit court "should have so framed its decree as to preserve the occupancy of the telegraph company, subject to making compensation to the railroad company, the value of the alleged easement to be ascertained by the court." But that view was rejected because the bill "was not framed in that aspect" and so as to protect the occupancy of the telegraph company subject to the condition of its making compensation; and the court also said that the relief asked could not be given under the prayer for general relief, because not "agreeable to the case made by the bill."

Now, the present bill has been framed so that the court can protect the right given to the telegraph company by the act of 1866 to have its wires and poles on the company's right of way, upon its being ascertained that such use will not interfere with the ordinary travel on the railroad, just compensation being made for that use, and the amount of compensation to be ascertained by the court in some appropriate way.

In my judgment, nothing involved or in judgment in the Pensacola and Ann Arbor Cases requires the affirmance of the decree of the circuit court.

The affirmance of that decree of the circuit court will mean that the efforts of Congress, by the act of 1866, to obtain for the people of the country the advantages accruing from competition between corporations of the different states in the matter of telegraphic communications, and also to promote and secure the interests of the government as involved in the conduct of its postal and military business, will prove of but little value. Indeed, as construed, it might have been better for the country if the act of 1866 had not been passed, and the states left free to establish such regulations in refer-sional legislation on the subject. As the matter now stands, the whole subject is practically committed to the railroad companies. The court says that the act of 1866 is an efficient enactment for the purpose of preventing state interference with interstate telegraphic communications. As now construed, it would seem to be most efficient in tying the hands of the state, and leaving railroad companies operating post roads, so far as existing legislation is concerned, absolute masters of interstate communication by telegraph.

[591]erence *to telegraphic communications, within and over its territory, as would be appropriate and valid in the absence of congress-

In the Pensacola Case it was decided, and I think rightly, that in respect at least of interstate telegraphic communications, a state could not give exclusive privileges to a particular telegraph company. But, as just stated, by the necessary operation of the judgment now rendered a railroad company operating a post road can, in effect or practically, confer exclusive privileges upon a particular telegraph company, in respect of its right of way, by simply withholding its consent for a second telegraph company to occupy any part of such right of way with its wires and poles. If the government should be of opinion that the public business imperatively required another telegraph line upon the post road now occupied by the Pennsylvania Railroad, that company need only object to other telegraph lines being placed upon its right of way, and that will be the end of the matter, so far as the act of 1866, as now construed, is concerned. If the government and a telegraph company fully equipped should jointly represent to the railroad company that an additional company can be admitted to its right of way without obstructing the ordinary travel on that road, the company need only reply that no other telegraph company than the one now there can occupy its right of way, and that will be the end of the matter, so far as the act of 1866, as now construed, is concerned. And all this is now made possible, notwithstanding the decision of this court in United States v. Union P. R. Co. *above cited. In that case we propounded [592] this question: "Can it be said that after the passage of the act of 1866, and while it was in force, a railway company operating a post road of the United States could, by any form of agreement, exclude from its roadway a telegraph company which had accepted the provisions of that act?" We said that this question could be answered only in one way, "namely, that every railroad company operating a post road of the United States, over which commerce among the states is carried on, was inhibited, after the act of July 24th, 1866, took effect, from making any agreement inconsistent with its provisions or that tended to defeat its operation." The court added that it was very far from the intention of Congress by any legislation to so exert its power as to enable one telegraph corporation, Federal or state, to acquire exclusive rights over any post road. But now a railroad corporation operating a post road, and wishing its right of way occupied only by a single company with which it may have a special business arrangement for its own purposes, need not make even a secret agreement granting exclusive privileges to that company. It need only keep silence and withhold its assent to the occupancy of its right of way by another company, and in that way give exclusive privileges to the company with which it has a special arrangement; it may be to one organized wholly in the interest of the railroad company. In the Pensacola Case it was said that one of the objects of the act of 1866 was to prevent state monopolies in telegraphic communication, and that the privilege granted by that act was a national privilege. Now, although state monopolies cannot exist, railroad monopolies in telegraphic communications may exist; and the national privilege granted by the act of 1866 is left at the mercy of railroad companies operating the post roads of the United States.

[593] Practically, the railroad corporations operating post roads—looking to their own interests and perhaps caring little for the general welfare—are recognized as now having more power *than a state. I cannot assent to any interpretation of the act of 1866 from which such a result can follow. No such result is, in my opinion, consistent either with the words of the act or with the objects which Congress, as this court has said, intended to accomplish by its passage. The act, reasonably interpreted, was, I think, intended to give a telegraph company accepting its provisions the absolute right to put its wires and poles upon any post road,—a public highway established primarily for the public convenience,—if the ordinary travel on such road was not thereby interfered with.

For these reasons, I am constrained to dissent from the opinion and judgment of the court.

Brewer, J., concurring:

I concur in the judgments in these cases, but do so distinctly on the ground that the questions have been settled in prior cases. If the matter was res integra, the views expressed by Mr. Justice Harlan would be very persuasive. Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708, and Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867, seem to me controlling. In the first of these cases the scope of the power and authority granted by the act of 1866 was distinctly presented. It was within the proper limits of inquiry, and the opinion of the court shows that it was fully considered. The declarations in that opinion are clear and precise, and cannot be considered in any just sense obiter dicta. The decision was announced in 1877, and was reaffirmed in 1890 in the Ann Arbor Case. If the court erred in its construction of the act, Congress has had twenty-seven years in which to correct the mistake. Its omission to take any action must be considered as an acquiescence on its part in that construction. And I am of the opinion that when this court has construed a statute of Congress, and that construction has remained for more than a *quarter of a century, nei- [594] ther changed by any judicial decisions nor set aside by any congressional legislation, it ought not to be disturbed except for the most cogent reasons.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 594-604.)

Eminent domain—rights of telegraph companies on railway rights of way—exercise of eminent domain by lessees.

1. Railways are not "highways" within the meaning of a provision in the charter of a telegraph company giving it the right to occupy with its telegraph lines any of the roads, highways, streets, and waters within the state.
2. The lessee of a telegraph company cannot, as such lessee, exercise the right of eminent domain possessed by its lessor.

[No. 90.]

Argued October 19, 20, 1904. Decided December 12, 1904.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed an order of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania dismissing a petition by which the Western Union Telegraph Company sought to acquire by condemnation the use of certain railway rights of way for telegraph purposes. Affirmed.

See same case below, 59 C. C. A. 113, 123 Fed. 33.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. H. D. Estabrook, Rush Taggart, and John F. Dillon argued the cause and filed a brief for the Western Union Telegraph Company:

Congress, under the power to regulate commerce among the several states, as well as to provide for postal accommodations and military exigencies, has power to pass any laws germane to these subjects.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. James, 162 U. S. 650, 40 L. ed. 1105, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465.

To trace historically the evolution of this doctrine, see 2 Story, Const. chap. 18; 1 Kent Com. pp. 267 et seq., and the portion of Elliott's Debates therein referred to; also United States v. Koehersperger, 9 Am. Law Reg. 145, Fed. Cas. No. 15,541; and the various cases growing out of the abandonment of the Cumberland Road, particularly Searight v. Stokes, 3 How. 151, 11 L. ed. 537; Neil v. Ohio, 3 How. 720, 11 L. ed. 800; Achison v. Huddleson, 12 How. 293, 13 L. ed. 993.

The old doctrine that Federal sovereignty could only appropriate property within a state with the consent or acquiescence of the state was forever dissipated by the invincible logic of Judge Cooley in People ex rel. Trombley v. Humphrey, 23 Mich. 471, 9 Am. Rep. 94, followed by his masterly work on Constitutional Limitations, both cited with approval by Mr. Justice Strong, in Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449.

The constitutionality of the act of July 24, 1866, has never been questioned, except, perhaps, in dissenting opinions. It has uniformly been held that under this act telegraph companies accepting its provisions have the right to occupy with their lines of telegraph the streets of a city and the roads of a state, which by act of Congress have been established post roads of the United States.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 114 Fed. 787; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 554, 31 L. ed. 794, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961. See also Western U. Teleg. Co. v. New York, 3 L. R. A. 449, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 533, 38 Fed. 552; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 40 L. ed. 319, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 23 Utah, 474, 90 Am. St. Rep. 705, 65 Pac. 735; Hewett v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 4 Mackey, 424.

The primary use of a highway is for the purpose of travel, but the occupation of a highway by telegraph lines, if so maintained and operated as not to interfere with the primary use, is not only permissible, but, thus limited, has been held not to constitute an additional servitude.

Julia Bldg. Asso. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 88 Mo. 258, 57 Am. Rep. 398; Cater v. Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. 60 Minn. 539, 28 L. R. A. 310, 51 Am. St. Rep. 543, 63 N. W. 111; Magee v. Overshiner, 150 Ind. 127, 40 L. R. A. 370, 65 Am. St. Rep. 358, 49 N. E. 951; People v. Eaton, 100 Mich. 208, 24 L. R. A. 721, 59 N. W. 145; Pierce v. Drew, 136 Mass. 75, 49 Am. Rep. 7; Hershfield v. Rocky Mountain Bell Teleph. Co. 12 Mont. 103, 29 Pac. 883.

A railroad is a highway, not simply sub modo, but intrinsically and per se, in the same category precisely as roads, streets, alleys, turnpikes, plank roads, tramways, bridges, ferries, canals, and navigable rivers.

Oleott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. 678, 21 L. ed. 382; Re Debs, 158 U. S. 564, 39 L. ed. 1092, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 900; Monongahela Nav. Co. v. United States, 148 U. S. 312, 37 L. ed. 463, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 622. See also Cherokee Nation v. Southern Kansas R. Co. 135 U. S. 641-657, 34 L. ed. 295-300, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 965; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 43 L. ed. 702, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Smyth v. Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 42 L. ed. 819, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Trunick v. Smith, 63 Pa. 18; California v. Central P. R. Co. 127 U. S. 1, 39, 32 L. ed. 150, 157, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 153, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1073; Wiseonsin, M. & P. R. Co. v. Jacobson, 179 U. S. 287, 296, 297, 45 L. ed. 194, 199, 200, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 115; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Otoe County, 16 Wall. 667, 21 L. ed. 375; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 161 U. S. 696, 40 L. ed. 857, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 714; Michigan Teleph. Co. v. Charlotte, 93 Fed. 11.

Taxes may be imposed for its construction and maintenance.

Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Otoe County, 16 Wall. 667, 21 L. ed. 375; Queensbury v. Culver, 19 Wall. 91, 22 L. ed. 104; People ex rel. McLean v. Flagg, 46 N. Y. 401.

By the act of July 24, 1866, and correlated acts, Congress declared a policy and a purpose that, to encourage and facilitate intercommunication among the people, the companies operating the railroads and telegraphs of the United States should be mutually accommodating and co-operative, and should, so far as practicable, construct their lines of railroad and telegraph along the same rights of way.

Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Atty. Gen. 125 U. S. 530, 31 L. ed. 790, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 961; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 41, 44, 49, 40 L. ed. 319, 333, 334, 336, 16

Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Texas, 105 U. S. 460, 26 L. ed. 1067; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 114 Fed. 787; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Southern R. Co. 89 Fed. 190; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 23 Utah, 474, 90 Am. St. Rep. 705, 65 Pac. 735; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 3 McCrary, 130, 11 Fed. 1; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. 19 Fed. 660; Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 78 Fed. 858.

The statutes of many states extend the right to occupy the highways of the state, including the highways called railroads, to telephone companies,—the Supreme Court of the United States having limited the application of the act of July 24, 1866, to telegraph companies proper.

New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Southern & A. Teleg. Co. 53 Ala. 211; Union P. R. Co. v. Colorado Postal Teleg.-Cable Co. 30 Colo. 133, 97 Am. St. Rep. 106, 69 Pac. 564; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Postal Teleg.-Cable Co. 112 Ga. 941, 38 S. E. 353; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 104 Fed. 623; St. Louis & C. R. Co. v. Postal Teleg. Co. 173 Ill. 508, 51 N. E. 382; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1188, 54 S. W. 727; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. Co. 49 La. Ann. 58, 21 So. 183; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Postal Teleg. Co. 76 Miss. 731, 45 L. R. A. 223, 26 So. 370; Phillips v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 130 N. C. 513, 89 Am. St. Rep. 868, 41 S. E. 1022; Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 101 Tenn. 62, 41 L. R. A. 403, 46 S. W. 571; Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 52 S. W. 108; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Farmville & P. R. Co. 96 Va. 661, 32 S. E. 468; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 23 Utah, 474, 90 Am. St. Rep. 705, 65 Pac. 735.

Rather than that a statute should fail of its purpose or be nullified by the courts as unconstitutional, the courts will read into it the constitutional inhibition against the taking of private property without just compensation, and will provide the court machinery necessary to determine judicially the amount of just compensation to be paid therefor.

The courts will do this for the following reasons:

First. If the implication in favor of the intended exercise of the power is very strong,—for example, that the grant itself would be defeated if the company were not allowed to condemn,—the right to condemn may be exercised on the theory that an implied right has been granted.

10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1054.

Second. It is a cardinal rule that all statutes are to be so construed as to sustain, rather than ignore or defeat them; to give them operation, if the language will permit, instead of treating them as meaningless; ut res magis valeat, quam pereat. Whenever an act can be so construed and applied as to avoid conflict with the Constitution and give it the force of law, this will be done.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 332.

Third. When the use is granted, everything is granted by which the grantee may have and enjoy the use; or, as stated in Broom's Maxims: Lex est cuicunque aliquis, quod concedit, concedere videtur et id sine quo res ipsa non potuit.

Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. 630, 9 L. ed. 857.

Fourth. Whenever anything is authorized to be done by law, and it is found impossible to do that thing unless something else not authorized in express terms be also done, then that something else will be supplied by necessary intendment.

Fenton v. Hampton, 11 Moore, P. C. C. 360. See also Sutherland, Stat. Constr. §§ 295, 324, 332, 340, 341, 343, 344, 379, 382, 388.

Fifth. The constitutional inhibition against taking private property without just compensation, being negative, is self-executing and is to be read into every law and statute where applicable.

Re Rugheimer, 36 Fed. 369; Hickman v. Kansas, 41 Am. St. Rep. 684, and note, 120 Mo. 110, 23 L. R. A. 658, 25 S. W. 225; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Williams, 86 Va. 696, 8 L. R. A. 429, 19 Am. St. Rep. 908, 11 S. E. 106; Neal v. Delaware, 103 U. S. 370, 26 L. ed. 567; East St. Louis v. Amy (East St. Louis v. United States) 120 U. S. 600, 30 L. ed. 798, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 739; Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases (Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky) 115 U. S. 321, 334, 29 L. ed. 414, 417, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57.

Sixth. Where a right is given by law or statute, and no special machinery is provided for the enforcement of the law, the courts will supply the machinery, either by adopting the machinery already in use, or the machinery in vogue at common law, which, in cases of condemnation, was the writ ad quod damnum. The writ of ad quod damnum simply means that the amount of compensation to be paid to an owner for the appropriation of his private property to a public use shall be determined by a full jury.

Kohl v. United States, 91 U. S. 367, 23 L. ed. 449; United States v. Jones, 109 U. S. 513, 27 L. ed. 1015, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 346; High Bridge Lumber Co. v. United States, 16 C. C. A. 460, 37 U. S. App. 234, 69 Fed. 320; Dashiell v. Grosvenor, 27 L. R. A. 67, 13 C. C. A. 593, 25 U. S. App. 227, 66 Fed.

338; New York v. Pine, 185 U. S. 93, 46 L. ed. 820, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 592; D. M. Osborne & Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 147 U. S. 248, 37 L. ed. 155, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 299; McElroy v. Kansas City, 21 Fed. 257; United States v. Great Falls Mfg. Co. 112 U. S. 645, 28 L. ed. 846, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 306.

As to the writ ad quod damnum, see —

2 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 402; Scudder v. Trenton Delaware Falls Co. 1 N. J. Eq. 694, 23 Am. Dec. 756; Hooker v. New Haven & N. Co. 14 Conn. 146, 36 Am. Dec. 477; Jerome v. Ross, 7 Johns. Ch. 315, 11 Am. Dec. 484; Wheelock v. Young, 4 Wend. 650; Stevens v. Middlesex County, 12 Mass. 466; Bloodgood v. Mohawk & H. R. R. Co. 18 Wend. 9, 31 Am. Dec. 313; Beekman v. Saratoga & S. R. Co. 3 Paige, 45, 22 Am. Dec. 679.

Whether a telegraph company that had accepted the conditions of the act of Congress of July 24, 1866, could appropriate private property was not in issue in either Pensacola Teleg. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 96 U. S. 1, 24 L. ed. 708; or Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Ann Arbor R. Co. 178 U. S. 239, 44 L. ed. 1052, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 867; and all that is said therein, as to the scope of the act, beyond the points directly in issue, is clearly obiter.

While the principal issue in this case has never been presented to the Supreme Court of the United States, lesser courts have several times passed upon it, and, with one exception, have construed the act of Congress of July 24, 1866, according to the principles contended for by the petitioner in error.

Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 114 Fed. 787; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Southern R. Co. 89 Fed. 190; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 23 Utah, 474, 90 Am. St. Rep. 705, 65 Pac. 735; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 55 C. C. A. 263, 118 Fed. 497; St. Louis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 148 U. S. 92, 37 L. ed. 380, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 485; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 160 U. S. 1, 41, 40 L. ed. 319, 333, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Southern Bell Teleph. & Teleg. Co. v. Richmond, 78 Fed. 858; Union Trust Co. v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 8 N. M. 327, 43 Pac. 701; Mercantile Trust Co. v. Atlantic & P. R. Co. 63 Fed. 513; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Los Angeles Electric Co. 76 Fed. 178. Contra, Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Cleveland C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 94 Fed. 234.

Mr. John G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for the railroad company.

For his contentions see his brief as reported in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., ante, 312.

195 U. S.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition on the law side of the circuit court for the western district of Pennsylvania to condemn part of the defendant's right of way and appropriate it to telegraph purposes. There was also a bill on the equity side praying for an injunction to restrain defendant in error from dispossessing *plaintiff in error during the[596] pending of the condemnation proceedings.

The circuit court refused to approve the bond tendered with the petition for condemnation, and ordered the petition dismissed. 120 Fed. 362. The circuit court of appeals affirmed that action. 59 C. C. A. 113, 123 Fed. 33.

The bill in equity, though not before us technically, has been freely referred to in argument, and, besides, many of the allegations of the petition are the same as those in the bill and appeal passed on in Nos. 89 and 199. The same rights are asserted under the act of July 24, 1866 (14 Stat. at L. 221, chap. 230), as there considered. The contention here, as there, is that the telegraph company has the right to maintain its lines of telegraph over and along the railroads of the railroad company upon making compensation to the railroad company for the use so appropriated, so long as the maintenance of its telegraph lines does not materially interfere with the ordinary travel of such roads, and that the right can be asserted by proceedings in eminent domain. It is conceded that there is no general law of Pennsylvania giving that right to the telegraph company. The contention that such right is given by the act of 1866 we considered in Nos. 89 and 199, and decided against the contention. But there are other elements in this case. The telegraph company is the lessee of the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company (the lease is terminable at the option of either party by giving six months' notice), and claims eminent domain as successor of that company. The claim rests upon the statute of Pennsylvania incorporating the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company. That statute was passed in 1849, and provided, in § 5, that it should be lawful for the company "to erect and construct works, edifices, fixtures, and structures along and across any of the roads, highways, streets, and waters within this state; the said works to be so placed as not to interfere with the common use of such roads, highways, streets, and waters." The company was authorized to enter into and occupy any land for the purposes of locating and *constructing its[597] lines, upon securing or tendering such compensation as might be agreed on between it and the owners of the land, or in the manner mentioned in the statute. The circuit court and the circuit court of appeals rejected the claim of the telegraph company based on that act. The decision was rested on two grounds: (1) That railroads were not highways within the meaning of the statute; (2) as expressed in the opinion of the circuit court of appeals:

"No authority to enter upon the right of way of railroads was plainly and distinctly granted, and it is well settled that the right of eminent domain may be exercised by a corporation, in any case, only when granted in express terms or by necessary implication; and that property held and applied by one corporation for a public use cannot be appropriated by another for its use without authority clearly expressed, or which may be implied from the fact (which in this case does not exist) that the use claimed is absolutely necessary to the accomplishment of the purpose for which the claimant corporation was created. Pennsylvania R. Co's Appeal, 93 Pa. 150; Pittsburgh Junction R. Co's Appeal, 122 Pa. 511, 9 Am. St. Rep. 128, 6 Atl. 564; Sharon R. Co.'s Appeal, 122 Pa. 533, 9 Am. St. Rep. 133, 17 Atl. 234; Groff's Appeal, 128 Pa. 621, 5 L. R. A. 661, 18 Atl. 431; Perry County R. Extension Co. v. Newport & S. Valley R. Co. 150 Pa. 193, 24 Atl. 709; Phillips v. Dunkirk, W. & P. R. Co. 78 Pa. 177; Glover v. Boston, 14 Gray, 282."

(1) In the opinion in Nos. 89 and 199 we marked a distinction between highways and railroads, against a contention which identified them in legal meaning and effect. We need not enlarge upon what we there said. Highways and railroads may be assimilated in legal contemplation to a certain extent, and considerations which apply to one within that extent apply to the other. To apply them beyond that extent would be to confound the distinctions of common speech and practice, and destroy property rights long recognized to exist. And we do not deem it necessary to follow and answer in detail the very able arguments of counsel. It is enough to say that they have carried the analogies between [598] ordinary highways *and railroads too far; indeed, have gone beyond analogy, and have contended for almost legal coincidence in attributes and effect.

(2) But there is another rule applicable to grants of eminent domain, which is also fatal to the contention of the telegraph company of the rights claimed by the telegraph company under the lease from the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company. Eminent domain cannot be delegated. Lessees cannot exercise it. 1 Lewis, Em. Dom. § 243, and cases cited. It is to meet this prohibition, probably, that certain allegations of the petition are made. It is alleged that the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company entered into a "contract to lease" with the telegraph company the 1st of April, 1864; that afterwards the former company made an agreement with the railroad company whereby the latter company granted to the said Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company permission to construct and maintain a line of telegraph wires "along and adjacent to the line of railroad" from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, "without limit as to term and duration," which contract was afterwards assigned to the telegraph company (plaintiff in error), and the assignment was ratified and affirmed by the act of the legislature of Pennsylvania, entitled "An Act Supplemental to an Act Entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company, Approved March 24, 1849, and to Confirm Certain Agreements Executed by Said Company,'" approved May three, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, the same as if the said lease and contract had been made by virtue of express authority of law, the said act of assembly also providing that said Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company should have and possess all the rights, powers, and privileges conferred by the 3d and 4th sections of the act of the legislature of Pennsylvania to incorporate the Eastern Pennsylvania Telegraph Company, approved the 5th day of April, 1866.

This act, the petition alleged, gave to the telegraph company "all the corporate rights, powers, privileges, and franchises *of said [599] Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company, including the right to appropriate, on inability to agree with the owner, all lands necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of the said lines of telegraph from Philadelphia to Pittsburg, with any and all such branches therefrom as it may think proper."

The acts cited affirmed agreements or leases theretofore made. Subsequent agreements were provided for, if at all, by §§ 3 and 4 of the act incorporating the Eastern Telegraph Company, as follows:

"Sec. 3. That the said corporation shall have power to connect by contract with other persons or corporations having other telegraphic lines within or out of this state, for the purpose aforesaid; and it may also form a union with or lease to other corporations, associations, or individuals incorporated by this commonwealth or any other state, its own lines, with their fixtures and apparatus, or lease from any individuals, associations, or corporations incorporated by this commonwealth, or any other state, their lines, fixtures, and apparatus; and when such unions as aforesaid are formed the stock may form a common stock upon such terms and conditions as the said companies or associations respectively shall agree upon; and that as soon as such union shall be effected and a true copy of the agreement made for that purpose, duly certified under the corporate seal of the said companies, shall have been filed in the office of the secretary of the commonwealth, the stockholders of the said companies shall become one body, corporate and politic, under such name and style as they shall adopt and agree upon and embody in their certificate, with all the rights and privileges incident to a corporation and with all the rights, powers, and privileges which, by virtue of this act, are vested in the company hereby incorporated.

"Sec. 4. That the said corporation shall have power to purchase, make, use, and maintain any connecting or side lines."

[600] Under those sections the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company* was authorized to lease its lines to the telegraph company. A lease had already been made, as we have seen. Those sections also authorized the companies to "form a union" and "become a body corporate and politic, under such name and style" as they should adopt. That was not done. The telegraph company, therefore, is the simple lessee of the Atlantic & Ohio Company, and has only the powers of a lessee, and as such cannot exercise the right of eminent domain conferred on the Atlantic & Ohio Company.

It is, however, further alleged that the telegraph company, by the power vested in it by the lease from the Atlantic & Ohio Company and the acts of the Pennsylvania legislature confirming the same, and "in the exercise of all and every other power enabling it in anywise to do so," duly located a single line of telegraph along and upon the right of way of the railroad company, and attempted to agree with the latter company upon the prices of compensation therefor; and "that the aforesaid corporate action of the Western Union Telegraph Company has been duly ratified and approved by corporate action in that behalf by the said Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company."

It will be observed that the location, so called, was made by the telegraph company and in its own name. It was not made by the Atlantic & Ohio Company and in its name. And the Atlantic & Ohio Company is not a party to this action. The action was commenced and is prosecuted by the telegraph company alone. The prayer is that, upon the payment of the compensation which shall be directed to be paid for the "rights and interests acquired thereby (that is, by the statutes and proceedings set out in the petition) by the said Western Union Telegraph Company, possession be adjudged to the Western Union Telegraph Company by this court of the said use, right, and interests according to law, and that the title to the said rights and interests, as against the defendant, thereby vest in the said Western Union Telegraph Company for the purposes aforesaid; . . ."

*If it can be said that under the allegations of the petition the Atlantic & Ohio Company retains its rights as the lessor of the telegraph company, still as to such rights it is a necessary party. To have made it a party might have precluded jurisdiction in the circuit court.

But the telegraph company contends for eminent domain in its own right as lessee of the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company, and in its own name, and combats the view that it cannot receive a delegation of that power. The following cases are relied on: California C. R. Co. v. Hooper, 76 Cal. 404, 18 Pac. 599; Crolley v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 30 Minn. 541, 16 N. W. 422; Chicago & W. I. R. Co. v. Illinois C. R. Co. 113 Ill. 156; Kip v. New York & H. R. Co. 6 Hun, 24, 67 N. Y. 227; Abbott v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 145 Mass. 450, 15 N. E. 91.

These cases do not sustain the contention. In the case in 76 Cal. a corporation commenced proceedings in eminent domain. It afterwards consolidated with other corporations. The new corporation thus created was held to be entitled to continue the proceedings in its own name and for its benefit, because it had acquired that right in the manner provided by the statutes of the state.

In 30 Minn. a railroad corporation condemned, paid for, and took certain land for its right of way. Without constructing its road, it transferred the right of way to another railroad corporation. The owner of the land taken brought ejectment for it, alleging the invalidity of the transfer. It was held that his interests were not affected by the transfer, and he could not question the capacity of the first company to make, nor the second company to receive, the transfer.

In 113 Ill. the facts are somewhat complicated, but the point decided relevant to our present discussion is that it mattered not that the necessity for an increase of a right of way of a railroad company for additional tracks was caused by the use of the road by other companies acting under lease or by contract, nor by what company or companies the road was operated. It was still a public use, and (to quote the court) "the needs of the lessees are as those of the lessor company, and any condemnation for their wants may proceed in such latter company's name, and it all the while stands responsible for the running of the road." Kip v. New York & H. R. Co. 6 Hun, 24, and 67 N. Y. 227, were cited.

If this case supports one contention of the telegraph company, it destroys another. It establishes that, if the right of eminent domain is given to the telegraph company by the lease from the Atlantic & Ohio Telegraph Company, that right can only be exercised in the name of the latter company. And such is also the effect of the cited cases, or, rather, the cited case, for it is only one case appearing at different stages in the reports. The plaintiff in the case, who was appellant in the court of appeals (67 N. Y. 227), brought suit against the defendant company to restrain it from prosecuting proceedings to condemn certain lands owned by him in the city of New York. He had leased them to the company for twenty-one years, and his contention was that the condemnation proceedings would impair the obligation of the lease and should be enjoined.

The plaintiff alleged also a lease by the defendant of its road and property to the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company for 401 years, and claimed that the lease abrogated the proceedings to condemn the land, and terminated and removed all necessity for its acquisition for the use of the defendant. It was held (1) that the relation created by the lease was no impediment to the exercise of eminent domain conferred upon the company by the statute of the state; and (2) that the proceedings to condemn were not affected by the lease. The court observed that the same necessity existed in favor of the defendant after as before the lease, and if the necessity was only in favor of the lessee it was competent for "the lessee to continue the proceedings in the name of the defendant." (Italics ours.)

[603] *In Abbott v. New York & N. E. R. Co. the questions involved were whether the power to take land by eminent domain may be given to a foreign corporation, and whether a corporation by the consent of the legislature may take the power as a quasi successor of another corporation to which it was originally granted. Under the statutes of the state those questions were answered in the affirmative, and it was in regard to those questions and statutes that Chief Justice Holmes, now a justice of this court, said that the reasons which have led some courts and judges to doubt the necessity of the consent of the legislature to a transfer of the right of eminent domain from one corporation to another "show that the delectus personarum is of little more than theoretical importance, and is the least determining element in the more common cases where the power is conferred." The case is not like that at bar, and need not be further analyzed.

A case more applicable to the case at bar is Worcester v. Norwich & W. R. Co. 109 Mass. 103. In that case the railroad company was required to unite with others in establishing a passenger station. Resisting the proceedings which were brought to appoint commissioners to select a location, it was urged that it might become necessary to exercise the right of eminent domain, and against that the railroad pleaded a lease to the Boston, Hartford, & Erie Railroad Company, which had been confirmed by the legislature. There were other transfers of interests, and of them and the lease the court said: "Yet none of these leases or assignments can be construed to extend to the lessees or assignees the power to exercise the right of eminent domain, or to restrict the right of the legislature to alter or repeal the charters." And again: "The lease by the Norwich & Worcester Railroad Company did not make the lessees, or their representatives, parties to the grant of power to exercise the right of eminent domain. That right remained in the original corporation, and the legislature might properly deal with it exclusively in amending their (its) charter."

Judgment affirmed.

*Mr. Justice Harlan dissenting:

[604]

The judgment of the circuit court in this case rests mainly upon the same grounds as the judgment in cases Nos. 89 and 199. For the reasons stated in my opinion in those cases, I dissent from the opinion and judgment in this case.

Ex parte THE REPUBLIC OF COLOMBIA, Petitioner.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 604-606.)

Appeal—construction of decree of appellate court—allowance of interest—arbitration.

1. The proper construction of a decree of the Federal Supreme Court "reversing" a decree of a circuit court which had confirmed in part an award in arbitration proceedings, and had ordered interest to be paid on the remainder from the date fixed by the award for payment, and remanding the cause with directions to confirm the award for and up to a lesser and specified sum, does not prohibit the circuit court, in entering its decree pursuant to this decision, from allowing interest on that sum from the date so fixed, where, in the opinion of the Supreme Court, the items of the award were treated as separate matters, some of which, it was said, might be disallowed without affecting the rest.

2. A Federal circuit court whose action was invoked by the Republic of Colombia to set aside an award made against it in arbitration proceedings has the same power to decree the payment of interest from the date fixed for payment by the award as in an ordinary case.

[No. 13, Original.]

Argued November 28, 1904. Decided December 12, 1904.

PETITION for a writ of mandamus to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of West Virginia, to compel it to correct a decree entered in pursuance of a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, on an appeal from the Circuit Court. Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William G. Johnson argued the cause and filed a brief for petitioner.

Mr. John W. Beaumont argued the cause, and, with Messrs. J. Walter Lord and Hugh L. Bond, filed a brief for respondent.

It is well established that the word "reversed," when used in a decree, must be considered in connection with the accompanying opinion. Both must be considered by the lower court in connection, also, with the original decree of the lower court. Although the word "reversed" may be used, yet the decree of the lower court will be modified only in accordance with the decree and opinion of the higher court. And whenever a part of the decree of the lower court can possibly stand together with the decree of the higher court, it not only ought to stand, but must stand.

Gaines v. Rugg (Gaines v. Caldwell) 148 U. S. 228, 37 L. ed. 432, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611; Latta v. Granger, 167 U. S. 81, 42 L. ed. 85, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 746; Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 138 U. S. 509, 34 L. ed. 1052, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426.

It is true that there is a uniform line of decisions in this court, which hold that where the Supreme Court has simply affirmed the decree of the lower court, and where neither the original decree nor the decree of affirmance makes any provision for interest, then in executing the mandate of this court the lower court cannot properly, for the first time, include interest in its final decree. The cases most frequently cited to sustain this contention are the following:

Himely v. Rose, 5 Cranch, 313, 3 L. ed. 111; The Santa Maria, 10 Wheat. 431, 442, 6 L. ed. 359, 361; Boycce v. Grundy, 9 Pet. 275-289, 9 L. ed. 127-132; Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 How. 115, 14 L. ed. 75; Perkins v. 195 U. S.

Fourniquet, 14 How. 328, 14 L. ed. 441; Re Washington & G. R. Co. 140 U. S. 91, 35 L. ed. 339, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 673.

An examination of these cases clearly indicates that they are all distinguishable from the case at bar in the following important particulars:

1. They are all cases in which the judgment or decree of the lower court was affirmed in its entirety.

2. They are all cases in which there was absolutely no provision for interest in the original judgment or decree.

On the other hand, there are several well-considered cases where the original decree by the lower court was reversed, or reversed in part and affirmed in part, the appellate court saying nothing as to interest, and where a subsequent allowance of interest by the lower court was thereafter sustained by the appellate court.

Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 138 U. S. 509, 34 L. ed. 1052, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426; Metcalf v. Watertown, 16 C. C. A. 37, 34 U. S. App. 107, 68 Fed. 859; The Grapeshot, 2 Woods, 42, Fed. Cas. No. 5,703; Wilson's Appeal (Pa.) 10 Cent. Rep. 303, 11 Atl. 678.

In the revision of a separable award, it seems to be well established that the objectionable part is rejected as mere surplusage.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 710.

Moreover, suit may be maintained in assumpsit upon the award, to recover the valid separable items, even though the award is for an aggregate sum. Or if such suit were for the aggregate sum, the court would disallow the bad and render judgment for the balance.

Morse, Arbitration, p. 484; Dalrymple v. Whittingham, 26 Vt. 345.

So, in a New York case, where a part of the award was valid and a part bad for uncertainty, the court holds that so much of the award as directs security to be given is undoubtedly void, and it leaves the award as though that part had been omitted and it had been a simple award to pay the money. The giving of the security is not the consideration for anything to be done by the plaintiff. It may, therefore, be rejected without impairing the residue of the award.

Stanley v. Chappell, 8 Cow. 235.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a petition for a writ of mandamus to the circuit court, ordering it to correct its decree entered in pursuance of the decision in Colombia v. Cauca Co. 190 U. S. 524, 47 L. ed. 1159, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 704. *The decree appealed from in that case confirmed an award against the Republic of Colombia after rejecting certain items, and ordered interest to be paid on the remainder from January 26, 1898, the date fixed for payment by the award. In this court other items of the award were disallowed, and a decree was made reversing the decree below, and remanding the case "with directions to enter a decree confirming the award for and up to the sum of $193,204.02." The circuit court thereupon entered a decree for that sum, with interest from the above-mentioned date. The giving of interest is the error alleged; and it is contended that, by the proper construction of the decree of this court, interest should not have been allowed.

Of course, the only question open in this proceeding is whether the decree of this court prohibits the allowance of interest. Re Sanford Fork & Tool Co. 160 U. S. 247, 40 L. ed. 414, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291. As to that it is to be noticed that nothing is said upon the subject, either in the decree or in the discussion of the case. In the opinion, however, the items were treated as separate matters, "some of which," it was said, "may be disallowed without affecting the rest." The only ground suggested for reversal was the inclusion of the separable items. By confirming the award as to the others, this court, in effect, declared that they should have been paid in gold coin of the United States of America, in the city of New York, on January 26, 1898, in accordance with the terms of the award. To that extent the decree below stood approved; and as no disapproval was expressed of the consequence attached by that decree to the failure to pay, it is impossible to say that there was any implied prohibition of again attaching the same consequence in the new decree. "The mandate and the opinion, taken together, although they used the word 'reversed,' amount to a reversal only in respect of the accounting, and to a modification of the decree in respect of the accounting, and to an affirmance of it in all other respects." Gaines v. Rugg, 148 U. S. 228, 238, 37 L. ed. 432, 434, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 611, 615. This language is sufficiently applicable to be *in-[606]structive, although not absolutely in point. See also Kneeland v. American Loan & T. Co. 138 U. S. 509, 34 L. ed. 1052, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 426.

It may not be improper to add that when the Republic of Colombia made its voluntary submission to arbitration, it agreed that, if the award was against it, in excess of a sum paid in advance, the government should "pay the excess at such time, in such manner, and on such terms as may be determined by the commission." Art. 10. See art. 9. This language authorized the allowance of interest; and the first draft of the award gave interest at 6 per cent in case of failure to pay at the time fixed, allowing, on the other hand, a discount of 5 per cent for cash. Both of these provisions were omitted from the final award, which stopped with fixing the time. But when the Republic submitted itself to the courts, it must be taken to have done so on the same terms as other litigants, so far as fixing the amount which it was to pay was concerned; that being the matter on which the action of the courts was invoked, it seems to us that it was competent for the circuit court to decree the payment of interest as in an ordinary case.

Rule discharged. Petition denied.

SPENCER S. BULLIS, Plff. in Err.,
v.

JAMES R. O'BEIRNE, on Behalf of Himself and All Other Bondholders of the Allegheny & Kinzua Railroad Company, and the Central Trust Company of New York.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 606-621.)

Bankruptcy — discharge — judgments in actions for fraud.

A judgment of a state court is rendered in "an action for fraud" so as to be exempted by the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 550, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3428), § 17, subd. 2, from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy, where such judgment, whatever may be the form of the action, was based upon actual, as distinguished from constructive, fraud of the bankrupt.

[No. 60.]

Argued November 10, 11, 1904. Decided December 12, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment of that court, entered pursuant to a judgment of the Court of Appeals of that State, affirming the judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Fourth Department, which had, in turn, affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court, entered at a special term held in and for the County of Erie, denying an application to cancel certain judgments as having been released by a discharge in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

See same case below in Court of Appeals, 171 N. Y. 689, 64 N. E. 1119; and in Appellate Division, 68 App. Div. 508, 73 N. Y. Supp. 1047.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

The plaintiff in error, Spencer S. Bullis, having been discharged in bankruptcy on September 19, 1899, which discharge covered provable debts existing on November 14, 1898, made application under the New York

Code, § 1268, for the cancelation and discharge of certain judgments rendered against him in the supreme court of New York. The defendants in error, judgment creditors of said Bullis, opposed the granting of the order upon the ground that the judgments against Bullis were in an action for fraud, and therefore not discharged under the terms of the bankrupt law. The supreme court of New York denied the application. Upon appeal to the appellate division, fourth department, this judgment was affirmed. 68 App. Div. 508, 73 N. Y. Supp. 1047. Bullis then appealed to the court of appeals of New York, which affirmed the judgment of the court below without opinion. 171 N. Y. 689, 64 N. E. 1119.

The facts necessary to be noticed in this case are in substance: James R. O'Beirne, in behalf of himself and other bondholders, filed a complaint, setting forth, among other things, that, on September 8, 1899, Bullis and one Barse owned the capital stock of three railroads,—two organized under the laws of Pennsylvania and one under the laws of the state of New York,—which railroads were constructed for the purpose of reaching timber on large tracts of land. At that time the length of the railroads was about 16 miles, but an extension of the lines was contemplated so as to cover about 30 miles. Certain agreements are alleged between said Bullis and Barse and a firm of bankers,—Newcombe & Company, of New York,—by the terms of which Bullis and Barse were to execute a mortgage to the Central Trust Company of New York, to secure $250,000 of first-mortgage bonds, running thirty years, which mortgage was to cover the railroad properties and 30,000 [608] acres of timber lands in McKean *county, Pennsylvania. The property was to be under the management of a new corporation, to be organized with a capital stock of $250,000. Various agreements were made as to the organization and management of said corporation. Another agreement was entered into between the parties, providing for the merger and consolidation of the railroads into a new company, with a capital stock of $500,000, and for a mortgage to the Central Trust Company, as trustee, to secure $500,000 of first-mortgage bonds. The railroad lines were to be extended to 70 miles, and 16,000 acres of timber lands to be included, making 46,000 acres to be owned by the new company. $300,000 of the bonds were to be put upon the market, to represent 46 miles of the railroad. Newcombe & Company were to dispose at par of $260,000 of these bonds, in accordance with the terms of the agreement. Bullis and Barse were to enter into an agreement for consolidating the said railroads into one system, by agreement with the International Interior Construction & Improvement Company. On September 10, 1899, the construction company made a contract with the Allegheny & Kinzua Railroad Company, owned by Bullis and Barse, and one with Bullis and Barse, providing for the construction and consolidation of the railroads and for the distribution of the proceeds of the bonds, a considerable portion of which were to be given to Bullis and Barse.

The complaint specifically charges: That Bullis and Barse falsely and fraudulently pretended and represented to the said firm of I. B. Newcombe & Company that said tract of 30,000 acres to be conveyed was free and clear from all encumbrances; that all of said land was contiguous or adjacent to the line of said railroad as the same was then constructed or surveyed or projected, and the said land was covered by a large quantity of merchantable timber, capable of yielding and producing 70 tons of freight in timber, lumber, and bark for each acre of land, for transportation over said railroad. It is further alleged that, in fulfillment of said agreements, the *defendant rail- [609] road corporation, on the 1st day of February, 1890, executed its first mortgage deed of trust to said trust company, conveying to it said railroad properties and franchises, and providing for an issue of bonds limited to $500,000, to be secured by said properties and the 46,000 acres of timber to be conveyed by said Bullis and Barse to said trustee. That the defendants Bullis and Barse caused the said Bullis and Sarah E., his wife, to join with said railroad company in said mortgage, and that by said mortgage they assumed to convey to said trustee land contiguous to the line of said railroad, and free from encumbrances, and covered by a quantity of merchantable timber, aggregating 30,954.10 acres, and which, by the terms of said agreements, was to be a condition precedent to the issue of $300,000 of said bonds, to be used in building and completion of said 46 miles of said railroad; that, in reliance upon the conveyance of said lands, bonds to the amount of $300,000 were issued and were sold by Newcombe & Company, ten of which were purchased by the plaintiff in the action; that all the proceeds of the said bonds have been used in the construction of said lines and in the payment of prior liens upon the property and the constituent lines, and that the defendant railroad company, which is the consolidated company, is wholly without funds, and that the extension thereof is essential to enable it to obtain money to meet its liabilities; that said Bullis and Barse refused to convey to said trustees the remaining 16,000 acres of such land and to provide for the building of the balance of said railroad, whereby the construction company is unable to proceed with its work of completing the same.

[610] The complaint further alleges that said 30,954.10 acres of land, conveyed by Bullis and his wife, were not free from encumbrances; that the same at the time were subject to prior liens aggregating $159,000, besides interest; that $144,776.07 of said indebtedness still remain unsatisfied; that said land was not covered with merchantable timber, but was waste land, from which the salable timber had been removed, *and that a large portion of said land was not adjacent to the line of said railroad, and the timber thereon not accessible to be transported thereon; that a large portion of the land so assumed to be conveyed was not owned by either of the said defendants, and was not conveyed at all by said deed. All of which facts the said Bullis and Barse well knew at the time they made said pretended conveyance, and said conveyance is in reality false and fraudulent; that by reason of the fraud and failure of said Bullis and Barse to convey said land free of liens a great fraud has been committed by them which will cause irreparable injury to the bondholders, including the plaintiff, unless the performance of the said agreements and the conveyance of 30,000 acres of unencumbered timber land to said trustee are specifically decreed.

The prayer of the complaint is—

“Wherefore, plaintiff demands judgment that immediate specific performance by the said defendants Bullis and Barse and said defendant railroad company of their said agreements to convey unto the trustee of said defendant railroad company’s mortgage, and place under the lien of said instrument, 30,000 acres of timber land contiguous or tributary to the line of railroad of said railroad company, as in said agreements stated, free of all encumbrance of whatsoever nature prior to the said mortgage above mentioned; or that said defendants pay to said trustee, for the security of said bondholders, such a sum of money as the court shall ascertain to be equivalent to the value of said lands and real estate, conveyed as aforesaid, which are not in conformity with the terms of said several agreements, and said bonds, and the mortgage, or deed of trust, securing the same; and in addition thereto 16,000 acres of like timber land, in all respects similarly situated, and free from encumbrance, as security to authorize the issue of $200,000 of bonds in said agreements specified, and set apart for the construction of the 24 miles of railroad of said company additional to the 46 miles above mentioned.”

*And for injunction and general relief. [611]

The case was tried at special term of the New York supreme court. That court dismissed the complaint, holding that, as Bullis and Barse did not own the lands, specific performance could not be decreed, and the case could not be held for the assessment of damages. This judgment was reversed by the general term. 80 Hun, 570, 30 N. Y. Supp. 588. Upon appeal taken by the Allegheny & Kinzua Railroad Company, one of the defendants, this judgment in general term was affirmed by the court of appeals of New York. 151 N. Y. 372, 45 N. E. 873. Bullis and Barse, after the reversal at general term, went to trial at special term, and, upon the allegations of fraud, findings were made, among others: That Bullis and Barse pretended and represented to the said firm of Newcombe & Company that the 30,000 acres of land were timbered, free and clear of all encumbrances, and contiguous and adjacent to the line of the defendant railroad company, as the same was then constructed and projected, and that said land was covered by a large quantity of merchantable timber, which would actually provide said railroad company with at least 70 tons to the acre, for conveyance over said railroad at rates from 25 to 50 cents per ton, in addition to the percentage accruing to said defendant railroad company from divisions of other lines. That said agreements were entered into at the request of Bullis and Barse; that engineers were sent from New York to inspect the timber on the land to be conveyed; they were escorted through certain timber lands by said Bullis, and these lands were heavily timbered, and said Bullis stated that said lands were to be placed under the mortgage to the trustee, and a report in accordance with this statement was made by the engineers, and upon this report said Newcombe & Company embarked in the enterprise, and entered into said scheme of consolidation and extension. That the lands so defined and pointed out were worth from $18 to $20 an acre. That Bullis and Barse had stated to Newcombe & Company that the mortgage was to be a first lien, the lands to be well timbered, *and contiguous and tributary to said line of railroad; that said trust mortgage was approved and accepted in the belief that said representations were true in fact, and that Bullis and Barse were, in good faith, performing their said covenants. [612]

The court further found that the plaintiff was, in fact, deceived by said statements and representations; that said statements and representations were false; that said agreement was, in fact, fraudulently made with respect to the lands agreed to be conveyed by Bullis and Barse; that a great part of the lands included in the deed was not the property of Bullis, and the value of that owned by him, and not timbered, was $13,350, while that apparently covered by the deed, but not owned by him, was worth $175,502.77, and a considerable part of that included in the conveyance was encumbered; that the statements of Bullis and Barse with respect to said timber lands were false and fraudulent, and made with intent to deceive.

As a conclusion of law, the court decided that it had jurisdiction to proceed in the cause by reason of the fraud practised by the defendants Bullis and Barse in the premises, and because of the fact that the plaintiff had been deceived by the fraudulent statements and misrepresentations of the defendants. This decision was affirmed. O'Beirne v. Bullis, 2 App. Div. 545, 38 N. Y. Supp. 4. Upon appeal to the court of appeals of New York this judgment was affirmed. 158 N. Y. 466, 53 N. E. 211.

It appearing that Bullis and Barse were unable to specifically perform the original agreement, but that they were liable for false representations, judgment was rendered against them in favor of the Central Trust Company, representing the bondholders, in the sum of $341,745.65, and for the plaintiff in the sum of $3,586.40.

Mr. Adelbert Moot argued the cause, and, with Mr. Charles S. Cary, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

In the litigation resulting in the judgment the New York courts clearly apprehended and stated, in substance, that the case was one brought for the specific performance of contracts.

Wiechers v. Central Trust Co. 80 Hun, 576, 30 N. Y. Supp. 595; O'Beirne v. Allegheny & K. R. Co. 151 N. Y. 383, 45 N. E. 873, 2 App. Div. 548, 38 N. Y. Supp. 4, 158 N. Y. 469, 53 N. E. 211.

It would be extraordinary if the successful counsel on those appeals could now step into the shoes of defeated counsel, and get the courts to face about and now determine that the action was always an action for fraud or misappropriation of money, wherein a jury trial is a matter of right, no matter how many equitable causes of action are added to it in the complaint.

Davis v. Morris, 36 N. Y. 569; Davison v. Jersey Co. 71 N. Y. 333; Wheelock v. Lee, 74 N. Y. 495.

This case is within the decision in Burnham v. Pidcock, 58 App. Div. 273, 68 N. Y. Supp. 1007. See also Hargadine-McKittrick 195 U. S.

Dry Goods Co. v. Hudson, 111 Fed. 361, 58 C. C. A. 596, 122 Fed. 232; Re Rhutassel, 96 Fed. 597; Collins v. McWalters, 35 Misc. 650, 72 N. Y. Supp. 203.

The New York courts erred in overlooking the broad distinction between actions ex delicto and actions ex contractu.

Ryxbie v. Wood, 24 N. Y. 607; Ledwich v. McKim, 53 N. Y. 307; Scgelken v. Meyer, 94 N. Y. 473; Brackett v. Griswold, 112 N. Y. 454, 20 N. E. 376; Lorillard v. Clyde, 99 N. Y. 196, 1 N. E. 614; Gould v. Cayuga County Nat. Bank, 86 N. Y. 75.

Having elected to bring an action in equity for equitable relief,—in other words, an action ex contractu,—instead of an action at law for damages and for fraud,—in other words, an action ex delicto,—the election so made fixes the character of the action brought by plaintiff, and amounts to a waiver of any claim to a judgment for fraud.

Madge v. Puig, 71 N. Y. 608; Nefitel v. Lightstone, 77 N. Y. 96; Goodwin v. Griffiths, 88 N. Y. 638; Rothschild v. Mack, 115 N. Y. 1, 21 N. E. 726; People v. Wood, 121 N. Y. 522, 24 N. E. 952; Terry v. Munger, 121 N. Y. 161, 8 L. R. A. 216, 18 Am. St. Rep. 803, 24 N. E. 272; Missouri Sav. & Loan Co. v. Rice, 28 C. C. A. 305, 55 U. S. App. 205, 84 Fed. 131; Slaughter v. La Compagnie Francaises Des Cables Telegraphiques, 57 C. C. A. 19, 119 Fed. 588.

Fraud in the subsequent transactions of the parties does not vitiate an innocent contract.

Chesterman v. Gardner, 5 Johns. Ch. 29, 9 Am. Dec. 265; Oatley v. Lewin, 47 Barb. 18.

Representations as to future events cannot be a constituent of fraud in fact.

Francis v. New York Elev. R. Co. 17 Abb. N. C. 1; Sparman v. Keim, 83 N. Y. 245.

If the contract is fair and honest when made, although the debtor subsequently may be guilty of fraudulent conduct in respect of it, yet such conduct does not cut off the benefit of the discharge.

Brown v. Broach, 52 Miss. 536.

This case is controlled in principle by Stitt v. Little, 63 N. Y. 427.

Recent cases observe the distinction between actions ex contractu and ex delicto. Breach of promise, with seduction added, does not result in a judgment that cannot be discharged, because the basis of the action is the breach of the contract to marry.

Disler v. McCauley, 66 App. Div. 42, 73 N. Y. Supp. 270.

But an action for criminal conversation, or for seduction alone, will result in a judgment that is not discharged by bankruptcy.

Colwell v. Tinker, 169 N. Y. 531, 58 L.

R. A. 765, 98 Am. St. Rep. 587, 62 N. E. 668.

The parties opposing the discharge of Bullis elected to waive the alleged fraud and bring an action in equity for the performance of the contracts. They thus rested their action on contract. Without the contracts they had no cause of action. With the contracts out, they were under no obligation to put up land, or money in the place of land. With the contracts in, the real question was, Had they been fully performed? The nonperformance in part gave rise to the right to enforce the part not performed. The judgment is, Perform the contracts so far as they are not performed.

Kauffman v. Raeder, 54 L. R. A. 247, 47 C. C. A. 278, 108 Fed. 171.

Even if there were fraud, bringing an action in equity on contract, express or implied, for equitable relief, waives the fraud and results in a simple action on contract.

Rothschild v. Mack, 115 N. Y. 1, 21 N. E. 726.

Mr. Frank Sullivan Smith argued the cause, and, with Mr. Adrian H. Joline, filed a brief for defendant in error:

"Fraud," in the act of Congress defining the debts from which a bankrupt is not relieved by a discharge in bankruptcy, means positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, as does embezzlement, and not implied fraud, or fraud in law, which may exist without the imputation of bad faith or immorality.

Neal v. Clark (Neal v. Seruggs) 95 U. S. 704, 709, 24 L. ed. 586, 587; Wolf v. Stix, 99 U. S. 1, 7, 25 L. ed. 309, 312; Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 676, 682, 28 L. ed. 565, 568, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576; Strang v. Bradner, 114 U. S. 555, 559, 29 L. ed. 249, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1038; Noble v. Hammond, 129 U. S. 65, 67, 32 L. ed. 621, 622, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235; Upshur v. Briscoe, 138 U. S. 365, 34 L. ed. 931, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313. See also Brandenburg, Bankr. § 434; Collier, Bankr. 3d ed. 681.

Applying the test which this court has established through the opinion of Mr. Justice Bradley, in Hennequin v. Clews, 111 U. S. 681, 28 L. ed. 567, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 576, to the fraud of the plaintiff in error, the facts meet every requirement of that test, and are convincing that the fraud referred to means positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, and not implied fraud, or fraud in law, which may exist without the imputation of bad faith or immorality.

Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 44 L. ed. 723, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623.

If this court will not rest upon the findings of the state courts as to the existence and nature of the fraud for which the judgment against the plaintiff in error was obtained, it will determine the same by the record upon which the judgment is based.

Brandenburg, Bankr. § 432; Collier, Bankr. p. 197.

A debt created by fraud is not discharged in bankruptcy, even though reduced to a simple judgment for money, in which there is no mention of fraud. If the original action was based upon fraud, the fraud is not merged in the judgment.

Warner v. Cronkhite, 6 Biss. 453, 13 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 52, Fed. Cas. No. 17,180.

Wherever the debt, no matter whether it be in the shape of a judgment or in any other form, was created by fraud, had its root and origin in fraud, it is not to be discharged.

Re Patterson, 2 Ben. 155, 1 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 307, Fed. Cas. No. 10,817.

There is no distinction between a fraud proved in a court of law, and a fraud proved in equity.

Re Alsberg, 16 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 116, Fed. Cas. No. 261.

If the bankrupt is not entitled to be protected from arrest on an execution upon the judgment, he is not entitled to a discharge in bankruptcy.

Re Marcus, 45 C. C. A. 115, 105 Fed. 907.

The debt was created by means of, and the judgment was obtained for, a fraud involving moral turpitude and intentional wrong, and the plaintiff in error is not entitled to a discharge from the judgment.

Ames v. Moir, 138 U. S. 306, 34 L. ed. 951, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 311; Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 44 L. ed. 723, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623; Hoyt v. Godfrey, 88 N. Y. 669; Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. v. Machado, 16 Abb. Pr. 451; People ex rel. Caldwell v. Kelly, 35 Barb. 444; Brandenburg, Bankr. § 434; Re Levensohn, 99 Fed. 73; Brackett v. Griswold, 112 N. Y. 454, 20 N. E. 376.

Judgments in actions for fraud, or obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, are excepted from the operation of a discharge; and the cause of action does not become merged in a judgment thereon, so as to preclude the plaintiff from showing that the original debt was created in fraud.

Brandenburg, Bankr. 2d ed. p. 275; Packer v. Whittier, 33 C. C. 658, 63 U. S. App. 37, 91 Fed. 511; Re Pettis, 2 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 44, Fed. Cas. No. 11,046; Warner v. Cronkhite, 6 Biss. 453, Fed. Cas. No. 17,180.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This action involves the construction of § 17 of the bankrupt act of 1898 (30 Stat.

at L. 550, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3428), as it stood prior to the amendment of February 5, 1903 [32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487]. So far as it pertains to this case, this section is as follows:

"A discharge in bankruptcy shall release a bankrupt from all of his provable debts except such as . . . (2) are judgments in actions for frauds, or obtaining property by false pretenses or false representations, or for wilful and malicious injuries to the person or property of another, . . . (4) were created by his fraud, embezzlement, misappropriation, or defalcation while acting as an officer or in a fiduciary capacity."

In Crawford v. Burke, decided at this term, 195 U. S. 176, ante, 147, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 9, this court held that subd. 4 of this act was limited to frauds, embezzlements, misappropriations, or defalcations while acting in an official character, or in a fiduciary capacity, and did not apply to other debts or obligations fraudulently created. The question, therefore, presented in this case, is, Was the judgment against Bullis and Barse, as finally reached in the New York courts, one in "an action for fraud" within the meaning of the act?

[616] *It is distinctly charged in the complaint, and found in the judgment, that the agreement was fraudulently made; that Bullis and Barse falsely and fraudulently pretended that the large tract of timber land which they were to put under the mortgage for the security of the bondholders was free from all encumbrances; that it was near the line of the projected railroads, and covered by a large quantity of merchantable timber; when, in fact, as Bullis and Barse well knew, the 30,000 acres of timber land actually mortgaged was not free from encumbrances, but was subject to $159,000 and interest of prior encumbrances, and that it was waste land from which the timber had been removed; that the lands were not adjacent to the lines of the railroads; that the timber was not accessible, and that a large portion of the land to be conveyed was not owned by either of the defendants; that all of these facts were well known to Bullis and Barse when they made the false and fraudulent representations aforesaid, and were relied upon to the prejudice of the bondholders. The New York courts found that the agents of the New York brokers attempting to negotiate the bonds, when they went to see the lands, were shown those not included in the mortgage, and which were falsely and fraudulently pointed out as being the intended lands. Under these allegations and proofs the New York courts have seen fit to render a money judgment, not for specific performance, as upon contract, but for the frauds charged against the defendants.

As was said of the action and the relief granted, in the opinion of the appellate division (68 App. Div. 508, 73 N. Y. Supp. 1047, Affirmed in 171 N. Y. 689, 64 N. E. 1119): "The action for specific performance, in the strictest sense thereof, was founded upon the actual, positive fraud of the defendants Bullis and Barse. They had in fact, in pretended compliance with their agreements, conveyed to the designated trustee 30,000 acres of land. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants fraudulently included in this conveyance lands not owned by the grantors, and the bulk of the tract was not timber land, was encumbered, and was *not adjacent to the railroad lines de-[617] scribed. . . . The gist, the intrinsic ingredient of the action, was consequently the fraudulent scheme—the false representations—of these defendants."

Considerable argument was made by the learned counsel for the plaintiff in error as to the essential allegations of a pleading where relief for fraud is sought. It is said that there is no averment in the complaint in this case of knowledge or intent to deceive upon the part of the plaintiff in error; but it is averred that the representations were falsely and fraudulently made, with the intent to further the pecuniary interest of the plaintiff in error, and were known to be false when made. Such allegations have frequently been held the equivalent of averments of specific intent. Indeed, it is difficult to perceive how a statement falsely and fraudulently made can be otherwise than intended to deceive. A statement fraudulently made, with knowledge of its falsity, must necessarily be intended to deceive. Bank of Montreal v. Thayer, 2 McCrary, 1, 7 Fed. 625, and cases cited in the opinion. It is argued that Bullis, one of the defendants, regarding the case as one for fraud, demanded a jury trial, which was denied him, and that this shows the character of the case. But, as appears in the opinion of the New York court of appeals (158 N. Y. 466-468, 53 N. E. 211), when the demand for a jury trial was made the defendants had not set up their inability to perform the contract, but had taken issue upon the allegations of fraud and misrepresentation. In this attitude of the case it was held that a jury trial was properly denied.

But it is unnecessary to further consider questions of practice peculiar to the jurisdiction where the judgment was rendered.

Whether the complaint sufficiently charged fraud to warrant the judgment given is not a Federal question. Forsyth v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 180, 44 L. ed. 723, 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623. The question for this court is whether the judgment rendered by the New York court is in an action for fraud. If so, it is excepted from the effect of a discharge in bankruptcy.

[618] *We think an inspection of the record as well as the interpretation put upon the pleadings and judgment by the courts of New York in the various trials and proceedings had show that the relief was granted upon the ground of fraud. When the case was first before the New York court of appeals, Judge Gray, delivering the opinion of that court, said:

"The theory of the complaint and the tendency of the proof upon the trial were that a fraudulent scheme was devised by Bullis and Barse, having for its object the consolidation of certain railroad properties owned and controlled by them, and the issuance of a large number of bonds by the consolidated company, which should be placed with the public at par through the coöperation of Newcombe & Company, whose assistance to the scheme, in the negotiation of the bonds, should be gained by representations and agreements of such a nature, as to the timber tracts to be furnished as additional security under the mortgage, that the bonds would appear to be attractive and salable securities. We are not called upon, at the present time, to pass upon the liability of Bullis and Barse for the parts they have played in the development and consummation of this scheme, inasmuch as they have gone back to a new trial; but, on the face of this record, that the evidence amply warranted the findings by the trial court is not to be denied; and it would have justified the granting of relief to the plaintiff had the case been in a shape to make that possible." 151 N. Y. 372-384, 45 N. E. 873-876.

When the case was sent back for trial, after it had been held that it might be retained for the assessment of damages, in its conclusions of law the supreme court at special term decided that it "had jurisdiction to proceed in the cause by reason of the fraud practised by the defendants Bullis and Barse in the premises." This manner of exercising jurisdiction by the lower court was expressly affirmed by the supreme court at general term (2 App. Div. 545, 38 N. Y. Supp. 4), and finally by the court of appeals of New York (158 N. Y. 466, 53 N. E. 211). In the latter case the court said:

[619] *"The theory upon which the decision proceeded was that they [Bullis and Barse] devised a fraudulent scheme for the consolidation of certain railroads owned and controlled by them, issued bonds upon false representations as to the timber lands to be furnished as added security under the mortgage to make the bonds secure and salable; that upon those facts the court would have been justified in granting relief to the plaintiff against them, and that the corporation, having been the instrumentality employed by them, was also liable. Thus it was that the liability of the appellants was involved in the decision. We adhere to the principle of our decision upon that appeal."

It is thus apparent that the courts of New York, in conformity to their own practice, have rendered a judgment against Bullis and Barse by reason of the fraudulent scheme found, and because of the fraudulent representations made to and relied upon by the parties to whom the relief was granted. The Federal question is, Is such a judgment entitled to be discharged in bankruptcy? Under the bankrupt law of 1867 it was provided: "No debt created by the fraud or embezzlement of the bankrupt, or by his defalcation as a public officer, or while acting in any fiduciary character, shall be discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy; but the debt may be proved, and the dividend thereon shall be a payment on account of such debt." Rev. Stat. § 5117.

In the law of 1898, for reasons which have been the subject of much diversity of view in the courts, but which were sufficient in the judgment of Congress in passing the act to necessitate a change, it is provided, instead of exempting debts created by fraud from the operation of the discharge, that only judgments in actions for fraud shall be exempted. Under this act (as it was before the passage of the act of February 5, 1903) claims grounded in fraud will not be exempted unless reduced to judgment; but the essential character of the fraud which is here meant has not been changed. By the decisions of this court, which are collected in the *opinion delivered in Forsyth [620] v. Vehmeyer, 177 U. S. 177, 180, 44 L. ed. 723, 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 623, it was held, reviewing the former cases in this court, that, under the act of 1867, the fraud referred to meant positive fraud, or fraud in fact, involving moral turpitude or intentional wrong, and not implied fraud, which may exist without an imputation of bad faith. "Such a construction of the statute," it was said in Neal v. Clark, 95 U. S. 704, 709, 24 L. ed. 586, 587, "is consonant with equity, and consistent with the object and intention of Congress in enacting a general law by which the honest citizen may be relieved from the burden of hopeless insolvency. A different construction would be inconsistent with the liberal spirit which pervades the entire bankrupt system." This language, we think, equally applies to the present case. The difference is that, under the act of 1898, claims for fraud prosecuted to judgment will not be exempted. The reason for this change, as suggested by Mr. Justice Brown, in delivering the opinion in Crawford v. Burke, may be that Congress did not intend to offer any inducement to change unliquidated claims into actions for fraud, and therefore limited the exception from the operation of the discharge to such cases only as had been litigated and reduced to actual judgment. When such is the case we think a correct interpretation of the law does not require a close examination into the form of the action to determine whether technically it is one ex delicto or otherwise, but the real question is, Was the relief granted in the judgment based upon actual, 195 U. S.

as distinguished from constructive, fraud of the bankrupt? If the judgment is thus founded, whatever the form of the action, it is the intent and purpose of the law that the bankrupt shall not be discharged from it, but shall still rest under its obligation, so far as the bankrupt law is concerned.

As thus interpreted, we think there can be no question that the judgment rendered in this case was based upon the fraud of Bullis and Barse. The facts charged and found showed false and fraudulent representations as to the character of the property which was to be the security of those who should *purchase the bonds, and resulted[621] in depriving them wrongfully of valuable rights. These findings were held sufficient in the state tribunals to warrant relief on the ground of fraud, and the judgment in this case is, in our opinion, in an action for fraud within the meaning of the bankrupt law.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of New York is, therefore, affirmed.

MEMORANDA

OF

CASES DISPOSED OF WITHOUT OPINIONS.

[623]*RUFUS BINYON, Plaintiff in Error, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 176.]

In Error to the United States Court of Appeals for the Indian Territory.

See same case below (Ind. Terr.) 76 S. W. 265.

Mr. W. H. Green for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General and Assistant Attorney General Purdy for defendant in error.

October 17, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Brown v. United States, 171 U. S. 631, 43 L. ed. 312, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 56; Cross v. United States, 145 U. S. 571, 36 L. ed. 821, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 842.

LEE LOOK, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA. [No. 333.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of California.

See same case below, 143 Cal. 216, 76 Pac. 1028.

Messrs. Henry C. McPike and A. H. Jarman for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. N. S. Webb and Jas. H. Campbell for defendant in error.

October 17, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, but without costs.

PEDRO PEREA et al., Administrators, etc., Appellants, v. GUADALUPE PEREA DE HARRISON et al. [No. 45.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of New Mexico.

See same case below (N. M.) 70 Pac. 558.

Mr. T. B. Catron for appellants.

Mr. W. B. Childers for appellees.

October 24, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Mcagher v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 145 U. S. 608, 36 L. ed. 834, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Osborne, 146 U. S. 354, 36 L. ed. 1002, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49.

195 U. S.

*NATHAN C. JESSUP, Plaintiff in Error, v. TRUSTEES OF THE FREEHOLDERS AND COMMONALTY OF THE TOWN OF SOUTHAMPTON. [No. 25.]

In error to the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

See same case below in Court of Appeals, 173 N. Y. 84, 65 N. E. 949, and in Appellate Division, 64 App. Div. 525, 72 N. Y. Supp. 312, 780.

Mr. Charles M. Stafford for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Thomas Young for defendants in error.

October 31, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Cummings v. Chicago, 188 U. S. 410, 47 L. ed. 525, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 472; Montgomery v. Portland, 190 U. S. 89, 47 L. ed. 965, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735. See Southampton v. Jessup, 162 N. Y. 122, 56 N. E. 538; Southampton v. Jessup, 173 N. Y. 84, 65 N. E. 949; People ex rel. Howell v. Jessup, 160 N. Y. 249, 54 N. E. 682.

MINNIE KILPATRICK, Plaintiff in Error, v. CHOCTAW, OKLAHOMA, & GULF RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 30.]

In Error to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 57 C. C. A. 255, 121 Fed. 11.

Mr. W. O. Davis for plaintiff in error.

Mr. J. W. McLoud for defendant in error.

October 31, 1904. Judgment affirmed, with costs, on the authority of Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 152 U. S. 145, 38 L. ed. 391, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 530, and case remanded to the United States court for the central district of the Indian Territory.

SIEGMUND LUBIN, Appellant, v. THOMAS A. EDISON. [No. 66.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 58 C. C. A. 604, 122 Fed. 240.

Mr. Charles N. Butler for appellant.

Mr. Melville Church for appellee.

November 7, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of McLish v. Roff, 141 U. S. 661, 35 L. ed. 893, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchoff, 160 U. S. 374, 40 L. ed. 461, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 318.

SEATTLE DOCK COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. SEATTLE & LAKE WASHINGTON WATERWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 390]; CAN-NEL COAL COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. SEATTLE & LAKE WASHINGTON WATERWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 391].

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington.

See same case below, 35 Wash. 503, 77 Pac. 845.

[625] Messrs. R. A. Ballinger, J. T. Ronald, and M. A. Ballinger *for plaintiffs in error.

Messrs. Julius F. Hale and Eugene Scmple for defendants in error.

October 31, 1904. Judgments affirmed, with costs. New Orleans v. New Orleans Waterworks Co. 142 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 943, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 142; Yesler v. Washington Harbor Line, 146 U. S. 646, 36 L. ed. 1119, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 190; Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548; Allen v. Forrest, 8 Wash. 700, 24 L. R. A. 606, 36 Pac. 971; Mississippi Valley Trust Co. v. Hafins, 20 Wash. 272, 55 Pac. 54; and Seattle & L. W. Waterway Co. v. Seattle Dock Co. 35 Wash. 503, 77 Pac. 845.

YAZOO & MISSISSIPPI VALLEY RAILROAD COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. HENRY TRUMAN. [No. 57.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of Franklin County, State of Mississippi.

Messrs. J. M. Dickinson and Edward Mayes for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendant in error.

November 14, 1904. Judgment reversed, with costs, on the authority of Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, and cause remanded for further proceedings.

WILLIAM M. MEFFERT, Plaintiff in Error, v. E. B. PACKER et al., as THE STATE BOARD OF MEDICAL REGISTRATION AND EXAMINATION. [No. 64.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Kansas.

See same case below, 66 Kan. 710, 72 Pac. 247.

Mr. J. Jay Buck for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. C. C. Coleman and Glad Hamilton for defendants in error.

November 14, 1904. Judgment affirmed, with costs. Hawker v. New York, 170 U. S. 189, 42 L. ed. 1002, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Dent v. West Virginia, 129 U. S. 114, 32 L. ed. 623, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 231; Reetz v. Michigan, 188 U. S. 505, 47 L. ed. 563, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390; Gray v. Connecticut, 159 U. S. 74, 40 L. ed. 80, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 985; Case below, 66 Kan. 710, 72 Pac. 247.

J. W. TONEY et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. *MAYOR & CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MACON. [No. 214.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia.

See same case below, 119 Ga. 83, 46 S. E. 80.

Mr. John Randolph Cooper for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Minter Wimberly for defendants in error.

December 5, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of Meagher v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. 145 U. S. 608, 611, 36 L. ed. 834, 835, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Haseltine v. Central Nat. Bank, 183 U. S. 130, 46 L. ed. 117, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 49, and cases cited. See Charleston & W. C. R. Co. v. Miller, 115 Ga. 92, 41 S. E. 252; Augusta R. Co. v. Andrews, 92 Ga. 706, 19 S. E. 713.

CHARLES F. DODGE, Appellant, v. GEORGE ELLIS & JOHN J. HERLIHY. [No. 219.]

Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Texas.

Messrs. Wayne MacVeagh, Frederic D. McKenney, and J. Spalding Flannery for appellant.

Messrs. Howard S. Gans and Henry G. Gray for appellees.

December 5, 1904. Final order affirmed, with costs. Ex parte Reggel, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148; Roberts v. Reilly, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291; Kohl v. Lehlback, 160 U. S. 293, 40 L. ed. 432, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 304; Hyatt v. New York, 188 U. S. 691, 47 L. ed. 657, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 456.

UNITED STATES ex rel. FRANK B. EDWARDS, Lieutenant, etc., Plaintiff in error, v. WILLIAM H. TAFT, Secretary of War, et al. [No. 301.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

See same case below, 22 App. D. C. 419.

Messrs. Henry A. Craig and J. W. Catharine for plaintiff in error.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for defendants in error.

December 5, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction, on the authority of South Carolina v. Seymour (United States ex rel. South Carolina v. Seymour) 153 U. S. 353, 38 L. ed. 742, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 871; United States v. Lynch, 137 U. S. 280, 34 L. ed. 700, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 114; United States ex rel. Phillips v. Ware, 189 U. S. 507, 47 L. ed. 922, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 852.

[627]*ST. LOUIS EXPANDED METAL FIREPROOFING COMPANY, Plaintiff in Error, v. STANDARD FIREPROOFING COMPANY. [No. 179.]
In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Missouri.

See same case below, 177 Mo. 559, 76 S. W. 1008.

Mr. James A. Carr for plaintiff in error.
Messrs. Frank L. Shepard and Hervey S. Knight for defendant in error.

December 12, 1904. Dismissed for the want of jurisdiction. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 188 U. S. 291, 47 L. ed. 480, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375; Turner v. Richardson, 180 U. S. 87, 45 L. ed. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Home for Incurables v. New York, 187 U. S. 155, 47 L. ed. 117, 63 L. R. A. 329, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 84; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137.

COPPER KING OF ARIZONA, Appellant, v. PETER JOHNSON et al. [No. 356.]

Appeal from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

See same case below (Ariz.) 76 Pac. 594.

Mr. Wm. C. Prentiss for appellant.

Mr. Allen R. English for appellees.

December 12, 1904. Judgment affirmed, with costs. Rio Grande Irrig. & Colonization Co. v. Gildersleeve, 174 U. S. 603, 609, 43 L. ed. 1103, 1105, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761; Sparrow v. Strong, 4 Wall. 584, 18 L. ed. 309; Kerr v. Clappitt, 95 U. S. 188, 24 L. ed. 493; Ariz. Rev. Stat. (1901), §§ 1214, 1389, 1493, 4104.

TACOMA MILL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. BLACK HILLS & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 337.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney, James H. Ashton, and E. C. Hughes for petitioner.

Mr. James B. Howe for respondents.

October 17, 1904. Granted.

[628]*THOMAS F. CURLEY et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 236.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 369, 130 Fed. 1.

Mr. Heman W. Chaplin for petitioners.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

195 U. S.

BETTENDORF PATENTS COMPANY, Petitioner, v. J. R. LITTLE METAL WHEEL COMPANY. [No. 253.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 59 C. C. A. 473, 123 Fed. 433.

Mr. James S. Harlan for petitioner.

Mr. John R. Bennett for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

WILLIAM BURRILL et al., Petitioners, v. GEORGE W. CROSSMAN et al. [No. 258.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 130 Fed. 763.

Mr. Lawrence Kneeland for petitioners.

Mr. Everett P. Wheeler for respondents.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CHARLES J. SWAN. [No. 268.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 67 L. R. A. 153, 63 C. C. A. 550, 129 Fed. 318.

Messrs. H. D. Estabrook and H. N. Low for petitioner.

Mr. Henry Calver for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

JOHN T. ANDREWS, Petitioner, v. CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 276.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 399, 130 Fed. 65.

Mr. A. C. Parker for petitioner.

Mr. James C. Davis for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

WILLIAM H. FLANNERY et al., Petitioners, v. *ISAAC B. LEWIS. [No. 277.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 582, 130 Fed. 336.

Messrs. James J. Macklin, La Roy S. Gove, and Robert D. Benedict for petitioners.

Mr. Herbert Green for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

ÆTNA INSURANCE COMPANY, Petitioner, v. ISAAC B. LEWIS. [No. 278.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 210, 129 Fed. 1006.

Mr. La Roy S. Gove for petitioner.

Mr. Herbert Green for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

MUNICH ASSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED, et al., Petitioners, v. DODWELL & COMPANY, LIMITED. [No. 284.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 63 C. C. A. 152, 128 Fed. 410.

Mr. Milton Andros for petitioners.

Messrs. Charles Page and E. J. McCutchen for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

PORTLAND FLOURING MILLS COMPANY, Petitioner, v. BRITISH & FOREIGN MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY, LIMITED. [No. 310.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 344, 130 Fed. 860.

Messrs. C. E. S. Wood, Geo. H. Williams, A. B. Browne, and Thos. D. Rambaut for petitioner.

Messrs. Zera Snow and Wallace M. McCamant for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

BUNKER HILL & SULLIVAN MINING & CONCENTRATING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CHARLES T. JONES. [No. 318.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 130 Fed. 813.

Mr. Myron A. Folsom for petitioner.

Messrs. Thomas O'Day and F. C. Robertson for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

[630] BRENNAN & Co. SOUTHWESTERN AGRICULTURAL WORKS et al., Petitioners, v. DOWAGIAC MANUFACTURING COMPANY.* [No. 372.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 62 C. C. A. 257, 127 Fed. 143.

Messrs. A. E. Willson and Border Bowman for petitioners.

Mr. Fred L. Chappell for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

MINNESOTA MOLINE PLOW COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. DOWAGIAC MANUFACTURING COMPANY. [No. 377.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 61 C. C. A. 352, 126 Fed. 746.

Mr. Ephraim Banning and Thos. A. Banning for petitioners.

Mr. Fred L. Chappell for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

M. S. BUCKINGHAM, Trustee, et al., Petitioners, v. FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF CHICAGO et al. [No. 379.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 192.

Mr. Wm. H. Carroll for petitioners.

Mr. Thomas B. Turley for respondents.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

OHIO BAKING COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY. [No. 382.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 62 C. C. A. 116, 127 Fed. 116.

Messrs. Ephraim Banning and Thos. A. Banning for petitioners.

Messrs. Charles K. Offield and Earl D. Babst for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

BUFFALO TIN CAN COMPANY, Petitioner, v. E. W. BLISS COMPANY. [No. 385.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 51.

Mr. Herbert P. Bissell for petitioner.

Mr. Thomas Thacher for respondent.

October 17, 1904. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. R. F. DOWNING & Co.* [No. 380.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

The Attorney General, Solicitor General Hoyt, and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds for petitioner.

Mr. Albert Comstock for respondent.

October 24, 1904. Granted.

F. AUGUSTUS HEINZE et al., Petitioners, v. BUTTE & BOSTON CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY. [No. 223.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 61 C. C. A. 63, 126 Fed. 1.

Mr. John J. McHatton for petitioners.

Messrs. John A. Garver and James M. Beck for respondent.

October 24, 1904. Denied.

EUREKA COUNTY BANK, Petitioner, v. IDA K. CLARKE. [No. 326.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 571, 130 Fed. 325.

Messrs. J. C. Campbell, Oscar J. Smith, and A. E. Cheney for petitioner.

Mr. Alfred Chartz for respondent.

October 24, 1904. Denied.

MOBILE TRANSPORTATION COMPANY, Petitioner, v. CITY OF MOBILE et al. [No. 373.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 689, 125 Fed. 1003.

Messrs. Frederick G. Bromberg and Eugene H. Lewis for petitioner.

Mr. Harry T. Smith for respondents.

October 24, 1904. Denied.

STUART R. KNOTT et al., Petitioners, v. LOUISVILLE TRUST COMPANY, Receiver. [No. 387.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 130 Fed. 820.

[632] *Messrs. Alex. Pope Humphrey, J. P. Helm, Helm Bruce, and W. D. Hines for petitioners.

Messrs. John L. Dodd, Aaron Kohn, J. C. Dodd, and D. W. Baird for respondent.

October 24, 1904. Denied.

CHESLEY C. MOSES, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 381.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 60 C. C. A. 600, 126 Fed. 58.

Mr. Frederic D. McKenney for petitioner.

The Attorney General, Solicitor General Hoyt, Assistant Attorney General Pradt, and Felix Brannigan for respondent.

October 31, 1904. Denied.

195 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

A. F. KENNEY, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. ALBERT LOUJE. [No. 386.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 63 C. C. A. 584, 128 Fed. 856.

Messrs. Frederic D. McKenney and James M. Ashton for petitioner.

Mr. Albert W. Buddress for respondent.

October 31, 1904. Denied.

PHYLLIS E. DODGE, Claimant, etc., Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 397.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below on first writ of error, 56 L. R. A. 130, 49 C. C. A. 287, 111 Fed. 164, on second writ of error, 65 C. C. A. 603, 131 Fed. 849.

Mr. W. Wickham Smith for petitioner.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

November 7, 1904. Denied.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAMSHIP COMPANY, ETC., Petitioner, v. SARAH GUYON, Administratrix, etc., et al. [No. 399.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 410, 130 Fed. 76.

Messrs. Maxwell Evarts and Charles Page for petitioner.

Mr. Wm. Denman for respondents.

November 7, 1904. Denied.

*THOMAS J. SPARKS, Presiding Judge, etc., [633] et al., Petitioners, v. FRANK C. GUTHRIE. [No. 417.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 427, 131 Fed. 443.

Mr. Henry Burnett for petitioners.

Mr. D. M. Rodman for respondent.

November 14, 1904. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. MORRIS WHITRIDGE et al., etc. [No. 413.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

The Attorney General, Solicitor General Hoyt, and Assistant Attorney General McReynolds for petitioner.

Messrs. Albert Comstock, William R. Sears, and A. B. Browne for respondents.

November 28, 1904. Granted.

FREDERICK H. SHELTON, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN SURETY COMPANY OF NEW YORK. [No. 403.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 131 Fed. 210.

Mr. C. Berkeley Taylor for petitioner.

Mr. H. Gordon McCouch for respondent. November 28, 1904. Denied.

IDEAL STOPPER COMPANY OF BALTIMORE CITY et al., Petitioners, v. CROWN CORK & SEAL COMPANY OF BALTIMORE CITY. [No. 405.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 436, 131 Fed. 244.

Messrs. Philip Mauro and Reeve Lewis for petitioners.

Messrs. Robert H. Parkinson and John C. Rose for respondent.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

STANLEY INSTRUMENT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MANUFACTURING COMPANY. [No. 409.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit.

See same case below, 133 Fed. 167.

Messrs. Charles E. Mitchell, Wm. Hous- [634] ton Kenyon, *and Henry B. Brownell for petitioner.

Messrs. W. K. Richardson and Thos. B. Kerr for respondent.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

ATLANTA, KNOXVILLE, & NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY, Petitioner, v. SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 415.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Charles N. Burch for petitioner.

Messrs. Alex. Pope Humphrey, W. A. Henderson, and L. Jourolmon for respondent.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

GOLDENBERG BROTHERS & Co., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 418.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 442, 130 Fed. 108.

Mr. Thomas H. Clark for petitioners.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

GEORGE W. SAMPLE, Petitioner, v. AMERICAN SODA FOUNTAIN COMPANY et al. [No. 422.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 64 C. C. A. 497, 130 Fed. 145.

Mr. Wm. G. Henderson for petitioner.

Mr. Joshua Pusey for respondents.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

ARMOUR PACKING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. METROPOLITAN WATER COMPANY. [No. 426.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 335, 130 Fed. 851.

Messrs. James Russell Soley and Frank Hagerman for petitioner.

Mr. Joseph Coult for respondent.

November 28, 1904. Denied.

BALTIMORE & OHIO COAL COMPANY, Petitioner, v. *COLONIAL TRUST COMPANY, [635] Trustee, etc., et al. [No. 400.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Mr. Harry B. Arnold for petitioner.

Messrs. Louis Marshall and John H. Doyle for respondents.

December 5, 1904. Denied.

JOSEPH B. BARTRAM et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES [No. 428]; BENJAMIN H. HOWELL et al., Petitioners, v. UNITED STATES [No. 429]; AMERICAN SUGAR REFINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. UNITED STATES [No. 430].

Petition for Writs of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 557, 131 Fed. 833.

Messrs. John E. Parsons and H. B. Closson for petitioners.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for respondent.

December 5, 1904. Denied.

NEW YORK BAKING POWDER COMPANY et al., Petitioners, v. RUMFORD CHEMICAL WORKS. [No. 432.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

See same case below, 134 Fed. 385.

Messrs. Arthur V. Briesen and Paul Bakewell for petitioners.

Mr. Philip Mauro for respondent.

December 5, 1904. Denied.

UNITED STATES, Petitioner, v. GEORGE E. CADARR et al. [No. 438.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

The Attorney General and Solicitor General Hoyt for petitioner.

No one opposing.

December 5, 1904. Granted.

W. J. McCahan SUGAR REFINING COMPANY, Petitioner, v. STEAMSHIP "WILD-CROFT," etc. [No. 441.]

[636] United States *Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit.

Messrs. H. L. Cheyney and John F. Lewis for petitioner.

Mr. J. Parker Kirlin for respondent.

December 5, 1904. Granted.

BLUE MOUNTAIN IRON & STEEL COMPANY OF BALTIMORE CITY, Petitioner, v. FRANK PORTNER et al. [No. 339.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 295, 131 Fed. 57.

Messrs. Henry C. Terry and Abraham Sharp for petitioner.

Messrs. Bernard Carter, J. Kemp Bartlett, and C. Andrade, Jr., for respondents.

December 12, 1904. Denied.

WESTERN TRANSIT COMPANY, Petitioner, v. MINNESOTA STEAMSHIP COMPANY et al. [No. 414.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 129 Fed. 22.

Messrs. Harvey D. Goulder, S. H. Holding, and F. S. Masten for petitioner.

Messrs. James H. Hoyt, John C. Shaw, Martin Carey, Chas. B. Warren, and Wm. B. Cady for respondents.

December 12, 1904. Denied.

EDGAR A. DAVIS et al., Petitioners, v. A. BOOTH & Co. [No. 436.]

Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

See same case below, 65 C. C. A. 269, 131 Fed. 31.

Mr. Fred A. Baker for petitioners.

Messrs. Henry M. Duffield and Charles S. Thornton for respondent.

December 12, 1904. Denied.

195 U. S.

UNITED STATES, Plaintiff in Error, v. S. P. SHOTTER COMPANY. [No. 28.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the *United States for the Southern District of [637] Alabama.

The Attorney General for plaintiff in error.

Mr. John Ridout for defendant in error.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the plaintiff in error.

GIOVANNI ZARCONE, Appellant, v. WILLIAM WILLIAMS, Commissioner of Immigration, etc. [No. 101.]

Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. Alex. Rosenthal for appellant.

The Attorney General for appellee.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt on behalf of counsel for appellant.

WILLIAM L. ELKINS, Appellant, v. CITY OF CHICAGO et al. [Nos. 11, 12.]

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Illinois.

Messrs. Henry Crawford and John S. Miller for appellant.

Mr. John C. Mathis for appellees.

October 11, 1904. Stricken from the docket, per stipulation.

BARBARA WARNER, as Administratrix, etc., Plaintiff in Error, v. CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 161.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Nebraska.

Mr. Wm. D. McHugh for plaintiff in error.

Mr. H. C. Brome for defendants in error.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed, at cost of defendants in error, per stipulation of counsel.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Appellant, v. CITY OF TOLEDO et al. [No. 163.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Messrs. H. D. Estabrook and Jno. W. Warrington for appellant.

Mr. N. G. Denman for appellees.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of *appellant. [638]

WALTER C. PEACOCK, Appellant, v. UNITED STATES. [No. 177.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Mr. Oliver Dibble for appellant.

The Attorney General for appellee.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed, per stipulation.

HOUGHTON E. JAMES et al., Appellants, v. GERMANIA IRON COMPANY [No. 1]; JAMES BELDEN, Appellant, v. MIDWAY COMPANY [No. 2].

Appeals from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

See same case below, 46 C. C. A. 476, 107 Fed. 597.

Messrs. Frank B. Kellogg and C. A. Severance for appellants.

Mr. Walter Ayers for appellees.

October 11, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, on authority of appellants.

WILLIAM A. PAULSEN, Plaintiff in Error, v. PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS. [No. 9.]

In Error to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois.

Mr. S. S. Gregory for plaintiff in error.

No appearance for defendants in error.

October 12, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

FARMERS LOAN & TRUST COMPANY, Trustee, Petitioner, v. LAKE STREET ELEVATED RAILROAD COMPANY. [No. 31.]

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 914.

Mr. I. K. Boyesen for petitioner.

Messrs. Charles H. Aldrich and Clarence A. Knight for respondent.

October 26, 1904. Dismissed with costs, pursuant to the Nineteenth Rule.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appellant, v. NASHVILLE, CHATTANOOGA, & ST. LOUIS RAILWAY COMPANY et al. [No. 46.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

See same case below, 57 C. C. A. 224, 120 Fed. 934.

The Attorney General for appellant.

Mr. Ed. Baxter for appellees.

October 31, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellant.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION, Appellant, v. SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY. [No. 83.]

Appeal from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 800.

The Attorney General for appellant.

Mr. Ed. Baxter for appellee.

October 31, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the appellant.

EDWARD W. ANDERSON et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. BAXTER MORTON. [No. 35.]

In Error to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Mr. West Steever for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. James S. McDonogh for defendant in error.

November 1, 1904. Dismissed, with costs, pursuant to the Tenth Rule.

DOMINGO FELICI et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. GEORGE W. WHITEHEAD. [No. 91.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York.

Mr. Henry M. Ward for plaintiffs in error.

The Attorney General for defendant in error.

December 5, 1904. Dismissed, per stipulation, on motion of Mr. Solicitor General Hoyt for the defendant in error.

SALT RIVER VALLEY CANAL COMPANY, Appellant, v. HENRY E. SLOSSER [No. 447]; MARICOPA CANAL COMPANY, Appellant, v. MARTIN GOULD [No. 448]; GRAND CANAL COMPANY, Appellant, v. TOM BROCKMAN [No. 449].

*Appeals from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona.

Mr. Charles J. Kappler for appellees.

No counsel opposed.

December 5, 1904. Docketed and dismissed, with costs, on motion of Mr. C. J. Kappler for the appellees.

ISAAC HUNSAKER, SR., et al., Plaintiffs in Error, v. TOLTEC RANCH COMPANY. [No. 295.]

In Error to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of Utah.

Mr. Wm. T. S. Curtis for defendant in error.

No one opposing.

June 9, 1904. Docketed and dismissed on motion of Mr. Wm. T. S. Curtis for defendant in error.

CASES

ARGUED AND DECIDED

IN THE

S U P R E M E C O U R T

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

AT

OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

Vol. 196.

REFERENCE TABLE
 OF SUCH CASES
 DECIDED IN U. S. SUPREME COURT,
 OCTOBER TERM, 1904,
 AND REPORTED HEREIN,

VOLUME 196,

 AS ALSO APPEAR IN OFFICIAL REPORTER'S EDITION.

Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
1	Johnson v. Southern P. Co.	363	86-88	Harding v. Illinois	397
2	" "	364	88	" "	398
13	" "	367	89-90	Courtney v. Pradt	398
13-16	" "	368	90-93	" "	399
16-18	" "	369	93	" "	400
18-20	" "	370	93-94	Smalley v. Laugenour	400
20-22	" "	371	94-97	" "	401
23	{ Missouri v. Nebraska		97-98	" "	402
	{ Nebraska v. Missouri	372	99	Comstock v. Eagleton	402
23-26	" "	373	99-100	" "	403
26-27	" "	374	100-102	Scott v. Carew	403
33-34	" "	374	102-104	" "	404
34-36	" "	375	104-105	" "	405
36-38	" "	376	108-109	" "	405
38-39	Keely v. Moore	376	109-112	" "	406
39	" "	377	112-114	" "	407
40-41	" "	378	114	" "	408
41-43	" "	379	115-116	First Nat. Bank v. Lasater	408
43-46	" "	380	117-119	" "	409
46-47	" "	381	119	Butte City Water Co. v.
47-48	Hunt v. Springfield Fire & M.			Baker	409
	Ins. Co.	381	122	" "	410
48-50	" "	382	122-124	" "	411
51	Texas & P. R. Co. v. Swearin-		124-127	" "	412
	gen	382	127-128	" "	413
53-54	" "	384	128-129	Chicago I. & L. R. Co. v. Mc-
54-57	" "	385		Guire	413
57-59	" "	386	129	" "	414
59-62	" "	387	129-131	" "	415
62-64	" "	388	131	" "	416
64	Lee v. Robinson	388	131-133	" "	417
64-66	" "	389	133	American Express Co. v. Iowa	417
66-67	" "	390	134	" "	417
68-69	Wetmore v. Markoe	390	140-142	" "	421
69	" "	391	142-144	" "	422
71-72	" "	391	144-146	" "	423
72-74	" "	392	147	Adams Express Co. v. Iowa	424
74-76	" "	393	147-148	" "	425
76-77	" "	394	149	Lucius v. Cawthon-Coleman
78	Harding v. Illinois	394		Co.	425
82-84	" "	395	149-152	" "	426
84-86	" "	396	152	Wolf v. District of Columbia	426
196 U. S.					359

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
153	Wolf v. District of Columbia	427	268-270	Cook v. Marshall County	474
155	" "	427	270-273	" "	475
155-157	" "	428	273-275	" "	476
157	Moore v. United States	428	275	" "	477
162-163	" "	431	276	Hodge v. Muscatine County	477
163-165	" "	432	277-279	" "	480
165-168	" "	433	279-281	" "	481
168	" "	434	281-282	" "	482
169	Hartigan v. United States	434	283	Burton v. United States	482
171	" "	434	284-286	" "	483
171-174	" "	435	286-287	" "	484
174	" "	436	294-295	" "	485
175	Sixto v. Sarria	436	295-298	" "	486
175-178	" "	437	298-300	" "	487
178-180	" "	438	300-303	" "	488
180-183	" "	439	303-305	" "	489
183-186	" "	440	305-307	" "	490
186-188	" "	441	307-310	" "	491
188-191	" "	442	310	" "	492
191-192	" "	443	310	United States v. Harvey Steel
192-193	Fullerton v. Texas	443		Co.	492
193-194	" "	444	313-314	" "	492
194	Central of Ga. R. Co. v. Mur-		314-317	" "	493
	phy	444	317-319	" "	494
195-197	" "	445	319	Rooney v. North Dakota	494
197-198	" "	446	319-320	" "	495
202	" "	447	320-322	" "	496
202-205	" "	448	324-325	" "	496
205-206	" "	449	325-327	" "	497
207	United States v. United Verde		327	United States v. Crosley	497
	Copper Co.	449	327-329	" "	498
210	" "	450	331-334	" "	499
210-213	" "	451	334-336	" "	500
213-215	" "	452	336-337	" "	501
215-217	" "	453	337	Creede & C. Creek Min. & M.
217	Union Stock Yards Co. v.			Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min. &
	Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co.	453		Transp. Co.	501
218-219	" "	454	338-340	" "	504
221-224	" "	455	340-342	" "	505
224-226	" "	456	342-344	" "	506
226-228	" "	457	344-347	" "	507
229	Slavens v. United States	457	347-349	" "	508
229-231	" "	458	349-352	" "	509
231-234	" "	459	352-354	" "	510
234-236	" "	460	354-357	" "	511
236-238	" "	461	357-359	" "	512
239	Travis v. United States	461	359-360	" "	513
239	Madisonville Traction Co. v.		360-361	Ramsey v. Tacoma Land Co.	513
	Saint Bernard Min. Co.	462	361-364	" "	514
241-242	" "	463	364	" "	515
242-245	" "	464	364	Munsey v. Clough	515
245-247	" "	465	368-369	" "	515
247-250	" "	466	369-372	" "	516
250-252	" "	467	372-374	" "	517
252-255	" "	468	374-375	" "	518
255-257	" "	469	375	Swift & Co. v. United States	518
257-259	" "	470	390-392	" "	522
259-261	" "	471	392-395	" "	523
261	Cook v. Marshall County	471	395-397	" "	524
261-262	" "	472	397-399	" "	525
268	" "	473	399-401	" "	526

REFERENCE TABLE.

Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.	Off. Rep. 196 U. S.	Title.	Here In.
401-402	Swift & Co. v. United States	527	517-518	Thompson v. Fairbanks	579
403	Small v. Rakestraw	527	518-520	" "	580
404-406	" "	529	520	" "	581
407	Hamburg American S. S. Co. v. Grube	529	520-522	" "	584
407-408	" "	530	522-525	" "	585
408-409	" "	531	525-527	" "	586
413	" "	532	527-528	" "	587
413-415	" "	533	529	Oklahoma City v. McMaster	587
415	McDaniel v. Traylor	533	531-532	" "	588
416-418	" "	533	532-535	" "	589
418-420	" "	535	535-537	" "	590
422-425	" "	536	537-538	" "	591
425-427	" "	537	539	Worcester v. Worcester Consol. St. R. Co.	591
427-430	" "	538	539-542	" "	592
430-431	" "	540	542-543	" "	593
432	Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker ("New Mexico ex rel. Caledonian Coal Co. v. Baker")	540	547-550	" "	595
432-434	" "	542	550-552	" "	596
434-436	" "	543	552-553	" "	597
439-440	" "	543	553	Flanigan v. Sierra County	597
440-443	" "	543	557-558	" "	597
443-445	" "	544	558-560	" "	598
445-446	" "	544	560-562	" "	599
447	Smiley v. Kansas	545	562	Wheeler v. Plumas County	599
447-448	" "	546	563	" "	600
448-449	" "	546	563-565	McCaffrey v. Manogue	600
453-455	" "	547	565-566	" "	601
455-457	" "	548	568-570	" "	602
458	Allen v. Alleghany Co.	550	570-573	" "	603
458-459	" "	551	573	" "	604
459-460	" "	551	573-575	United States v. Montana Lumber & Mfg. Co.	604
462-464	" "	553	575-578	" "	605
464-466	" "	554	579-581	Doctor v. Harrington	606
466	Corry v. Baltimore	555	581-582	" "	607
467	" "	556	585-587	" "	609
471-474	" "	557	587-589	" "	610
474-476	" "	560	589	The Germanic ("Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Aitken")	610
476-478	" "	561	594-596	" "	613
478-480	" "	562	596-599	" "	614
480	Vanderbilt v. Eidman	563	599	" "	615
480-483	" "	564	599	Coulter v. Louisville & N. R. Co.	615
483-484	" "	565	604-605	" "	616
488	" "	565	605-608	" "	617
488-490	" "	566	608-610	" "	618
491-494	" "	567	610	" "	619
494-496	" "	568	611-612	Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. v. Bowland	619
496-498	" "	569	612-614	Bowland v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co.	620
498-500	" "	570	614	" "	621
500-502	" "	571	619-621	" "	623
502	Western Tie & Timber Co. v. Brown	571	621-623	" "	624
503-504	" "	572	623-626	" "	625
506-507	" "	573	626-628	" "	626
507-510	" "	574	628-631	" "	627
510-511	" "	575	631-633	" "	628
511-512	United States v. Engard	575	635-644	Memorandum Cases	629-632
512-515	" "	576
515-516	" "	577
516	Thompson v. Fairbanks	577
516-517	" "	578
196 U. S.					361

THE DECISIONS

OF THE

Supreme Court of the United States

AT
OCTOBER TERM, 1904.

[1] *W. O. JOHNSON, Petitioner,
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. (No.
32.)
W. O. JOHNSON, Plff. in Err.,
v.
SOUTHERN PACIFIC COMPANY. (No.
87.)

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 1-22.)

Railroads — automatic couplers — construction of statute in derogation of common law — construction of penal statute.

1. Locomotives are embraced by the words "any car" in the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), § 2, prohibiting common carriers from using any car in moving interstate commerce not equipped with automatic couplers, although locomotives were, elsewhere in the statute, in terms required to be equipped with power driving-wheel brakes.
2. The doctrine that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly does not demand that the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), compelling interstate carriers to adopt automatic couplers, in which there is an undoubted intention to make some change in the existing law, should be so construed as to defeat the obvious object of Congress.
3. The rule that penal statutes are to be construed strictly does not permit such a construction as defeats the obvious intention of the legislature.

4. The equipment of a locomotive and a dining car with automatic couplers, but of such different types as not to couple with each other automatically, does not satisfy the provision of the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), § 2, prohibiting common carriers from using any car in moving interstate commerce not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars.
5. Automatic couplers which will both couple and can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the cars are meant by the provision of the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), § 2, prohibiting common carriers from using any car in moving interstate commerce not equipped with "couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars."
6. A dining car in constant use is, while waiting for the train to be made up for its next interstate trip, "used in moving interstate traffic" within the meaning of the act of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), § 2, requiring common carriers to equip with automatic couplers any car so used.

[Nos. 32, 87.]

Argued October 31, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the District of Utah, entered on a directed verdict in favor of defendant in an action to recover damages for personal injuries. Also

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Cir-

NOTE.—On the construction of statutes in derogation of common law—see note to Beeson v. Buseubark, 10 L. R. A. 839.

As to construction of penal statutes—see note to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Yopst, 3 L. R. A. 224.

cuit to review the same judgment. Judgments of both courts reversed and the cause remanded to the Circuit Court, with instructions to set aside the verdict, and award a new trial.

See same case below, 54 C. C. A. 508, 117 Fed. 462.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

[2] *Johnson brought this action in the district court of the first judicial district of Utah against the Southern Pacific Company to recover damages for injuries received while employed by that company as a brakeman. The case was removed to the circuit court of the United States for the district of Utah by defendant on the ground of diversity of citizenship.

The facts were briefly these: August 5, 1900, Johnson was acting as head brakeman on a freight train of the Southern Pacific Company, which was making its regular trip between San Francisco, California, and Ogden, Utah. On reaching the town of Promontory, Utah, Johnson was directed to uncouple the engine from the train and couple it to a dining car, belonging to the company, which was standing on a side track, for the purpose of turning the car around preparatory to its being picked up and put on the next west-bound passenger train. The engine and the dining car were equipped, respectively, with the Janney coupler and the Miller hook, so called, which would not couple together automatically by impact, and it was, therefore, necessary for Johnson, and he was ordered, to go between the engine and the dining car, to accomplish the coupling. In so doing Johnson's hand was caught between the engine bumper and the dining car bumper, and crushed, which necessitated amputation of the hand above the wrist.

On the trial of the case, defendant, after plaintiff had rested, moved the court to instruct the jury to find in its favor, which motion was granted, and the jury found a verdict accordingly, on which judgment was entered. Plaintiff carried the case to the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit, and the judgment was affirmed. 54 C. C. A. 508, 117 Fed. 462.

Mr. W. L. Maginnis argued the cause, and, with Messrs. L. A. Shaver and John M. Gitterman, filed a brief for petitioner and plaintiff in error:

In expounding remedial laws the courts will extend the remedy so far as the words will admit.

Potter's Dwarr. Stat. p. 234, note p. 231; Heydon's Case, 3 Coke, 7; Pierce v. Hopper, 1 Strange, 253.

And it makes no difference that the statute has a penal, as well as a remedial, side.

Dwarris, Stat. 653, 655; Sedgw. Stat. & Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 309; Hyde v. Cogan, 2 Dougl. K. B. 705; Brady v. Daly, 175 U. S. 156, 44 L. ed. 113, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 62; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 665, 36 L. ed. 1127, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 36 L. ed. 226, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

Johnson was dealing with a tender, which is a car.

Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Winkler, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 56 Atl. 112.

The tender is no part of the locomotive.

See cuts in Webster, 1903; Knight, New American Mechanical Dictionary; Encyclopedia Americana; Spohn, Dictionary of Engineering; American Educational Chart, No. 2, Railway and Locomotive Engineering.

Railroads have well-defined rules of interchange, which have existed for nearly a generation, and no road will haul a car of any other road unless it is acceptable to them in the matter of equipment. If the equipment or the application of appliances on any car did not comply with the rules of interchange, a railroad company would or could decline to accept the car from the connecting carrier.

Oregon Short Line & U. N. R. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 249, 51 Fed. 465; Michigan Congress Water Co. v. Chicago & G. T. R. Co. 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 428; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Curtis, 51 Neb. 442, 66 Am. St. Rep. 456, 71 N. W. 42; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Snyder, 55 Ohio St. 342, 60 Am. St. Rep. 700, 45 N. E. 559; Wilson v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co. 129 Fed. 774; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wallace, 30 L. R. A. 161, 14 C. C. A. 257, 24 U. S. App. 589, 66 Fed. 506; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 91, 39 L. ed. 624, 631, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

It is no excuse on the part of the railroad company, that the car with which passengers or employees are killed or injured is owned by another carrier, where they have accepted and hauled it.

Felton v. Bullard, 37 C. C. A. 1, 94 Fed. 781; Baltimore & P. R. Co. v. Mackey, 157 U. S. 72, 39 L. ed. 624, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491.

The dining car "Del Monte" was used in moving interstate commerce.

Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867; Crawford v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 10 Am. Neg. Rep. 166.

No temporary stoppage of interstate traffic will deprive the goods or vehicle of its interstate character.

Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Com. 1 Monaghan (Pa.) 36, 1 L. R. A. 232, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 222, 17 Atl. 175.

Mr. W. L. Maginnis also filed a separate brief for petitioner:

This act of Congress is remedial in its nature, as far, at least, as protecting employees upon the train is concerned, by rendering it unnecessary for them to go between the cars.

Johnson v. Southern P. Co. 54 C. C. A. 519, 117 Fed. 462; Fleming v. Southern R. Co. 131 N. C. 476, 42 S. E. 905; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Fed. 522.

A section of a statute may be penal as to some of its provisions, and not penal as to others.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 497, 37 L. ed. 535, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; Taylor v. Gilman, 23 Blatchf. 327, 24 Fed. 632; Wall v. Platt, 169 Mass. 398, 48 N. E. 270; Stewart v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 168 U. S. 445, 42 L. ed. 537, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 105; Sutherland, Stat. Constr. §§ 208, 360; Taylor v. United States, 3 How. 197, 11 L. ed. 559.

The test laid down by this court as to the termination of the interstate character of the article in question by stoppage seems to be indefinite delay.

Kelley v. Rhoads, 188 U. S. 1, 47 L. ed. 359, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 259.

If this dining car were to be regarded as an empty car, that fact alone would not affect its interstate character.

Malott v. Hood, 201 Ill. 203, 66 N. E. 247.

Mr. Maxwell Evarts argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Martin L. Clardy and Henry G. Herbel, filed a brief for respondent and defendant in error:

The dining car was not an interstate car.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 93 Va. 749, 34 L. R. A. 105, 57 Am. St. Rep. 827, 24 S. E. 837; Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475.

The principle enunciated in the Coe-Errol Case has been repeatedly approved by this court in the following cases:

Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504, 507, 29 L. ed. 988, 989, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835; Morgan's L. & T. R. & S. S. Co. v. Board of Health, 118 U. S. 455, 465, 30 L. ed. 237, 242, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1114; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 482, 31 L. ed. 508, 513, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 20, 32 L. ed. 346, 350, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 25, 35 L. ed. 613, 617, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 698, 39 L. ed. 311, 316, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; American Refrigerator Transit Co. v. 196 U. S.

Hall, 174 U. S. 70, 43 L. ed. 899, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 599; Diamond Glue Co. v. United States Glue Co. 187 U. S. 611, 616, 47 L. ed. 328, 332, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 206; Diamond Match Co. v. Ontonagon, 188 U. S. 82, 47 L. ed. 394, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 266.

—and followed in these:

United States v. Boyer, 85 Fed. 432; Cotting v. Kansas City Stock-Yards Co. 82 Fed. 839, 183 U. S. 79, 46 L. ed. 92, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 30; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Becker, 35 Fed. 883; Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 18 Utah, 378, 48 L. R. A. 790, 55 Pac. 639; Winkley v. Newton, 67 N. H. 80, 35 L. R. A. 756, 36 Atl. 610.

The mere intention to make a commodity a subject of interstate commerce does not of itself impress the article with that character.

Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504, 507, 29 L. ed. 988, 989, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 835.

The true distinction between commerce itself and the instrumentalities which produce or transport it was clearly stated by this court in Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 20, 32 L. ed. 346, 350, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6.

The distinction between the vehicle and commodity of commerce was noticed by Justice Strong in State Tax on Railway Gross Receipts (Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Pennsylvania), 15 Wall. 284, 294, 21 L. ed. 164, 168. See also Wiggins Ferry Co. v. East St. Louis, 107 U. S. 365, 374, 27 L. ed. 419, 423, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 257.

The only logical deduction from these authorities is that the character of the vehicle under consideration must be determined by the destination of the commodity with which it is burdened; or, if empty, the purpose for which the train of which it forms a part is being moved at the time of the alleged injury. In other words, it must either be loaded with interstate freight, or actually be a part of a train which is moving on an interstate mission.

There is no inherent quality in the car itself that indicates its character; but, chameleon like, it changes its hue according to the use to which it is put at any particular time.

See Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 135, 24 L. ed. 77, 87.

Where a statute creates a liability where none existed before, it must be strictly and literally construed.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 371.

When language is clear, it needs no construction.

Yerke v. United States, 173 U. S. 439, 43 L. ed. 760, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 441; Thornley v. United States, 113 U. S. 310, 28 L. ed. 999, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 491; Lake County v.

Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

Words are to be construed according to their popular sense.

Mailliard v. Lawrence, 16 How. 251, 14 L. ed. 925; Lake County v. Rollins, 130 U. S. 662, 670, 32 L. ed. 1060, 1063, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 651.

There might be a slight semblance of plausibility in the argument that Congress intended to include engines in the word "car," used in this act, if it were not for the fact that it employed both the expressions, "engine" and "cars," in prescribing the equipment of each.

Bryce v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 119 Iowa, 274, 93 N. W. 275.

The injustice that the adoption of the construction of this act claimed by plaintiff would work was recognized by this court in the similar case of United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 220, 221, 23 L. ed. 563, 565, 566.

The argument that engines are as much within the mischief which this statute was intended to correct as cars, and that it should, therefore, apply to them as well, is equally fallacious.

United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 781, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 575, 38 L. ed. 558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 720; United States v. Sheldon, 2 Wheat. 119, 122, 4 L. ed. 199, 200.

The plea that the policy of the government calls for a liberal construction of this act does not aid the plaintiff in his contention.

Hadden v. The Collector (Hadden v. Barney), 5 Wall. 107, 111, 18 L. ed. 518, 519; St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. v. Phelps, 137 U. S. 528, 536, 34 L. ed. 767, 769, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

Neither the engine nor the dining car at the time of the injury to the plaintiff below was an instrument of interstate commerce.

The Daniel Ball (The Daniel Ball v. United States) 10 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 999.

As this is a penal statute it must be strictly construed.

United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 305, 309, 44 L. ed. 780, 781, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609; Sarlls v. United States, 152 U. S. 570, 575, 38 L. ed. 556, 558, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728.

Solicitor General Hoyt by leave of court argued the cause, and, with Attorney General Moody, filed a brief for the United States:

This is not a case for the application of the rule that the expression of one is the exclusion of the other. In the interpretation of this act we must look to the intention of Congress (United States v. Wiltsberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; Wilkinson v. Leland, 2 Pet. 627, 7 L. ed. 542); and the meaning of Congress may be extended beyond the precise words used in the law, according to the end in view or the purpose which was designed (United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724).

The failure to equip a locomotive with an automatic coupler is negligence as much as a failure so to equip a car.

Fleming v. Southern R. Co. 131 N. C. 476, 42 S. E. 905.

The tender of a locomotive engine engaged in interstate commerce is a car within the scope of the safety-appliance act.

Winkler v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Penn. (Del.) 80, 53 Atl. 90, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 56 Atl. 112.

In East St. Louis Connecting R. Co. v. O'Hara, 150 Ill. 580, 37 N. E. 917, it was held that a city ordinance providing that no railroad company shall run any passenger train or cars within the city limits at a greater rate of speed than 10 miles an hour, nor any freight train or cars at a greater rate of speed than 6 miles an hour, was broad enough to include locomotive engines.

In Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Crocker, 95 Ala. 412, 11 So. 262, it was held that a hand car was within the spirit and terms of a statute giving an action against the employer for injuries suffered by an employee by reason of the negligence of any person in the service who had charge of any signal points, locomotive engine, switch, car, or train upon a railway.

See also Thomas v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 38 Ga. 222.

Neither the word "coach," "stage," nor "car" can be said to have any legal or fixed meaning distinguishing one from the other, or any one of them from several other terms implying a vehicle or conveyance.

New York v. Third Ave. R. Co. 117 N. Y. 404, 22 N. E. 755.

Whatever the kind or condition of the couplers on the tender and car, respectively, the necessary use of the link and pin destroyed their value, and was a violation of the law.

Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Winkler, 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 56 Atl. 112.

The words, "without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars," are the test of compliance with the statute.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Fed. 522.

It has been frequently held that, as bearing upon the construction of an act of Congress, the courts are not at liberty to recur to the views expressed by individual members in debate.

Aldridge v. Williams, 3 How. 9, 24, 11 L. ed. 469, 475; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 91 U. S. 72, 79, 23 L. ed. 224, 228; Maxwell v. Dow, 176 U. S. 581, 601, 44 L. ed.

597, 604, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 448, 494; Knowlton v. Moore, 178 U. S. 41, 72, 44 L. ed. 969, 982, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 747.

But the courts will take judicial notice of contemporaneous events and the history of the times when the act was passed, in order to be informed of the situation as it existed and was pressed upon the attention of Congress.

Smith v. Townsend, 148 U. S. 494, 37 L. ed. 534, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 634; United States v. Laws, 163 U. S. 258, 262, 41 L. ed. 151, 153, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 998; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 318, 41 L. ed. 1007, 1019, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540.

And for the purpose, it is clearly allowable to refer to the report of committees, and even to the debates in Congress.

American Net & Twine Co. v. Worthington, 141 U. S. 468, 473, 474, 35 L. ed. 821, 823, 824, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 55; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 463, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511; Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 65, 75, 43 L. ed. 616, 619, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319; Downes v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 244, 253, 255, 45 L. ed. 1089, 1093, 1094, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 770.

It is legitimate to refer to changes made in a bill on the course of its passage through Congress.

Dunlap v. United States, 173 U. S. 65, 75, 43 L. ed. 616, 619, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 319.

The amendment of 1903 did not change or enlarge the law, but merely declared plainly what the original law means. It was a legislative construction of a prior enactment.

United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Stockdale v. Atlantic Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 323, 22 L. ed. 348; Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 679, 26 L. ed. 886, 890; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. 284, 22 L. ed. 651.

The fact that a penalty is imposed for violation of its provisions does not make it a penal law; for while, in one sense, every act imposing a penalty or forfeiture may be called a penal law, yet, as in the present case, such laws are often deemed, and truly deserve to be called, remedial.

Taylor v. United States, 3 How. 197, 11 L. ed. 559; Cliquot's Champagne (125 Baskets of Champagne v. United States) 3 Wall. 114, 18 L. ed. 116; United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395, 19 L. ed. 937; Smythe v. Fiske, 23 Wall. 374, 23 L. ed. 47; United States v. Stowell, 133 U. S. 12, 33 L. ed. 558, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244.

But even if the act should be conceded to be penal in a strict sense, inquiry into the intention of Congress is still proper and necessary.

The Enterprise, 1 Paine, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 4,499.

The act should be interpreted according to the manifest import of the words, and the most restricted sense should not be adopted as the true sense of the statute, unless it harmonizes with the legislative intent, and accords with the mischiefs to be remedied.

United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625; United States v. Winn, 3 Sumn. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 16,740; United States v. Mattock, 2 Sawy. 148, Fed. Cas. No. 15,744. See also, to the same effect, United States v. Wiltberger, 5 Wheat. 76, 5 L. ed. 37; American Fur Co. v. United States, 2 Pet. 358, 7 L. ed. 450; United States v. Morris, 14 Pet. 464, 10 L. ed. 543; United States v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563; United States v. Hartwell, 6 Wall. 385, 18 L. ed. 830.

The law applies to coupling as well as uncoupling.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Fed. 522; Carson v. Southern R. Co. 68 S. C. 55, 46 S. E. 525.

The car was used in moving interstate traffic.

Malott v. Hood, 99 Ill. App. 360; Winkler v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Penn. (Del.) 80, 53 Atl. 90; Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867; Crawford v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 10 Am. Neg. Rep. 166.

*Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the [13] opinion of the court:

This case was brought here on certiorari, and also on writ of error, and will be determined on the merits, without discussing the question of jurisdiction as between the one writ and the other. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 145, 43 L. ed. 108, 111, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808.

The plaintiff claimed that he was relieved of assumption of risk under common-law rules by the act of Congress of March 2, 1893 (27 Stat. at L. 531, chap. 196, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3174), entitled "An Act to Promote the Safety of Employees and Travelers upon Railroads by Compelling Common Carriers Engaged in Interstate Commerce to Equip their Cars with Automatic Couplers and Continuous Brakes and their Locomotives with Driving-Wheel Brakes, and for Other Purposes."

The issues involved questions deemed of such general importance that the government was permitted to file brief and be heard at the bar.

The act of 1893 provided:

"That from and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any common carrier engaged in interstate commerce by railroad to use on its line any locomotive engine in moving interstate traffic not equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and appliances for operating the train-brake system. . . .

"Sec. 2. That on and after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, it shall be unlawful for any such common carrier to haul or permit to be hauled or used on its line any car used in moving interstate traffic not equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars."

"Sec. 6. That any such common carrier using any locomotive engine, running any train, or hauling or permitting to be hauled or used on its line any car in violation of any of the *provisions of this act, shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars for each and every such violation, to be recovered in a suit or suits to be brought by the United States District Attorney in the district court of the United States having jurisdiction in the locality where such violation shall have been committed, and it shall be the duty of such district attorney to bring such suits upon duly verified information being lodged with him of such violation having occurred."

"Sec. 8. That any employee of any such common carrier who may be injured by any locomotive, car, or train in use contrary to the provision of this act shall not be deemed thereby to have assumed the risk thereby occasioned, although continuing in the employment of such carrier after the unlawful use of such locomotive, car, or train had been brought to his knowledge."

The circuit court of appeals held, in substance, Sanborn, J., delivering the opinion and Lochren, J., concurring, that the locomotive and car were both equipped as required by the act, as the one had a power driving-wheel brake and the other a coupler; that § 2 did not apply to locomotives; that at the time of the accident the dining car was not "used in moving interstate traffic;" and, moreover, that the locomotive, as well as the dining car, was furnished with an automatic coupler, so that each was equipped as the statute required if § 2 applied to both. Thayer, J., concurred in the judgment on the latter ground, but was of opinion that locomotives were included by the words "any car" in the 2d section, and that the dining car was being "used in moving interstate traffic."

We are unable to accept these conclusions, notwithstanding the able opinion of the majority, as they appear to us to be inconsistent with the plain intention of Congress, to defeat the object of the legislation, and to be arrived at by an inadmissible narrowness of construction.

The intention of Congress, declared in the preamble and in * §§ 1 and 2 of the [15] act, was "to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes," those brakes to be accompanied with "appliances for operating the train-brake system;" and every car to be "equipped with couplers coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars," whereby the danger and risk consequent on the existing system was averted as far as possible.

The present case is that of an injured employee, and involves the application of the act in respect of automatic couplers, the preliminary question being whether locomotives are required to be equipped with such couplers. And it is not to be successfully denied that they are so required if the words "any car" of the 2d section were intended to embrace, and do embrace, locomotives. But it is said that this cannot be so because locomotives were elsewhere, in terms, required to be equipped with power driving-wheel brakes, and that the rule that the expression of one thing excludes another applies. That, however, is a question of intention, and as there was special reason for requiring locomotives to be equipped with power driving-wheel brakes, if it were also necessary that locomotives should be equipped with automatic couplers, and the word "car" would cover locomotives, then the intention to limit the equipment of locomotives to power driving-wheel brakes, because they were separately mentioned, could not be imputed. Now it was as necessary for the safety of employees in coupling and uncoupling that locomotives should be equipped with automatic couplers as it was that freight and passenger and dining cars should be; perhaps more so, as Judge Thayer suggests, "since engines have occasion to make couplings more frequently."

And manifestly the word "car" was used in its generic sense. There is nothing to indicate that any particular kind *of car [16] was meant. Tested by context, subject-matter, and object, "any car" meant all kinds of cars running on the rails, including locomotives. And this view is supported by the dictionary definitions and by many judicial decisions, some of them having been rendered in construction of this act. Winkler v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 4 Penn. (Del.) 387, 53 Atl. 90; Fleming v. Southern R. Co. 131 N. C. 476, 42 S. E. 905; East St. Louis Connecting R. Co. v. O'Hara, 150 Ill. 580, 37 N. E. 917; Kansas City, M. & B. R. Co. v. Crocker, 95 Ala. 412, 11 So. 262; Thomas v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 38 Ga. 222; New York v. Third Ave. R. Co. 117 N. Y. 404, 22 N. E. 755; Benson v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 75 Minn. 163, 74 Am. St. Rep. 444, 77 N. W. 798.

The result is that if the locomotive in question was not equipped with automatic couplers, the company failed to comply with the provisions of the act. It appears, however, that this locomotive was in fact equipped with automatic couplers, as well as the dining car; but that the couplers on each, which were of different types, would not couple with each other automatically, by impact, so as to render it unnecessary for men to go between the cars to couple and uncouple.

Nevertheless, the circuit court of appeals was of opinion that it would be an unwarrantable extension of the terms of the law to hold that where the couplers would couple automatically with couplers of their own kind, the couplers must so couple with couplers of different kinds. But we think that what the act plainly forbade was the use of cars which could not be coupled together automatically by impact, by means of the couplers actually used on the cars to be coupled. The object was to protect the lives and limbs of railroad employees by rendering it unnecessary for a man operating the couplers to go between the ends of the cars; and that object would be defeated, not necessarily by the use of automatic couplers of different kinds, but if those different kinds would not automatically couple with each other. The point was that the *railroad companies should be compelled, respectively, to adopt devices, whatever they were, which would act, so far uniformly as to eliminate the danger consequent on men going between the cars.

If the language used were open to construction, we are constrained to say that the construction put upon the act by the circuit court of appeals was altogether too narrow.

196 U. S.

This strictness was thought to be required because the common-law rule as to the assumption of risk was changed by the act, and because the act was penal.

The dogma as to the strict construction of statutes in derogation of the common law only amounts to the recognition of a presumption against an intention to change existing law; and as there is no doubt of that intention here, the extent of the application of the change demands at least no more rigorous construction than would be applied to penal laws. And, as Chief Justice Parker remarked, conceding that statutes in derogation of the common law are to be construed strictly, "They are also to be construed sensibly, and with a view to the object aimed at by the legislature." Gibson v. Jenney, 15 Mass. 205.

The primary object of the act was to promote the public welfare by securing the safety of employees and travelers; and it was in that aspect remedial; while for violations a penalty of $100, recoverable in a civil action, was provided for, and in that aspect it was penal. But the design to give relief was more dominant than to inflict punishment, and the act might well be held to fall within the rule applicable to statutes to prevent fraud upon the revenue, and for the collection of customs,—that rule not requiring absolute strictness of construction. Taylor v. United States, 3 How. 197, 11 L. ed. 559; United States v. Stowell, 133 U. S. 1, 12, 33 L. ed. 555, 558, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 244, and cases cited. And see Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 91 U. S. 29, 35, 23 L. ed. 196, 199; Gray v. Bennett, 3 Met. 529.

Moreover, it is settled that "though penal laws are to be construed strictly, yet the intention of the legislature must *gov-[18] ern in the construction of penal as well as other statutes; and they are not to be construed so strictly as to defeat the obvious intention of the legislature." United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625. In that case we cited and quoted from United States v. Winn, 3 Sumn. 209, Fed. Cas. No. 16,740, in which Mr. Justice Story, referring to the rule that penal statutes are to be construed strictly, said:

"I agree to that rule in its true and sober sense; and that is, that penal statutes are not to be enlarged by implication, or extended to cases not obviously within their words and purport. But where the words are general, and include various classes of persons, I know of no authority which would justify the court in restricting them to one class, or in giving them the narrowest interpretation, where the mischief to be redressed by the statute is equally applicable to all of them. And where a word is used in a statute which has various known significations, I know of no rule that requires the court to adopt one in preference to another, simply because it is more restrained, if the objects of the statute equally apply to the largest and broadest sense of the word. In short, it appears to me that the proper course in all these cases is to search out and follow the true intent of the legislature, and to adopt that sense of the words which harmonizes best with the context, and promotes in the fullest manner the apparent policy and objects of the legislature."

Tested by these principles, we think the view of the circuit court of appeals, which limits the 2d section to merely providing automatic couplers, does not give due effect to the words "coupling automatically by impact, and which can be uncoupled without the necessity of men going between the cars," and cannot be sustained.

We dismiss, as without merit, the suggestion which has been made, that the words "without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars," which are the test of compliance with § 2, apply only to the act of uncoupling. The phrase literally covers both coupling and uncoupling; and if *read, as it should be, with a comma after the word "uncoupled," this becomes entirely clear. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Voelker, 129 Fed. 522; United States v. Lacher, 134 U. S. 624, 33 L. ed. 1080, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625.

The risk in coupling and uncoupling was the evil sought to be remedied, and that risk was to be obviated by the use of couplers actually coupling automatically. True, no particular design was required, but, whatever the devices used, they were to be effectively interchangeable. Congress was not paltering in a double sense. And its intention is found "in the language actually used, interpreted according to its fair and obvious meaning." United States v. Harris, 177 U. S. 309, 44 L. ed. 782, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

That this was the scope of the statute is confirmed by the circumstances surrounding its enactment, as exhibited in public documents to which we are at liberty to refer. Binns v. United States, 194 U. S. 486, 495, 48 L. ed. 1087, 1091, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 816; Church of Holy Trinity v. United States, 143 U. S. 457, 463, 36 L. ed. 226, 229, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 511.

President Harrison, in his annual messages of 1889, 1890, 1891, and 1892, earnestly urged upon Congress the necessity of legislation to obviate and reduce the loss of life and the injuries due to the prevailing method of coupling and braking. In his first message he said: "It is competent, I think, for Congress to require uniformity in the construction of cars used in interstate commerce, and the use of improved safety appliances upon such trains. Time will be necessary to make the needed changes, but an earnest and intelligent beginning should be made at once. It is a reproach to our civilization that any class of American workmen should, in the pursuit of a necessary and useful vocation, be subjected to a peril of life and limb as great as that of a soldier in time of war."

And he reiterated his recommendation in succeeding messages, saying in that for 1892: "Statistics furnished by the Interstate Commerce Commission show that during the year ending June 30, 1891, there were forty-seven different styles of car couplers reported to be in use, and that during the same period there were 2,560 employees killed and 26,140 injured. *Near-^[20]ly 16 per cent of the deaths occurred in the coupling and uncoupling of cars, and over 36 per cent of the injuries had the same origin."

The Senate report of the first session of the Fifty-second Congress (No. 1049) and the House report of the same session (No. 1678) set out the numerous and increasing casualties due to coupling, the demand for protection, and the necessity of automatic couplers, coupling interchangeably. The difficulties in the case were fully expounded and the result reached to require an automatic coupling by impact so as to render it unnecessary for men to go between the cars; while no particular device or type was adopted, the railroad companies being left free to work out the details for themselves, ample time being given for that purpose. The law gave five years, and that was enlarged, by the Interstate Commerce Commission, as authorized by law, two years, and subsequently seven months, making seven years and seven months in all.

The diligence of counsel has called our attention to changes made in the bill in the course of its passage, and to the debates in the Senate on the report of its committee. 24 Cong. Rec., pt. 2, pp. 1246, 1273 et seq. These demonstrate that the difficulty as to interchangeability was fully in the mind of Congress, and was assumed to be met by the language which was used. The essential degree of uniformity was secured by providing that the couplings must couple automatically by impact without the necessity of men going between the ends of the cars.

In the present case the couplings would not work together; Johnson was obliged to go between the cars; and the law was not complied with.

March 2, 1903 (32 Stat. at L. 943, chap. 976, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1903, p. 367), an act in amendment of the act of 1893 was approved, which provided, among other things, that the provisions and requirements of the former act "shall be held to apply to common carriers by railroads in the territories and the District of Columbia, and shall apply in all cases, whether or not the couplers brought together are [21] of the *same kind, make, or type;" and "shall be held to apply to all trains, locomotives, tenders, cars, and similar vehicles used on any railroad engaged in interstate commerce."

This act was to take effect September 1st, 1903, and nothing in it was to be held or construed to relieve any common carrier "from any of the provisions, powers, duties, liabilities, or requirements" of the act of 1893, all of which should apply except as specifically amended.

As we have no doubt of the meaning of the prior law, the subsequent legislation cannot be regarded as intended to operate to destroy it. Indeed, the latter act is affirmative and declaratory; and, in effect, only construed and applied the former act. Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. 284, 22 L. ed. 651; United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 34 L. ed. 832, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222; Wetmore v. Markoe, 196 U. S. 68, post, 390, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 172. This legislative recognition of the scope of the prior law fortifies, and does not weaken, the conclusion at which we have arrived.

Another ground on which the decision of the circuit court of appeals was rested remains to be noticed. That court held by a majority that, as the dining car was empty and had not actually entered upon its trip, it was not used in moving interstate traffic, and hence was not within the act. The dining car had been constantly used for several years to furnish meals to passengers between San Francisco and Ogden, and for no other purpose. On the day of the accident the eastbound train was so late that it was found that the car could not reach Ogden in time to return on the next westbound train according to intention, and it was therefore dropped off at Promontory, to be picked up by that train as it came along that evening.

The presumption is that it was stocked for the return; and as it was not a new car, or a car just from the repair shop, on its way to its field of labor, it was not "an empty," as that term is sometimes used. Besides, whether cars are empty or loaded, the danger to employees is practically the same, and we agree with the observation of District Judge Shiras, in Voelker v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 116 Fed. 867, that "it cannot *be true that on the eastern trip [22] the provisions of the act of Congress would be binding upon the company, because the cars were loaded, but would not be binding upon the return trip, because the cars are empty."

Counsel urges that the character of the dining car at the time and place of the injury was local only, and could not be changed until the car was actually engaged in interstate movement, or being put into a train for such use, and Coe v. Errol, 116 U. S. 517, 29 L. ed. 715, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475, is cited as supporting that contention. In Coe v. Errol it was held that certain logs cut in New Hampshire, and hauled to a river in order that they might be transported to Maine, were subject to taxation in the former state before transportation had begun.

The distinction between merchandise which may become an article of interstate commerce, or may not, and an instrument regularly used in moving interstate commerce, which has stopped temporarily in making its trip between two points in different states, renders this and like cases inapplicable.

Confessedly this dining car was under the control of Congress while in the act of making its interstate journey, and in our judgment it was equally so when waiting for the train to be made up for the next trip. It was being regularly used in the movement of interstate traffic, and so within the law.

Finally, it is argued that Johnson was guilty of such contributory negligence as to defeat recovery, and that, therefore, the judgment should be affirmed. But the circuit court of appeals did not consider this question, nor apparently did the circuit court, and we do not feel constrained to inquire whether it could have been open under § 8, or, if so, whether it should have been left to the jury, under proper instructions.

The judgment of the Circuit Court of Appeals is reversed; the judgment of the Circuit Court is also reversed, and the cause remanded to that court with instructions to set aside the verdict, and award a new trial.

[23]

*STATE OF MISSOURI
v.
STATE OF NEBRASKA.
—
STATE OF NEBRASKA
v.
STATE OF MISSOURI.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 23-38.)

Boundaries between states—effect of avulsion.

Avulsion by the Missouri river, the middle of whose channel forms the boundary line between the states of Missouri and Nebraska, works no change in such boundary, but leaves it in the center of the old channel.

[No. 5, Original.]

Submitted February 24, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

ORIGINAL suit between the states of Missouri and Nebraska to settle a disputed boundary line. Such line adjudged to be the middle of the channel of the Missouri river according to its course as it was prior to the avulsion of July 5, 1867.

For final decree see post, 881.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Edward C. Crow and Sam B. Jeffries submitted the cause for the state of Missouri:

There can be no question but that the Missouri river was designated as a natural monument by both the act of annexation and the memorial requesting the same. Being a natural monument, it must stand as ordained, for natural monuments are objects permanent in character, if they are found upon land as they were placed by nature, such as streams, lakes, and ponds.

3 Washb. Real Prop. 5th ed. p. 435; Tiedeman, Real Prop. 2d ed. § 831.

Where a river is made the boundary between jurisdictions, the middle of the river is considered the point or line of demarcation; or, in other words, the term "river," when used to designate a boundary between two jurisdictions, means in law the middle of the river.

Stanford v. Mangin, 30 Ga. 355; Hicks v. Coleman, 25 Cal. 122, 85 Am. Dec. 103; Lowell v. Robinson, 16 Me. 357, 33 Am. Dec. 673; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 380, 35 L. ed. 432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838.

It is not the meander line formed by what may be termed the waters' margin, but the waters themselves, which constitute the real boundary.

St. Paul & P. R. Co. v. Schurmeir, 7 Wall. 272, 19 L. ed. 74; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 380, 35 L. ed. 432, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 33 L. ed. 872, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Houck v. Yates, 82 Ill. 179; Fuller v. Dauphin, 124 Ill. 542, 7 Am. St. Rep. 388, 16 N. E. 917; St. Louis Bridge Co. v. People, 125 Ill. 228, 17 N. E. 468; Buttenuith v. St. Louis Bridge Co. 123 Ill. 535, 5 Am. St. Rep. 545, 17 N. E. 439.

The channel is the passageway between the banks through which the water of the stream flows.

Benjamin v. Manistee River Improv. Co. 42 Mich. 628, 4 N. W. 483.

The term "natural channel" includes not only all channels through which, in the existing conditions of the country, water naturally flows, but new channels through which it may afterwards flow.

Larrabee v. Cloverdale, 131 Cal. 96, 63 Pac. 143.

The rule is settled that meander lines are not intended as boundaries, but that the body of the water will be regarded as the true boundary.

Jefferis v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 33 L. ed. 872, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518; Mitchell v. Smale, 140 U. S. 406, 35 L. ed. 442, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 819, 840; Hardin v. Jordan, 140 U. S. 371, 35 L. ed. 428, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808, 838; Clute v. Fisher, 65 Mich. 48, 31 N. W. 614.

The right and duties with respect to waters depends primarily upon the relations which the opposing parties bear towards each other.

Farnham, Waters & Water Rights, p. 3.

Mr. Frank N. Prout submitted the cause for the state of Nebraska. Mr. W. H. Kelligar was on his brief:

Where the course of a river forming the boundary between states is suddenly changed by avulsion, the boundary remains unchanged.

Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 361, 36 L. ed. 187, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396; Holbrook v. Moore, 4 Neb. 437; Collins v. State, 3 Tex. App. 325, 30 Am. Rep. 142; Willey v. Lewis, 11 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 607.

Had Nebraska never been admitted into the Union, the state of Missouri would not now have jurisdiction of a crime committed on the land in dispute, known as Island Precinct.

Collins v. State, 3 Tex. App. 323, 30 Am. Rep. 142.

Mr. Justice Harlan delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a case of disputed boundary between two states of the Union.

NOTE.—On rivers and lakes as state boundaries—see note to Buck v. Ellenbolt, 15 L. R. A. 187.

As to jurisdiction over boundary rivers—see note to Roberts v. Fullerton, 65 L. R. A. 953.

The suit was commenced by an original bill filed in this court by the state of Missouri against the state of Nebraska. The relief sought by the former state is a decree declaring its right of possession of, and its jurisdiction and sovereignty over, certain territory east and north of the center of the main channel of the Missouri river as it runs between the two states at the present time; that Missouri be quieted in its title thereto; and that the state of Nebraska be forever enjoined and restrained from disturbing Missouri in the full enjoyment and possession of said territory.

[24] The state of Nebraska, after answering, filed a cross bill asking a decree confirming the possession, jurisdiction, and sovereignty of Nebraska over said territory; that the boundary line between that part of Missouri known as Atchison county and that part of Nebraska known as Nemaha county be ascertained and established, and permanent monuments erected to indicate the location of such line; and that the state of Missouri be enjoined and restrained from disturbing the state of Nebraska in the full enjoyment and possession of said territory.

The commissioners heretofore appointed to take the evidence have filed their report, and it is agreed that their finding of facts is correct. The case is before us upon questions of law arising out of the pleadings, the report of the commissioners, and the stipulation of the parties.

By an act of Congress of March 6th, 1820, provision was made for the admission of Missouri into the Union with the following boundary: "Beginning in the middle of the Mississippi river, on the parallel of thirty-six degrees of north latitude; thence west, along that parallel of latitude, to the San Francois river; thence up and following the course of that river, in the middle of the main channel thereof, to the parallel of latitude of thirty-six degrees and thirty minutes; thence west along the same to a point where the said parallel is intersected by a meridian line passing through the middle of the mouth of the Kansas river, where the same empties into the Missouri river; thence from the point aforesaid, north, along the said meridian line, to the intersection of the parallel of latitude which passes through the rapids of the river Des Moines, making the said line to correspond with the Indian boundary line; thence east from the point of intersection last aforesaid, along the said parallel of latitude, to the middle of the channel of the main fork of the said river Des Moines; thence down and along the middle of the main channel of the said river Des Moines to the mouth of the same, where it empties into the Mississippi river; thence due east to the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi river; thence down and following the course *of the [25] Mississippi river, in the middle of the main channel thereof, to the place of beginning: Provided, That said state shall ratify the boundaries aforesaid: (a) And provided also, That the said state shall have concurrent jurisdiction on the river Mississippi, and every other river bordering on the said state, so far as the said river shall form a common boundary to the said state and any other state or states, now or hereafter to be formed and bounded by the same, such rivers to be common to both; and that the river Mississippi, and the navigable rivers and waters leading into the same, shall be common highways, and forever free, as well to the inhabitants of the said state as to other citizens of the United States, without any tax, duty, impost, or toll therefor imposed by the said state." 3 Stat. at L. 545, chap. 22.

On the 15th day of January, 1831, the state of Missouri, speaking by its legislature, memorialized Congress to make more certain and definite its northwest boundary. That memorial, among other things, stated: "When this state government was formed, the whole country on the west and north was one continued wilderness, inhabited by none but savages, and but little known to the people or to the government of the United States. Its geography was unwritten, and none of our citizens possessed an accurate knowledge of its localities, except a few adventurous hunters and Indian traders. The western boundary of the state, as indicated by the act of Congress of the 6th of March, 1820, and adopted by the Constitution of Missouri, is a 'meridian line passing through the middle of the mouth of the Kansas river, where the same empties into the Missouri river,' and extends from the parallel of latitude of 36 degrees and 30 minutes north, 'to the intersection of the parallel of latitude which passes through the rapids of the river Des Moines.' The part of this line which lies north of the Missouri river has never been surveyed and established, and consequently its precise position and extent are unknown. It is believed, however, that it extends about 100 miles north from the Missouri *river, [26] and almost parallel with the course of the stream, so as to leave between the line and the river a narrow strip of land, varying in breadth from 15 to 30 miles. This small strip of land was acquired by the United States from the Kansas Indians, by the treaty of the 3d of June, 1825 [7 Stat. at L. 244], and is now unappropriated and at the free disposal of the general government. . . . These considerations seem to us sufficiently obvious to impress upon the public mind the necessity of interposing, whenever it is possible, some visible boundary and natural barrier between the Indians and the whites. The Missouri river, bending as it does, beyond our northern line, will afford the barrier against all the Indians on the southwest side of that river, by extending the north boundary of this state in a straight line westward, until it strikes the Missouri, so as to include within this state the small district of country between that line and the river, which we suppose is not more than sufficient to make two, or at the most three, respectable counties. . . . In every view, then, we consider it expedient that the district of country in question should be annexed to and incorporated with the state of Missouri; and to that end we respectfully ask the consent of Congress. . . . With these views of the present condition and future importance of that little section of country, and seeing the impossibility of conveniently attaching it now or hereafter to any other state, your memorialists consider it highly desirable, and indeed necessary, that it should be annexed to and form a part of the state of Missouri. And to the accomplishment of that desirable end we respectfully request the assent of Congress."

A subsequent act, entitled "An Act to Extend the Western Boundary of the State of Missouri to the Missouri River," approved June 7th, 1836, provided: "That when the Indian title to all the lands lying between the state of Missouri and the Missouri river shall be extinguished, the jurisdiction over said lands shall be hereby ceded to the state of Missouri, and the western boundary of said state shall be then extended to the *Missouri river, reserving to the United States the original right of soil in said lands, and disposing of the same: Provided, That this act shall not take effect until the President shall, by proclamation, declare that the Indian title to said lands has been extinguished; nor shall it take effect until the state of Missouri shall have assented to the provisions of this act." 5 Stat. at L. 34, chap. 86.

It is alleged in the bill that Congress intended by the act of 1836 to meet the wishes of Missouri as expressed in its memorial; that after the passage of that act the President, by proclamation [5 Stat. at L. 802], declared that the Indian title to the lands covered by that act had been extinguished; and that Missouri duly assented to its provisions.

By an act of Congress approved February 9th, 1867 [14 Stat. at L. 391, chap. 36], Nebraska was admitted into the Union, with the following boundary: "Commencing at a point formed by the intersection of the western boundary of the state of Missouri with the fortieth degree of north latitude; extending thence due west along said fortieth degree of north latitude to a point formed by its intersection with the twenty-fifth degree of longitude west from Washington; thence north along said twenty-fifth degree of longitude to a point formed by its intersection with the forty-first degree of north latitude; thence west along said forty-first degree of north latitude to a point formed by its intersection with the twenty-seventh degree of longitude west from Washington; thence north along said twenty-seventh degree of west longitude to a point formed by its intersection with the forty-third degree of north latitude; thence east along said forty-third degree of north latitude to the Reya Paha river; thence down the middle of the channel of said river, with its meanderings to its junction with the Niobrara river; thence down the middle of the channel of said Niobrara river, and following the meanderings thereof, to its junction with the Missouri river; thence down the middle of the channel of said Missouri river, and following the meanderings thereof to the place of beginning." 13 Stat. at L. 47, chap. 59.

It is undisputed in the case that prior to July 5th, 1867, the bed and channel of the Missouri river were substantially as they had been continuously from the date of the admission of the *respective states [34] into the Union, only such variations occurring during that entire period as naturally followed in the course of time from one side of the river to the other. But on the day just named, July 5th, 1867 (which was after the admission of Nebraska into the Union), within twenty-four hours, and during a time of very high water, the river, which had for years passed around what is called McKissick's island, cut a new channel across and through the narrow neck of land at the west end of Island Precinct (of which McKissick's island formed a part), about a half mile wide, making for itself a new channel, and passing through what was admittedly, at that time, territory of Nebraska. After that change the river ceased to run around McKissick's island. In the course of a few years, after the new channel was thus made, the old channel dried up and became tillable land, valuable for agricultural purposes, whereby the old bed of the river was vacated about 15 miles in length. This change in the bed or channel of the river became fixed and permanent; for, at the commencement of this suit it was the same as it was immediately after the change that occurred on the 5th day of July, 1867. The result was that the land between the channel of the river as it was prior to July 5th, 1867, and the channel as it was after that date and is now, was thrown on the east side of the Missouri river; whereas, prior to that date it had been on the west side.

The fundamental question in the case is whether the sudden and permanent change in the course and channel of the river, occurring on the 5th day of July, 1867, worked a change in the boundary line between the two states.

The former decisions of this court relating to boundary lines between states seem to make this case easy of solution.

In New Orleans v. United States, 10 Pet. 662, 717, 9 L. ed. 573, 594, argued elaborately by eminent lawyers, Mr. Webster among the number, this court said: "The question is well settled at common law, that the person whose land is bounded by a stream of water, which changes its course gradually by alluvial formations, [35] *shall still hold by the same boundary, including the accumulated soil. No other rule can be applied on just principles. Every proprietor whose land is thus bounded is subject to loss by the same means which may add to his territory; and as he is without remedy for his loss, in this way, he cannot be held accountable for his gain." It was added—what is pertinent to the present case—that "this rule is no less just when applied to public than to private rights." The subject was under consideration in Missouri v. Kentucky, 11 Wall. 395, 20 L. ed. 116, and Indiana v. Kentucky, 136 U. S. 479, 34 L. ed. 329, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1051. But it again came under consideration in Nebraska v. Iowa, 143 U. S. 359, 361, 367, 370, 36 L. ed. 186, 187, 190, 191, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 396, 398, 400. In the latter case, the court, after referring to the rule announced in New Orleans v. United States, and citing prior cases in which that rule had been recognized, said: "It is equally well settled that where a stream which is a boundary, from any cause suddenly abandons its old and seeks a new bed, such change of channel works no change of boundary; and that the boundary remains as it was, in the center of the old channel, although no water may be flowing therein. This sudden and rapid change of channel is termed, in the law, avulsion. In Gould, Waters, § 159, it is said: 'But if the change is violent and visible, and arises from a known cause, such as a freshet, or a cut through which a new channel is formed, the original thread of the stream continues to mark the limits of the two estates.' 2 Bl. Com. 262; Angell, Watercourses, § 60; Hopkins Academy v. Dickinson, 9 196 U. S.

Cush. 544; Buttenuth v. St. Louis Bridge Co. 123 Ill. 535, 5 Am. St. Rep. 545, 17 N. E. 439; Hagan v. Campbell, 8 Port. (Ala.) 9, 33 Am. Dec. 267; Den ex dem. Murry v. Sermon, 8 N. C. (1 Hawks) 56. These propositions, which are universally recognized as correct where the boundaries of private property touch on streams, are in like manner recognized where the boundaries between states or nations are, by prescription or treaty, found in running water. Accretion, no matter to which side it adds ground, leaves the boundary still the center of the channel. Avulsion has no effect on boundary, but leaves it in the center *of the old channel." Again, in the [36] same case, the court, referring to the very full examination of the authorities to be found in one of the opinions of Attorney General Cushing (8 Ops. Atty. Gen. 175), said: "The result of these authorities puts it beyond doubt that accretion on an ordinary river would leave the boundary between two states the varying center of the channel, and that avulsion would establish a fixed boundary; to wit, the center of the abandoned channel. It is contended, however, that the doctrine of accretion has no application to the Missouri river, on account of the rapid and great changes constantly going on in respect to its banks; but the contrary has already been decided by this court in Jeffries v. East Omaha Land Co. 134 U. S. 178, 189, 33 L. ed. 872, 876, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518." In Nebraska v. Iowa, it appeared that the Missouri river near the land there in dispute had pursued a course in the nature of an ox-bow, but it suddenly cut through the neck of the bow and made for itself a new channel. The court said: "This does not come within the law of accretion, but that of avulsion. By this selection of a new channel the boundary was not changed, and it remained as it was prior to the avulsion,—the center line of the old channel; and that, unless the waters of the river returned to their former bed, became a fixed and unvarying boundary, no matter what might be the changes of the river in its new channel."

Manifestly, these observations cover the present case and make it clear that the boundary line between Missouri and Nebraska in the vicinity of Island Precinct cannot be taken to be the middle of the channel of the Missouri river, as it has been since the avulsion of 1867 and now is, but must be taken to be the middle of the channel of the river as it was prior to such avulsion. We cannot see that there are any facts or circumstances that withdraw the present case from the rule established in former adjudications.

Counsel for Missouri contend that the act admitting Missouri into the Union, the memorial sent by the legislature of that state to Congress in 1831, and the [37] act of June 7, 1836, with the *proclamation of the President as to the extinguishment of Indian titles to lands between Missouri, as originally bounded, and the Missouri river, show that Congress intended that, so far as the boundary of the state of Missouri was concerned, the middle of the channel of the Missouri river, wherever it may be at any particular time,—and regardless of any changes, however caused or however extended, or permanent, suddenly occurring in its course or channel,—was to be taken as a perpetual, natural monument, fixing the boundary line. We cannot accept this view. We perceive no reason to believe that Congress intended, either by the acts of 1820 and 1836 relating to Missouri, or the act admitting Nebraska into the Union, to alter the recognized rules of law which fix the rights of parties where a river changes its course by gradual, insensible accretions, or the rules that obtain in cases where, by what is called avulsion, the course of a river is materially and permanently changed. Missouri does not dispute the fact that when Nebraska was admitted into the Union the body of land described in the present record as Island Precinct was in Nebraska. It is equally clear that those lands did not cease to be within the limits of Nebraska by reason of the avulsion of July 5th, 1867.

For the reasons stated we adjudge, in respect of the matters involved in this suit, that the middle of the channel of the Missouri river, according to its course as it was prior to the avulsion of July 5th, 1867, is the true boundary line between Missouri and Nebraska. Accordingly, the original bill must be dismissed, and a decree entered in favor of the state of Nebraska on its cross bill.

It appears from the record that about the year 1895 the county surveyors of Nemaha county, Nebraska, and Atchison county, Missouri, made surveys of the abandoned bed of the Missouri river, in the locality here in question, ascertained the location of the original banks of the river on either side, and, to some extent, marked the middle of the old channel. If the two states agree upon these surveys and loca- [38] tions as correctly *marking the original banks of the river and the middle of the old channel, the court will, by decree, give effect to that agreement; or, if either state desires a new survey the court will order one to be made, and cause monuments to be placed so as to permanently mark the boundary line between the two states. The disposition of the case by final decree is postponed for forty days, in order that the court may be advised as to the wishes of the parties in respect of these details.

ANDREW C. KEELY, Trustee, et al.,
Plffs. in Err.,

v.

JOSEPH H. MOORE et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 38-47.)

Wills — attestation — testamentary capacity—evidence—instructions.

1. The wholly unofficial certificate of a vice consul, appearing at the foot of a will executed abroad, if otherwise sufficient as an attestation, may be treated as such by disregarding the superfluous words, "Vice Consul, United States of America," appended to his signature.
2. An application for the admission of a testator to an insane asylum, and the certificate of two physicians, upon which the commitment was made, are inadmissible in evidence on the issue of his testamentary capacity, not only because they were unsworn testimony, but because they were given in a different proceeding and upon a different issue.
3. The issue of the testamentary capacity of a person who had once been insane was properly submitted to the jury by instructions that, if they found his insanity to be permanent in its nature and character, the presumption was that it would continue, and that the burden was upon the defendant to satisfy the jury, by a preponderance of testimony, that he was, at the time of executing the will, of sound mind.

[No. 55.]

Argued November '8, 9, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of that District, entered upon a verdict for defendants in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 22 App. D. C. 9.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action of ejectment brought in the supreme court of the District by grantees of the heirs at law of William Thomson against Joseph H. Moore and the NOTE.—On burden of proof of testamentary capacity—see note to Prentiss v. Bates, 17 L. R. A. 494.

As to presumption and burden of proof of sanity—see note to State v. Scott, 36 L. R. A. 721.

firm of Thomas J. Fisher & Company, agents of Mary Cecelia and Georgiana Hawkes Thomson, of the county of Kent, England, devisees under the will of William Thomson, to recover possession of an undivided ninety-one one hundredths of certain real estate in the city of Washington. Upon the trial it was admitted that William Thomson died in Southampton, England, in 1887, seised of the lot in question; that he was born in, and was a citizen of, the United States, leaving no issue or descendants. Plaintiffs had acquired the title of the heirs at law, and the defendants were in possession of the lot as life tenants under his alleged will.

The validity of the will and the due execution thereof were contested by the plaintiffs for reasons hereinafter indicated in the opinion. The trial resulted in a verdict for the defendants, upon which judgment was entered, and affirmed by the court of appeals. 22 App. D. C. 9.

Messrs. C. C. Cole and Hugh T. Taggart argued the cause, and, with Mr. Leo Simmons, filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The alleged will is not attested by three witnesses.

Clarke v. Turton, 11 Ves. Jr. 240.

Facts cannot be inferred because a party is unable to prove them.

Fulkerson v. Holmes, 117 U. S. 401, 29 L. ed. 919, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 780.

There is no room for presumption in this case.

Fresh v. Gilson, 16 Pet. 327, 10 L. ed. 982; Starkie, Ev. 80; United States v. Ross, 92 U. S. 281, 23 L. ed. 707; Chase v. Kittedge, 11 Allen, 49, 87 Am. Dec. 687; Pennel v. Weyant, 2 Harr. (Del.) 506; Schouler, Wills, § 348; Jarman, Wills, § 86; Boone v. Lewis, 103 N. C. 40, 14 Am. St. Rep. 783, 9 S. E. 644; Peake v. Jenkins, 80 Va. 293.

The attestation clause, with the signature of the witnesses, is prima facie evidence of the facts stated in it. It may be overcome by the witnesses themselves, or by other witnesses, or by facts and circumstances irreconcilable with it.

Mundy v. Mundy, 15 N. J. Eq. 293.

Although the witness was present at the execution, if he did not subscribe the instrument at the time, but did afterward, without the request of the parties, he is not a good attesting witness.

Hollenback v. Fleming, 6 Hill, 304.

When a testator has signed his name in the presence of two witnesses, and at his request they attest his signature, the execution is complete; and if a third person afterward adds his name, the court will not come to the conclusion, without cogent evidence, that that third person signed as an attesting witness.

Sharman's Goods, L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 662.

A testamentary paper is not entitled to probate unless the court is satisfied that the names of the alleged witnesses were subscribed on it for the purpose of attesting the testator's signature.

Wilson's Goods, L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 269.

In Ex parte Leroy, 3 Bradf. 227, where a person signed, intending to sign for another person, which person afterward signed himself, though there were two names, viz., father and son, appearing as witnesses to the will, the court refused to probate, holding that the will had only one witness.

And in Eynon's Goods, L. R. 3 Prob. & Div. 92, the deceased executed his will in the presence of the witnesses, one of whom also made a mark in attestation of the signature of the deceased. The second witness then wrote the names of the deceased and the witness opposite their respective marks, and also the word "witness," but he did not sign his own name. Held, that he did not, by any word he wrote, attest the signature of the deceased, and that the execution was invalid.

See also Hindmarsh v. Carlton, 8 H. L. Cas. 160; Patterson v. Ransom, 55 Ind. 402; Dunn v. Dunn, L. R. 1 Prob. & Div. 277.

An officer taking an acknowledgment is not a subscribing witness.

McDaniel v. Needham, 61 Tex. 269. See also Chaffee v. Baptist Missionary Convention, 10 Paige, 91, 40 Am. Dec. 225.

The evidence in this case shows that Thomson had only been out of the insane asylum a short time when it is alleged this paper was made. Under such circumstances the rule as to execution of wills should be adhered to more rigidly; otherwise the requirements of the law may as well be obliterated.

Re O'Dea, 84 Hun, 591, 33 N. Y. Supp. 463.

The action of the court below in excluding Cunningham's application for admission of Thomson to the asylum, and the medical certificate sent by him with it, finds no support in—

Ormsby v. Webb, 134 U. S. 65, 33 L. ed. 812, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; Davis v. Calvert, 5 Gill & J. 269, 25 Am. Dec. 282; Shailer v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112; Atkins v. Sanger, 1 Pick. 192; Lewis v. Mason, 109 Mass. 169.

Messrs. D. W. Baker and Wilton J. Lambert argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error:

No attestation clause is necessary in order to establish the fact that the witnesses signed in the presence of each other.

Roberts v. Phillips, 4 El. & Bl. 451; Welty v. Welty, 8 Md. 15; Porter's Will, 9 Mackey, 493.

The court properly permitted the will to go in evidence as prima facie proof of its due execution.

Chaffee v. Baptist Missionary Convention, 10 Paige, 91, 40 Am. Dec. 225; Collins v. Nicols, 1 Harr. & J. 399; Collins v. Elliott, 1 Harr. & J. 1; Welty v. Welty, 8 Md. 20; Croft v. Pawlet, 2 Strange, 1109; Dean v. Dean, 27 Vt. 749; Bennett v. Taylor, 9 Ves. Jr. 381; Carrington v. Payne, 5 Ves. Jr. 404; Sears v. Dillingham, 12 Mass. 358; Robinson v. Brewster, 140 Ill. 649, 33 Am. St. Rep. 265, 30 N. E. 683; Woodruff v. Hundley, 127 Ala. 640, 85 Am. St. Rep. 145, 29 So. 98; Adams v. Norris, 23 How. 353, 16 L. ed. 539; Fry's Will, 2 R. I. 88.

A will without an attestation clause passes real estate, where all of the witnesses are dead.

Throckmorton v. Holt, 12 App. D. C. 552.

When a subscribing witness is dead, or cannot be produced, proof of his handwriting is the next best secondary evidence.

Clarke v. Courtney, 5 Pet. 319, 8 L. ed. 140; Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32, 27 L. ed. 641, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313; Hanrick v. Patrick, 119 U. S. 156, 30 L. ed. 396, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147.

The mere fact that a witness to a will places a certificate thereon, instead of the attestation clause, or instead of merely signing it without an attestation clause, can in no way affect the efficacy of his signing the same; and he will be considered a witness, although he signed it in his official capacity and placed his certificate thereto.

Adams v. Norris, 23 How. 367, 16 L. ed. 544. See also Murray v. Murphy, 39 Miss. 214; Franks v. Chapman, 64 Tex. 159; Payne v. Payne, 54 Ark. 415, 16 S. W. 1.

Certificates of a character like the one here offered are not admissible in evidence.

Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308; Coyner v. Boyd, 55 Ind. 166; Erickson v. Smith, 38 How. Pr. 455; Shumway v. Leakey, 67 Cal. 458, 8 Pac. 12; Com. v. Heffron, 102 Mass. 148; Sewall v. Sewall, 122 Mass. 156, 23 Am. Rep. 299; Prigg v. Lansburgh, 5 App. D. C. 30; National Union v. Thomas, 10 App. D. C. 277; Snell v. United States, 16 App. D. C. 517; Greenl. Ev. §§ 493-498; State use of Grice v. Cecil County, 54 Md. 426; Germania L. Ins. Co. v. Ross Lewin, 24 Colo. 43, 65 Am. St. Rep. 215, 51 Pac. 488.

[40] *Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The validity of the will was attacked upon three grounds: 1st, that it has not the requisite number of witnesses to pass real estate in this District; 2d, that the testator was of unsound mind; 3d, that undue influence had been exercised by one of the designated executors, and others.

Thomson was a resident of Washington, but, at the time of and for some years prior to his death was the American consul at Southampton, England. One John H. Cooksey, a resident merchant at Southampton, was his vice consul. The will was prepared by Walter R. Lomer, a resident solicitor, and was executed at his office February 24, 1866. By this will he devised the property in controversy to the appellees Mary Cecelia Thomson and Georgiana Hawkes Thomson, his cousins, of Kent county, England, jointly for their joint lives, and to the survivor of them, with remainder to Mary Cunningham Roberts, of London, for life, and remainder in fee to her only son. The will, which was executed in duplicate, was written upon two sheets of paper, to each of which the testator affixed his name. It was witnessed in the usual form by Lomer and by one Linthorne, a clerk in his office, who attached their signatures in the presence of and at the request of the testator, and in the presence of each other. On the day after the execution of the will Thomson again went to the office of his solicitor, Lomer, who wrote a certificate of acknowledgment in the margin of the second and last page of the will, which was signed by Cooksey, the vice consul.

The original will, being of record in the Probate and Admiralty Division of the High Court of Justice in London, could not be produced, but was proved by a certificate and examined copy. The attestation clause and the certificate were as follows:

Signed and acknowledged by the said William Thomson, *the testator, as and for[41] his last will and testament in the presence of us, both being present at the same time, who at his request in his presence, and in the presence of each other have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses.

Walter R. Lomer,

Solicitor, Southampton, Eng.

R. Roupe Linthorne,

His Articled Clerk.

I hereby certify that William Thomson, consul at Southampton for the United States of America, attended before me this 25th day of February, 1886, and acknowledged the foregoing paper-writing contained in two sheets of paper as his last will and testament and that the signature "Wm. Thomson" at the foot thereof is in the proper handwriting of the said William Thomson.

[Seal U. S. Consul.] John H. Cooksey,
Vice Consul United States of America.

The execution of the will was proved by the two subscribing witnesses, Lomer and Linthorne, and the certificate by proof of the death of Cooksey, and the genuineness of his signature. This was proper. Clarke v. Courtney, 5 Pet. 319, 8 L. ed. 140; Stebbins v. Duncan, 108 U. S. 32, 27 L. ed. 641, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 313. At this time there was in force in this District the 5th section of the act of 29 Charles II., chapter 3, which had been adopted in Maryland in 1798, and carried into this District as § 4, chapter 70, of the Compiled Statutes of 1894. It provided as follows: "All devises and bequests of any lands or tenements, devisable by law, shall be in writing, and signed by the party so devising the same, or by some other person in his presence, and by his express directions, and shall be attested and subscribed in the presence of the said devisor by three or four credible witnesses, or else they shall be utterly void and of none effect."

[42] The object of the certificate in question is not entirely clear, though from the fact that Thomson took the will away with *him after its execution, and stated that he would attend before the consul general at London and obtain the requisite certificate, it would seem that he thought the certificate was necessary to the proof of the will in another country. He did not go to London, however, but called again at Mr. Lomer's office, with the request that he prepare the requisite certificate, which he afterwards procured Mr. Cooksey to sign. The certificate was not offered as proof that the will was a copy of the original, since it was annexed to the original, and we can consider it only as proof as to what it contains. It certifies, in substance, that the testator attended before Cooksey upon the day following the date of the will, acknowledged it to be his last will and testament, and that the signature is genuine. Whether he intended to certify that Thomson acknowledged his signature to be genuine, or that he, Cooksey, certified that it was genuine, is somewhat uncertain; but if the words "Vice Consul of the United States of America," which are merely superfluous, were omitted, there would be no failure to comply with the statute, unless in the omission to certify that Cooksey, the certifying officer, "attested and subscribed in the presence of the said devisor." But as it appears that Thomson, not knowing when he would be in London, took the certificate to the vice consul, and that the latter signed it, the jury might properly draw the conclusion that it was signed in the testator's presence. This would be the usual course of business, and the presumption is that Cooksey conformed to it and to his duty as a certifying officer.

The certificate was probably prepared under the belief that wills, like deeds, made in a foreign country, must be executed and acknowledged before some foreign official, or "before any (some) secretary of legation or consular officer of the United States" (Rev. Stat. § 1750; U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1196; D. C. Comp. Stat. chap. 58, § 6); but as such certificate was unofficial, and contributes nothing, as such, to the validity of the will, it can only be looked upon as the affirmation of an ordinary witness to the facts therein stated. No particular form of attestation was *nec-[43] essary, as appears to be the case in England and in several of the United States; and if the certificate of Cooksey had been written at the foot of the will and signed by himself and by the two witnesses, Lomer and Linthorne, it would have been a sufficient attestation. How, then, can it be regarded as insufficient when an attestation in one form is signed by two witnesses and an attestation in another form by a third? Bearing in mind that the certificate, if given any force at all, must be considered an attestation, we do not think that the fact that it may have been written and signed under a mistaken impression as to its necessity and purpose vitiates it as an attestation. What use was intended to be made of it is immaterial, if it were useless for any purpose as an official certificate. The facts certified are appropriate to the attestation of the instrument, and, if true, we see no reason for holding it to be invalid as an attestation because it was signed under the impression that it was necessary for some possible purpose as a certificate.

The case of Adams v. Norris, 23 How. 353, 16 L. ed. 539, is much in point. This was an action of ejectment for a parcel of land in California. Plaintiffs claimed through the heirs at law of one Grimes; defendants through the devisees in his will. The law required three witnesses to the validity of the will. Two of the witnesses signed in the usual manner, but above their signatures and beneath that of the testator was written: "Before me, in the absence of the two alcaldes, Roberto T. Ridley, Sindico." The sindico was counted among the witnesses, the court saying: "We comprise among the witnesses to the will, Ridley, the sindico. It does not appear that a sindico was charged with any function in the preparation or execution of testaments by the law or custom of California. Nor is it clear that the sindico in the present instance expected to give any sanction to the instrument by his official character. He attests the execution of the will, and we cannot perceive why the description of himself, which he affixes to his signature, should detract from the efficacy [44] of that attestation." As it did not *appear that the sindico or the two alcaldes were charged with any special duties, it was practically held that the certificate of acknowledgment, and the official character of the sindico, might be disregarded, and the signature treated as an attestation.

In the case of Clarke v. Turton, 11 Ves. Jr. 240, the will was executed abroad. It appears that three witnesses were required, apparently under the same act of Charles II. as in this case. The third signature was, as in this case, that of the vice consul, whose attestation was considered necessary to the validity of the act. The case is insufficiently reported, but the court held that the attestation was a memorandum of the vice consul, to operate as a certificate, "a separate act in his public character, and sealed with his official seal; and therefore it could not be said he subscribed as a witness." The question upon that point was sent to law, but it does not appear what disposition was made of it. It appears that the certificate was an official act, and treated as necessary, but the report fails to show what it contained, and, in the absence of such showing, the case is of little value.

The applicability, and, to some extent, the authority, of this case, is somewhat weakened by that of Griffiths v. Griffiths, L. R. 2 Prob. & Div. 300. The will was signed by the testator in the presence of two witnesses, who signed their names in his presence,—one opposite the word "Executors" and the other opposite the word "Witness." There was no attestation clause to the will. The deceased intended one of the witnesses to be his executor, and asked him to sign his name in that character. Lord Penzance held that such person did not sign the will exclusively as executor, but that he also intended by his signature to affirm that the deceased executed the will in his presence, and that consequently the will was valid. Somewhat to the same effect is Pollock v. Glassell, 2 Gratt. 439.

Conceding the 'general rule' to be that witnesses must intend to attest the will as witnesses, the inference is strong that Cooksey did so in this case, as he certifies to the genuineness of the signature of [45] Thomson and to the acknowledgment *of the will in his presence; and these are what would have been required by the law of this District had the instrument been a deed. It is argued that Cooksey did not intend to attest the will, but merely to sign the certificate; but the certificate of what? Only the fact that the will was acknowledged in his presence and that the signature was genuine. This is precisely the object of an attestation, and as an attestation we think it must be regarded. He may have supposed his official certificate of acknowledgment necessary to the execution of a will in a foreign country, but as he did certify personally to such acknowledgment the addition of his official title adds nothing to, and takes nothing from, the weight of his attestation. We must conclude that he intended to certify exactly what he did certify, and we are giving it exactly the effect he intended to give it.

If the certificate were an official act and material as a separate acknowledgment of the execution of the will, as in the acknowledgment of a deed, the case would be different, since it has never been supposed that a notary, who takes an acknowledgment of a deed, could be counted as a witness to the deed without a separate signature. But here the certificate was a wholly unofficial act, and we see no objection to disregarding the words "Vice Consul of the United States," and treating it as an acknowledgment of the execution before a competent witness. The acknowledgment of a will is really a feature of the attestation. The statute did not require that the deviser should sign the will in the presence of the witness, but that the witness should sign in the presence of the testator.

2. The evidence of Thomson's insanity was quite unsatisfactory. It appears that during the autumn or early winter of 1885 he was seized with an acute mania, and on December 15 was committed to a private insane asylum as a lunatic, upon the certificate of two physicians, and at the request of a cousin, named James E. Cunningham, a merchant of London, who appears to have taken temporary management of his affairs. He remained in the asylum about six weeks, and *on February [46] 1, 1886, somewhat more than three weeks before he executed his will, was discharged as probably cured,—in reality granted a leave of absence on probation. The belief in his cure being justified by his subsequent conduct, a formal order of discharge was entered on the record of the asylum on June 26, 1886. Lomer and Linthorne, the witnesses who were present at the execution of the will, and Septimus Cooksey, the son of the vice consul, all testified to the mental capacity of the testator at that time.

In this connection exception was taken to the exclusion of the application of James E. Cunningham for the admission of Thomson to the insane asylum, and of the certificate of the two physicians as to his insanity. These were properly excluded, not only because they were unsworn testimony, but because they were given in a different proceeding and upon a different issue. Thomson may have been insane to the extent of being dangerous if set at liberty, and yet may have had sufficient mental capacity to make a will, to enter into contracts, transact business, and be a witness. In the case of Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308, the admission of similar testimony was treated as error. In addition to this, however, these certificates were both dated December 14, 1885, more than two months before the will was made, and are by no means inconsistent with the other testimony that he was released from the asylum as cured February 1, 1886, and that three weeks after that, when he executed the will, he appeared to be of sound and disposing mind and memory.

In addition to the proof of his commitment to the asylum, and of his undoubted insanity prior and for some time subsequent thereto, there was slight evidence of insane acts during the month of February, though there was no opinion expressed by anyone that he was incapable of making a valid deed or contract. The whole testimony regarding his insanity was duly submitted to the jury, who were instructed that if they found his insanity to be permanent in its nature and character, the presumptions were that it would continue, [47] and the *burden was upon the defendant to satisfy the jury by a preponderance of testimony that he was, at the time of executing the will, of sound mind. There was no error in this instruction.

There were also a large number of exceptions taken to the admission or exclusion of testimony and to the charge of the court, but to consider them in detail would subserve no useful purpose. We have examined them carefully, and have come to the conclusion that there was no ruling of the court of which the plaintiffs were entitled to complain. The evidence of insanity was very slight, and there was no legal testimony to show that the will was executed under the pressure of an undue influence.

The judgment of the Court of Appeals is, therefore, affirmed.

196 U. S.

MARTHA I. HUNT, Plff. in Err.,
v.

SPRINGFIELD FIRE & MARINE INSURANCE COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 47-50.)

Insurance—condition against chattel mortgage.

A condition in a policy of fire insurance for the unconditional and sole ownership of the property by the insured, and for the nonexistence of any chattel mortgage thereon, was broken where certain trust deeds of the property had been executed to secure payment of money, whose legal effect is practically the same as that of a chattel mortgage with power of sale.

[No. 65.]

Argued December 1, 2, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District in favor of defendant in an action on a policy of insurance. Affirmed.

See same case below, 20 App. D. C. 48.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was an action to recover on a policy of insurance upon household furniture and ornaments.

Defense: That it was provided that the policy should be *void if the interest of [48] the insured was other than the unconditional and sole ownership of the property insured, or if the "said property should be or become encumbered by a chattel mortgage," when in fact it was subject, at the time the policy was written, to three trust deeds to secure the payment of various sums of money. Plaintiff demurred to the pleas setting up this defense. The court overruled the demurrer, entered judgment for the defendant, which was affirmed by the court of appeals. 20 App. D. C. 48.

Messrs. John C. Gittings and D. W. Baker argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Andrew B. Duvall argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court:

The sole question presented by the rec-

NOTE.—On conditions in insurance policy against encumbrance—see notes to German Ins. Co. v. Gray, 8 L. R. A. 73, and Russell v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co. 4 L. R. A. 539.

As to mortgage as affecting change of title or interest in insured property—see note to Sun Fire Office v. Clark, 38 L. R. A. 562.

ord in this case is whether the provision in the policy for the unconditional ownership of the property by the plaintiff, and for the nonexistence of any chattel mortgage thereon, was broken by certain trust deeds to secure the payment of money in each case.

Plaintiff relies upon the familiar principle of law that the *conditions of a policy of insurance, prepared, as they are, by the company, and virtually thrust upon the insured, frequently without his knowledge, must be construed strictly, and, while the legal effect of a chattel mortgage and of a deed of trust to secure the payment of money may be practically the same, they are in law different instruments; and that a condition against one is not broken by the existence of the other. We recognize the rule laid down by this court in Thompson v. Phenix Ins. Co. 136 U. S. 287, 34 L. ed. 408, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1019, that in case of attempted forfeiture, if the policy be fairly susceptible of two constructions, the one will be adopted which is more favorable to the insured. This rule was reiterated in McMaster v. New York L. Ins. Co. 183 U. S. 25, 46 L. ed. 64, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10, but we cannot recognize it as applicable to this case.

A deed of trust and chattel mortgage with power of sale are practically one and the same instrument as understood in this District. In the language of Mr. Justice Morris, in speaking of mortgages of real estate in Middleton v. Parke, 3 App. D. C. 149:

"The deed of trust is the only form of mortgage that has been in general use in the District of Columbia for many years. The common-law mortgage is practically unknown with us; and everyone understands that, when a mortgage of real estate here is spoken of, the deed of trust is what is intended. . . . The deed of trust is here used as the equivalent of a mortgage; and so the term is universally used by the community. Indeed, while a mortgage is not necessarily, perhaps, a deed of trust, a deed of trust to secure the loan of money is necessarily a mortgage."

It was said by this court in Skullaber v. Robinson, 97 U. S. 68-78, 24 L. ed. 967-970, that, "if there is a power of sale, whether in the creditor or in some third person to whom the conveyance is made for that purpose, it is still in effect a mortgage, though in form a deed of trust; and may be foreclosed by sale in pursuance of the terms in which the power is conferred, or by suit in chancery."

[50] *The legal effect of the two instruments has been recognized as practically the same in several cases in this and other courts.

Platt v. Union P. R. Co. 99 U. S. 48-57, 25 L. ed. 424-427; Palmer v. Gurnsey, 7 Wend. 248; Eaton v. Whiting, 3 Pick. 484; Wheeler & W. Mfg. Co. v. Howard, 28 Fed. 741; Bartlett v. Teah, 1 McCrary, 176, 1 Fed. 768; Southern P. R. Co. v. Doyle, 8 Sawy. 60, 11 Fed. 253; McLane v. Paschal, 47 Tex. 365.

There may be cases under particular statutes recognizing a difference between them in reference to the application of the recording laws, as appears to be the case in Maryland (Charles v. Clagett, 3 Md. 82), but in their essential features and in their methods of enforcement they are practically identical. Both are transfers conditioned upon the payment of a sum of money; both are enforceable in the same manner, and the difference between them is one of name rather than substance. The provision in the policy is one for the protection of the insurer, who is entitled, if he insists upon it in his questions, to be apprised of any fact which qualifies or limits the interest of the insured in the property, and would naturally tend to diminish the precautions he might take against its destruction by fire.

In passing upon the identity of the two instruments in this case we may properly refer to the further provision of the policy that the interest of the insured must be an unconditional and sole ownership. While the breach of this condition is not specifically urged in the briefs, we may treat it as explanatory of the other condition against the existence of a chattel mortgage. The company evidently intended by this provision to protect itself against conditional transfers of every kind. The contract of the company is a personal one with the insured, and it is not bound to accept any other person to whom the latter may transfer the property.

The conditions of the policy in this case were broken by the trust deeds, and the judgment of the court below is, therefore, affirmed.

*TEXAS & PACIFIC RAILWAY COM-[51]
PANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.

W. W. SWEARINGEN.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 51-64.)

Evidence of assumption of risk — master and servant—duty to provide safe place for employees — employee's imputed knowledge.

1. Excerpts from an application for employ-

NOTE.—On the liability of railroad company for injuries to an employee from projections

196 U. S.

ment as a railway brakeman tending to show the applicant's knowledge of the generally hazardous nature of the employment, and of the necessity of the exercise of care in working in and about the instrumentalities used by the railway company, and his agreement to acquaint himself with the location of bridges and other structures on the line, are inadmissible in evidence on the issue whether he had assumed the risk, when subsequently employed as a switchman, incident to the location of a scale box in dangerous proximity to the rails.

2. A railway company cannot be said, as a matter of law, to have performed its duty to use due care to provide a reasonably safe place for the use of switchmen in its employ when it has located scales where the tracks were only the standard distance apart, leaving a space of less than 2 feet for the movements of a switchman between the side of a freight car and the scale box, when encumbered with a lantern employed for signal purposes,—especially if the necessity of the situation did not require the scales to be constructed in that way.
3. Knowledge of the increased hazard resulting from the dangerous proximity to the rails of a railway scale box cannot be imputed to a switchman simply because he was aware of the existence and general location of the box.

[No. 48.]

Submitted November 3, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of Texas in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover damages for personal injuries, which had been removed to that court from the District Court of El Paso County, in that state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 59 C. C. A. 31, 122 Fed. 193.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John F. Dillon and D. D. Duncan submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Mr. T. J. Freeman was on their brief:

In every case, before the evidence is left to the jury there is a preliminary question for the judge, not whether there is literally no evidence, but whether there is any evidence upon which a jury can properly proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it, upon whom the burden of proof is imposed.

Schuylkill & D. Improv. & R. Co. v. Munson, 14 Wall. 448, 20 L. ed. 867; Marion County v. Clark, 94 U. S. 278, 284, 24 L. ed. 59, 61; Pleasants v. Fant, 22 Wall. 120, 22 L. ed. 782; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 482, 27 L. ed. 1005, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Converse, 139 U. S. 469–472, 35 L. ed. 213–215, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569; Schoefield v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 114 U. S. 615–619, 29 L. ed. 224, 225, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1125; Quebec S. S. Co. v. Merchant, 133 U. S. 375, 33 L. ed. 656, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 397.

(a) When a servant enters into the employment of another he assumes all the risks ordinarily incident to the business. He is presumed to have contracted in reference to all the hazards and risks ordinarily incident to the employment; consequently he cannot recover for injuries resulting to him therefrom.

(b) The servant takes the risks of the master's mode of conducting his business, though a safer one might be followed, if the servant fully knows the risk and continues to work.

(c) There are risks and dangers incident to most employments. Those risks the parties have in view when engagements for services are made, and in consideration of which the rate of compensation is fixed. In all engagements of this character the servant assumes those risks that are incident to the service, and, as between himself and the master, he is supposed to have contracted on those terms, and if an injury is sustained by the servant in that service it is regarded as an accident, and the misfortune must rest on him.

Wood, Mast. & S. 2d ed. § 326; 3 Wood, Railway Law, § 370, p. 1452; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, Master & Servant, p. 843, Master's Business Methods, p. 845; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Minnick, 6 C. C. A. 387, 13 U. S. App. 520, 57 Fed. 362; Tuttle v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 122 U. S. 189, 30 L. ed. 1114, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1166; Randall v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 109 U. S. 478, 27 L. ed. 1003, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Conrad, 62 Tex. 627; Woodworth v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 5 McCrary, 574, 18 Fed. 282; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Somers, 71 Tex. 700, 9 S. W. 741; Green v. Cross, 79 Tex. 130, 15 S. W. 220; Naylor v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 53 Wis. 661, 11 N. W. 24; Wonder v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 32 Md. 411, 3 Am. Rep. 143; Tillotson v. Texas & P. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 95, 10 So. 400; Kohn v. McNulta, 147 U. S. 238, 37 L. ed. 150, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 298; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Spivey (Tex. Civ. App.) 73 S. W. 973.

When the proof establishes a usage or cusor structures dangerously near the track—see note to Union P. R. Co. v. James, 41 L. ed. U. S. 236.

On employee's assumption of risk—see notes 196 U. S.

to O'Maley v. South Boston Gaslight Co. 47 L. R. A. 161; Southern P. Co. v. Seley, 38 L. ed. U. S. 391, and Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Hennessey, 38 C. C. A. 314.

tom, the presumption is that the employee contracted with regard to said usage or custom; and if he seeks to avoid its force and effect, the burden is upon him to show that its existence had been concealed from him by the company, and that he did not know of the same, and could not have known of the same by the use of ordinary diligence.

Watson v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 58 Tex. 437.

Mr. Leigh Clark submitted the cause for defendant in error:

Clauses and provisions in applications for employment like the one in question are held void under the laws of Texas, as an effort to limit or avoid liability for one's own negligence, and therefore against public policy; and the courts will not give effect to them indirectly when refusing so to do directly.

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Darby, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 413, 67 S. W. 446.

There was no assumption of risk.

Central Trust Co. v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 73 Fed. 661; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Archibald, 170 U. S. 674, 42 L. ed. 1192, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; George v. Clark, 29 C. C. A. 374, 56 U. S. App. 505, 85 Fed. 608; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Darby, 28 Tex. Civ. App. 413, 67 S. W. 446.

It is only where the facts are such that reasonable men must draw the same conclusion from them that the question of negligence is ever considered as one of law for the court.

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Ives, 144 U. S. 408, 417, 36 L. ed. 485, 489, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 679; Gardner v. Michigan C. R. Co. 150 U. S. 349, 361, 37 L. ed. 1107, 1110, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 140; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Powers, 149 U. S. 44, 37 L. ed. 642, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 748; Union P. R. Co. v. O'Brien, 161 U. S. 451, 40 L. ed. 766, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 618.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit was commenced in a state court by W. W. Swearingen, the defendant in error, and, on the application of the defendant, the Texas & Pacific Railway Company, was removed to the circuit court of the United States as one arising under the laws of the United States, because the railway company was chartered under an act of Congress.

The action was to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by reason of the alleged negligence of the defendant company, in whose service at the time of the injury the plaintiff was employed as a switchman. The negligence alleged on the part of the company was the existence, in close proximity to a switch track, of a scale box, by striking against which the plaintiff was injured whilst doing duty as a switchman. In addition to a general denial the railway company specially pleaded that the scale box in question was at a safe distance from the track on which the plaintiff was hurt when working, and, moreover, that the plaintiff had assumed the risk, if any, arising from the situation of the scale box, and had, in any event, been guilty of contributory negligence. There was a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, and an affirmance of such judgment by the court of appeals. 59 C. C. A. 31, 122 Fed. 193.

The assignments of error are based, first, on a ruling of the trial court in rejecting evidence; second, on the refusal to direct a verdict; and, third, on an exception taken to the charge *given to the[54] jury. To pass upon them requires an appreciation of the proof, and therefore, before coming to consider the assignments, we summarize the testimony.

The accident occurred after dark on the evening of February 7, 1902, in the switch yards at El Paso. It was shown that in that yard there were several tracks. One track, No. 1, ran over the bed of the scales in question. On the right of this scale there was what was called a scale box, which rose to about the height of 6 feet, and was about 5 feet wide and 18 inches deep. On the other side of this structure there was a track described as track No. 2, and beyond this, to the right, were two other tracks, known respectively as track No. 3 and track No. 4. The space between a ladder on the side of a freight car when moving on track No. 2 and the scale box in question was shown by the evidence to be only 19½ inches.

The plaintiff testified concerning the accident as follows:

"I was hurt on the evening of the 7th of February, 1902, while working as a switchman after dark, at about 6 o'clock and 45 minutes.

"I was a day switchman, but we worked until after dark.

"My duties as a switchman was to assist in the moving, placing, and switching of cars, coupling and uncoupling them, and making up trains, and generally to obey the order of Yardmaster Moore, under whom we were working, and my duties also required me to ride on the cars while they were being moved.

"On this night we were making up a transfer to take to the Southern Pacific Railway, and the cars we had to get were on No. 2 track. My station was with the engine, called 'following the engine.' I worked up near the engine.

"The engine was at the west end of the yards, west of track No. 2, with me with it, and it backed down east into No. 2 track, with me riding on the footboard at the east end of the engine, to get these cars, and we passed the scale box, although I did not see it, and reaching the cars I coupled the engine to them, and not getting a signal from the yardmaster, who [55] was still *farther east of me, as was also the other switchman, Williams, I walked east down the string of cars about two car lengths, and getting the signal I passed the same to the engineer, and the engine and cars started up again going west so as to go out on another track, and as the cars started I got up on a box car to ride down past the switch at the west end of track No. 2, so as to throw the switch and let the train on another track.

"There is a ladder on the side of a box car, and a step called a stirrup under the ladder under the bottom of the car, and I was holding on to the ladder with my hands [illustrating by holding his hands above his head, as if climbing a ladder], and my lantern was hanging on my right arm, and I was looking back east for a signal from the yardmaster, as it is my duty to do. I do not know whether he wanted to give one or not, but it is my duty to be on the lookout, although I do not have to look in his direction all the time, when my right shoulder struck the scale box, and I fell down between the scale box and the cars, and I was dragged and badly injured. We had probably eight or ten cars at the time, and I was riding properly and hanging out a little from the car, which is proper, and I was on the north side of the car, which is also proper, so as to signal the engineer."

The employee who built the scales testified as follows:

"It is my business to know how much a car passing on a side track will clear the scale box, and these tracks at this place are standard gauge apart, and the scale box is standard, and as I had to put the scale box there to facilitate business and for convenience, I had no more room because the lever of the scale is a certain length to get the fulcrum. The tracks are standard, and are not further apart because there is no more room to put them farther apart.

"The distance that I put this scale box from track No. 2 is standard, and is considered a safe and proper distance in putting in scales where the tracks are standard gauge apart.

[56] *"I am bound to put my scales in according to the length of the lever, and if tracks are already there and are standard distance apart I have a uniform and standard distance from the tracks.

196 U. S.

"We have side tracks at most places on each side of the scales. The tracks in this yard are standard gauge apart, and where ground is scarce we have to economize in space; but where ground is plenty the tracks can be further apart."

The evidence for the company also showed that the scales in question had been erected a number of years prior to the happening of the accident and after tracks Nos. 1 and 2 were built. The superintendent of terminals of the defendant company testified that "south of track No. 4 there is a space left for four or five more tracks." The same witness also stated that the customary position of a switchman while riding on a car and ladder "is to swing out from the car with his body," and that "a well-developed man cannot safely pass by the scale box on track No. 2, while riding on a side of a car on the ladder, if he hangs out from the car."

There was evidence that at other yards than the one in question the distances from the side of a standard box car to adjoining scale boxes varied from 16 inches to 168 inches.

Testimony was introduced tending to show that the plaintiff, before he was hurt, knew of the proximity of the scale box to track No. 2. Concerning his employment and knowledge of the location of the scales, plaintiff testified that he had made one trip as extra brakeman in the service of the railway company in January, 1900; that in December, 1901, as brakeman, he made about one trip between El Paso and Toyah; that he had worked in the El Paso yards as extra switchman two nights and three days in January, 1902, and went to work there regularly as switchman on February 1, 1902. He denied any recollection of ever having worked on track No. 2 during his employment in January, 1902, and, referring to his employment in the early days of February, 1902, plaintiff says:

*"During the seven days I worked for defendant we never used this No. 2 track at the west end, or near the scales, and I never saw a car on track No. 2, opposite the scales, and never had my attention called to the distance between the track and scale box. I never measured or approximated the distance to it. Nothing ever occurred to attract my attention to it.

"I knew we had to pass the scale box at the time I was hurt, so as to get to the switch beyond, but I was not thinking about it, and I did not see it when we passed it going in after these cars.

"The switch engine had a headlight lighted at both ends, and I was on the footboard at the rear of the engine, which put me in front while we were backing into track No. 2 after the cars, but the headlights were not very clean or bright.

"There was nothing to hide the scale box from my view; it was perfectly open and apparent."

Plaintiff further testified:

"I knew the location of the scale before I was hurt. I knew it was between tracks Nos. 1 and 2, but I did not know anything with reference to its proximity to track No. 2, and did not know it was dangerously close to track No. 2.

"At the time I was hurt, I had no knowledge of the distance between the scale box and No. 2 track.

"I set cars on the scale on track No. 1 to be weighed, but I would be on the north side of the cars on track No. 1, and as the scale box is on the south side I could not see it. I had nothing to do with the scale box and had no business around it.

"I first learned the exact distance between the scale box and the nearest rail of track No. 2 a few days ago, when I went down and measured it at your (referring to plaintiff's attorney) recommendation.

"I was never warned about the danger of getting knocked off of cars by this scale [58]box, and at the time I was hurt I *was attending to my work, and thinking about my duties, and looking for a signal from the yardmaster, and was not thinking about the box. I did not see it immediately prior to the time I struck it.

"The scale box was at the same place, when I struck it, as it was when I first went to work for defendant."

The evidence was closed by the offer on behalf of the company of portions of a written application by plaintiff for employment as brakeman, dated February 22, 1900. After stating that the plaintiff identified the application, the bill of exceptions recites as follows:

"Defendant then offered in evidence the following portions of said application, consisting of questions and the answers thereto written by the plaintiff, for the purpose of showing that plaintiff had notice of the location of said track scale box, and that he was in danger of being knocked off of a car when passing the same:

"Q. 'Do you make this application for employment in train service, realizing the hazardous nature of such employment, understanding that it is necessary in operating this railway for the company to have overhead and truss bridges at certain points on the line; also coal chutes, track scale boxes, water tanks, coal houses, platforms, sheds, roofs, and other overhead and side structures, and that in performance of the duties for which you are employed you are liable to receive injuries by being knocked off the side or top of cars unless you use due care to avoid injury thereby?"

"A. 'Yes.'

"Q. 'Do you agree to acquaint yourself with the location of all overhead and truss bridges, as well as the location of all other structures along the line of the road?"

"A. 'Yes.'

"Q. 'Do you understand that no officer or employee of this company is authorized to request or require you to use defective tracks, cars, machinery, or appliances of any kind, and that when you do so you assume all risk of injury therefrom?"

"A. 'Yes.'

[59]

"Q. 'Do you understand that this company desires to employ only experienced men in the service, and does not undertake to educate inexperienced men?"

"A. 'Yes.'

"Counsel for plaintiff objected to the said testimony for the reason that it was irrelevant and immaterial, and that plaintiff had made this application and entered the employ of defendant, and afterwards resigned, and again entered the employ of the defendant some two years later, without making another application, and also because it was an effort on the part of defendant to limit its liability for its own negligence, and void, as against public policy, and because the particular location of this track scale box is not given; and the court having sustained plaintiff's objections, and excluded said testimony, the defendant then and there excepted to the action of the court in excluding said evidence, and tenders this, its bill of exceptions, which is allowed, signed, and sealed by the court."

The first assignment of error assails the affirmance by the court of appeals of the action of the trial court in refusing to receive in evidence the matter just referred to.

These excerpts were offered in evidence, as stated in the bill of exceptions, "for the purpose of showing that plaintiff had notice of the location of said track scale box, and that he was in danger of being knocked off a car when passing the same."

The application was made in February, 1900, and was for employment, not as switchman, but as brakeman. The employment of the plaintiff with the defendant company following the application was in December, 1901, when the plaintiff, as a brakeman, made about a dozen trips between El Paso and a place called Toyah.

His subsequent employment as switchman commenced but a short time before the happening, in February, 1902, of the accident complained of.

We think the trial court rightly excluded the offered evidence. In the first place, [60] the plaintiff had testified that *before the accident he had knowledge of the existence of the scale box. In the next place, while undoubtedly the statements in the application tended to show that the plaintiff was aware of the generally hazardous nature of the employment, and the necessity of the exercise of care in working with and about the instrumentalities employed by the company in the operation of its railroad, the recognition of these facts by the plaintiff, and his agreement to acquaint himself with the location of bridges and other structures on the line of the road, did not tend to establish notice, communicated to the plaintiff, that the defendant company had not exercised due care in placing scales or scale boxes on its tracks, or that the company had, by its negligence, increased the ordinary hazards to be expected from the use of such structures, and that, by the exercise of ordinary care on his part, plaintiff could not escape injury. The evidence was therefore immaterial in the light of the issue upon which the jury had to pass.

At the close of all the evidence the defendant company requested the court to charge the jury to return a verdict for the defendant, and to the overruling of such motion the defendant company duly excepted. The second assignment alleges error in the affirmance by the court of appeals of the action of the trial court denying this motion.

The right to have the jury instructed to find for the company was based upon the following contention:

"a. Because the undisputed evidence established that said track scale box was erected in the defendant's yard, and, under the circumstances, in a reasonably safe place, and at a reasonably safe distance and location from track No. 2, on which track plaintiff was riding at the time he was injured.

"b. Because plaintiff testified he knew of the location of the track scale box and the location of track No. 2 with reference to said track scale box, on which track No. 2 he was riding at the time he was hurt, and because the undisputed evidence shows that the track scale box and the danger of the same was open and obvious to the [61] view of plaintiff, and that neither *the track scale box nor the dangers thereof were hidden or latent, and plaintiff was presumed to know the danger, and assumed the risks thereof.

"c. Because the uncontroverted testimony established the fact that plaintiff knew of the location of the track scale box, and location of said track No. 2 with reference to said track scale box, on which track he was riding at the time he was hurt, and that the track scale box and the dangers of the same were open and obvious to the view of plaintiff, and not hidden or latent, and plaintiff was presumed to know the danger, and assumed the risk."

The motion was properly overruled. So far from it being the fact, as asserted, that the evidence established indisputably the existence of the grounds upon which the motion was based, the record shows that there was evidence tending to establish that the track scale box was not erected in a reasonably safe place, and that, although the plaintiff knew that the scale box was situated adjacent to track No. 2, he did not know that it was so near that it could not be passed, in the performance of his duties as a switchman, without danger. This is apparent when it is borne in mind that the plaintiff testified, in substance, that prior to the accident he had not closely inspected the scale box or taken measurements of the distance from the box to the north rail of track No. 2, and that he did not do more than cursorily observe the structure from a distance, and that he was unaware of the nearness of the scale box to the north rail of track No. 2.

Prima facie, the location of scales where the tracks were only the standard distance apart, and where a space of less than 2 feet was left for the movements of a switchman between the side of a freight car and the scale box, encumbered, as he would be in the nighttime, with a lantern employed for the purpose of signaling, did not incontestably establish the performance by the defendant company of the duty imposed upon it to use due care to provide a reasonably safe place for the use of the switchmen in its employ. And so far from the *proof making it certain [62] that the necessity of the situation required the erection of the structure between tracks Nos. 1 and 2 as existing, there was proof that the railway company owned unoccupied ground, intended for other tracks, to the south of track No. 4, justifying the inference that the distance between tracks Nos. 1 and 2 might have been increased, and the employment of the scales thus rendered less hazardous to switchmen, or that the scales might have been removed to a safer location.

It was, therefore, properly a question for the determination of the jury whether or not the scales were maintained in a reasonably safe place, and if not, whether the plaintiff had notice thereof. The court of appeals was of opinion, and rightly we think, that the dangerous contiguity of the scale box to track No. 2, and the extra hazard to switchmen resulting therefrom, was not so open and obvious on other than a close inspection, as to justify taking from the jury the determination of the question whether there had been an assumption of the risk. The plaintiff was entitled to assume that the defendant company had used due care to provide a reasonably safe place for the doing by him of the work for which he had been employed, and as the fact that the defendant company might not have performed such duty in respect to the scale box in question was not so patent as to be readily observable, the court could not declare, in view of the testimony of the plaintiff as to his actual want of knowledge of the danger, that he had assumed the hazard incident to the actual situation. Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. McDade, 191 U. S. 64, 68, 48 L. ed. 96, 100, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 24.

The remaining assignment of error questions the correctness of the following portion of the charge to the jury:

"The defendant claims that the plaintiff knew of the existence and location of the scale box with which he came in contact, and that, by continuing in the work, with such knowledge, he assumed all risks incident to and arising out of his employment. Upon this point you are instructed [63] that, if you believe *from the testimony that prior to the plaintiff's injuries he knew of the existence and location of the scale box, and of the danger incident to the discharge of his duties while passing the same on a moving train, if danger there was; or if, knowing of the location of the structure, the danger to the employees while in the usual discharge of their duties was apparent, that is, open to observation,—then you are instructed that the plaintiff, by continuing in the employment of the defendant without complaint, assumed such risks, and he would not, therefore, be entitled to recover. In this connection you are further instructed that the mere fact that the plaintiff knew of the existence and location of the scale box would not, as a matter of law, charge him with knowledge of the danger, if such danger there was, due to its proximity to the north rail of track No. 2, and whether he knew of the danger is a question of fact for you to determine from a consideration of all the facts and circumstances in evidence."

The grounds of the objection to the charge being thus stated:

"Because the proof showed that plaintiff knew of the location of the track scale box, and of track No. 2, on which he was riding at the time he was hurt, in reference to a scale box, and that the same and the location thereof was open and obvious to plaintiff's view, and, being an experienced brakeman, he was charged with notice that riding on the cars as he did was dangerous, and he assumed the risks thereof, and the court should have so charged the jury."

This assignment but reiterates contentions made in connection with the assignment based on the alleged error in overruling the motion for judgment. As we have already decided that knowledge of the increased hazard resulting from the dangerous proximity of the scale box to the north rail of track No. 2 could not be imputed to the plaintiff simply because he was aware of the existence and general location of the scale box, it was for the jury to determine, from a consideration of all the facts and circumstances in evidence, whether plaintiff had actual knowledge of the danger.

We find no error in the judgment of the [64] Circuit Court of Appeals, and it is affirmed.*

T. B. LEE, Jr., Plff. in Err
v.

H. S. ROBINSON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 64-67.)

Revenue bond scrip—validity of, under state Constitution.

The issue of revenue bond scrip under S. C. act of March 2, 1872, to relieve the state of South Carolina of all liability on its guaranty indorsed upon railway bonds by authority of the act of September 15, 1868, when, as this statute shows on its face, there was no outstanding liability represented by the guaranty, comes within the prohibition of art. 9, § 10 of the state Constitution of April 16, 1868, against issuing scrip except for the redemption of an "evidence of indebtedness previously issued," where neither statute purported to be an adjustment of a claim against the state, permitted by art. 14, § 4, of that Constitution.

[No. 81.]

Argued December 6, 7, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the District of South Carolina to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover land bought by the purchaser at a tax sale, in which the defense was set up of a tender which included revenue bond scrip of that state. Affirmed.

See same case below, 122 Fed. 1012.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Lyles argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Mr. D. W. Robinson argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error.

Mr. William Elliott, Jr., by leave of court filed a brief as amicus curiæ.

Mr. Justice Holmes delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover land, brought by Robinson, the defendant in error, a citizen and resident of North Carolina, against Lee, a citizen and resident of South Carolina, on the ground that Robinson had purchased the land at a tax sale.

[65] *The value of the land is alleged and found to be more than $2,000. The defense is that a tender was made of the amount of the taxes before the sale. This tender included, as a part of it, revenue bond scrip of the state of South Carolina for $5, purporting on its face to be receivable in payment of taxes, and the question is whether the tender was good; or, more precisely, whether the bond scrip was receivable for taxes under the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution and laws of South Carolina. The circuit court held the tender bad, on the double ground that the issue of the scrip was in contravention of the Constitution of the state and that the scrip was a bill of credit within the prohibition of article 1, § 10, of the Constitution of the United States. 122 Fed. 1012. Judgment was given for the plaintiff, Robinson, and this writ of error was brought, setting up that the contract rights of the defendant under the Constitution of the United States were impaired by the laws hereafter mentioned which excluded the reception of the scrip for the tax.

Counsel other than those representing the parties was permitted to file a brief as amicus curiæ, and urged that this was a collusive suit. But the circuit court held that it was not (122 Fed. 1010), and we accept the finding for the purposes of disposing of the case.

The revenue bond scrip was issued under an act of March 2, 1872, entitled "An Act to Relieve the State of South Carolina of All Liability for Its Guaranty of the Bonds of the Blue Ridge Railroad Company, by Providing for the Securing and Destruction of the Same." This act purported to authorize the issue to the amount of $1,800,000, "which revenue bond scrip shall be signed by the state treasurer, and shall express that the sum mentioned therein is due by the state of South Carolina to the bearer thereof, and that the same will be received in payment of taxes and all other dues to the state, except special tax levied to pay interest on the public debt." But the supreme court of the state held that the scrip constituted bills of credit within the prohibition of the Constitution of the *United States, article 1, § 10. State ex [66] rel. Shiver v. Comptroller General, 4 S. C. N. S. 185. The pledge of the state's credit and the provisions for the redemption of the scrip were repealed by the legislature, and, under the fiscal laws of the state, the scrip had not been receivable for taxes since 1873.

We are of opinion that the issue of the scrip was forbidden by the Constitution of the state. When the scrip was issued, the Constitution of South Carolina, ratified on April 16, 1868, in article 9, § 10, provided as follows: "No scrip, certificate, or other evidence of state indebtedness shall be issued except for the redemption of stock, bonds, or other evidence of indebtedness previously issued, or for such debts as are expressly authorized in this Constitution." There was also a further provision that "any debt contracted by the state shall be by loan on state bonds, of amounts not less than $50 each, on interest payable within twenty years after the final passage of the law authorizing such debt."

The guaranty from which the scrip was to relieve the state was a guaranty of bonds of the Blue Ridge Railroad Company, which was indorsed upon them by authority of an act approved September 15, 1868. The state long had favored this road, and had held its stock. It had authorized the guaranty of bonds in 1852, and again in 1854, repealing the former act. But the act of 1868 recited that the comptroller general of the state had not indorsed any of the bonds issued under the act of 1854, and that the conditions imposed upon such indorsement had become impossible and injudicious. So it might be assumed from the face of the statute of 1868 that there was no outstanding liability represented by the guaranty under that statute, and we see no ground for doubt that the guaranty must be considered as a new contract, made for the first time, in substance as well as form, after the Constitution of 1868 went into effect.

The guaranty under the act of 1868 cannot be put under the head of "such debts as are expressly authorized in this Constitution," since it was not in the form required for debts *contracted under the Constitution of 1868. We are of opinion that it equally little satisfies the other exception in article 9, § 10, quoted above, of a contract made for the redemption of an "evidence of indebtedness previously issued." Whether the word "previously" refers to the date of the Constitution or to the date of issuing the guaranty, the guaranty of 1868 is not and does not purport to be made for the redemption of a previous evidence of debt.

It is argued that, whether there was a liability or not, the acts before 1868 having purported to pledge the credit of the state to secure the bonds of the railroad company, as they did, there was color of liability, and the act of 1868, or, at any rate, the act of 1872, authorizing the bond scrip, was the adjustment of a claim against the state under article 14, § 4, of the state Constitution. But the act of 1868 did not purport to be an adjustment. On the contrary, it purported, as we have said, to give new aid to the railroad, and to authorize an original issue. The act of 1872, again, dealt only with the supposed liability under the act of 1868, and provided for the satisfaction of that. If that liability did not exist, the statute no more could ratify it than it could call it into being. The liability for which scrip could be issued was required by the Constitution to be one existing before the issue was made. Moreover, the act of 1872 did not purport to be an adjustment of a matter in dispute, or an adjustment in any sense. It simply assumed that there was an outstanding liability, and provided for the satisfaction of it. The question is not whether payment of the bond scrip would be valid, but whether the bond scrip was issued under the conditions which the state Constitution imposed.

Judgment affirmed.

[68]*WILLIAM B. WETMORE, Plff. in Err.,
v.

ANNETTE B. MARKOE (formerly Annette B. Wetmore).

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 68-77.)

Bankruptcy — effect of discharge upon alimony and allowance to minor children.

A discharge in bankruptcy does not bar the collection of arrears in alimony and allowance for the support of minor children, due under a decree in an action for divorce, since such liability, although fixed by a decree which is beyond the power of the court to alter or amend, because it did not reserve any right of subsequent modification or amendment, is not a "debt" within the meaning of the bankruptcy act of July 1, 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447), § 63, providing for the proving of debts which are a fixed liability as evidenced by a judgment.

[No. 56.]

Argued November 9, 10, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of New York to review a judgment of the Appellate Division, First Department of that court, which affirmed an order entered at a Special Term held in and for the County of New York, denying an application for an order restraining the collection of arrears of alimony and allowance for the support of minor children, such application being based on the theory that the liability therefor was discharged by proceedings in bankruptcy. Affirmed.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

On June 12, 1890, an action for divorce and alimony was begun by Annette B. W. Wetmore, wife of the plaintiff in error, in the supreme court of the state of New York, and on April 1, 1892, at special term, the plaintiff in error was found guilty of adultery as charged in the complaint, and a divorce was granted upon that ground to the defendant in error. The divorce was absolute, and awarded to the wife the custody and care of the three minor children of the marriage, and also, as alimony, the sum of $3,000 per annum so long as she should live, to be paid in quarterly instalments of $750 each on the first day of the months of July, October, January, and April of each year. There was also granted to the wife the sum of $3,000 annually, being $1,000 for the education and maintenance of each of the three minor children, to be paid in quarterly instalments, until such children should arrive at the age of twenty-one years respectively. Plaintiff in error was also required *to give security for the payment of the alimony awarded. The decree did not reserve any right of subsequent modification or amendment. On January 13, 1899, there was due to the wife from the plaintiff in error, for arrears in alimony and allowance under the decree, the sum of $19,221.60. Upon that day, upon application to the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, the plaintiff in error was adjudicated a bankrupt. The defendant in error made no proof of her claim for alimony in the bankrupt proceedings. On June 21, 1900, the plaintiff in error was granted a discharge from all debts and claims provable under the bankruptcy act. On December 12, 1901, plaintiff in error sued out a writ in the supreme court of the state of New York for an order enjoining and restraining all proceedings on behalf of the defendant in error for the collection of the arrears of alimony and allowance aforesaid. This application was denied, upon the ground, as it appears from the memorandum of the judge who rendered the decision, that the arrears of alimony were not discharged in bankruptcy. From the order denying the application an appeal was taken by the plaintiff in error to the appellate division of the supreme court of the state of New York, where the order below was affirmed. The plaintiff in error thereupon appealed to the court of appeals of the state of New York, and on June 27, 1902, the appeal was dismissed for want of jurisdiction, without any judgment of affirmance or reversal upon the merits. A writ of error was sued out seeking in this court a reversal of the judgment of the supreme court of the state of New York.

Mr. William A. Keener argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Hatch, Keener, & Clute, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The decree of divorce, containing no provision by virtue of which it may be modified, altered, or amended, became an absolute obligation beyond the power or control of either the courts or the legislature to modify.

Walker v. Walker, 155 N. Y. 77, 49 N. E. 663; Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377, 61 L. R. A. 800, 93 Am. St. Rep. 600, 66 N. E. 123.

So absolute is this obligation that it is not affected by the marriage of the wife.

Shepherd v. Shepherd, 1 Hun, 240, 58 N. Y. 644.

It is an obligation collectible by the levying of an execution.

N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 1240; Miller v. Miller, 7 Hun, 208.

The defendant in error is regarded as a judgment creditor.

Wetmore v. Wetmore, 149 N. Y. 520, 33 L. R. A. 708, 52 Am. St. Rep. 752, 44 N. E. 169.

The arrears of alimony which accrued prior to January 13, 1899, were a provable debt within the provisions of the United States bankruptcy act, and were released by the discharge in bankruptcy granted to the plaintiff in error.
196 U. S.

Re Houston, 94 Fed. 119; Re Van Orden, 96 Fed. 86; Re Challoner, 98 Fed. 82.

Mr. Flamen B. Candler argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William Jay and Robert W. Candler, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Neither the claim for alimony nor the claim for maintenance and education of the infant children was a debt provable in bankruptcy, and the discharge in bankruptcy did not relieve the plaintiff in error from payment of arrears of alimony, or arrears for the maintenance and education of the infant children.

Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735; Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 47 L. ed. 1084, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757; Re Nowell, 99 Fed. 931; Re Shepard, 97 Fed. 187; Re Anderson, 97 Fed. 321; Turner v. Turner, 108 Fed. 785; Re Lachemeyer, 18 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 270, Fed. Cas. No. 7,966; Re Garrett, 2 Hughes, 235, 11 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 493, Fed. Cas. No. 5,252; Re Smith, 3 Am. Bankr. Rep. 68; Maisner v. Maisner, 62 App. Div. 286, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1107; Young v. Young, 35 Misc. 335, 71 N. Y. Supp. 944; People ex rel. Buckel v. Grell, 65 N. Y. Supp. 522; Bishop, Marr. & Div. § 837. And see Tinker v. Colwell, 193 U. S. 473, 48 L. ed. 754, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 505.

Under the law of New York, alimony provided for by a decree of divorce is not regarded as a debt, or a fixed liability, within the meaning of the bankrupt act, but as a legal determination of the duty owing from husband to wife.

Romaine v. Chauncey, 129 N. Y. 566, 14 L. R. A. 712, 26 Am. St. Rep. 544, 29 N. E. 826; Wetmore v. Wetmore, 79 Hun, 268, 29 N. Y. Supp. 440, Affirmed in 149 N. Y. 520, 33 L. R. A. 708, 52 Am. St. Rep. 752, 44 N. E. 169; Maisner v. Maisner, 62 App. Div. 286, 70 N. Y. Supp. 1107.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

It is conceded in argument by counsel for the plaintiff in error that this case would be within the decision of this court in Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 577, 45 L. ed. 1010, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735, if the judgment for alimony had been rendered in a court having control over the decree with power to amend or alter the same. It is insisted, however, that, there being in this case no reservation of the right to change or modify the decree, it has become an absolute judgment, beyond the power of the court to alter or amend, and is therefore discharged by the bankruptcy proceedings. Walker v. Walker*, 155 N. Y. 77, 49 [72].

N. E. 663; Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377, 61 L. R. A. 800, 93 Am. St. Rep. 600, 66 N. E. 123. It may be admitted to be the effect of these decisions of the New York court of appeals that, in the absence of any reservation of the right to modify or amend, the judgment for alimony becomes absolute. The question presented for decision, in view of this state of the law, is, Has the decree become a fixed liability evidenced by a judgment, and therefore provable against the estate of the bankrupt, within the protection of the discharge in bankruptcy? Section 63 of the act of 1898 provides:

"Sec. 63. Debts which may be proved:—

"Debts of the bankrupt may be proved and allowed against his estate which are (1) a fixed liability as evidenced by a judgment or an instrument in writing, absolutely owing at the time of the filing of the petition against him, whether then payable or not, with any interest thereon which would have been recoverable at that date, or with a rebate of interest upon such as were not then payable and did not bear interest." [30 Stat. at L. 562, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3447.]

It is not contended that this section includes instalments of alimony becoming due after the adjudication, but the contention is that prior instalments have become an existing liability, evidenced by the judgment, and therefore a provable debt. While this section enumerates under separate paragraphs the kind and character of claims to be proved and allowed in bankruptcy, the classification is only a means of describing "debts" of the bankrupt which may be proved and allowed against his estate.

The precise question, therefore, is, Is such a judgment as the one here under consideration a debt within the meaning of the act? The mere fact that a judgment has been rendered does not prevent the court from looking into the proceedings with a view of determining the nature of the liability which has been reduced to judgment. Boynton v. Ball, 121 U. S. 457, 466, 30 L. ed. 985, 987, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 981. The question presented is not altogether new in this court. In the case of Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 577, 45 L. ed. 1010, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 736, Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

[73] "Alimony does not arise from any business transaction, but from the relation of marriage. It is not founded on contract, express or implied, but on the natural and legal duty of the husband to support the wife. The general obligation to support is made specific by the decree of the court of appropriate jurisdiction. Generally speaking, alimony may be altered by that court at any time, as the circumstances of the parties may require. The decree of a court of one state, indeed, for the present payment of a definite sum of money as alimony, is a record which is entitled to full faith and credit in another state, and may, therefore, be there enforced by suit. Barber v. Barber (1858) 21 How. 582, 16 L. ed. 226; Lynde v. Lynde (1901) 181 U. S. 183, 45 L. ed. 810, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 555. But its obligation in that respect does not affect its nature. In other respects, alimony cannot ordinarily be enforced by action at law, but only by application to the court which granted it, and subject to the discretion of that court. Permanent alimony is regarded rather as a portion of the husband's estate to which the wife is equitably entitled than as strictly a debt; alimony from time to time may be regarded as a portion of his current income or earnings; and the considerations which affect either can be better weighed by the court having jurisdiction over the relation of husband and wife than by a court of a different jurisdiction."

In the same opinion Mr. Justice Gray quoted from Barclay v. Barclay, 184 Ill. 375, 51 L. R. A. 351, 56 N. E. 636, in which case it was adjudged that alimony could not be regarded as a debt owing from husband to wife, which might be discharged by an order in bankruptcy, whether the alimony accrued before or after the proceedings in bankruptcy:

"The liability to pay alimony is not founded upon a contract, but is a penalty imposed for a failure to perform a duty. It is not to be enforced by an action at law in the state where the decree is entered, but is to be enforced by such proceedings as the chancellor may determine and adopt for its enforcement. It may be enforced by imprisonment for contempt, without violating the constitutional provision prohibiting *imprisonment for [74] debt. The decree for alimony may be changed from time to time by the chancellor, and there may be such circumstances as would authorize the chancellor to even change the amount to be paid by the husband, where he is in arrears in payments required under the decree. Hence, such alimony cannot be regarded as a debt owing from husband to the wife, and, not being so, cannot be discharged by an order in the bankruptcy court."

It is true that, in the cases referred to, the decrees were rendered in courts having continuing control over them, with power to alter or amend them upon application;

but this fact does not change the essential character of the liability, nor determine whether a claim for alimony is, in its nature, contractual so as to make it a debt. The court having power to look behind the judgment, to determine the nature and extent of the liability, the obligation enforced is still of the same character notwithstanding the judgment. We think the reasoning of the Audubon Case recognizes the doctrine that a decree awarding alimony to the wife or children, or both, is not a debt which has been put in the form of a judgment, but is rather a legal means of enforcing the obligation of the husband and father to support and maintain his wife and children. He owes this duty, not because of any contractual obligation, or as a debt due from him to the wife, but because of the policy of the law which imposes the obligation upon the husband. The law interferes when the husband neglects or refuses to discharge this duty, and enforces it against him by means of legal proceedings.

It is true that in the state of New York at the time this decree was rendered there was no power to modify or alter the decree for alimony and allowance in the absence of special reservation. But this does not change the grounds upon which the courts of the state proceeded in awarding the alimony and allowances. In the case of Romaine v. Chauncey, 129 N. Y. 566, 14 L. R. A. 712, 26 Am. St. Rep. 544, 29 N. E. 826, it was held that alimony was awarded, not in the payment of a debt, but in the performance of the general duty of the [75]*husband to support the wife. This case was quoted with approval by Mr. Justice Gray in Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735.

In Walker v. Walker, 155 N. Y. 77, 49 N. E. 663, and Livingston v. Livingston, 173 N. Y. 377, 61 L. R. A. 800, 93 Am. St. Rep. 600, 66 N. E. 123, the effect of the holdings is that a judgment for alimony, in the absence of reservation, is a fixed and unalterable determination of the amount to be contributed to the wife's support after the decree, and is beyond the power of the court to change even under the authority of subsequent legislation. These cases do not modify the grounds upon which alimony is awarded, and recognize that an alimony decree is a provision for the support of the wife, settled and determined by the judgment of the court.

In the case of Dunbar v. Dunbar, decided by this court at the October term, 1902 (190 U. S. 340, 47 L. ed. 1084, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757), it was held that a contract made after divorce between husband and wife, by which the former agreed to pay the latter a certain sum of money annually for her support during her life, or so long as she remained unmarried, and also to pay a certain sum of money to her annually for the support of the minor children of the marriage, whose custody was awarded to the mother, was not discharged by a subsequent proceeding and discharge in bankruptcy. It was further held that the sum agreed to be paid for the support of the minor children was but a recognition of the liability of the father for their support, and that the fact that the annual instalments were made payable to the wife made no difference in the character of the obligation. Of this feature of the contract the court, speaking by Mr. Justice Peckham, said:

"In relation to that part of the husband's contract to pay for the support of his minor children until they respectively become of age, we also think that it was not of a nature to be proved in bankruptcy. At common law, a father is bound to support his legitimate children, and the obligation continues during their minority. We may assume this obligation to exist in all the states. In this case the decree of the court provided that the children should remain in the custody of *the wife, [76] and the contract to contribute a certain sum yearly for the support of each child during his minority was simply a contract to do that which the law obliged him to do; that is, to support his minor children. . . . We think it was not the intention of Congress, in passing a bankruptcy act, to provide for the release of the father from his obligation to support his children by his discharge in bankruptcy, and if not, then we see no reason why his contract to do that which the law obliged him to do should be discharged in that way. As his discharge would not in any event terminate his obligation to support his children during their minority, we see no reason why his written contract acknowledging such obligation and agreeing to pay a certain sum (which may be presumed to have been a reasonable one) in fulfillment thereof should be so discharged. It is true his promise is to pay to the mother; but on this branch of the contract it is for the purpose of supporting his two minor children, and he simply makes her his agent for that purpose."

We think this language is equally applicable to the present case in that aspect of the decree which provides for the support of the minor children. The obligation continues after the discharge in bankruptcy as well as before, and is no more than the duty devolved by the law upon the husband to support his children, and is not a debt in any just sense.

It is urged that the amendment of the law made by the act of February 5, 1903 [32 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 487], excepting from the operation of a discharge in bankruptcy a decree for alimony due or to become due, or for the maintenance and support of the wife and minor children, is a legislative recognition of the fact that, prior to the passage of the amendment, judgments for alimony would be discharged. In Dunbar v. Dunbar, 190 U. S. 340, 47 L. ed. 1084, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757, it was said that this amendment, while it did not apply to prior cases, may be referred to for the purpose of showing the legislative trend in the direction of not discharging an obligation of the bankrupt for the support and maintenance of wife and children. The amendment may also [77] have been passed *with a view to settling the law upon this subject, and to put at rest the controversies which had arisen from the conflicting decisions of the courts, both state and Federal, upon this question. Indeed, in view of the construction of the act in this court in Audubon v. Shufeldt, 181 U. S. 575, 45 L. ed. 1009, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 735, it may be said to be merely declaratory of the true meaning and sense of the statute. United States v. Freeman, 3 How. 556, 11 L. ed. 724; Bailey v. Clark, 21 Wall. 284, 288, 22 L. ed. 651, 653; Cope v. Cope, 137 U. S. 682, 688, 34 L. ed. 832, 834, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222. The bankruptcy law should receive such an interpretation as will effectuate its beneficent purposes, and not make it an instrument to deprive dependent wife and children of the support and maintenance due them from the husband and father, which it has ever been the purpose of the law to enforce. Systems of bankruptcy are designed to relieve the honest debtor from the weight of indebtedness which has become oppressive, and to permit him to have a fresh start in business or commercial life, freed from the obligation and responsibilities which may have resulted from business misfortunes. Unless positively required by direct enactment the courts should not presume a design upon the part of Congress, in relieving the unfortunate debtor, to make the law a means of avoiding enforcement of the obligation, moral and legal, devolved upon the husband to support his wife and to maintain and educate his children. While it is true in this case the obligation has become fixed by an unalterable decree so far as the amount to be contributed by the husband for the support is concerned, looking beneath the judgment for the foundation upon which it rests, we find it was not decreed for any debt of the bankrupt, but was only a means designed by the law for carrying into effect, and making available to the wife and children, the right which the law gives them as against the husband and father.

We find no error in the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, and the same is affirmed.

*GEORGE F. HARDING, Plff. in Err., [78]
v.

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 78-88.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

1. Neither the petition for a rehearing, nor the petition for the writ of error, nor the assignments of error in the Federal Supreme Court, nor the certification of briefs by the clerk of the state court, can cure the failure of the record to show that a Federal question was raised and decided which would confer jurisdiction on the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to the state court.
2. The assertion, on a motion for new trial, that a state statute is contrary to the Federal Constitution, without pointing out the provision of that instrument which it is claimed to violate, does not present a Federal question which will confer jurisdiction on the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to a state court.
3. A Federal question, even if presented by the claim, on a motion for a new trial in a state court, that a state statute takes property without due process of law, which the highest state court expressly refrained from passing upon because it regarded the objection waived by failure to cite authorities or advance argument in support thereof, cannot be deemed necessarily to have been decided by that court, where the record does not show that the question was there raised.

[No. 61.]

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998, and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

Submitted November 10, 1904. Decided December 19, 1904.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Illinois to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court of Cook County, of that State, in favor of plaintiff in an action to recover certain taxes. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 202 Ill. 122, 66 N. E. 962.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William H. Barnum submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Robert S. Iles submitted the cause for defendant in error.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

This case was submitted on briefs, together with motion to dismiss or affirm. In support of the motion to dismiss, the position taken is that no Federal question was properly raised in the state court, and therefore none is reviewable here.

The case was commenced in the circuit court of Cook county, Illinois, to recover taxes for the years 1897, 1898, 1899, and 1900, on a block of land in the Elston addition to the city of Chicago. At the trial a jury was waived, and, upon hearing, a judgment was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for the sum of $2,123.05. An inspection of the record shows that the principal controversy was over the effect of a deed made by Harding, the plaintiff in error, to the Chicago Real Estate Loan & Trust Company, dated June 10, 1896, and recorded July 2 of the same year, which conveyed, for the consideration of $5, "all interest in the following described real estate, to wit: Any and all lands, of every kind and description, claimed or owned by me in the state of Illinois, and all lots and lands, of every description, in the city of Chicago, in which I have any right, title, or interest whatsoever, situated in the state of Illinois," etc. It was the contention of the state that this deed was too general in its terms to convey specific property, and was therefore insufficient notice to the taxing officer of Cook county that the ownership of the property had changed. The trial court admitted this deed in evidence, subject to this objection. Upon appeal to the supreme court of Illinois, of this deed and other evidence in the case that court said:

"Conceding that the deed, if it stood alone, would overcome the prima facie case made by the plaintiff, the tax records of Cook county for the year 1898, offered in evidence by the people, tended to prove ownership in the defendant. The items in the tax warrant for the year 1897 on this property were charged to him and merged into a judgment. He appeared *in the[83] county court and objected to the validity of the tax, but judgment was rendered against him as owner. This was subsequent to the date of the deed. His remedy as to that tax, if levied unjustly against him, was by appeal. Biggins v. People, 106 Ill. 270. As to that tax he clearly could not, in this proceeding, attack the validity of the former judgment. Moreover, after the date of the deed he received the rents accruing from the property and deposited the money so received to his personal account. Notwithstanding the attempted explanation of that transaction, we think the weight of the evidence is that he continued, after the pretended conveyance, to deal with the premises as his own.
196 U. S.

"In the light of all the evidence in the case it is very clear that the conveyance of June 10, 1896, was merely colorable, and not executed with the honest purpose of conveying the absolute ownership of the property to the grantee." 202 Ill. 122, 66 N. E. 962.

Much of the elaborate brief of the counsel for plaintiff in error is devoted to a discussion of alleged errors of the supreme court of Illinois in deciding questions which, it is alleged, were not properly made, or in failing to give due weight to matters of evidence in the record. This court has no general power to review or correct the decisions of the highest state court, and in cases of this character exercises a statutory jurisdiction to protect alleged violations, in state decisions, of certain rights arising under Federal authority. Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 159 U. S. 103, 40 L. ed. 91, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 80; Marchant v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 153 U. S. 380, 38 L. ed. 751, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 894.

The proceeding was brought under § 230, chapter 120, 3 Starr & C. Anno. Stat. of Illinois, 3501. This section provides:

"In any such suit or trial for forfeited taxes, the fact that real estate or personal property is assessed to a person, firm, or corporation shall be prima facie evidence that such person, firm, or corporation was the owner thereof, and liable for the taxes for the year or years for which the assessment was made, and such fact may be proved by the introduction in evidence *of[84] the proper assessment book or roll, or other competent proof."

It is the contention of the plaintiff in error in this court that this statute is unconstitutional, permitting assessment of those who may not be the owners of the property assessed, and consequently a violation of the protection guaranteed by the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The adverse holding in the state court upon this proposition is the decision upon a Federal right which, it is asserted, gives jurisdiction to review the judgment in this court. The motion to dismiss raises the question whether this objection was properly reserved in the state court. Upon the constitutionality of this act the supreme court of Illinois said:

"It is also said that the foregoing section of the statute, under which the action is brought, is unconstitutional; but no authorities are cited or argument advanced in support of that assertion. The point, if it can be so considered, has therefore been waived."

In the petition for allowance of a writ of error, and the assignment of errors in this court, it is alleged that the supreme court of the state erred in holding that the constitutional objection had been waived. And the plaintiff in error appears to have put upon file here, without leave, the briefs and petition for rehearing below, in which it is insisted there is sufficient to show that the constitutional objection was not abandoned. But neither the petition for a rehearing nor petition for writ of error in the state court after judgment, nor assignments of error in this court, can supply deficiencies in the record of the state court, if any exist. Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333. Nor does the certification of the briefs by the clerk of the state supreme court, which are no part of the record, help the matter. Zadig v. Baldwin, 166 U. S. 485, 41 L. ed. 1087, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 639. We are to try the case upon the duly certified record, legally made in the state court, and upon which its decision rests. Powell v. Brunswick County, 150 U. S. 433, 439, 37 L. ed. 1134, 1136, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 166.

[85] An examination of the record discloses that the assignment *of errors in the supreme court of Illinois does not directly raise the point under consideration. It is referred to in the following language of the assignment of errors:

"The finding and judgment of the court were erroneous for the several reasons stated in the points filed in support of the motion to set aside the finding and grant a new trial."

If we may look to the motion filed in the trial court we find some thirty points assigned as grounds for a new trial. Those which may have application to Federal constitutional questions are found in paragraphs 26 and 27, which are:

"26. The statute under which this action is prosecuted is contrary to the Constitution of the United States.

"27. This proceeding under said statute is a taking of property without due process of law, and otherwise unconstitutional."

The assertion that a judgment rests upon an unconstitutional state statute, the validity of which has been drawn in question and sustained, presents one of a class of cases which may be reviewed here. In the analysis of § 709 of the Revised Statutes of the United States (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575) in Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475-488, 43 L. ed. 521-526, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247-252, it was pointed out that cases of the character of the one now under consideration come within the second class of those provided for in the section: "Where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any state on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of their validity."

It has been frequently held that in cases coming within this class less particularity is required in asserting the Federal right than in cases in the third class, wherein a right, title, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the United States, and the decision is against such right, title, privilege, or immunity. In the latter class the statute requires such right or privilege to be "specially set up and claimed." Under the second class it may be said to be the result of the rulings in this court that if *the Federal question appears in the record [86] in the state court and was decided, or the decision thereof was necessarily involved in the case, the fact that it was not specially set up will not preclude the right of review here. Columbia Water Power Co. v. Columbia Electric Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475, 43 L. ed. 521, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247, and cases cited on p. 488, L. ed. p. 526, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 252. Nevertheless, it is equally well settled that the right of review dependent upon the adverse decision of a Federal question exists only in those cases wherein a decision of the question involved was brought, in some proper manner, to the attention of the court, and decided, or it appears that the judgment rendered could not have been given without deciding it. Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Clarke v. McDade, 165 U. S. 168-172, 41 L. ed. 673, 674, 17 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 284. In one of the latest utterances of this court upon the question under consideration (Capital City Dairy Co. v. Ohio, 183 U. S. 238-248, 46 L. ed. 171-176, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 120-124), Mr. Justice White, delivering the opinion of the court, said:

"It is settled that this court, on error to a state court, cannot consider an alleged Federal question when it appears that the Federal right thus relied upon had not been, by adequate specification, called to the attention of the state court, and had not been by it considered, not being necessarily involved in the determination of the cause. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Patten Paper Co. 172 U. S. 58, 67, 43 L. ed. 364, 368, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 97; F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 654, 655, 41 L. ed. 1149, 1151, 1152, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709, and cases cited. Now, the only possible support to the claim that a Federal question on the subject under consideration was raised below was the general statement in the answer to which we have already adverted, that 'this proceeding is in violation of the Constitution of the United States.' Nowhere does it appear that at any time was any specification made as to the particular clause of the Constitution relied upon to establish that the granting of relief by quo warranto would be repugnant to that Constitution, nor is there anything in the record which could give rise even to a remote inference that the mind of the state court was directed to or considered this question. On the contrary, it is apparent from the record that such a contention was not *raised in the state court. Thus, although at the request of the defendant below (the plaintiff in error here) the state court certified as to the existence of the Federal questions which had been called to its attention and which it had decided, no reference was made in the certificate to the claim of Federal right we are now considering."

[87]

The only authority called to the attention of this court by counsel for plaintiff in error as supporting the view that a Federal question was properly raised in this case is Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 587, in which case it was contended that a statute of the state of Illinois, under which condemnation proceedings were had, was in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. In that case it was distinctly asserted, in the motion for a new trial in the trial court, that the statute and rulings of the court, and the verdict and judgment based thereon, were contrary to the 14th Amendment, declaring that no state should deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law nor deny to any person within its limits the equal protection of the laws. In the assignment of errors in the supreme court of the state it was distinctly reasserted that these Federal rights had been denied by the proceedings in the trial court, and it was held in this court that while the supreme court of Illinois did not, in its opinion, expressly refer to the Federal constitutional rights asserted, the same were necessarily included in the judgment of the court, and therefore the case was reviewable here. But how stands the present case? It is distinctly stated by the supreme court of Illinois (whose judgment is alone reviewable here) in the passage above quoted from its opinion, that no authorities were cited nor argument advanced in support of the assertion that the statute was unconstitutional, and that the point, if it could otherwise be considered, was deemed to be waived. If we look to the motion for a new trial, referred to in general terms in the assignment of errors when the case was taken to the supreme court of Illinois, we find the only *reference to a Federal constitutional question to be in paragraphs 26 and 27, above quoted, from the motion for new trial in the court of original jurisdiction. Paragraph 26 simply states that the statute is contrary to the Constitution of the United States, without calling attention to the provision of that instrument whose protection is denied to the plaintiff in error, and is clearly insufficient. Farney v. Towle, 1 Black, 350, 17 L. ed. 216. Paragraph 27 alleges that the statute takes the property without due process of law, and is therefore unconstitutional. If this vague objection (§ 27) may be taken as asserting a claim of right under the Federal Constitution, yet, in the supreme court of Illinois, so far as the record discloses, there was neither authority cited nor argument advanced in support of the constitutional objection. There is nothing to prevent a party from waiving a Federal right of this character if he chooses to do so, either in express terms or as a necessary implication from his manner of proceeding in the cause. It is clear from the opinion cited that the state court based its decision upon other than Federal grounds, and did not decide the constitutional question sought to be made here.

196 U. S.

If the question was necessarily decided, notwithstanding the failure or refusal of the state court to expressly and in terms pass upon the matter, the case might be brought here. But in this case the state court expressly disclaims decision of the constitutional question, because it was not presented by proper proceedings. Our view of this record is that, in so holding, the state court did not err to the prejudice of the plaintiff in error.

Writ of error dismissed.

[89] *M. H. COURTNEY, Appt.,

v.

LOUIS A. PRADT, Executor of Merrit B. Atwater, Deceased, and William C. Atwater.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 89-93.)

Direct appeal from circuit court—when jurisdiction is in issue.

1. The dismissal by a Federal circuit court of a suit against a foreign executor for the want of jurisdiction in the state court, from which it had been removed for diversity of citizenship, does not present a question of the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a Federal court, which will authorize a direct appeal under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, to the Federal Supreme Court.
2. The denial of a motion to remand a cause which has been removed from the state court to a Federal circuit court does not so present the question of that court's jurisdiction as to sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, where such motion did not, in terms, put in issue the power of the circuit court as a court of the United States to hear and determine the cause.
3. The objection that an attachment suit in aid of an action at law was not cognizable in a Federal circuit court, to which it had been removed from the state court for diversity of citizenship, because the proceeding was equitable in form, is not open to consideration by a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court, which is sought to be maintained under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), § 5, as a case in which the jurisdiction of the circuit court was in issue.

[No. 93.]

Argued December 9, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

APPEAL from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Kentucky to review a judgment dismissing, for want of jurisdiction in the state court, a cause which had been removed to the Circuit Court from the Circuit Court of Powell County, in the state of Kentucky. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

Merrit B. Atwater, a citizen of Wisconsin, and William C. Atwater, a citizen of Illinois, were partners, and in 1898 Merrit B. died testate, having appointed Louis A. Pradt, likewise a citizen of Wisconsin, his executor. The will was duly admitted to probate in Wisconsin, and Pradt duly qualified as executor, and has been and is acting as such. William C. Atwater was one of the legatees under the will.

The Atwater Land & Lumber Company was a corporation of Wisconsin, engaged in buying, owning, holding, and selling real estate in Kentucky, and Merrit B. Atwater, at the time of his death, owned stock in that corporation, on which a dividend was declared August 30, 1901, which amounted to $4,757.37. W. C. Atwater was not a stockholder at the time of the declaration of the dividend, and had not been since 1893.

*Courtney, a citizen of Kentucky, brought [90] suit in the circuit court of Powell county, Kentucky, against Pradt, executor, and William C. Atwater, and procured a general order of attachment, under which the sheriff summoned the company to answer as garnishee by delivery of a copy of the attachment to the person designated by the company as its agent upon whom process could be executed, as required by the statutes of Kentucky in that behalf. There was no personal service on Pradt, executor, or on William C. Atwater, but a warning order was entered pursuant to statute.

Pradt, as executor, and William C. Atwater, filed their petition and bond in the state court for the removal of the cause to the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Kentucky on the ground of diversity of citizenship, and it was removed accordingly. Pradt, executor, and William C. Atwater, entering their appearance in the circuit court for that purpose only, moved the court to dismiss the case "for want of jurisdiction to try same." On the same day, Pradt, executor, filed a special demurrer, assigning as causes, inter alia, that the court had no jurisdiction of the person or of the subject-matter. And on that day plaintiff moved to remand, no reasons being given. The circuit court overruled the motion to remand, sustained the motion to dismiss and the demurrer, and entered judgment dismissing the suit for want of jurisdiction. Two opinions were delivered, because further argument was permitted, and both are in the record. No certificate of the question of jurisdiction was applied for or granted; but an appeal was allowed to this court, which was argued in due course, together with a motion to dismiss.

NOTE.—On direct appeal to Federal Supreme Court from circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

Messrs. William Bullitt Dixon and Alexander Pope Humphrey argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Breckinridge & Shelby, filed a brief for appellant.

Messrs. Neal Brown and Louis A. Pradt argued the cause, and, with Messrs. R. D. Hill and Edwin C. Brandenburg, filed a brief for appellees.

[91] *Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

It appears from the opinions of the circuit court, to which we properly may refer (Loeb v. Columbia Twp. 179 U. S. 472, 45 L. ed. 280, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 174), that the court held that the state court had no jurisdiction so far as William C. Atwater was concerned unless it had jurisdiction as against the foreign executor of his deceased partner; that the suit must be treated as if against the foreign executor alone; and that it could not be maintained against the foreign executor in the state court, nor in the Federal court. And further, that the court was not bound to remand the case that the state court might determine that question.

The appeal was taken directly to this court, and cannot be maintained unless the case comes within the first of the classes named in § 5 of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891, which gives an appeal or writ of error direct "in any case in which the jurisdiction of the court is in issue; in such cases the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified to the Supreme Court from the court below for decision." [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549.]

It is settled that the question of jurisdiction thus to be certified is the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a court of the United States, and not in respect of its general authority as a judicial tribunal. Blythe v. Hinckley, 173 U. S. 501, 43 L. ed. 783, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 497; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Eckman, 187 U. S. 429, 47 L. ed. 245, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 211; Louisville Trust Co. v. Knott, 191 U. S. 225, 48 L. ed. 159, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 119; Bache v. Hunt, 193 U. S. 523, 48 L. ed. 774, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 547.

And the general rule is that the certificate is an absolute prerequisite to the exercise of jurisdiction here. Maynard v. Hecht, 151 U. S. 324, 38 L. ed. 179, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353. Although we have recognized exceptions to this rule when the explicit terms of the decree, or even of the order allowing the appeal, might properly be considered as equivalent to the formal certificate. Huntington v. Laidley, 176 U. S. 668, 44 L. ed. 630, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526; Arkansas v. Schlierholz, 179 U. S. 598, 45 L. ed. 335, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229.

But, as said by Mr. Justice Gray in Huntington v. Laidley, *"the record must[92] distinctly and unequivocally show that the court below sends up for consideration a single and definite question of jurisdiction;" that is, of the jurisdiction of the court as a court of the United States.

No such state of case is exhibited by this record. There is no certificate nor any equivalent therefor. No single and definite issue as to the jurisdiction of the circuit court as a Federal court is presented.

The case was dismissed for want of jurisdiction over it, as a suit against a foreign executor, in the courts of Kentucky. The court had power to so adjudicate. When a case has been removed into the circuit court on the ground of diversity of citizenship, that court is entitled to pass on all questions arising, including the question of jurisdiction over the subject-matter in the state courts; or the sufficiency of the service of mesne process to authorize the recovery of personal judgment. Goldney v. Morning News, 156 U. S. 518, 39 L. ed. 517, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 559; Wabash Western R. Co. v. Brown, 164 U. S. 271, 41 L. ed. 431, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 1041, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Conley v. Mathieson Alkali Works, 190 U. S. 406, 47 L. ed. 1113, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 728. It is true that in this case a motion to remand was made, but there was nothing to indicate that it rested on the contention that there was a lack of jurisdiction in the Federal courts as contradistinguished from the state courts. It did not in terms put in issue the power of the circuit court as a court of the United States to hear and determine the case, and we cannot be called on to say that there may not have been other grounds for the motion, or to attempt to eliminate every other ground for the purpose of bringing the case within the first clause of § 5.

We do not regard the objection now urged, that the suit was in equity, and, as such, not cognizable by the circuit court, as open to consideration on this record by direct appeal, but, if it were, it is unavailing on the question of power.

The principal action was an action at law. If, under existing statutes of Kentucky, the process of attachment or garnishment against nonresidents was equitable in form, as is contended, *this could not cut off the[93] right of removal where diversity of citizenship existed. The right to remove given by a constitutional act of Congress cannot be taken away or abridged by state statutes, and the case being removed, the circuit court had power to so deal with the controversy that the party could lose nothing by his choice of tribunals. Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S. 569, 40 L. ed. 263, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 127. In our opinion the appeal was improvidently prosecuted directly to this court, and it must, therefore, be dismissed.

A. L. SMALLEY and F. McLellan, Plffs. in Err.,
v.

GEORGE F. LAUGENOUR and Jane Laugenour.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 93-98.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

A decision of a state court sustaining a homestead exemption claimed under the state statutes, which rests on the effect, as res judicata, of an order of a court of bankruptcy sustaining such exemption in proceedings begun prior to a sale of the property to satisfy the lien of a general judgment, cannot be reviewed in the Federal Supreme Court, where the only Federal right specially claimed, if any, was one of immunity from the discharge in bankruptcy.

[No. 97.]

Submitted November 28, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Washington to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Superior Court of Lincoln County, in that State, in favor of plaintiffs in an action of ejectment, and remanded the cause, with directions to enter judgment for defendants. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal ques-

Statement by Mr. Chief Justice Fuller:

This was an action of ejectment commenced in the superior court of Lincoln county, Washington, by A. F. Smalley and F. McLellan against George F. Laugenour and Jane Laugenour (with two others, who subsequently ceased to be parties), to recover possession of certain real estate situated in that county. *The action was tried by the [94] court without a jury, which filed findings of fact and conclusions of law, and rendered judgment for plaintiffs, whereupon defendants Laugenour carried the case by appeal to the supreme court of Washington. The judgment was there reversed and the cause remanded with directions to enter judgment for appellants, defendants below. 30 Wash. 307, 70 Pac. 786. This writ of error was then brought.

The facts were stated by that court in brief as follows:

"The appellants are husband and wife, and acquired the land in controversy as early as the year 1885. On March 16, 1895, the respondents and one L. J. Hutchings, as partners, recovered a judgment in the superior court of Lincoln county on a community debt against the appellant Geo. F. Laugenour for the sum of $363.45. On April 12, 1899, execution was issued on the judgment and levied on the land mentioned, under which, after due advertisement, it was sold at public auction to the respondents for the sum of $532.15, being the amount then due on the judgment. Thereafter the sale was confirmed by the court, and after the time for redemption had expired, a sheriff's deed was executed and delivered to the purchasers, which they caused to be recorded. On May 10, 1899, three days before the execution sale took place, the appellant Geo. F. Laugenour filed in the United States district court for the district of Washington his voluntary petition in bankruptcy, in the schedule to which he listed the land in controversy, claiming the same as exempt under the bankruptcy act. On May 11, 1899, the referee in bankruptcy, to whom the pro-tion in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

ceedings had been referred, adjudged the petitioner a bankrupt, and thereupon gave to the creditors of the bankrupt shown in the schedule attached to the petition, among whom were the respondents, the formal notice required by the bankruptcy act, notifying them of the adjudication of bankruptcy, of the time and place fixed for the first meeting of the creditors, that they might attend at such meeting, prove their claims, examine the bankrupt, and transact such other business as should properly come before the *meeting. None of the creditors appeared at the time fixed for the meeting, viz., June 5, 1899, and no trustee was elected or appointed, the referee finding that no necessity existed therefor. On August 9, 1899, the bankruptcy court entered an order discharging the bankrupt from all debts and claims made provable against the bankrupt's estate; and on August 12 'regularly made an order in said bankruptcy proceedings, setting aside to said bankrupt, as exempt under the act of Congress relating to bankruptcy, the real estate hereinbefore described, and awarding said real estate to the said bankrupt.' The court further found that since the execution sale the appellants had been in possession of the real estate, claiming to be the owners of the same; and for several years last past had resided in Spokane county, Washington, and that the real property, during the time, had been occupied by the defendant Harry Gilliland as their tenant. On the facts so found it ruled that the respondents were the owners and entitled to the possession of the premises, and entered judgment accordingly."

Messrs. Charles S. Voorhees and Reese H. Voorhees submitted the cause for plaintiffs in error. Messrs. H. A. P. Myers and W. T. Warren were on their brief.

Mr. W. C. Keegin submitted the cause for defendants in error. Messrs. Herman D. Crow and James A. Williams were on his brief.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

The state supreme court, after calling attention to the statute of the state permitting a head of a family to select from his or her real property a homestead of limited value, and exempting it from the liens of general judgments and from execution or forced sale thereunder (Ballinger's Code, §§ 5214 et seq.), and to previous rulings of the court that the selection might be made at any time before sale (Wiss v. Stewart, 16 Wash. 376, 47 Pac. 736), and that an execution sale thereof after such selection was ineffectual to pass title to the purchaser [96] (Wiss v. Stewart; Asher v. Sekofsky, 10 196 U. S.

Wash. 379, 38 Pac. 1133), said: "If, therefore, the property in question was exempt from execution at the time the sale was made under the execution issued on the respondents' judgment, the respondents acquired no title thereto by their purchase at the execution sale, and consequently have no title on which they can maintain the present action."

And the court held that the order of the district judge of the United States for the district of Washington, sitting in bankruptcy, awarding the property to Laugenour as property exempt from the claims of his creditors, and which related back to the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, which was prior to the date of the attempted sale, was a judgment conclusive as between the parties that the property was so exempt at that date.

The state court was of opinion that Laugenour and his wife might have pleaded and proved facts showing that the property was exempt from execution at the time of the sale, making the issue directly in the state court; but, as they chose to rely on the principle of res judicata, that is, on the adjudication by the bankruptcy court, having jurisdiction of person and estate, in a proceeding in bankruptcy in which the judgment of Smalley and McLellan was provable, the court gave due force and effect to that adjudication.

The jurisdiction of this court to review the final judgments and decrees of a state court rests on § 709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 575), and in this instance must be derived from the third division of that section, if it exist at all. And on the face of this record we cannot find that plaintiffs in error specially set up or claimed any title, right, privilege, or immunity under the Constitution, or any statute of, or authority exercised under, the United States, which was decided against by the state court. What seems to be complained of is that the state supreme court accepted the judgment of the Federal bankruptcy court as having been rendered in the exercise of the jurisdiction with which it was vested.

*Plaintiffs in error were notified of the [97] proceedings in bankruptcy, as provided by the bankruptcy act, and, if they had desired to contest the claim to exemption, they might have done so, or could have invoked the supervision and revision of the order by the circuit court of appeals; but they did not do that, and could not question its validity in the state courts, unless, indeed, it were absolutely void, which is not and could not be pretended.

The bankruptcy court is expressly vested with jurisdiction "to determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions." (§ 2, cl. 11.) Where there is a trustee, he sets apart the exemptions, and reports thereon to the court (§ 47, cl. 11); where no trustee has been appointed, under general order XV. the court acts in the first instance.

Section 6 of the bankruptcy act provided: "This act shall not affect the allowance to bankrupts of the exemptions which are prescribed by the state laws in force at the time of the filing of the petition in the state wherein they have had their domicile for the six months or the greater portion thereof immediately preceding the filing of the petition." [30 Stat. at L. 548, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3424.]

The rights of a bankrupt to property as exempt are those given him by the state statutes, and if such exempt property is not subject to levy and sale under those statutes, then it cannot be made to respond under the act of Congress.

In one of the paragraphs of the reply of plaintiffs in error (plaintiffs in the court of original jurisdiction) to the answer of defendants it was asserted that, on the day their judgment was recovered, Laugenour and his wife were the owners of the real estate in question, and the judgment became a lien thereon, and that "said lien, which culminated in the aforesaid sale of real estate to plaintiffs, was obtained and created pursuant to said suit, and more than four months prior to the filing of the alleged petition in bankruptcy;" and it is argued that this amounted to a special assertion of an immunity under the bankruptcy act. But immunity from what? Nothing more, at the best, than immunity from the discharge [98] in bankruptcy; *not from the exemptions authorized by the state statute. And so Fullerton, J., speaking for the state supreme court, said: "Lastly, it is said that the order of the court setting apart the property as exempt does not purport to, nor does it in law, affect existing liens upon the property set apart as exempt, and, unless the liens thereon be such as the law avoids of its own force, such liens may be enforced in the state court against and to the extent of the property affected by the lien, notwithstanding the order setting it apart as exempt, and the discharge of the debt in bankruptcy. In cases of liens which can exist independent of the question whether or not the property is exempt, undoubtedly the rule here invoked would be applicable; but the lien of a general judgment is not such a lien. It is a lien upon real property, only, which is not exempt. Hence, if this property was exempt at the time of the filing of the petition in bankruptcy, the judgment under which it was sold was not a lien thereon, and to assume that the judgment was a lien is to assume that it was not exempt,—the very question at issue."

We are not able to perceive that the state supreme court denied in any way a right of plaintiffs in error specially set up or claimed under the Constitution or laws of the United States. All that was determined, and all that the state court was called on to determine, was the question of exemption under the state statutes. Its acceptance of the judgment of the Federal court in that regard does not bring the case within § 709.

Writ of error dismissed.

*J. O. COMSTOCK, Appt.,

[99]

v.

WILLIAM L. EAGLETON.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 99, 100.)

Appeal—distinction between writ of error and appeal.

Writ of error, and not appeal, is the proper method of obtaining a review in the Federal Supreme Court of a judgment of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma which affirmed a judgment of the court below sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing with costs, the petition in an action to recover damages for false imprisonment.

[No. 105.]

Submitted December 15, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

A PPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Oklahoma to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Pawnee County, in that Territory, sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a petition in an action to recover damages for false imprisonment. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 11 Okla. 487, 69 Pac. 955.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Andrew Wilson and Noel W. Barksdale submitted the cause, and Messrs. C. J. Wrightsman and E. L. Fulton filed a brief for appellant.

No counsel opposed.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE: This was an action brought by Comstock against Eagleton in the district court of Pawnee county, Oklahoma, to recover damages for false imprisonment in the sum of $5,317.50.

The petition was demurred to on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, the demurrer sustained, and the petition dismissed with costs. The case was then carried to the supreme court of Oklahoma on error, and the judgment affirmed. 11 Okla. 487, 69 Pac. 955.

NOTE.—On distinction between appeal and writ of error—see note to Miners' Bank v. Iowa, 13 L. ed. U. S. 867.

From the judgment of affirmance this appeal was allowed and prosecuted to this court.

By § 9 of the "Act to Provide a Temporary Government for the Territory of Oklahoma," approved May 2, 1890 (26 Stat. at L. 81, chap. 182), it was provided that "where the value of the property or the amount in controversy" exceeded $5,000, "writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of said supreme court shall be allowed and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States."

Final judgments of the circuit courts of the United States in actions at law can only be revised on writs of error. Deland v. Platte County, 155 U. S. 221, 39 L. ed. 128, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 82; Metropolitan R. Co. v. District of Columbia (Metropolitan R. Co. v. Macfarland) 195 U. S. 322, ante, 219, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Bevins v. Ramsey, 11 How. 185, 13 L. ed. 657; Sarchet v. United States, 12 Pet. 143, 9 L. ed. 1033.

Appeal dismissed.

SALLIE FIELD SCOTT, Eliza Madison Scott, Harriet B. Jones, et al., Appts.,
v.

LIZZIE W. CAREW, W. W. Hampton, E. R. Gunby, et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 100-114.)

Public lands—pre-emption rights—land appropriated for military post.

The right of pre-emption given by the act of April 22, 1826 (4 Stat. at L. 154, chap. 28), did not extend to lands which had been appropriated by the United States for a military post, until such post was abandoned.

[No. 52.]

Argued November 7, 8, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

APPEAL from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit to review a decree which affirmed a decree of the Circuit Court for the Southern District of Florida sustaining a demurrer to, and dismissing, a bill to establish a trust in real property. Affirmed.

See same case below, 56 C. C. A. 684, 121 Fed. 1021.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

On December 31, 1900, the plaintiffs, who are now appellants, filed their bill of complaint in the circuit court of the *United States for the southern district of Florida, praying a decree that the defendants, holding the legal title to a tract of land under patent from the United States, be decreed to hold that title in trust for them. A demurrer to the bill was sustained, and a decree of dismissal entered. This was affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the fifth circuit, and from that affirmance this appeal was taken.

The averments in the bill are: The plaintiffs are the sole descendants and heirs at law of Robert J. Hackley, who died in 1845. In November, 1823, Hackley, then over twenty-one years of age, and the head of a family, settled upon and cultivated the tract in controversy. At that time the surrounding country was a dense wilderness, and he the only settler. He erected on the tract a substantial dwelling and other buildings. In 1824 Colonel Brooke, with a detachment of United States troops, was sent to this portion of Florida, located a camp or cantonment on this tract, dispossessed Hackley, and took possession of the house and land so occupied and cultivated by him. The Secretary of the Interior, in the contest proceedings hereinafter referred to, in an opinion which is attached to the bill as an exhibit, found that this action was taken by order of the War Department. United States troops continued to occupy the camp or cantonment until December 10, 1830, when by an executive order of the President the Fort Brooke military reservation was established, containing 16 square miles of land, and embracing the tract in controversy. Thereafter this military reservation was reduced from time to time by executive orders, until, on June 1, 1878, only the tract in controversy, commonly known as the "Reduced Fort Brooke military reservation," remained. On January 4, 1883, it was relinquished, and transferred by the Secretary of War to the Interior Department. Hackley, after his removal from the tract, remained a resident of Florida up to the time of his death. On March 3, 1823, Congress passed an act [3 Stat. at L. 754, chap. 29] authorizing the President to establish a land office in each of the districts of east and west Florida as soon as, in his *opinion, there was a sufficient quantity of public land surveyed to justify it. Under this act, and by an executive order in 1828, NOTE.—On pre-emption rights in public lands—see note to United States v. Fitzgerald, 10 L. ed. U. S. 785.

a land office was established at St. Augustine, in the district in which this land was situate. At the time this office was established the hostility of the Indian tribes was such as to render communication between it and that portion of Florida where Hackley resided practically impossible. But in the year 1835, although the public surveys had not been extended into this part of Florida, Hackley filed with the register of the land office evidence designating the particular tract which had been settled upon, inhabited, and cultivated by him as aforesaid, and claimed the right of pre-emption and purchase thereof under and by virtue of the act of Congress of April 22, 1826 [4 Stat. at L. 154, chap. 28]. By change of the boundary lines of the land districts of Florida the land subsequently came within the jurisdiction of the land office at Newnansville, Florida, whereupon, on November 27, 1843, Hackley secured from the register of the land office at St. Augustine a copy of the evidence formerly filed in that office, and filed it with a notice of his claim with the register of the office at Newnansville. On September 26, 1887, the administrator of the estate of Hackley filed in the local land office a supplemental notice of the claim of the legal representatives of Hackley to the right of pre-emption in the purchase of the tract. Other parties made application to the Land Department for an entry of said lands, contest proceedings were had, which were terminated by a decision of the Secretary of the Interior adverse to the claim of the plaintiffs, and a patent was issued to Edmund S. Carew, under whom the defendants claim.

The following statutes are relied upon by the parties: Act of Congress, March 3, 1807 (2 Stat. at L. 445, chap. 46), § 1 of which provides:

"That, if any person or persons shall, after the passing of this act, take possession of, or make a settlement on, any lands ceded or secured to the United States, by any treaty made with a foreign nation, or [103] by a cession from any state to the *United States, which lands shall not have been previously sold, ceded, or leased by the United States, or the claim to which lands, by such person or persons, shall not have been previously recognized and confirmed by the United States; or if any person or persons shall cause such lands to be thus occupied, taken possession of, or settled; or shall survey, or attempt to survey, or 'cause to be surveyed, any such lands; or designate any boundaries thereon, by marking trees or otherwise, until thereto duly authorized by law,—such offender, or offenders, shall forfeit all his or their right, title, and claim, if any he hath, or they have, of whatsoever nature or kind the same shall or may be, to the lands aforesaid, which he or they shall have taken possession of, or settled, or cause to be occupied, taken possession of, or settled, or which he or they shall have surveyed, or attempted to survey, or cause to be surveyed, or the boundaries thereof he or they shall have designated, or cause to be designated, by marking trees or otherwise. And it shall, moreover, be lawful for the President of the United States to direct the marshal, or officer acting as marshal, in the manner hereinafter directed, and also to take such other measures, and to employ such military force, as he may judge necessary and proper, to remove from lands ceded, or secured to the United States, by treaty, or cession as aforesaid, any person or persons who shall hereafter take possession of the same, or make, or attempt to make, a settlement thereon, until thereunto authorized by law. And every right, title, or claim, forfeited under this act, shall be taken and deemed to be vested in the United States, without any other or further proceedings."

The other sections have no application to this case.

On February 5, 1813 (2 Stat. at L. 797, chap. 20), the following act was passed:

"That every person, or legal representative of every person, who has actually inhabited and cultivated a tract of land lying in either of the districts established for the sale of public lands, in the Illinois territory, which tract is not rightfully claimed *by [104] any other person, and who shall not have removed from said territory; every such person and his legal representatives shall be entitled to a preference in becoming the purchaser from the United States of such tract of land at private sale, at the same price and on the same terms and conditions in every respect as are or may be provided by law for the sale of other lands sold at private sale in said territory, at the time of making such purchase: Provided, That no more than one-quarter section of land shall be sold to any one individual, in virtue of this act; and the same shall be bounded by the sectional and divisional lines run, or to be run, under the direction of the surveyor general for the division of the public lands: Provided also, That no lands reserved from sale by former acts, or lands which have been directed to be sold in town lots, and out lots, shall be sold under this act.

"Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That every person claiming a preference in becoming the purchaser of a tract of land, in virtue of this act, shall make known his claim, by delivering a notice in writing to the register of the land office, for the district in which the land may lie, wherein he shall particularly designate the quarter section he claims; which notice the register shall file in his office, on receiving twenty-five cents from the person delivering the same. And in every case where it shall appear to the satisfaction of the register and receiver of public moneys of the land office, that any person, who has delivered his notice of claim, is entitled, according to the provisions of this act, to a preference in becoming the purchaser of a quarter section of land, such person so entitled shall have a right to enter the same with the register of the land office, on producing his receipt from the receiver of public moneys for at least one-twentieth part of the purchase money, as in case of other public lands sold at private sale: Provided, That all lands to be sold under this act shall be entered with the register, at least two weeks before the time of the commencement of the public sales, in the district wherein the land lies; and every person having a right of preference in becoming the *purchaser of a tract of land, who shall fail so to make his entry with the register within the time prescribed, his right shall be forfeited, and the land by him claimed shall be offered at public sale, with the other public lands in the district to which it belongs."

And on April 22, 1826 (4 Stat. at L. 154, chap. 28), Congress passed another act, the 1st section of which reads as follows:

"That every person, or the legal representatives of any person, who, being either the head of a family, or twenty-one years of age, did on or before the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five, actually inhabit and cultivate a tract of land situated in the territory of Florida, which tract is not rightfully claimed by any other person, and who shall not have removed from the said territory, shall be entitled to the right of pre-emption in the purchase thereof, under the same terms, restrictions, conditions, provisions, and regulations, in every respect, as are directed by the act, entitled 'An Act Giving the Right of Pre-emption, in the Purchase of Lands, to Certain Settlers in the Illinois Territory,' passed February the fifth, one thousand eight hundred and thirteen: Provided, That no person shall be entitled to the provisions of this section who claims any tract of land in said territory, by virtue of a confirmation of the commissioners, or by virtue of any act of Congress."

Messrs. Henry W. Anderson and Francis P. Fleming argued the cause, and, with Messrs. William H. Lamar, George H. Lamar, Francis P. Fleming, Jr.,
196 U. S. U. S., Book 49.

Beverley B. Munford, Eppa Hunton, Jr., and E. Randolph Williams, filed a brief for appellants.

Messrs. William Wade Hampton, Edward R. Gunby, and Horatio Bisbee argued the cause and filed a brief for appellees.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

The vital question in this case is whether Hackley could claim the benefit of the act of 1826, in reference to the tract in controversy. *Prior to that act he was wrong-[109] fully in possession of the tract, and could have been summarily removed by order of the President. Act of March 3, 1807. His dispossession was by authority of law. It was done in the exercise of the power vested in the President as Commander-in-Chief of the Army, the order of the War Department being presumed to be that of the President. The occupation of the tract by the United States troops was rightful, being an occupation of property of the government by direction of the proper officer, and that rightful occupation continued until the act was passed. It is unnecessary to rest the case upon the clause in the act of 1826, "which tract is not rightfully claimed by any other person," although that is not without significance, or to discuss the question whether the United States can be considered another person. A more substantial reason is to be found in the rule that whenever a statute is passed containing a general provision for the disposal of public lands, it is, unless an intent to the contrary is clearly manifest by its terms, to be held inapplicable to lands which for some special public purpose have been, in accordance with law, taken full possession of by and are in the actual occupation of the government. Where particular tracts have been taken possession of by rightful orders of an executive department, to be used for some public purpose, Congress in legislating will be presumed to have intended no interference with such possession nor a sale or disposal of the property to private individuals. Such has been the rule obtaining in the Land Department, as well as in the courts. An early case was Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264. That case rested upon a claim of right of pre-emption under the act of June 19, 1834 (4 Stat. at L. 678, chap. 54), which revived an act passed May 29, 1830 (4 Stat. at L. 420, chap. 208), containing these provisions:

"That no entry or sale of any land shall be made, under the provisions of this act, which shall have been reserved for the use of the United States, or either of the several states in which any of the public lands may be situated," or "which is reserved from sale by act of Congress, or by order of the [110] President, or *which may have been appropriated for any purpose whatsoever."

It appeared that at the request of the Secretary of War the Commissioner of the General Land Office had marked upon the official map of that Department the tract in controversy as reserved for military purposes, and directed it to be withheld from sale. The court held that this action was that of the President, saying (p. 513, L. ed. p. 271):

"Now, although the immediate agent, in requiring this reservation, was the Secretary of War, yet we feel justified in presuming that it was done by the approbation and direction of the President. The President speaks and acts through the heads of the several departments in relation to subjects which appertain to their respective duties. Both military posts and Indian affairs, including agencies, belong to the War Department. Hence we consider the act of the War Department in requiring this reservation to be made, as being, in legal contemplation, the act of the President; and, consequently, that the reservation thus made was in legal effect a reservation made by order of the President, within the terms of the act of Congress."

And, going beyond the special language of the act in respect to the sale of lands, the court observed:

"But we go further, and say that, whenever a tract of land shall have once been legally appropriated to any purpose, from that moment the land thus appropriated becomes severed from the mass of public lands, and that no subsequent law, or proclamation, or sale would be construed to embrace it, or to operate upon it, although no reservation were made of it."

"The very act which we are now considering will furnish an illustration of this proposition. Thus, in that act there is expressly reserved from sale the land within that district, which had been granted to individuals and the state of Illinois. Now, suppose this reservation had not been made, either in the law, proclamation, or sale, could it be conceived that, if that land were sold at auction, the title of the purchaser [111] would *avail against the individuals or state to whom the previous grants had been made? If, as we suppose, this question must be answered in the negative, the same principle will apply to any land which, by authority of law, shall have been severed from the general mass."

In Leavenworth, L. & G. R. Co. v. United States, 92 U. S. 733, 745, 23 L. ed. 634, 639, the doctrine announced in Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264, was reaffirmed; the court, quoting the first paragraph in the last quotation, added: "It may be urged that it was not necessary in deciding that case to pass upon the question; but, however this may be, the principle asserted is sound and reasonable, and we accept it as a rule of construction." In that case it was held that a grant of public lands in aid of a railroad did not apply to lands included within an Indian reservation, and that it was immaterial that the reservation was afterwards set aside, and the lands had become a part of the public lands of the nation. Newhall v. Sanger, 92 U. S. 761, 23 L. ed. 769, ruled that lands within the boundaries of an alleged Mexican or Spanish grant which was sub judice at the time the Secretary of the Interior ordered a withdrawal of lands along the route of the road, were not embraced by a grant to a railroad company, and it was said in the opinion (p. 763, L. ed. p. 770): "The words 'public lands' are habitually used in our legislation to describe such as are subject to sale or other disposal under general laws."

In Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 331, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 548, it was held that, while Congress has power to grant lands below high-water mark in navigable waters, yet the fact that the public surveys are made to terminate on the banks or shores of those waters, indicates that such lands are not subject to entry and sale under the general land laws, but, so far as they are situated in a territory, are reserved for the use and control of the future state. This doctrine was reaffirmed in Mann v. Tacoma Land Co. 153 U. S. 273, 38 L. ed. 714, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 820. Many authorities might be cited to the proposition that a prior appropriation is always understood to except lands from the scope of a subsequent grant, although no reference *is made in the latter to the former. See [112] Lake Superior Ship Canal, R. & Iron Co. v. Cunningham, 155 U. S. 354, 373, 39 L. ed. 183, 189, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 103.

There is nothing in United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. 407, 10 L. ed. 785, to conflict with the foregoing views. It merely decided that an officer of the United States (in that case an inspector of customs) was not deprived by any act of Congress of the benefit of the pre-emption laws, and the fact that he was put in possession of a tract of land by the collector of customs, who had received no instructions to that effect from the Treasury Department, was not an appropriation to the uses of the government. It is true a letter from the acting commissioner of the General Land Office to the register at New Orleans, stating that the Secretary of the Treasury had directed that the tract be reserved from sale for the use of the custom house at New Orleans, and requesting the register to note upon his plats that it was so reserved from sale, was in evidence, but this was written two years after the inspector had entered and paid for the land. Of course, such attempted reservation could have no effect upon a title acquired by the entryman prior thereto. Nor is there any conflict in United States v. Tichenor, 8 Sawy. 142, 12 Fed. 415. There it appeared that the commanding officer of United States troops in Oregon ordered that a military reservation be established on the tract in controversy. In obedience thereto, a lieutenant erected some buildings thereon for the use of the soldiers. It was held by the circuit court that such action constituted no appropriation of the land so as to exempt it from the operation of the general land laws. But the ground of the decision was that the general commanding was acting without any direction from the President or the War Department, the court saying (p. 151, Fed. p. 423):

"It may be admitted, as suggested in Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 513, 10 L. ed. 271, that, if the order directing the reservation to be made had been issued by the Secretary of War,—the head of the Department through whom the President would speak and act upon the subject,—in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it would be presumed that he acted by the direction [113]*of the President.

"But neither General Hitchcock nor Lieutenant Wyman had any authority to designate or establish a reservation at Port Orford for any purpose. It is not alleged that they were acting in the premises under the authority of the President, and there is no presumption of law that they were."

Again, it is urged that the establishment of this camp or cantonment was a mere temporary matter, and not to be considered as in the nature of a reservation or appropriation, and we are referred to orders and other papers found in the records of the War Department, copies of which appear in the brief of appellants' counsel. Those orders, if we are permitted to consider them on this demurrer, make distinctly against the contentions of counsel. We quote from that issued from the Adjutant General's office:

Order 70.

Brevet Col. Brooke, with four companies of the Fourth Infantry, will proceed with as little delay as practicable to Tampa bay, 196 U. S.

east Florida, where he will establish a military post. He will select a position with a view to the health and in reference to the Florida Indians about to be removed to that vicinity agreeable to the late treaty. Upon this point he will consult Col. Gadsden, the commissioner employed in locating the Indians. . . .

The permanent headquarters of the Fourth Infantry will remain at Cantonment Clinch, and, should Col. Clinch have rejoined his regiment, on the receipt of this order he will be charged with the duty of preparing Col. Brooke's command for the expedition to Tampa.

By order of Major Gen. Brown.

E. Kirby, Aide-de-Camp.

It will be seen that the direction is to "establish a military post." It was for this "post" that the tract in controversy was taken, and the statement in the report of Colonel Brooke, as one of the reasons for its selection, that, some 2 miles in *the[114] rear of the place, a ridge of piney lands commences, to which the troops could retire with their tents on the slightest manifestation of disease, does not alter the fact that this tract was selected for the "post." The further fact that permanent headquarters of the Fourth Infantry were to remain at Cantonment Clinch is entirely consistent with the direction to Colonel Brooke to proceed with four companies to Tampa bay and there establish this military post. The judgment of the War Department, whose action is presumed to be the action of the President, was that, having reference to the Florida Indians who were about to be removed to that vicinity, it was important to have a military post established. Its permanence would depend largely on the developments of the future. It remained a military post for half a century, and a very large tract was, in 1830, set apart for a surrounding reservation. True, it has since been all abandoned, but, although it may have been within the contemplation of the authorities that a time would come when the necessity for this military post would cease, it was none the less for the time being a post established by the proper department of the government. It was, until the post was abandoned, an appropriation of the land for military purposes. Quite a number of reservations and posts in our western territory, once established, have afterwards been abandoned; but, while so appropriated they are excepted from the operation of the public land laws, and no right of an individual settler attaches to, or hangs over, the land to interfere with such action as the government may thereafter see fit to take in respect to it. No cloud can be cast upon the title of the government, — nothing done by an individual to embarrass it in the future disposition of the land.

Without considering, therefore, the question of laches or limitation, we are of opinion that the decision of the Court of Appeals was correct, and it is affirmed.

115] *FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF JACKSBORO, Plff. in Err.,

v.

J. L. LASATER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 115-119.)

Usury by national banks—usurious interest must be actually paid—effect of bankruptcy proceedings.

1. The giving of a renewal note will not sustain a recovery from a national bank, under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 5198, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, on account of usurious interest in the original note, since the payment contemplated by that statute is an actual payment, and not a further promise to pay.
2. Title to a claim for usurious interest paid to a national bank cannot be asserted by a bankrupt upon the termination of the bankruptcy proceedings, where he returned no assets to the trustee, and failed to notify either the trustee or the creditors of the existence of the claim.

[No. 73.]

Submitted December 6, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Civil Appeals of the Second Supreme Judicial District of the State of Texas to review a judgment reversing a judgment of the District Court of Jack County in that State in favor of defendant in an action to recover usurious interest paid to a national bank, and entering judgment in favor of plaintiff for a portion of the relief sought. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below in Texas Court of Civil Appeals, 72 S. W. 1054, and in Texas Supreme Court on certified questions, 96 Tex. 345, 72 S. W. 1057.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brewer:

This case is here on error to the court of civil appeals of the second supreme judicial district of the state of Texas. It was an action brought in the district court of Jack county by J. L. Lasater to recover from the First National Bank of Jacksboro twice a sum claimed to have been paid as usurious interest.

The material facts are as follows: J. L. Lasater and W. M. Maggard, as partners, borrowed of the bank $4,000, and executed their joint note with A. M. Lasater as surety. They also mortgaged cattle as further security. Subsequently Maggard sold all his interest in the mortgaged property to J. L. Lasater, the latter assuming all liabilities and renewing the note with the same surety. Thereafter A. M. Lasater, the surety, bought all the mortgaged cattle, and, as part of the consideration, agreed to assume and pay off the note. In pursuance of this agreement he took up the note of J. L. Lasater, and gave his own note therefor. This last note A. M. Lasater paid in full to the bank. After all these transactions, and on November 19, 1900, J. L. Lasater filed his petition in bankruptcy *in the district [116] court of the United States. On January 7, 1901, he was discharged of his debts, and on June 11, 1901, the trustee was also discharged of his trust. The bankrupt returned no assets to the trustee, and did not tell him or the creditors about this claim for usury.

On July 26, 1901, he brought this action, under the authority of § 5198, Revised Statutes, United States, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3493, to recover twice the amount of the interest paid to the bank. The court of appeals found that part of the interest was paid more than two years prior to the commencement of the action, and held that no recovery could be had as to that, but, reversing the district court, entered a judgment in favor of the plaintiff for double the amount of the balance of the interest, on the ground that usury entered into it all.

Section 5198, Revised Statutes, provides:

"The taking, receiving, reserving, or charging a rate of interest greater than is allowed by the preceding section, when knowingly done, shall be deemed a forfeiture of the entire interest which the note, bill, or other evidence of debt carries with it, or which has been agreed to be paid thereon. In case the greater rate of interest has been paid, the person by whom it has been paid, or his legal representatives, may recover back, in an action in the nature of an action of debt, twice the amount of the interest thus paid, from the association taking or receiving the same: Provided, such action is commenced within two years from the time the usurious transaction occurred."

Mr. J. W. Nichol submitted the cause for plaintiff in error. Messrs. Thomas D.

196 U. S.

NOTE.—On usury by national banks—see note to Farmers' & M. Nat. Bank v. Dearing, 23 L. ed. U. S. 196.

As to forfeiture or other effect of usury by national bank—see note to Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Gentry, 56 L. R. A. 673.

Sporer and E. W. Nicholson were on his brief.

No counsel opposed.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court:

[118] The mere discharge by A. M. Lasater of the note executed *by himself and J. L. Lasater, by giving his own note in renewal thereof, would not uphold a recovery from the bank on account of usurious interest in the former note. Brown v. Marion Nat. Bank, 169 U. S. 416, 42 L. ed. 801, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390. The payment contemplated by the statute is an actual payment, and not a further promise to pay, and was not made until the bank, in June, 1901, received its money. Prior to the renewal by A. M. Lasater, in October, 1900, there were only two or three small cash payments on the indebtedness.

We shall not stop to inquire whether J. L. Lasater can avail himself of the final payment made by A. M. Lasater. The court of appeals held that he could, reaching this conclusion on the authority of cases like Hough v. Horsey, 36 Md. 184, 11 Am. Rep. 484; Richardson v. Baker, 52 Vt. 617, to the effect that the grantee of mortgaged property, who in consideration of the purchase agrees to pay off the mortgage, cannot raise the question of usury, that being a personal right of the original debtor.

The court of appeals also held that the claim for usurious interest was one which survived the death of the person in whom the right of action was vested, and under the laws of Texas a part of his estate, and consequently one that could be sold and bought like any other chose in action. If so, that claim passed to the trustee in bankruptcy under § 70 of the bankrupt law [30 Stat. at L. 566, chap. 547, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3451], which, in describing the property passing to the trustee, names "property which prior to filing of the petition he could by any means have transferred."

The question then presented is whether this right of action, having once passed to the trustee in bankruptcy, was retransferred to J. L. Lasater upon the termination of the bankruptcy proceedings, he having returned no assets to his trustee, and having failed to notify him or the creditors of this claim for usury, and beginning this action within less than two months after the final discharge of the trustee. We have held that trustees in bankruptcy are not bound to accept property of an onerous or unprofit-

[119] able character, and that they have a*reasonable time in which to elect whether they will accept or not. If they decline to take the property, the bankrupt can assert title thereto. American File Co. v. Garrett, 110

196 U. S.

U. S. 288, 295, 28 L. ed. 149, 152, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 90; Sparhawk v. Yerkes, 142 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 915, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 104; Sessions v. Romadka, 145 U. S. 29, 36 L. ed. 609, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Dushane v. Beall, 161 U. S. 513, 40 L. ed. 791, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 637. But that doctrine can have no application when the trustee is ignorant of the existence of the property, and has had no opportunity to make an election. It cannot be that a bankrupt, by omitting to schedule and withholding from his trustee all knowledge of certain property, can, after his estate in bankruptcy has been finally closed up, immediately thereafter assert title to the property on the ground that the trustee had never taken any action in respect to it. If the claim was of value (as certainly this claim was, according to the judgment below), it was something to which the creditors were entitled, and this bankrupt could not, by withholding knowledge of its existence, obtain a release from his debts, and still assert title to the property.

The judgment of the Court of Civil Appeals is reversed, and the case remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

BUTTE CITY WATER COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

BEN BAKER.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 119-128.)

Mining claims—location of—validity of state regulations—delegation of power—conflict with congressional legislation.

1. Supplementary regulations concerning the location of mining claims, prescribed by a state in addition to the congressional regulations, are not invalid on the theory that they were enacted in the exercise of an unlawful delegation by Congress of legislative power.
2. The requirement of Mont. Ann. Codes, § 3612, that the declaratory statement filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which a mining lode or claim is situated must contain "the dimensions and location of the discovery shaft, or its equivalent, sunk upon lode or placer claims" and "the location and description of each corner, with the markings thereon," is not invalid as conflicting with congressional legislation prescribing regulations for the location of mining claims.

[No. 109.]

*Argued and submitted December 16, 1904.
Decided January 3, 1905.*

NOTE.—On the delegation of legislative power—see note to Bradshaw v. Lankford, 11 L. B. A. 582.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Montana to review a judgment affirming a judgment of the District Court of Silver Bow County, in that State, in favor of plaintiff in an action of ejectment. Affirmed.

See same case below, 28 Mont. 222, 72 Pac. 617.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. Orvis Evans argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. W. Dixon and Messrs. Forbis & Evans, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The grant contained in the mineral laws of Congress is more than the right of possession. It is at least a grant of some estate in the public domain.

Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 26 L. ed. 735.

It is under and by virtue of U. S. Const. art. 4, § 3, that Congress is vested with authority to regulate the disposal of the public lands.

Pollard v. Hagan, 3 How. 224, 11 L. ed. 571; De Lima v. Bidwell, 182 U. S. 197, 45 L. ed. 1056, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 743; Jourdan v. Barrett, 4 How. 169, 185, 11 L. ed. 924, 931; Russell v. Lowth, 21 Minn. 167, 18 Am. Rep. 389; United States v. Hughes, 11 How. 552, 568, 13 L. ed. 809, 816; United States v. Gratiot, 14 Pet. 526, 537, 10 L. ed. 573, 578; United States v. Fitzgerald, 15 Pet. 407-421, 10 L. ed. 785-790; 2 Story, Const. 1328; 2 Tucker, Const. 605.

Not only is the power of disposition in Congress, but the states have no authority whatever in the matter.

Irvine v. Marshall, 20 How. 558, 15 L. ed. 994; Wilcox v. Jackson, 13 Pet. 498, 10 L. ed. 264; Gibson v. Chouteau, 13 Wall. 92-104, 20 L. ed. 534-538; Seymour v. Sanders, 3 Dill. 437, Fed. Cas. No. 12,690; Russell v. Lowth, 21 Minn. 167, 18 Am. Rep. 389; Miller v. Little, 47 Cal. 348; Van Broeklin v. Tennessee (Van Broeklin v. Anderson), 117 U. S. 151-167, 29 L. ed. 845-850, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 670; Cross v. Harrison, 16 How. 164, 14 L. ed. 889; Headley v. Coffman, 38 Neb. 68, 56 N. W. 701; Chapman v. Quinn, 56 Cal. 266; Kissell v. St. Louis Public Schools, 18 How. 19, 15 L. ed. 324.

A legislative body has no power of delegation in the matter of making laws.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. 137; Wayman v. Southard, 10 Wheat. 48, 6 L. ed. 264; Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 36 L. ed. 294, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495.

Mr. Robert B. Smith submitted the cause for defendant in error. Mr. J. E. Healy was on his brief:

The statutes of the United States give full recognition to local and state rules and regulations, seemingly recognizing that under mining laws everywhere such local rules have ever existed where mining has been carried on.

Lindley, Mines, 2d ed. §§ 1-25.

Plaintiff in error's contention cannot be maintained in the face of the decisions of this court and the state and territorial courts.

O'Donnell v. Glenn, 8 Mont. 248, 19 Pac. 305; Baker v. Butte City Water Co. 28 Mont. 222, 72 Pac. 617; Jackson v. Roby, 109 U. S. 440, 27 L. ed. 990, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301; Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560; Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 175 U. S. 639, 44 L. ed. 305, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 245; De Lamar's Nevada Gold Min. Co. v. Nesbitt, 177 U. S. 524, 44 L. ed. 872, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 715; Speed v. McCarthy, 181 U. S. 275, 45 L. ed. 258, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 613; Blackburn v. Portland Gold Min. Co. 175 U. S. 571, 44 L. ed. 276, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 222.

Mr. Justice Brewer delivered the opinion of the court: [122]

This was an action of ejectment brought in the district court of Silver Bow county, Montana. The dispute was between two locations of the same mining ground. The defendant's location was adjudged invalid by the trial court, and its decision was affirmed by the supreme court of the state, on the ground of a failure to comply with certain Montana statutes. 28 Mont. 222, 72 Pac. 617. These statutes contained regulations concerning the location of mining claims in addition to those prescribed by congressional legislation, and the question is as to the validity of those additional requirements.

Section 2319, Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1424), provides that "all valuable mineral deposits in lands belonging to the United States, both surveyed and unsurveyed, are hereby declared to be free and open to exploration and purchase, and the lands in which they are found to occupation and purchase, by citizens of the United States and those who have declared their intention to become such, under regulations prescribed by law, and according to the local customs or rules of miners in the several mining districts, so far as the same are applicable, and not inconsistent with the laws of the United States."

Section 2322 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1425) gives to the locators the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations "so long as they comply with the laws of the United States, and with state, territorial, and local regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States governing their possessory title."

Section 2324 contains this grant of authority:

"Sec. 2324 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1426). The miners of each mining district may make regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States, or with the laws of the state or territory in which the district is situated, governing the location, manner of recording, amount of work necessary to hold possession of a mining claim, subject to the following requirements: The location must be distinctly marked on the [123]ground so that its boundaries can *be readily traced. All records of mining claims hereafter made shall contain the name or names of the locators, the date of the location, and such a description of the claim or claims located by reference to some natural object or permanent monument as will identify the claim."

Section 2332 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1433) makes the statute of limitations for mining claims of a state applicable for certain purposes to mining claims under the government.

Section 2338 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1436) reads as follows:

"As a condition of sale, in the absence of necessary legislation by Congress, the local legislature of any state or territory may provide rules for working mines, involving easements, drainage, and other necessary means to their complete development; and those conditions shall be fully expressed in the patent."

Section 2339 (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1437) contains this clause:

"Whenever, by priority of possession, rights to the use of water for mining, agricultural, manufacturing, or other purposes, have vested and accrued, and the same are recognized and acknowledged by the local customs, laws, and the decisions of courts, the possessors and owners of such vested rights shall be maintained and protected in the same."

In 1893 Congress passed an act (28 Stat. at L. 6, chap. 12) relieving from the necessity of the annual labor for that year, "so that no mining claim which has been regularly located and recorded as required by the local laws and mining regulations shall be subject to forfeiture for nonperformance of the annual assessment for the year 1893," and a similar statute was enacted in 1894 in respect to the annual labor for that year. 28 Stat. at L. 114, chap. 142.

While, in the above sections, there is not 196 U. S.

that direct grant of authority to the state to legislate respecting locations as there is to miners to make regulations, yet there is a clear recognition of such legislation. All these statutory provisions, except the last two sections referred to, were embodied in the legislation of 1872, and have been in force ever since.

*Acting upon the belief that they were [124] fully authorized, nearly all, if not all, the states in the mining regions have passed statutes prescribing additional regulations in respect to the location of mining claims, some having been in force for more than a score of years.

This court has, in many cases, recognized the validity of such state legislation. In Belk v. Meagher, 104 U. S. 279, 284, 26 L. ed. 735, 737, Chief Justice Waite, speaking for the court, declared that "a location is not made by taking possession alone, but by working on the ground, recording, and doing whatever else is required for that purpose by the acts of Congress and the local laws and regulations."

In Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560, it appeared that there were no mining regulations prescribed by the miners of the district, and it was said by Mr. Justice Field (p. 536, L. ed. p. 1116, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 564):

"We are therefore left entirely to the laws of the United States and the laws of Colorado on the subject. And the laws of the United States do not prescribe any time in which the excavations necessary to enable the locator to prepare and record a certificate shall be made. That is left to the legislation of the state, which, as we have stated, prescribes sixty days for the excavations upon the vein from the date of discovery, and thirty days afterwards for the preparation of the certificate and filing it for record. In the judgment of the legislature of that state this was reasonable time."

Kendall v. San Juan Silver Min. Co. 144 U. S. 658, 36 L. ed. 583, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779, turned on the question of compliance by the locator with a regulation prescribed by the statutes of Colorado concerning the record of locations, and the decision was that a failure to comply rendered the attempted location invalid. In Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, 177 U. S. 505, 44 L. ed. 864, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 726, it was held that a suit brought in support of an adverse claim was not one of which a Federal court necessarily had jurisdiction, because, as said (p. 508, L. ed. p. 865, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 727):

"In a given case the right of possession may not involve any question under the Con-[125]stitution or laws of the United States, but simply a determination of local rules and customs, or state statutes, or even only a mere matter of fact."

Other cases containing similar recognition might also be cited.

The validity of such state legislation has been affirmed by the supreme courts of several states. See, in addition to the present case, Wolfley v. Lebanon Min. Co. 4 Colo. 112; O'Donnell v. Glenn, 8 Mont. 248, 19 Pac. 302; Metcalf v. Prescott, 10 Mont. 283, 293, 25 Pac. 1037; Purdum v. Laddin, 23 Mont. 387, 59 Pac. 153; Sisson v. Sommers, 24 Nev. 379, 77 Am. St. Rep. 815, 55 Pac. 829; Copper Globe Min. Co. v. Allman, 23 Utah, 410, 64 Pac. 1019; Northmore v. Simmons, 38 C. C. A. 211, 97 Fed. 386.

In 1 Lindley on Mines, 2d ed. § 249, the author says:

"State statutes in reference to mining rights upon the public domain must, therefore, be construed in subordination to the laws of Congress, as they are more in the nature of regulations under these laws than independent legislation.

"State and territorial legislation, therefore, must be entirely consistent with the Federal laws, otherwise it is of no effect. The right to supplement Federal legislation, conceded to the state, may not be arbitrarily exercised; nor has the state the privilege of imposing conditions so onerous as to be repugnant to the liberal spirit of the congressional laws. On the other hand, the state may not, by its legislation, dispense with the performance of the conditions imposed by the national law, nor relieve the locator from the obligation of performing, in good faith, those acts which are declared by it to be essential to the maintenance and perpetuation of the estate acquired by location. Within these limits the state may legislate."

What is the ground upon which the validity of these supplementary regulations prescribed by a state is challenged? It is insisted that the disposal of the public lands is an act of legislative power, and that it is not within the competency of a legislature to delegate to another body the exercise of its power; that Congress alone has the right to dispose of the public lands, and cannot transfer its authority to any state legislature or other body. The authority of Con-

[126]gress over the public lands is granted by § 3, article 4, of the Constitution, which provides that "the Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States." In other words, Congress is the body to which is given the power to determine the conditions upon which the public lands shall be disposed of. The nation is an owner, and has made Congress the principal agent to dispose of its property. Is it inconceivable that Congress, having regard to the interests of this owner, shall, after prescribing the main and substantial conditions of disposal, believe that those interests will be subserved if minor and subordinate regulations are intrusted to the inhabitants of the mining district or state in which the particular lands are situated? While the disposition of these lands is provided for by congressional legislation, such legislation savors somewhat of mere rules prescribed by an owner of property for its disposal. It is not of a legislative character in the highest sense of the term, and, as an owner may delegate to his principal agent the right to employ subordinates, giving to them a limited discretion, so it would seem that Congress might rightfully intrust to the local legislature the determination of minor matters respecting the disposal of these lands.

Further, § 2324 distinctly grants to the miners of each mining district the power to make regulations, and the validity of this grant has been expressly affirmed by this court. In Jackson v. Roby, 109 U. S. 440, 441, 27 L. ed. 990, 991, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 301, we said:

"The act of Congress of 1866 gave the sanction of law to these rules of miners, so far as they were not in conflict with the laws of the United States. 14 Stat. at L. 251, chap. 262, § 1. Subsequent legislation specified with greater particularity the modes of location and appropriation and extent of each mining claim, recognizing, however, the essential features of the rules framed by miners, and, among others, that which required work on the claim for its development as a condition of its continued ownership."

*See also Erhardt v. Boaro, 113 U. S. [127] 527, 28 L. ed. 1113, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 560, in which (p. 535, L. ed. p. 1116, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 564), is this declaration:

"And although since 1866 Congress has, to some extent, legislated on the subject, prescribing the limits of location and appropriation and the extent of mining ground which one may thus acquire, miners are still permitted, in their respective districts, to make rules and regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States or of the state or territory in which the districts are situated, governing the location, manner of recording, and amount of work necessary to hold possession of a claim."

Now, if Congress has power to delegate to a body of miners the making of additional regulations respecting location, it cannot be doubted that it has equal power to delegate similar authority to a state legislature.

Finally, it must be observed that this legislation was enacted by Congress more than thirty years ago. It has been acted upon as valid through all the mining regions of the country. Property rights have been built up on the faith of it. To now strike it down would unsettle countless titles and work manifold injury to the great mining interests of the Far West. While, of course, consequences may not determine a decision, yet, in a doubtful case, the court may well pause before thereby it unsettles interests so many and so vast,—interests which have been built up on the faith, not merely of congressional action, but also of judicial decisions of many state courts sustaining it, and of a frequent recognition of its validity by this court. Whatever doubts might exist if this matter was wholly res integra, we have no hesitation in holding that the question must be considered as settled by prior adjudications, and cannot now be reopened.

[128] The Montana statute (Montana Codes Annotated, § 3612), among other supplementary regulations, provided that the declaratory statement filed in the office of the clerk of the county in which the lode or claim is situated must contain "the dimensions and location of the discovery shaft, or its *equivalent, sunk upon lode or placer claims," and "the location and description of each corner, with the markings thereon." A failure to comply with these regulations was the ground upon which the supreme court of Montana held the location invalid. It is contended that these provisions are too stringent, and conflict with the liberal purpose manifested by Congress in its legislation respecting mining claims. We do not think that they are open to this objection. They certainly do not conflict with the letter of any congressional statute; on the contrary, are rather suggested by § 2324. It may well be that the state legislature, in its desire to guard against false testimony in respect to a location, deemed it important that full particulars in respect to the discovery shaft and the corner posts should be, at the very beginning, placed of record. Even if there were no danger of false testimony, it was not unreasonable to guard against the resurrection of incomplete locations when, by subsequent explorations, mining claims of great value have been uncovered.

We see no error in the rulings of the Supreme Court of Montana, and its judgment is affirmed.

196 U. S.

CHICAGO, INDIANAPOLIS, & LOUISVILLE RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

PATRICK McGUIRE et al.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 128-133.)

Error to state court—Federal question—when raised in time.

The suggestion of a violation of a Federal right, first made in a petition for the review, in the highest state court, of the judgment of an intermediate appellate court, is too late to serve as a basis for the exercise of the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States, where it does not affirmatively appear that the state court passed upon the Federal question, and the denial of the petition may well have been upon the ground that the question, not having been suggested in the court below, could not be made available on appeal.

[No. 69.]

Argued December 2, 5, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Appellate Court of the State of Indiana to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Circuit Court for Pulaski County in that State entered on a verdict in favor of defendants in a suit to quiet title and for an injunction. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 31 Ind. App. 110, 99 Am. St. Rep. 249, 65 N. E. 932.

Statement by Mr. Justice Brown:

This was a suit in the nature of a bill in equity instituted in the circuit court for Pulaski county, by the railroad company, to quiet its title to certain land, and for an

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a injunction. The case was tried before a jury, and a verdict returned for the defendants, under instruction of the court.

Both parties claimed title through the Louisville, New Albany, & Chicago Railway Company,—plaintiff in error, which was also plaintiff below,—through certain mortgages given by the New Albany company in 1886, 1890, and 1894, which were foreclosed in the United States circuit court, and through which foreclosure and subsequent sale its title became vested; defendants, through a judgment recovered by McGuire September 24, 1896, in the circuit court of White county, against the New Albany company for $2,416.30, upon which an execution was issued October 16, 1897, to the sheriff of Pulaski county, and a levy made upon the real estate in dispute. A sale was made November 13, 1897, to the defendant Hathaway, to whom a deed was executed by the sheriff November 23, 1898.

It was insisted by the plaintiff railroad company that the property in controversy was a part of the ground appurtenant to its station at Francesville, Indiana, and that the foreclosure and sale of the property of the New Albany road, through which it obtained its title, carried with it the title to the premises in dispute. The judgment of McGuire was obtained after the execution of the mortgages through which the plaintiff claimed its title. Defendants insisted that the disputed property was not embraced within the mortgages under the after-acquired property clause inserted therein, be-state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

When Federal question is raised in time to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Federal Supreme Court over state courts.

CHICAGO, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire reaffirms the well-settled rule that to sustain the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts the Federal question must have been presented for decision at some point in the procedure in the state courts so that it properly should have received consideration in the highest state court, or that court must actually have taken up and decided the question, notwithstanding the delay in its presentation. In the latter case, says Mr. Justice Brown, the burden is upon the plaintiff in error to show that the highest state court did in fact consider the Federal question. There is no presumption that it received consideration.

The Federal question relied upon to confer this jurisdiction cannot first be raised in the Supreme Court of the United States. Quimby v. Boyd, 128 U. S. 488, 32 L. ed. 502, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 38 L. ed. 927, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Marrow v. Brinkley, 129 U. S. 178, 32 L. ed. 654, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 267; Scudder v. Comptroller (Scudder v. Coler) 175 U. S. 32, 44 L. ed. 62, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 26; Chaplin v. Fye, 179 U. S. 127, 45 L. ed. 119, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 71; Bergner v. Palethorp, 131 U. S. Appx. ccviii.; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. 21; Sweringen v. St. Louis, 185 U. S. 38, 46 L. ed. 795, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 569.

It is not raised in time where it first appears in the petition for writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States to the state court. Johnson v. New York L. Ins. Co. 187 U. S. 491, 47 L. ed. 273, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 194; Telluride Power Transmission Co. v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 187 U. S. 569, 47 L. ed. 307, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 178; Wabash R. Co. v. Flannigan, 192 U. S. 29, 48 L. ed. 328, 24

Sup. Ct. Rep. 224; CHICAGO, I. & L. R. Co. v. McGuire.

It is essential that at some point in the procedure before the state courts the Federal question relied upon to confer such jurisdiction be presented for decision. Murdock v. Memphis, 20 Wall. 590, 22 L. ed. 429; Church v. Kelsey, 121 U. S. 282, 30 L. ed. 960, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 897.

The Federal right, title, privilege, or immunity must be set up or claimed in the trial court whenever, under the state practice, the highest state court in reviewing the judgments of the trial court refuses to consider questions not therein raised. Baldwin v. Kansas, 129 U. S. 52, 32 L. ed. 640, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 193; Spies v. Illinois (Ex parte Spies) 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21; Brooks v. Missouri, 124 U. S. 394, 31 L. ed. 454, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 443; Morrison v. Watson, 154 U. S. 111, 38 L. ed. 927, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 995; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137.

And the claim of a Federal right, first made in a motion in arrest of judgment, is not in time, where the highest state court rests its affirmance of the order overruling the motion upon the ground that only errors apparent upon the face of the record can be availed of to sustain a motion in arrest of judgment. Brown v. Massachusetts, 144 U. S. 573, 36 L. ed. 546, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 757.

But the Federal question is presented in time, whenever raised, if the highest state court actually takes up the question and decides it.

Where the Federal right was specially set up and was denied by the highest state court, it was not regarded as important that it was not so set up or claimed in the declaration as to be decided in passing on a demurrer, and was first presented by a motion to set aside the judgment on the demurrer, and its denial assigned as error on appeal to the highest court of the state. Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 82, 43 L. ed. 374, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106.

Nor is it material that the claim of Federal right was first asserted in a motion to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial, where the case was one in which no provision was made for filing an answer, and the claim was again asserted in the assignment of errors filed in the highest state court. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Chicago, 166 U. S. 226, 41 L. ed. 979, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 581.

Jurisdiction has been sustained where the cause entirely foreign to the operation of the railroad, and therefore could not have been embraced within the foreclosure and sale.

[130] *The appellate court of Indiana sustained their contention, held that the trial court was right in instructing the jury to return a verdict for the appellees, and affirmed its judgment. 31 Ind. App. 110, 99 Am. St. Rep. 249, 65 N. E. 932. The supreme court denied a petition for review.

Mr. H. R. Kurrie argued the cause, and, with Messrs. E. C. Field and G. W. Kretzinger, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. W. H. H. Miller and Maurice Winfield argued the cause and filed a brief for defendants in error.

Federal right was claimed in a motion for new trial and in the assignments of error in a state supreme court, and was fully considered in the opinion of that court, whose decision was adverse to such claim (San José Land & Water Co. v. San José Ranch Co. 189 U. S. 177, 47 L. ed. 765, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 487), and where the question was presented by a motion to set aside the judgment (Manley v. Park, 187 U. S. 547, 47 L. ed. 296, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 208), or by a motion in arrest of judgment (St. Louis Consol. Coal Co. v. Illinois, 185 U. S. 203, 46 L. ed. 872, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 616).

A question as to the repugnancy of a state statute to the Federal Constitution, first raised in the supreme court of a state, and there decided, not on the ground that it was not raised in the lower court, but upon its merits, is not raised too late for the purpose of review on writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States. Sully v. American Nat. Bank, 178 U. S. 289, 44 L. ed. 1072, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935.

A Federal question was not set up too late to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court, where it was raised by the assignments of error in the state supreme court, and was considered and decided by a commission appointed to aid that court in the discharge of its duties, and the judgment of such commission was, for the reasons stated in its report, affirmed by the state supreme court. Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dobney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565.

And where a judgment of the highest court of a state necessarily involves a denial of rights claimed under the Constitution of the United States, the Supreme Court of the United States has jurisdiction, although the question was presented for the first time in the highest state court. Arrowsmith v. Harmoning, 118 U. S. 194, 30 L. ed. 243, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1023.

So, where exemption from suit as consul of a foreign power is first claimed in an assignment of errors in the highest state court, the Supreme Court of the United States will not refuse to take jurisdiction of a writ of error to the state court, where the record shows no objection founded on the omission to plead the exemption in the lower court, and the only answer to the assignment of error is that the fact of such consulship does not appear in the record. Davis v. Packard, 7 Pet. 276, 8 L. ed. 684.

A claim that the admission in evidence of
196 U. S.

Mr. Justice Brown delivered the opinion of the court;

Motion is made to dismiss this writ of error upon two grounds: (1) That the supposed Federal question was not set up and claimed until too late; (2) that there is no Federal question in the case.

The motion must be sustained upon the first ground. The Federal question now put forward by the plaintiff is that the *appel-[131] late court failed to give full faith and credit to the foreclosure decree made by the circuit court of the United States and the sale in pursuance thereof, in refusing to hold that the mortgages foreclosed by said decree covered and included in their description of the property therein conveyed the the previous testimony of an absent witness was in violation of the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution was not specially set up, at the proper time and in the proper way to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States to review the judgment of the highest court of a state, by an assignment of error in that court, which was not considered by it, presumably because no such question had been raised in the trial court. Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48.

The Federal question must be raised before final decision in the highest state court of the state. Winona & St. P. Land Co. v. Minnesota, 159 U. S. 540, 40 L. ed. 252, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 88; Slimmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333.

It is not in time when first presented on an application for rehearing in the highest state court (De La Lande v. Louisiana, 18 How. 192, 15 L. ed. 350; Steines v. Franklin County, 14 Wall. 15, 20 L. ed. 846; Susquehanna Boom Co. v. West Branch Boom Co. 110 U. S. 57, 28 L. ed. 69, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 438; Simmerman v. Nebraska, 116 U. S. 54, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 333; Bushnell v. Crooke Min. & Smelting Co. 148 U. S. 682, 37 L. ed. 610, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 771; Miller v. Texas, 153 U. S. 535, 38 L. ed. 812, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 874; Sayward v. Denny, 158 U. S. 180, 39 L. ed. 941, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 777; Miller v. Cornwall R. Co. 168 U. S. 131, 42 L. ed. 409, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 34; Capital Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 172 U. S. 425, 43 L. ed. 502, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 202; Turner v. Richardson, 180 U. S. 87, 45 L. ed. 438, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 295; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Welting, 181 U. S. 47, 45 L. ed. 739, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531; Weber v. Rogan, 188 U. S. 10, 47 L. ed. 363, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 263; Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, post, 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221),—at least where such petition for rehearing is overruled without any determination or allusion to the alleged Federal question (Pim v. St. Louis, 165 U. S. 273, 41 L. ed. 714, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 322), or the question presented therein was not dealt with by the state court as a Federal question (Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730), or where the state court refused to consider the question because it had not sooner been raised (Chappell v. Bradshaw, 128 U. S. 132, 32 L. ed. 369, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40).

In Louisiana, as elsewhere, a claim of a Federal right, title, privilege, or immunity is not in time when first suggested on such an ap-real estate in controversy. This question, however, never seems to have been presented either to the court of first instance or to the court of appellate jurisdiction. It is true the question was argued at length as to what was intended to be covered by the description in the mortgages and by the foreclosure and sale, but the Federal character of this question was not indicated until after a petition for a rehearing in the appellate court had been overruled. Plaintiff then filed in the supreme court of the state a petition for the transfer of the cause to that court, and, as grounds for such transfer, insisted that the appellate court erred in holding that the property in controversy was after-acquired property not used for railway purposes, and on this account was not within the mortgages upon which appellant's title was based, and that the court thereby "refused to give due effect to the judgment of the Federal court."

plication, although under the laws of that state a judgment of the highest court does not become final until a specified time from the rendering of the judgment, within which time a dissatisfied party may apply for a rehearing; as it does not follow that new grounds for decision will be allowed to be presented, or will be considered on such application, and the general rule is otherwise. Texas & P. R. Co. v. Southern P. Co. 137 U. S. 48, 34 L. ed. 614, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.

But if the state court entertains the petition and disposes of the Federal question, that will be sufficient. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Elliott, 184 U. S. 530, 46 L. ed. 673, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390.

Even if an exception to the general rule that the privilege or immunity under the Federal Constitution is claimed too late when first set up in the state court on petition for rehearing can, however, be based on the ground that the state court permitted argument on the question and delivered an opinion and decision upon it, yet, if the misconception of the constitutional provision relied on is very obvious, the Federal Supreme Court will not retain the cause for further argument, but will avail itself of the general rule ordinarily applicable, and dismiss the writ of error. Caldwell v. Texas, 137 U. S. 692, 34 L. ed. 816, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 224.

A certificate of the presiding judge of a state court, that a Federal question which was first raised by a petition for rehearing was duly considered and decided, cannot confer jurisdiction on the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to the state court, where, from the face of the record proper and from the opinions, the reasonable inference is that the court may have denied the application in the mere exercise of its discretion, or may have declined to pass upon the Federal question in terms because it was suggested too late. Fullerton v. Texas, 196 U. S. 192, post, 443, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 221.

The denial, by a division of the supreme court of Missouri, of a right under Federal law which was first claimed on a motion to transfer the cause to the court in banc after judgment

This petition appears to have been denied by the supreme court without an opinion. Doubtless, if that court had proceeded to pass upon this as a Federal question we should have held it sufficient, but it will be observed that the petition contained a mere suggestion of a violation of a Federal right, not the distinct presentation of a Federal question, and that no reference was made to the Constitution of the United States. F. G. Oxley Stave Co. v. Butler County, 166 U. S. 648, 41 L. ed. 1149, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 709. We are left to infer that the petition was denied because the point of constitutionality was not made in either of the courts below. The rule seems to be settled in Indiana, as in many other states, that the matter assigned in the supreme court of the state as error must have been properly presented in the court below and there adjudicated. Coleman v. Dobbins, 8 Ind. 156-164; Priddy v. Dodd, 4 Ind. 84; Wesley v.

and after an application for rehearing had been overruled, is not a decision against a right specially set up or claimed at the proper time. Duncan v. Missouri, 152 U. S. 377, 38 L. ed. 485, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 570; Bobb v. Jamison, 155 U. S. 416, 39 L. ed. 206, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 357.

Where the supreme court of the state renders judgment without any suggestion that a Federal question has been presented, and no such question is presented in the petition for rehearing, the denial of a subsequent motion that oral argument of the case on its merits be permitted, which does not necessarily involve a decision of a Federal question, does not give the Supreme Court of the United States jurisdiction of a writ of error to the denial. Butler v. Gage, 138 U. S. 52, 34 L. ed. 869, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 235.

An attempt to raise, for the first time, a Federal question on a motion in an inferior state court to quash a fieri facias issued in pursuance of a decree of the highest court of the state stands upon no better footing than if attempted on a petition for rehearing. Loeber v. Schroeder, 149 U. S. 580, 37 L. ed. 856, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934.

A Federal question is not set up in a state court soon enough to sustain a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, where it is first presented by new pleas filed after the case is decided by the supreme court of the state and remanded to the lower court for a new trial, and the supreme court on a second appeal refuses to reopen the questions involved on the first hearing, to let in the Federal defense presented by the new pleas. Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Adams, 180 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 395, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240.

A Federal question raised after the case has been decided on the merits by the highest court of a state and remanded to a lower court merely for an accounting is raised too late for the purpose of a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, where such question does not arise on the accounting itself, but by a motion for leave to amend the answer to set up a defense which might have been originally made. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Kirchhoff, 169 U. S. 103, 42 L. ed. 677, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 260.

[132] Milford, 41 *Ind. 415; Selking v. Jones, 52 Ind. 409; Russell v. Harrison, 49 Ind. 97. This is also the practice in this court. * Cornell v. Green, 163 U. S. 75-80, 41 L. ed. 76-78, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 969; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187; Pine River Logging & Improv. Co. v. United States, 186 U. S. 279-289, 46 L. ed. 1164-1169, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 920. If the supreme court did in fact consider the Federal question the burden was upon the plaintiff to show it. There is no presumption that the court considered such question. Under such circumstances we decline to review the constitutional question here. This was expressly held in Jacobi v. Alabama, 187 U. S. 133, 47 L. ed. 106, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 48; Layton v. Missouri, 187 U. S. 356, 47 L. ed. 214, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 137; Spies v. Illinois, 123 U. S. 131, 31 L. ed. 80, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 21.

True, the Federal question was set up at length in the petition filed in the appellate court for a writ of error from this court, but that was clearly too late. Fowler v. Lamson, 164 U. S. 252, 41 L. ed. 424, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 112; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Fitzgerald, 160 U. S. 566, 575, 40 L. ed. 539, 540, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 389; Ansbro v. United States, 159 U. S. 695, 40 L. ed. 310, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187.

In this connection the plaintiff in error urges upon us the proposition that, as it relied solely upon a title derived by a foreclosure and sale in a Federal court, the state court must necessarily have considered and decided that question, and that in such cases the Federal Constitution need not be specially set up and claimed. This argument would necessarily not apply to the supreme court of the state, which, as above indicated, might have held, and probably did hold, that the Federal question, not having been suggested in the court below, could not be made available on appeal. The appellate court did not discuss it. There are doubtless a few cases which hold that, where the validity of a treaty or statute or authority of the United States is raised, and the decision is against it, or the validity of a state statute is drawn in question, and the decision is in favor of its validity, and the Federal question appears in the record and was decided, or such decision was necessarily involved in the case, the fact that it was not specifically set up and claimed is not conclusive against a review of such question here. Columbia Water Power Co. v. Street R. Light & P. Co. 172 U. S. 475-488, 43 L. ed. 521-525, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 247.

[133] But as the validity of *no statute, state or Federal, or authority thereunder, was called in question here, this rule does not apply.
196 U. S.

The true and rational rule stated by this court in Bridge Proprietors v. Hoboken Land & Improv. Co. 1 Wall. 116-145, 17 L. ed. 571-576, is clearly applicable: "That the court must be able to see clearly from the whole record that a certain provision of the Constitution or act of Congress was relied on by the party who brings the writ of error, and that the right thus claimed by him was denied." This case is the not infrequent one of an attempt to clutch at the jurisdiction of this court as an afterthought, when all other resources of litigation have been exhausted.

The Federal question, if any such existed,—as to which we express no opinion,—was not set up or claimed at the proper time, and the writ of error must therefore be dismissed.

AMERICAN EXPRESS COMPANY and R.
M. Coffin, Plffs. in Err.,

v.

STATE OF IOWA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 133-146.)

Error to state court—decision on non-Federal ground—commerce—C. O. D. shipments of intoxicating liquors—when subject to seizure under state law.

1. A writ of error to review a decision of a state court upholding a seizure, under the state laws, of intoxicating liquors shipped C. O. D. into that state from another state, on the ground that the sale was completed in the former state, will not be dismissed on the theory that its ruling rests upon a non-Federal ground broad enough to sustain it, where the protection of the commerce clause of the

On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & S. Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; and Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311.

As to police power as affecting commerce—see notes to People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559; and State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas & Min. Co. 6 L. R. A. 579.

On importations in original packages—see notes to Re Wilson, 12 L. R. A. 624; State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L. R. A. 616; Pittsburg & S. Coal Co. v. Bates, 39 L. ed. U. S. 539.

On the right of a state to prohibit trade in intoxicating liquors as affected by the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution—see notes to State v. Creeden, 7 L. R. A. 295; and State ex rel. Cochran v. Winters, 10 L. R. A. 616.

Appellate review in Federal Supreme Court of state court decisions involving questions of interstate commerce.

The character of the controversy essential to Federal Constitution was directly invoked in the state court.

2. Intoxicating liquors shipped C. O. D. from one state into another cannot be subjected to seizure under the laws of the latter state, while in the hands of the express company, without infringing the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[No. 67.]

Argued December 2, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a judgment which reversed a judgment of the Tama District Court, which had reversed a judgment of a justice's court, sustaining a seizure of intoxicating liquors shipped C. O. D. into the state from Illinois, while in the hands of the express company's agent at the place of delivery. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 118 Iowa, 447, 92 N. W. 66.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

The American Express Company received at Rock Island, Illinois, on or about March 29, 1900, four boxes of merchandise to be carried to Tama, Iowa, to be there delivered to four different persons, one of the packages being consigned to each. The shipment was C. O. D., $3 to be collected on each confer jurisdiction upon the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to the highest court of a state is discussed in a note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 531, entitled What adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court of the United States by writ of error to those courts. As is there pointed out, the term "Federal question" is constantly employed by the courts to designate this kind of controversy. This term obviously includes the question whether or not a state statute as construed by the state courts is in violation of the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Pennsylvania, 141 U. S. 18, 35 L. ed. 613, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 595, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 876; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Alabama Bd. of Assessment (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Seay) 132 U. S. 472, 33 L. ed. 409, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 726, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 161; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096.

Jurisdiction exists to review the judgment of a state court sustaining a demurrer to a plea which draws in question nothing but the validity of a state statute authorizing the construction of a dam across a navigable river, as the consistency of such statute with or repugnancy to the Constitution of the United States necessarily arises, and must have been determined by such decision. Willson v. Black Bird Creek Marsh Co. 2 Pet. 245, 7 L. ed. 412.

But the exceptions on a prosecution for selling intoxicating liquors in violation of a state prohibitory law, in which it appeared that such liquors were sent by defendant by express C. O. D. from another state to the purchasers, that the facts as established did not constitute an package, exclusive of 35 cents for carriage on each. On March 31 the merchandise reached Tama, and on that day was seized in the hands of the express agent. This was based on an information before a justice of the peace, charging that the packages contained intoxicating liquor held by the express company for sale. The express company and its agent answered, setting up the receipt of the packages in Illinois, not for sale in Iowa, but for carriage and delivery to the consignees. An agreed statement of facts was stipulated admitting the receipt, the carriage, and the holding of the packages as above stated. The seizure was sustained. Appeal was taken to a district court. The express company and its agent amended their answer, specially setting up the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States. There was judgment in favor of the express company, and the state of Iowa appealed to the supreme court and obtained a reversal. 118 Iowa, 447, 92 N. W. 66. This writ of error was prosecuted.

Mr. Lewis Cass Ledyard argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiffs in error:

The following propositions, which are stated in the language of the court, must be deemed to be firmly established:

1. That ardent spirits, distilled liquors, offense against the state statute, and that defendant ought not to have been found guilty under the facts, are too general to raise any question in a state court as to the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, or as to any rights claimed under it. O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

And the mere affirmance of the conviction does not involve any Federal question, where the attention of the court was not called to the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, or to any right claimed under it. Ibid.

A decision of a state court sustaining the defense in an action for a breach of contract, that the contract sued on was in violation of the Interstate Commerce Act, does not entitle the plaintiff to a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States, unless he set up some claim under the Federal statute, which was denied by the state court. This because the decision was in favor of the only claim made under the Federal statute. Kizer v. Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. 179 U. S. 199, 45 L. ed. 152, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100.

See also note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33, on How and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States.

A question under the act of March 2, 1893, requiring interstate carriers to equip their cars with automatic couplings, is not so involved as to be cognizable by the Supreme Court of the United States in reviewing a judgment of a state court holding such a carrier liable to one ale, and beer are subjects of exchange, barter, and traffic, like any other commodity in which a right of traffic exists, and are so recognized by the usages of the commercial world, the laws of Congress, and the decisions of the courts.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100-110, 34 L. ed. 128-132, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

2. That the transportation of merchandise from one state into and across another is interstate commerce, and is protected from the operation of state laws from the moment of shipment, whilst in transit, and up to the ending of the journey by the delivery of the goods to the consignee at the place to which they were consigned.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 415, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1092, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

3. That the power to ship merchandise from one state into another carries with it, as an incident, the right in the receiver of the goods to sell them in the original packages, any state regulation to the contrary notwithstanding; that is to say, that the goods received by interstate commerce remain under the shelter of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution until by a sale in the original package they have of its employees for injuries sustained in attempting to make a coupling, where the carrier did not specially set up or claim any right under that act or dependent upon its construction, which was denied by the state court. Southern R. Co. v. Carson, 194 U. S. 136, 48 L. ed. 907, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609.

Where a state court has construed a state statute as applying solely to domestic commerce, that construction must be accepted as conclusive by the Supreme Court of the United States on writ of error to review a decision of the state court maintaining the validity of such enactment over the objection that it was a regulation of interstate commerce. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. v. Mississippi, 133 U. S. 587, 33 L. ed. 784, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 801, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 348; Osborne v. Florida, 164 U. S. 650, 41 L. ed. 586, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 214; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 179 U. S. 388, 45 L. ed. 244, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 101; Erie R. Co. v. Purdy, 185 U. S. 148, 46 L. ed. 847, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 605.

The same rule obtains where the construction given by the state court to the state statute makes such enactment applicable to interstate commerce. Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Howe Mach. Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676, 25 L. ed. 754; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Illinois, 163 U. S. 142, 41 L. ed. 107, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1096.

See also note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571, on What questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts.

The construction put by the highest state court upon a provision of the state Constitution, 196 U. S.

been commingled with the general mass of property in the state.

Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

4. That the last preceding proposition, whilst generically true, is no longer applicable to intoxicating liquors, since Congress, in the exercise of its lawful authority by the passage of the act of August 8, 1890, has recognized the power of the several states to control the incidental right of sale in the original packages of intoxicating liquors shipped into one state from another, so as to enable the states to prevent the exercise, by the receiver, of the accessory right of selling intoxicating liquors in original packages except in conformity to lawful state regulations.

Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer), 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 445, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

5. That the above-mentioned act of Congress, which provides that intoxicating liquors transported into any state or territory, or remaining therein for use, con-by which a different effect is given to it than to similar language in the interstate commerce law, is binding upon the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error to the state court, in a case in which the validity of such constitutional provision under the Federal Constitution is involved. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kentucky, 183 U. S. 503, 46 L. ed. 298, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 95.

The rule that the Supreme Court will not entertain moot cases was applied in American Book Co. v. Kansas, 193 U. S. 49, 48 L. ed. 613, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 394, to a controversy over the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, with the result that the compliance by a foreign corporation with a judgment of the highest state court ousting it from doing business in the state until it should satisfy the requirements which the state laws exact of foreign corporations was held to preclude any review of such judgment in the Federal Supreme Court, although, in another similar suit pending in the state courts, such judgment was pleaded as decisive of all or some of the issues.

In addition to the notes hereinbefore referred to, other notes involving questions respecting the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over state courts are: What the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court, Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471; The record for this purpose, Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329; Practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal, Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

sumption, sale, or storage therein, shall, upon arrival in such state or territory, be subject to the operation and effect of the laws of such state or territory, enacted in the exercise of its police powers, to the same extent and in the same manner as though such liquors had been produced in such state or territory, and shall not be exempt therefrom by reason of being introduced therein in original packages or otherwise,—did not intend to, and did not, cause the power of the state to attach to an interstate commerce shipment whilst the merchandise was in transit under such shipment, and until its arrival at the point of destination and delivery there to the consignee.

Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 426, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1096, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

6. That the power to ship from one state into another embraces, of necessity, the right to have the goods carried to the place of destination and delivered at that point to the consignee, and that the fundamental right which these decisions hold to be protected from the operation of state laws by the Constitution is the continuity of shipment of goods coming from one state into another, from the point of transmission to the point of consignment, and the accomplishment there of the delivery covered by the contract. The power which it was held in Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062, the state did not possess was that of stopping interstate shipments at the state line by breaking their continuity and intercepting their course from the point of origin to the point of consummation.

Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412-419, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1093, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

The sale is complete upon a delivery of the goods to the carrier, who becomes the agent of the consignee for the purpose of accepting a delivery and transporting the goods to him, and the agent of the consignor for the purpose of the collection of the purchase price.

Com. v. Russell, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 576; State v. Cairns, 64 Kan. 782, 58 L. R. A. 55, 68 Pac. 621; James v. Com. 102 Ky. 108, 42 S. W. 1107; Com. v. Fleming, 130 Pa. 138, 5 L. R. A. 470, 17 Am. St. Rep. 763, 18 Atl. 622; State v. Flanagan, 38 W. Va. 53, 22 L. R. A. 430, 45 Am. St. Rep. 836, 17 S. E. 792; Pilgreen v. State, 71 Ala. 368; Higgins v. Murray, 73 N. Y. 252.

That the technical question of the passing of title is immaterial has been very lately held by this court.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151.

Mr. Charles W. Mullan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error:

The ownership and possession of merchandise which is shipped C. O. D. remain in the consignor until it is delivered to the consignee by the common carrier upon payment of the purchase price, and the sale is made at the place of delivery, except where the consignee expressly designates the common carrier as his agent to transport and deliver such merchandise, or where the acts of the parties show that the consignor intended to part with his property and to transfer the title and possession thereof to the consignee at the time of delivery to the common carrier.

United States v. Shriver, 23 Fed. 134; United States v. Cline, 26 Fed. 515; McElwee v. Metropolitan Lumber Co. 16 C. C. A. 232, 37 U. S. App. 266, 69 Fed. 302; McNeal v. Braun, 53 N. J. L. 617, 26 Am. St. Rep. 441, 23 Atl. 687; Thompson v. Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. 1 Bond, 152, Fed. Cas. No. 13,950; Hooper v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 27 Wis. 81, 9 Am. Rep. 439; Braddock Glass Co. v. Irvin, 153 Pa. 440, 25 Atl. 490; Millhiser v. Erdman, 98 N. C. 292, 2 Am. St. Rep. 334, 3 S. E. 521; Stone v. Perry, 60 Me. 48; Moakes v. Nicolson, 19 C. B. N. S. 290; Hirschhorn v. Canney, 98 Mass. 149; Daugherty v. Fowler, 44 Kan. 628, 10 L. R. A. 314, 25 Pac. 40; Suit v. Woodhall, 113 Mass. 391; Wasserboehr v. Boulicier, 84 Me. 165, 30 Am. St. Rep. 344, 24 Atl. 808; Lane v. Chadwick, 146 Mass. 68, 15 N. E. 121; Benjamin, Sales, 1883, § 1040; State v. O'Neil, 58 Vt. 140, 56 Am. Rep. 557, 2 Atl. 586; Gipps Brewing Co. v. De France, 91 Iowa, 108, 28 L. R. A. 386, 51 Am. St. Rep. 329, 58 N. W. 1087; State v. United States Exp. Co. 70 Iowa, 271, 30 N. W. 568; The Frances, 9 Cranch, 183, 3 L. ed. 698; Mechem, Sales, §§ 494, 502, 740.

The place of the sale of goods or merchandise is the place of delivery; that is, where the sale is completed by delivery.

Dow v. Gould & C. Silver Min. Co. 31 Cal. 629; Mead v. Dayton, 28 Conn. 39; Lewis v. McCabe, 49 Conn. 155, 44 Am. Rep. 217; Weil v. Golden, 141 Mass. 364, 6 N. E. 229.

Under the act of Congress of August 8, 1890, all fermented, distilled, or other intoxicating liquors transported into any state, or remaining therein for use, consumption, sale, or storage, are, upon arrival in such state, subject to the operation and effect of the laws of the state to which they are shipped, and subject to the police powers of such state, to the same extent as domestic property therein, whether such liquors are transported in original packages or otherwise.

Re Rahrer (Wilkerson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep.

865; Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

Where merchandise is shipped C. O. D., the liability of the carrier ceases and that of a warehouseman attaches at the time of the arrival of such merchandise at the place of its destination.

Weed v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344, 6 Am. Rep. 96; Gibson v. American Merchants' Union Exp. Co. 1 Hun, 387; Marshall v. Wells, 7 Wis. 1, 73 Am. Dec. 381; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Wallace, 60 Ark. 100, 29 S. W. 32; Schouler, Bailments & Carriers, 2d ed. § 507.

There is no duty or obligation arising out of the nature of a carrier's business, which requires such carrier to collect payment of the price of goods transported by it as a condition precedent to their delivery. Such obligation arises, if at all, by special contract, express or implied.

Cox v. Columbus & W. R. Co. 91 Ala. 392, 8 So. 824; Union R. & Transp. Co. v. Riegel, 73 Pa. 72.

No Federal question is involved herein which gives this court jurisdiction to hear and determine the cause.

O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

Although the majority of the supreme court of Iowa doubted the correctness of a ruling previously made by that court, nevertheless it was adhered to under the rule of stare decisis, and was made the basis of the decision in this cause. In the previous case it was held by the supreme court of Iowa that, where merchandise was received by a carrier with a duty to collect the price on delivery to the consignee, the merchandise remained the property of the consignor, and was held by the carrier as his agent with authority to complete the sale. Upon this premise it was decided that intoxicating liquors shipped C. O. D. from another state were subject to be seized on their arrival in Iowa, in the hands of the express company. Sustaining, upon this principle, the seizure in this case, the supreme court of Iowa did not expressly consider the defense based on the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, because the court deemed that its ruling on the subject of the effect of the C. O. D. shipment was a wholly non-[141] Federal *ground, broad enough to sustain the conclusion reached. And this the court considered was sanctioned by O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 324, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

In accord with the opinion of the supreme court of Iowa it is insisted at bar that this writ of error should be dismissed for want of jurisdiction, because the decision below involved no Federal question, and the case of O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 324, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693, is relied upon. The contention is untenable. As pointed out in Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 446, 48 L. ed. 256, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151, the view taken of the O'Neil Case is a mistaken one. True, in that case the supreme court of Vermont gave to a C. O. D. shipment the effect attributed to it by the supreme court of Iowa in this case. True, also, a writ of error was prosecuted from this court to the Vermont court upon the assumption that the commerce clause of the Constitution was involved, but this court dismissed the writ of error because it did not appear that the commerce clause of the Constitution was relied on in the state court, was in any way called to the attention of that court, or was passed upon by it. As on this record it appears that the protection of the commerce clause was directly invoked in the state court, it is apparent that the O'Neil Case is inapposite. And as, in order to decide the contention that the judgment below rests upon an adequate non-Federal ground, we must necessarily consider how far the C. O. D. shipment was protected by the commerce clause of the Constitution, which is the question on the merits, we pass from the motion to dismiss to the consideration of the rights asserted under the commerce clause of the Constitution.

We can best dispose of such asserted rights by a brief reference to some of the controlling adjudications of this court.

In Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062, it was held that the statutes of Iowa forbidding common carriers from bringing intoxicating liquors into the state of Iowa from another state or territory without obtaining a certificate required by the laws of Iowa was void, as being a regulation of commerce between the states, and, therefore, that those laws *did [142] not justify a common carrier in Illinois from refusing to receive and transport intoxicating liquors consigned to a point within the state of Iowa.

In Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681, it was held that a law of the state of Iowa, forbidding the sale of liquor in that state, could not be made to apply to liquors shipped from another state into Iowa, before the merchandise had been delivered in Iowa, and there sold in the original package, without causing the statute to be a regulation of commerce, repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. In Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664, the same doctrine was reiterated, except that it was qualified to the extent called for by the provisions of the act of Congress of August 8, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 313, chap. 728, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3177), commonly known as the Wilson act. In that case a shipment of intoxicating liquors had been made into the state of Iowa from another state, and the agent of the ultimate railroad carrier in Iowa was proceeded against for an alleged violation of the Iowa law, because, when the merchandise reached its destination in Iowa, he had moved the package from the car in which it had been transported to a freight depot, preparatory to delivery to the consignee. The contention was that, as by the Wilson act, the power of the state operated upon the property the moment it passed the state boundary line; therefore the state of Iowa had the right to forbid the transportation of the merchandise within the state, and to punish those carrying it therein. This was not sustained. The court declined to express an opinion as to the authority of Congress, under its power to regulate commerce, to delegate to the states the right to forbid the transportation of merchandise from one state to another. It was, however, decided that the Wilson act manifested no attempt on the part of Congress to exert such power, but was only a regulation of commerce, since it merely provided, in the case of intoxicating liquors, that such merchandise, when transported from one state to another, should lose its character as interstate commerce upon completion of delivery under the contract of interstate shipment, and before sale in the original packages.

[143] *The doctrine of the foregoing cases was applied in Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 442, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1102, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674, to the right of a citizen of South Carolina to order from another state, for his own use, merchandise, consisting of intoxicating liquors, to be delivered in the state of South Carolina.

Coming to test the ruling of the court below by the settled construction of the commerce clause of the Constitution, expounded in the cases just reviewed, the error of its conclusion is manifest. Those cases rested upon the broad principle of the freedom of commerce between the states, and of the right of a citizen of one state to freely contract to receive merchandise from another state, and of the equal right of the citizen of a state to contract to send merchandise into other states. They rested, also, upon the obvious want of power of one state to destroy contracts concerning interstate commerce, valid in the states where made.

True, as suggested by the court below, there has been a diversity of opinion concerning the effect of a C. O. D. shipment, some courts holding that, under such a shipment, the property is at the risk of the buyer, and therefore that delivery is completed when the merchandise reaches the hands of the carrier for transportation; others deciding that the merchandise is at the risk of the seller, and that the sale is not completed until the payment of the price, and delivery to the consignee, at the point of destination.

But we need not consider this subject. Beyond possible question, the contract to sell and ship was completed in Illinois. The right of the parties to make a contract in Illinois for the sale and purchase of merchandise, and, in doing so, to fix by agreement the time when and condition on which the completed title should pass, is beyond question. The shipment from the state of Illinois into the state of Iowa of the merchandise constituted interstate commerce. To sustain, therefore, the ruling of the court below would require us to decide that the law of Iowa operated in another state so as to invalidate a lawful contract as to interstate commerce made in such other state; and, indeed, would require us to go yet further, and say *that, although, under the [144] interstate commerce clause, a citizen in one state had a right to have merchandise consigned from another state delivered to him in the state to which the shipment was made, yet that such right was so illusory that it only obtained in cases where, in a legal sense, the merchandise contracted for had been delivered to the consignee at the time and place of shipment.

When it is considered that the necessary result of the ruling below was to hold that, wherever merchandise shipped from one state to another is not completely delivered to the buyer at the point of shipment so as to be at his risk from that moment, the movement of such merchandise is not interstate commerce, it becomes apparent that the principle, if sustained, would operate materially to cripple, if not destroy, that freedom of commerce between the states which it was the great purpose of the Constitution to promote. If upheld, the doctrine would deprive a citizen of one state of his right to order merchandise from another state at the risk of the seller as to delivery. It would prevent the citizen of one state from shipping into another unless he assumed the risk; it would subject contracts made by common carriers, and valid by the laws of the state where made, to the laws of another state; and it would remove from the protection of the interstate commerce clause all goods on consignment upon any condition as to delivery, express or implied. Besides, it would also render the commerce clause of the Constitution inoperative as to all that vast body of transactions by which the products of the country move in the channels of interstate commerce by means of bills of lading to the shipper's order, with drafts for the purchase price attached, and many other transactions essential to the freedom of commerce, by which the complete title to merchandise is postponed to the delivery thereof.

But general considerations need not be further adverted to in view of prior decisions of this court relating to the identical question here presented. In Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229, the facts were these:

[145] The Chicago Portrait Company *shipped to Greensboro, North Carolina, by rail, consigned to its order, certain pictures and frames. At Greensboro the company had an agent who received the merchandise, put the pictures and frames together, and delivered them to the purchasers who had ordered them from Chicago. The contention was that the portrait company was liable to a license charge imposed by the town of Greensboro for selling pictures therein, and this was supported by the argument that, although the contract for sale was made in Chicago, it was completed in North Carolina by the assembling of the pictures and frames, and the delivery there made. It was held that the license could not be collected, because the transaction was an interstate commerce one. In the course of the opinion, after a full review of the authorities, it was observed (p. 632, L. ed. p. 341, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 233):

"It would seem evident that if the vendor had sent the articles by an express company, which should collect on delivery, such a mode of delivery would not have subjected the transaction to state taxation. The same could be said if the vendor himself, or by a personal agent, had carried and delivered the goods to the purchaser. That the articles were sent as freight, by rail, and were received at the railroad station by an agent, who delivered them to the respective purchasers, in nowise changes the character of the commerce as interstate."

In Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151, these were the facts: A resident of North Carolina ordered from a corporation in Chicago a sewing machine. The machine was shipped under a bill of lading to the order of the buyer, but this bill of lading was sent to the express agent at the point of delivery in North Carolina, with instructions to surrender the bill on payment of a C. O. D. charge. The contention was that the consummation of the transaction by the express agent in transferring the bill of lading upon payment of the C. O. D. charge was a sale of the machine in North Carolina, which subjected the company to a license tax. The contention was held untenable. Calling attention to the fact that the contract of sale was completed as a contract in Chicago, *and after reviewing some of the [146] authorities on the subject of interstate commerce, the court said (p. 450, L. ed. p. 258, Sup. Ct. Rep. p. 154):

"Indeed, the cases upon this subject are almost too numerous for citation, and the one under consideration is clearly controlled by them. The sewing machine was made and sold in another state, shipped to North Carolina in its original package for delivery to the consignee upon payment of its price. It had never become commingled with the general mass of property within the state. While technically the title of the machine may not have passed until the price was paid, the sale was actually made in Chicago; and the fact that the price was to be collected in North Carolina is too slender a thread upon which to hang an exception of the transaction from a rule which would otherwise declare the tax to be an interference with interstate commerce."

The controlling force of the two cases last reviewed upon this becomes doubly manifest when it is borne in mind that the power of the states to levy general and indiscriminating taxes on merchandise shipped from one state into another may attach to such merchandise before sale in the original package when the merchandise has become at rest within the state, and therefore enjoys the protection of its laws, and this upon the well-recognized distinction that the movement of merchandise from state to state, whilst constituting interstate commerce, is not an import in the technical sense of the Constitution. American Steel & Wire Co. v. Speed, 192 U. S. 500, 48 L. ed. 538, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 365.

As from the foregoing considerations it results that the court below erred in refusing to apply and enforce the commerce clause of the Constitution of the United States, its judgment must be reversed.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Iowa is reversed, and the cause is remanded to that court for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissents.

[147]*ADAMS EXPRESS COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,
v.
 STATE OF IOWA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 147, 148.)

Error to state court—decision on non-Federal ground—commerce—C. O. D. shipments of intoxicating liquors—when subject to seizure under state law.

This case is governed by the decision in American Express Company v. Iowa, ante, 417.

[No. 82.]

Argued December 2, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Iowa to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the District Court of Madison County of that State, entered upon a verdict finding an express company guilty of maintaining a nuisance in holding for delivery to the consignees intoxicating liquors shipped C. O. D. from other states. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below (Iowa), 95 N. W. 1129.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Lawrence Maxwell, Jr., argued the cause and filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

The Iowa statute as construed by its supreme court is repugnant to the Constitution and laws of the United States, unless it is authorized by the Wilson act.

Bowman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 125 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 700, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 823. 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 689, 1062; Leisy v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681.

The Wilson act does not allow the state of Iowa to prevent the delivery of liquor shipped from another state. Its power under the Wilson act does not attach until the interstate transportation has been completed by delivery to the consignee in Iowa.

Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 42 L. ed. 1088, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664; Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 444, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1103, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674.

The express company did not sell the liquor. It acted only as a common carrier to deliver, on certain conditions, liquor already sold.

Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 447, 48 L. ed. 254, 256, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151; Com. v. Russell, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 576; United States v. Laeky, 120 Fed. 577; Com. v. Fleming, 130 Pa. 138, 5 L. R. A. 470, 17 Am. St. Rep. 763, 18 Atl. 622; Higgins v. 424

Murray, 73 N. Y. 252; State v. Cairns, 64 Kan. 782, 58 L. R. A. 55, 68 Pac. 621; McClain, Carr. 1903; 6 Enc. Law & Prac. 476; Pilgreen v. State, 71 Ala. 368; State v. Carl, 43 Ark. 353, 51 Am. Rep. 565; Carthage v. Duvall, 202 Ill. 234, 66 N. E. 1099; Carthage v. Munsell, 203 Ill. 474, 67 N. E. 831; Breehwal v. People, 21 Ill. App. 213; Frohlich v. Alexander, 36 Ill. App. 428; Coffeen v. Huber, 78 Ill. App. 455; James v. Com. 102 Ky. 108, 42 S. W. 1107; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 73 Me. 278; State v. Peters, 91 Me. 31, 39 Atl. 342; Norfolk S. R. Co. v. Barnes, 104 N. C. 25, 5 L. R. A. 611, 10 S. E. 83; Bruee v. State, 36 Tex. Crim. Rep. 53, 35 S. W. 383, 39 S. W. 683; Freshman v. State, 37 Tex. Crim. Rep. 126, 38 S. W. 1007; State v. Flanagan, 38 W. Va. 53, 22 L. R. A. 430, 45 Am. St. Rep. 836, 17 S. E. 792; Sarbeck v. State, 65 Wis. 171, 56 Am. Rep. 624, 26 N. W. 541; United States v. Adams Exp. Co. 119 Fed. 240; United States v. Orene Parker Co. 121 Fed. 596.

If the state of Iowa had attempted to tax the express company or the consignors on the theory that either was engaged in selling goods in Iowa, this court would have held the attempt to be an unlawful interference with interstate commerce.

Caldwell v. North Carolina, 187 U. S. 622, 47 L. ed. 336, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 229; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Sims, 191 U. S. 441, 48 L. ed. 254, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 151. See also State v. Hanaphy, 117 Iowa, 15, 90 N. W. 601.

The right to contract in Missouri for the transportation of merchandise from that state into Iowa, and, incidentally, to fix the terms upon which the goods shall be delivered, involves interstate commerce in its fundamental aspect, and cannot be controlled by the state of Iowa.

Rhodes v. Iowa, 170 U. S. 412, 424, 42 L. ed. 1088, 1095, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 664.

The supreme court of Iowa misconceived the decision of this court in O'Neil v. Vermont, 144 U. S. 323, 36 L. ed. 450, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 693.

Mr. Charles W. Mullan argued the cause and filed a brief for defendant in error. For his contentions see his brief as reported in American Exp. Co. v. Iowa, ante, 417.

Mr. Justice White delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an indictment against the Adams Express Company, in a court of Iowa, for maintaining a nuisance in violation of a section of the Code of that state. It was charged in the indictment, in substance, that the Adams Express Company, between July and December, 1900, at St. Charles, Madison county, Iowa, used a building for the purpose of selling intoxicating liquors therein, contrary to law, and that the company owned and kept in said building intoxicating liquors with the intent unlawfully to sell them within the state, contrary to an Iowa statute. There was a plea of not guilty, a trial and verdict of guilty, and a sentence imposing a fine of $350 and costs.

[148] An agreed statement of facts was stipulated, from which it appears that the Adams Express Company was a common carrier, engaged in the express business between the states of Missouri and Iowa; that it received the liquor in question at *St. Joseph, Missouri, to be carried to St. Charles, Iowa, there to be delivered to the consignees, whose names were upon the packages, and that each and all were marked C. O. D.,—meaning that they were not to be delivered by the express company to the consignees until the purchase price and the express charges were paid to the agent of the express company. It was further recited in the statement of facts that the only connection of the Adams Express Company with the transaction or transactions in relation to said liquors was as a common carrier, having received the same in Missouri for carriage to the consignees at St. Charles, Iowa.

The trial court charged the jury, in substance, that if, from the evidence, it appeared, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant express company held at its depot, for delivery to the consignees, packages of liquor shipped from other states, upon which the price was to be collected under a C. O. D. arrangement, the defendant must be found guilty of keeping and maintaining a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the meaning of the Iowa statutes.

On appeal to the supreme court of Iowa from the judgment of conviction the action of the trial court was approved upon the authority of the case of the State of Iowa against the American Express Company, and at bar it was conceded that the issues in this case "are identical in every particular" with those which were involved in that case. As we have just reversed the judgment of the supreme court of Iowa in the American Express Company Case (196 U. S. 133, ante, 417, 25 Sup. Ct. Rep. 182), it follows, for the reasons stated in the opinion in that case, that the judgment in this must also be reversed.

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Iowa is reversed, and the cause is remanded to that court for proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion.

Mr. Justice Harlan dissents.

196 U. S.

*D. D. LUCIUS, Appt.,
v.

[149]

CAWTHON-COLEMAN COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 149-152.)

Direct appeal from district court — when jurisdiction is in issue.

A decision of a court of bankruptcy upholding its jurisdiction to adjudicate the validity of an alleged equitable lien upon property which it decided to be an asset of the estate in bankruptcy, and not exempt property of the bankrupt, does not create a question of jurisdiction which will sustain a direct appeal to the Federal Supreme Court under the act of March 3, 1891 (26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549), since, by the express terms of the bankruptcy act of 1898 (30 Stat. at L. 546, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3421), § 2, subd. 11, jurisdiction is conferred upon courts of bankruptcy to determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions.

[No. 110.]

Submitted December 13, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

A PPEAL from the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Alabama to review a decree enforcing a lien on property in the hands of the trustee in bankruptcy. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below, 124 Fed. 455.

Statement by Mr. Justice White:

This is an appeal from a decree of the district court of the United States for the southern district of Alabama, sitting in bankruptcy, establishing and directing the enforcement of a lien upon the proceeds of two policies of insurance in the hands of a trustee in bankruptcy. The district court filed findings of fact and its conclusions of law, in pursuance to the third subdivision of General Order in Bankruptcy 36; and an appeal was taken upon the question of jurisdiction alone, under the supposed authority of the 5th section of the judiciary act of March 3, 1891 [26 Stat. at L. 827, chap. 517, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 549].

In substance the pertinent facts stated in the findings were as follows:

D. D. Lucius, a resident citizen of Alabama, was, in voluntary proceedings, adjudged a bankrupt, and the case was sent to a referee. In his schedules, Lucius claimed as exempt drugs to the value of $1,000 and $1,000 of a balance of $1,150 due upon the aforementioned policies of insurance. The policies subsequently came into the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy.

NOTE.—On direct appeal to Federal Supreme Court from circuit or district courts—see note to Gwin v. United States, 46 L. ed. U. S. 741.

425

The Cawthon-Coleman Company were creditors of Lucius for about the sum of $1,000, evidenced by a note containing a [150]*waiver of exemption of personal property, and secured by a mortgage upon the homestead of Lucius, which mortgage contained a stipulation for insurance for the benefit of the mortgagees. The two policies above referred to were obtained in consequence of the stipulation referred to, and while in force, and before the adjudication in bankruptcy, the dwelling insured was destroyed by fire. Claiming, by reason of the facts just stated, an equitable lien upon the proceeds of the insurance, the Cawthon-Coleman Company filed a petition in the bankruptcy proceedings to establish and enforce their alleged lien. During the pendency of this proceeding the trustee in bankruptcy collected the balance due upon the policies. The trustee reported an allowance of the exemption out of such proceeds, as claimed by the bankrupt, and shortly afterwards the bankrupt filed a plea denying jurisdiction in the court to hear and determine the claim of lien. This plea was overruled by the referee, who also refused to confirm the allowance of the exemption claimed by the bankrupt, and an order was made by the referee directing the trustee to pay to the Cawthon-Coleman Company on the mortgage indebtedness the sum of $1,001.40 out of the insurance proceeds. Thereafter, to quote from the findings, "upon a review by the district judge sitting in bankruptcy, of the referee's decision, the judge affirmed it, and rendered a decree asserting that the bankruptcy court had jurisdiction to hear and determine this matter, and granted the relief prayed by the petition of Cawthon-Coleman Company." This appeal on the question of jurisdiction was then taken direct to this court.

Mr. Harry Pillans submitted the cause for appellant. Mr. William James Johnson and Messrs. Pillans, Hanaw, & Pillans were with him on the brief.

No counsel opposed.

Mr. Justice White, after making the foregoing statement, delivered the opinion of the court:

By the express terms of subdivision 11 of § 2 of the bankruptcy act of 1898 [30 Stat. at L. 546, chap. 541, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3421], jurisdiction is conferred upon courts of bankruptcy to determine all claims of bankrupts to their exemptions. When, therefore, as in the case at bar, property of the bankrupt has come into the possession of the trustee in bankruptcy, and the bankrupt has asserted in the bankruptcy court a claim to be entitled to a part or the whole of such property, as exempt property, the bankruptcy court necessarily is vested with jurisdiction to determine, upon the facts before it, the validity of the claimed exemption. An erroneous decision against an asserted right of exemption, and a consequently erroneous holding that the property forms assets of the estate *in bankruptcy, to [152] be administered under the direction of the bankruptcy court, while subject to correction in the mode appropriate for the correction of errors (Lockwood v. Exchange Bank, 190 U. S. 294, 47 L. ed. 1061, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 751), does not create a question of jurisdiction proper to be passed upon by this court by a direct appeal under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1891. First Nat. Bank v. Klug, 186 U. S. 203, 204, 46 L. ed. 1127, 1128, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 899, and cases cited. It necessarily results from the foregoing that, as the bankruptcy court determined that the proceeds of the insurance policies in the hands of the trustee were assets of the estate in bankruptcy, and not exempt property of the bankrupt, the jurisdiction existed to proceed to adjudicate the validity of an alleged equitable lien upon such property. Hutchinson v. Otis, 190 U. S. 552, 555, 47 L. ed. 1179, 1181, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 778.

As, therefore, upon the record before us, the jurisdiction of the court was not in issue within the meaning of the act of March 3, 1891, the direct appeal to this court was not properly brought, and the order must be appeal dismissed.

ABRAHAM WOLFF, Plff. in Err.,
v.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 152-157.)

Highways—duty of municipality to keep sidewalks free from obstructions—duty to light streets.

1. A stepping stone on a sidewalk, near the curb, is not made an unlawful obstruction by the provision of D. C. Rev. Stat. § 222, that no portion of the public streets and avenues shall be occupied by any private person, or for any private purpose whatever.
2. The District of Columbia is not charged with the duty so to light a street as to show the presence of a stepping stone on the sidewalk, near the curb, by D. C. Rev. Stat. § 233, directing the proper authorities to increase, as the public good may require, the number of street lamps in the city of Washington, and to do any and all things pertaining to the well lighting of the city.

[No. 62.]

196 U. S.

Argued November 11, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Supreme Court of the District entered on a directed verdict in favor of defendant in an action for damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

See same case below, 21 App. D. C. 464.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. John C. Gittings argued the cause, and, with Mr. D. W. Baker, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

An obstruction on a public street of the city of Washington is a nuisance per se.

United States v. Cole, 7 Mackey, 504.

It is the duty of a municipal corporation to cause all unlawful obstructions on the streets, avenues, etc., to be removed.

Scranton v. Catterson, 94 Pa. 203; Davis v. Austin, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 460, 54 S. W. 927.

There can be no contention that the District of Columbia is not liable to the same extent that other municipal corporations are.

Barnes v. District of Columbia, 91 U. S. 540, 23 L. ed. 440; District of Columbia v. Woodbury, 136 U. S. 450, 34 L. ed. 472, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 990.

Mr. Edward H. Thomas argued the cause, and, with Mr. Andrew B. Duvall, filed a brief for defendant in error:

Projections beyond the building line of houses are legal obstructions.

O'Linda v. Lothrop, 21 Pick. 292, 32 Am. Dec. 261; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. § 734.

The rule exists in this jurisdiction.

Hovess v. District of Columbia, 2 App. D. C. 193.

That cannot be a nuisance, such as to give a common-law right of action, which the law authorizes.

Northern Transp. Co. v. Chicago, 99 U. S. 635, 25 L. ed. 336.

Stepping stones or carriage blocks have been elsewhere judicially determined to be lawful structures upon the highway.

Dubois v. Kingston, 102 N. Y. 219, 55 Am. St. Rep. 804, 6 N. E. 273; Robert v. Powell, 168 N. Y. 414, 55 L. R. A. 775, 85 Am. St. Rep. 673, 61 N. E. 699; Cincinnati v. Fleischer, 63 Ohio St. 229, 58 N. E. 568.

A hitching post is not a defect.

Macomber v. Taunton, 100 Mass. 255; Rockford v. Tripp, 83 Ill. 247, 25 Am. Rep. 381.

A city's failure to place a fence around a water hydrant which is properly located cannot render it liable for an injury caused by a traveler driving against it. Indeed, the fence would likely be the more dangerous.

Vincennes v. Thuis, 28 Ind. App. 523, 63 N. E. 315; Canavan v. Oil City, 183 Pa. 611, 38 Atl. 1096.

A municipality has the discretionary power to locate a fire-plug on a sidewalk; and if in the exercise of such discretion it places a plug of ordinary diameter on a sidewalk, 4 inches from the curb, it cannot be made liable for personal injuries to a pedestrian who stumbles over the plug.

Horner v. Philadelphia, 194 Pa. 542, 45 Atl. 330.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

*This is an action for damages for injury[153] caused to plaintiff in error (who was also plaintiff below) by an alleged negligent omission of duty by the District of Columbia.

On the 27th of October, 1895, about 9 o'clock in the evening, plaintiff had occasion to visit Sangerbund hall, a house on C street, in the city of Washington. On coming out, and for the purpose of approaching a wagon which was standing in the street, he walked rapidly across the sidewalk and, by falling over a block of stone called a stepping stone or carriage step, which was on the sidewalk near the curb, broke his leg. Some time subsequently he was compelled to submit to its amputation.

The charge against the city was that it was a body corporate and municipal, and had the power, and it was its duty, to keep the sidewalks free of obstructions and nuisances, one of which, it was alleged, said stone was. And further, that it was the duty of the District of Columbia to keep the streets properly lighted. In neglect of both, it was alleged, it did "allow and suffer" the stone to be securely fastened into and remain upon the sidewalk, and did "keep and continue" it there during the nighttime of the 27th of October, without a light to show its presence or a watchman to notify wayfarers of its existence. Damages were laid at $25,000. The District of Columbia pleaded not guilty. A jury was impaneled. At the conclusion of the testimony the District moved the court to instruct a verdict for it on the ground that the plaintiff had not made out a case. The motion was granted, and a verdict in accordance with the instructions. A motion for a new trial was made and denied, and the case was then taken to the court of appeals, which affirmed the judgment of the court below. 21 App. D. C. 464.

The first contention of plaintiff in error is that the stone was an unlawful obstruction per se. This is deduced as a consequence from § 222 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia, which reads as follows:

"No open space, public reservation, or other public ground in the city of Washington, nor any portion of the public streets or avenues in said city, shall be occupied by any private person or for any private purpose whatever."

This section cannot be construed to prohibit putting upon a street any object without regard to its effect on the use of the street. The sweeping character of such a construction need not be pointed out. There are objects which subserve the use of streets, and cannot be considered obstructions to them, although some portion of their space may be occupied. This is illustrated by a number of cases.

In Dubois v. Kingston, 102 N. Y. 219, 55 Am. Rep. 804, 6 N. E. 273, a stepping stone 3 feet 4 inches in length and 20 inches wide was placed on the edge of the sidewalk. The court observed that the stone was not of unusual size or located in an improper place, and that it would be extending the liability of cities too far to hold them liable for permitting stepping stones on the edge of sidewalks.

[156] Robert v. Powell*, 108 N. Y. 411, 55 L. R. A. 775, 85 Am. St. Rep. 673, 61 N. E. 699, was also an action for injuries caused by a stepping stone. The court said: "There are some objects which may be placed in, or exist in, a public street, such as water hydrants, hitching posts, telegraph poles, awning posts, or stepping stones, such as the one described in this case, which cannot be held to constitute a nuisance. They are in some respects incidental to the proper use of the street as a public highway. . . . The stepping stone in this case, located upon the sidewalk in front of a private house, was a reasonable and necessary use of the street, not only for the convenience of the owner of the house, but for other persons who desired to visit or enter the house for business or other lawful purposes."

It was further remarked: "The question involved in this class of cases is whether an object complained of is usual, reasonable, or necessary in the use of the street by the owner of the premises, or anyone else."

Cincinnati v. Fleischer, 63 Ohio St. 229, 234, 58 N. E. 568, 569, also passed upon a city's liability for the existence of a stepping stone upon a sidewalk. The court said: "It [the stone] was within that portion of the street by the curb, which, according to common knowledge, is devoted to carriage blocks, lamps, hitching posts, and shade trees, which pedestrians of ordinary care observe and avoid." And Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 82, 96, 30 N. E. 274, was quoted, to the effect that "the laying of sewers, like that of gas and water pipes, beneath the soil, and the erection of lamps and hitching posts, etc., upon the surface, is a street use, sanctioned as such by their obvious purpose and long-continued usage."

It was held in Macomber v. Taunton, 100 Mass. 255, that a hitching post was not a defect in the highway for which the city was liable for permitting it to remain.

Plaintiff in error cites Scranton v. Catterson, 94 Pa. 203, and Davis v. Austin, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 460, 54 S. W. 927.

In the first case an iron water plug in the middle of a street, and projecting above its surface, was held to be a nuisance. Obviously, the case is not in point. The second case sustains* the contention of plaintiff [157] in error, but cannot be followed against the authority and reasoning of the other cases.

2. The second contention of plaintiff in error is that it was the duty of the District of Columbia to so light the street as to show the presence of the stone thereon, the District having full knowledge thereof. This duty is made to rest mainly upon § 233 of the Revised Statutes of the District of Columbia, which is as follows:

"The proper authorities are directed to increase, from time to time, as the public good may require, the number of street lamps on any of the streets, lanes, alleys, public ways, and grounds in the city of Washington, and to do any and all things pertaining to the well lighting of the city."

This, in one sense, is but another form of the first contention. The duty of a city to especially illuminate a place where an object is, or to put a policeman on guard by it to warn pedestrians, depends upon the object being an unlawful obstruction.

The plaintiff in error can claim nothing from the general duty of the city under the statute to light the streets. The exercise of such duty was necessarily a matter of judgment and discretion, depending upon considerations which this record does not exhibit.

Judgment affirmed.

JOHN J. MOORE, Trading under the Firm Name of J. J. Moore & Company, Appt..

v.

UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 157-163.)

Contracts—effect of usage—performance.

1. A custom existing in San Francisco between

NOTE.—On custom and usage as part of a
196 U. S.

shippers and shipowners, requiring a consignee to designate a berth for the discharge of cargo, cannot prevail over the terms of contracts requiring the delivery of certain quantities of coal respectively "at the wharf" and "on wharf as customary," to the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army at Honolulu, at which place the custom is to discharge freight upon the wharves, so as to render the government liable for the delay in reaching a berth, which was caused by the conditions existing in Honolulu harbor, to the ships chartered by the vendor to carry out his contract.

2. The delivery and receipt of 4,634 tons of coal, under a contract for the delivery and acceptance of "about 5,000 tons," does not so complete the contract as to entitle the vendee for that reason to refuse a tender of the remaining 366 tons.

[No. 71.]

Argued December 6, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

APPPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment denying reimbursement from the United States of demurrage, and refusing a recovery of the difference between the contract price of coal which the United States refused to receive, and the price obtained therefor upon sale in open market. Reversed and remanded, with directions to enter judgment for appellant for the difference between contract and market price.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 590.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. T. Michener argued the cause, and, with Mr. W. W. Dudley, filed a brief for appellant:

The words of an agreement will be taken most strongly against the party who prepares it, and any liberality of construction will be in favor of the party who simply signs it. It will be construed most strongly against the party who uses the language.

Garrison v. United States, 7 Wall. 688. 690, 19 L. ed. 277, 278; Chambers v. United States, 24 Ct. Cl. 387, 392; Simpson v. United States, 31 Ct. Cl. 217, 243; Edgar & T. Foundry & Mach. Works v. United States, 34 Ct. Cl. 205.

The custom at San Francisco was written into the contracts sued on by implication of law.

2 Parsons, Contr. pp. 535-539; Robinson v. United States, 13 Wall. 363, 366, 20 L. ed. 653, 654; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 40, 34 L. ed. 568, 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Houge v. Woodruff, 19 Fed. 136; Smith v. 60,000 Feet of Yellow Pine Lumber, 2 Fed. 396; Moody v. 500,000 Laths, 2 Fed.

607; Pleasants v. Pendleton, 6 Rand. (Va.) 493, 18 Am. Dec. 726; Barlow v. Lambert, 28 Ala. 704, 65 Am. Dec. 374; Foley v. Mason, 6 Md. 37; Van Hoesen v. Cameron, 54 Mich. 609, 20 N. W. 609; McCulsky v. Klosterman, 20 Or. 108, 10 L. R. A. 785, 25 Pac. 366; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33, 25 Am. Rep. 349; MacLachlan, Merchant Shipping, 360, 361; Abbott, Shipping, 228; 1 Parsons, Shipping, 324.

It is immaterial whether the officers and agents of the government, who made the contracts, had knowledge or notice of the custom at San Francisco, or not.

Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 40, 34 L. ed. 568, 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; Phillips, Ins. §§ 980, 1003; Thatcher v. McCulloh, Olcott, 365, Fed. Cas. No. 13,862; Lowry v. Russell, 8 Pick. 360; McMasters v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 374, 8 Am. Rep. 264; Pittsburgh Ins. Co. v. Dravo, 2 W. N. C. 194; MacLachlan, Merchant Shipping, 361.

Although the number of lay days may not be specified in the charter party, yet, if they may be arrived at by reason of the rate of discharge having been fixed in the charter party and the tonnage of the cargo being known, they must be treated as being as definite as if specifically stated.

Williams v. Theobald, 8 Sawy. 445, 15 Fed. 468.

The parties having contracted in such a way as to fix the rate of discharge, it follows inevitably that local conditions at Honolulu could not relieve them from such contract stipulations.

Cross v. Beard, 26 N. Y. 85; Abbott, Shipping, 307, 387; Ford v. Cotesworth, L. R. 4 Q. B. 127; Williams v. Theobald, 8 Sawy. 445, 448, 15 Fed. 468; Allen v. 785 Tons of Coal, 27 Fed. 316; 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 223, 242; Randall v. Lynch, 2 Campb. 352.

Even if there be no contract at all concerning lay days or demurrage, the law will imply a contract that the ship shall be detained a reasonable time only, and that it shall have reasonable demurrage therefor.

MacLachlan, Merchant Shipping, 243, 244, 546; 1 Parsons, Maritime Law, 152; 1 Leggett, Bills of Lading, 297-300.

The government was entitled to inspect the coal on the wharf before receiving it.

1 Parsons, Shipping, 226; Porter, Bills of Lading, 400, 401; MacLachlan, Merchant Shipping, 369.

The party who is to inspect and receive the coal should designate in the contract, or otherwise, the wharf at which he will receive it, in order that there may be cer-contract—see notes to Weyand v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 1 L. R. A. 650; Newhall v. Appleton, 3 L. R. A. 859; Smith v. Clews, 4 L. R. 196 U. S.

A. 392; MacCulsky v. Klosterman, 10 L. R. A. 785; and Adams v. Otterback, 14 L. ed. U. S. 805.

tainty of contract and liability, as well as full protection to him.

Of course this power must be used justly and reasonably.

Oliver, Shipping, 77.

A dispute between the charterer and the consignee on a question which relates to the designation of a wharf is analogous; in legal effect, to one between the ship and the charterer on a question of that kind.

Where the ship is to proceed to a certain port and deliver the cargo at a wharf, the obligation is on the charterer to select the wharf, or, at least, he has an option so to do. Having that option, his obligation is the same as if the contracts had read that the cargo should be delivered at a wharf to be named by the charterer.

Tharsis Sulphur & Copper Co. v. Morel Bros. [1891] 2 Q. B. 647; 1 Parsons, Shipping, p. 311; Porter, Bills of Lading, 403; The Boston, 1 Low. Dec. 464, Fed. Cas. No. 1,671; Manson v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 55 Conn. 592, 26 Fed. 923, 31 Fed. 297; Moody v. 500,000 Laths, 2 Fed. 607; Smith v. Lee, 13 C. C. A. 506, 21 U. S. App. 650, 66 Fed. 344; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Northam, 2 Ben. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 11,090; Reed v. Weld, 6 Fed. 304; Scrutton, Charter Parties, 90-92; Stewart v. Rogerson, L. R. 6 C. P. 424; Jacques & Co. v. Wilson, 7 Times L. R. 119.

If the wharves were all occupied on account of a congestion of business, or if they could not be used for any other reason, the claimant had the right to demand demurrage for the time lost in waiting for the government to take the coal.

Williams v. Theobald, 8 Sawy. 445, 15 Fed. 465; Allen v. 785 Tons of Coal, 27 Fed. 316.

Even if it should be held that the custom of the port of San Francisco to write such charter parties as are described in the findings of the court below did not become a part of the contract between the parties to the case at bar, still, the appellant is entitled to relief:

(1) In the absence of any express agreement as to the time for unloading, the law implies a contract to unload within a reasonable time; and if the charterer or consignee fails to do so, through his own fault or that of his agent, he is liable for damages in the nature of demurrage for the detention of the vessel.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 253, note 3; Melloy v. Lehigh & W. Coal Co. 37 Fed. 377; The Hyperion, 2 Low. Dec. 93, Fed. Cas. No. 6,987; The Z. L. Adams, 26 Fed. 655; The M. S. Bacon v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 3 Fed. 344; Cross v. Beard, 26 N. Y. 85; Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia & R. Coal & I. Co. 35 L. R. A. 623, 23 C. C. A.

564, 40 U. S. App. 157, 77 Fed. 919; Randall v. Sprague, 21 C. C. A. 334, 33 U. S. App. 464, 74 Fed. 247; Howie v. The Reuben Doud, 46 Fed. 800.

(2) The same rule applies where the liability is in personam or in rem; and it is settled that a contract will be implied on the part of the consignee or his assignee to unload within a reasonable time, when no time is specified in the contract; and a libel in personam or in rem may be maintained against him for damages for breach of such implied contract.

9 Am. Eng. Enc. Law, p. 255, notes 3-5.

The government, having accepted the cargo as consignee, is liable in the case at bar the same as if it had been the charterer or a party to a bill of lading.

1 Parsons, Shipping, 312.

The acceptance of a cargo, without objection, under the charter party or bill of lading, imports an agreement to pay demurrage according to its terms.

Sutton v. Housatonic R. Co. 45 Fed. 507; North-German Lloyd v. Heule, 10 L. R. A. 814, 44 Fed. 100; Neilsen v. Jesup, 30 Fed. 138; Gates v. Ryan, 37 Fed. 154.

The authorities clearly establish our view that the government is liable, as consignee, for the demurrage paid by the charterer to the shipowner.

Crawford v. Mellor, 1 Fed. 638; 275 Tons of Mineral Phosphates, 9 Fed. 209; Young v. 140,000 Hard Brick, 78 Fed. 149; Falkenburg v. Clark, 11 R. I. 278; Jesson v. Solly, 4 Taunt. 52; Mitchell v. Langdon, 10 Biss. 527, 9 Fed. 472; Wright v. New Zealand Shipping Co. L. R. 4 Exch. Div. 165; Tillett v. Cum. Avon Works, 2 Times L. R. 675; Carver, Carr. §§ 644, 712.

Mr. Philip M. Ashford argued the cause, and, with Assistant Attorney General Pradt, filed a brief for appellee:

If custom and usage are to be called into service for the purpose of interpreting or explaining the contracts in question, the custom of the port of discharge, so far as it relates to the manner and mode of discharge, must regulate and determine the contracts.

Carver, Carr. § 461.

The liability of the United States in this instance is that of consignee. In such case the only liability, if any, is for damages in the nature of demurrage for failure to use reasonable diligence in discharging in accordance with the custom of the port.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 229; Houge v. Woodruff, 19 Fed. 136.

The general rule is that the consignee is not liable for delay due to causes beyond his control.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 257.

He is not liable if the delay is due to interference of the government or public authorities. Where the consignee is not bound by the contract to furnish a berth, and where the vessel is required to take its turn in unloading, he is not liable for delay caused by an extraordinary accumulation of vessels to be unloaded.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 258.

Where the vessel arriving is obliged, either by the custom of the port or the contract or bill of lading, to await its turn in discharging, the consignee is not liable for damages in the nature of demurrage resulting from delay caused by the harbor being overcrowded with vessels.

The J. E. Owen v. 49,774 Bushels of Rye, 54 Fed. 185; Riley v. A Cargo of Iron Pipes, 40 Fed. 605; Cross v. Beard, 26 N. Y. 85; Wordin v. Bemis, 32 Conn. 268, 85 Am. Dec. 255; The Glover, Brown, Adm. 166, Fed. Cas. No. 5,488; Clendaniel v. Tuckerman, 17 Barb. 184; Towle v. Kettell, 5 Cush. 18; Weaver v. Walton, 1 Flipp. 441, Fed. Cas. No. 17,312; Abbott, Shipping, 311-313; Fulton v. Blake, 5 Biss. 371, Fed. Cas. No. 5,153; Rodgers v. Forresters, 2 Campb. 483; Burmester v. Hodgson, 2 Campb. 488; The M. S. Bacon v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 3 Fed. 344; Coombs v. Nolan, 7 Ben. 301, Fed. Cas. No. 3,189; Bellatty v. Curtis, 41 Fed. 479; The Mary Riley v. 3,000 Railroad Ties, 38 Fed. 254; Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia & R. Coal & I. Co. 35 L. R. A. 623, 23 C. C. A. 564, 40 U. S. App. 157, 77 Fed. 919; The Elida, 31 Fed. 420.

In the absence of any custom or express contract to the contrary, it is the ship's business to find a berth in the port of discharge.

Smith v. New York Granite Paving Block Co. 56 Fed. 525.

Reasonableness is all that is required of the consignee with reference to the receipt and disposal of a cargo, in all shipping contracts; and, as we have before stated, where the charter party or the bill of lading is silent as to the matters in dispute here, reasonable conduct only is required.

Whitehouse v. Halstead, 90 Ill. 95; Van Etten v. Newton, 134 N. Y. 143, 30 Am. St. Rep. 630, 31 N. E. 334; Dayton v. Parke, 142 N. Y. 391, 37 N. E. 642; 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 255, note 3; Carver, Carr. ¶ 636; 7 Comp. Dec. 573.

If the ship cannot reach the port by reason of blockade or any similar cause, this, though not the fault of the ship, is its misfortune.

2 Parsons, Shipping, 423.

The general rule is that lay days for unloading do not commence when the vessel arrives in the port of discharge.

Brown v. Johnson, 10 Mees. & W. 331.

They are to be computed from the time she arrives at the place of discharge usual for such vessels in the particular port,—ordinarily at the wharf or dock,—and is ready to discharge there in accordance with the contract and the custom of the port.

9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 231. See also Carver, Carr. ¶ 622.

The vessel does not fulfil its contract by stopping at the entrance of the port of discharge, but must proceed to the very berth or dock designated, if one is named in the contract, but, if not, to the place customarily used for discharge by vessels loaded with similar cargoes.

Brereton v. Chapman, 5 Moore & P. 526; Bremner v. Bunell, 4 Sess. Cas. 934.

The burden of proving that the detention was due to some fault or negligence on the part of the United States was upon the appellant.

The J. E. Owen, 54 Fed. 185.

The meaning of the word "about" is so well known that no definition need be given.

Benjamin, Sales, ¶ 691; Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 171, 172, 24 L. ed. 622, 623, 624; Norrington v. Wright, 115 U. S. 189-204, 29 L. ed. 367, 368, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 12; Finelite v. Sinnott, 25 Jones & S. 57, 5 N. Y. Supp. 439; Baltimore Permanent Bldg. & L. Soc. v. Smith, 54 Md. 187, 39 Am. Rep. 374; Indianapolis Cabinet Co. v. Herrman, 7 Ind. App. 462, 34 N. E. 579; Pembroke Iron Co. v. Parsons, 5 Gray, 589; Barker v. Windle, 6 El. & Bl. 675; Hayward v. Scougall, 2 Campb. 56; McConnel v. Murphy, L. R. 5 P. C. 203; Morris v. Levi-son, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 155.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellant is a general commission merchant and shipper at San Francisco. He filed his petition in the court of claims, consisting of two paragraphs, in the first of which he claimed reimbursement from the United States of the sum of $1,053.36, demurrage paid by him for the detention over lay days of two ships chartered by him to transport coals to Honolulu, and there to be delivered to the United States. By the second paragraph he prayed the recovery of the sum of $1,120.87, the *difference between [163] the contract price of 366 tons of coal, which the United States refused to receive, and the price obtained for the same upon the sale in open market.

The causes of action rested on two contracts entered into by appellant with the United States through the proper officer of the Quartermaster's Department, United States Army, by which appellant agreed to furnish and deliver to that department, Honolulu, Hawaiian islands, "at the wharf," about 3,900 tons of the best merchantable

"Wallsend" Australian steam coal, at the rate of not less than 100 tons a day, at 2,240 pounds to the ton, dangers of the sea and any causes beyond appellant's control excepted, the deliveries to commence on the arrival of the Hawaiian ship Euterpe at Honolulu, on or about July 23, 1898, for and in consideration of which appellant was to be paid at the office of the Quartermaster, United States Army, at San Francisco, California, at the rate of $9 per ton, in gold coin of the United States.

And by the second contract appellant was to deliver "on wharf, as customary," about 5,000 tons of the best merchantable Australian, Seaham, Wallsend, or Pacific Co-operative steam coal, deliveries to commence at Honolulu on or about October 1, 1898. The other facts were found by the court of claims as follows:

"III. That at the respective times these contracts were made it was the custom at San Francisco between shippers and ship-owners to insert in their charter parties a stipulation to the effect that cargoes were to be discharged as customary, in such customary berth or place as consignee shall direct, ship being always afloat, and at an average specified number of tons per weather working days (Sundays and holidays excepted), to commence when ship is ready to discharge, and notice thereof has been given by the captain in writing, and, if detained over and above the said laying days, demurrage to be at 4d. register ton per day; which stipulation was duly inserted in the contract of the claimant with the ships employed by him to transport the coal mentioned in the contracts. It does not appear [164]*that the officers and agents of the defendant, who were authorized to make, and did make, the contracts for the defendant, had knowledge or notice of such custom, nor that the contracts, or either of them, were made in view of such custom.

"IV. The claimant [appellant] discharged his said contracts as follows: The first contract: By the arrival at Honolulu of the ship Euterpe with 1,543 tons of coal, July 31, 1898, which was placed in berth at the wharf by the harbor master of said port August 8, 1898, at 2.15 P. M., and commenced discharging coal at 3 P. M. same day, and finished August 29, 1898, consuming eighteen working days. If she had been discharged at not less than 100 tons per day, the time consumed would have been sixteen days. It does not appear that the defendant was at fault either in the loss of time in arriving at the wharf, nor in the discharge of the cargo afterwards. The court finds the defendant was able, ready, and willing to receive the cargo as rapidly as discharged at the wharf. The claimant paid to the shipowner $1,053.36 demurrage for these delays.

"The second contract: 1. By the arrival of the bark Harvester, with 2,179 tons of coal, August 28, 1898, at Honolulu, which was placed at a berth at the wharf by the harbor master September 16, 1898, and began discharging coal on that date, and completed same October 7, 1898, a period of eighteen working days. It does not appear that the defendant was at fault in the loss of time of said last-mentioned ship in arriving at the wharf.

"2. By the arrival of the ship General Gordon at Honolulu, August 27, 1898, with 2,455 tons of coal. While at anchor, September 9, 10, and 11, 330 tons were discharged into steamship Arizona, a transport of defendant, for its own use, after which the Gordon was placed at a berth at the wharf by the harbor master, September 14, at 1 P. M., and then commenced the further discharge of the cargo, completing the same October 4, no delays having occurred at the wharf. It does not appear the defendant was at fault in the ship's delay in reaching the wharf. In the case of each ship the defendants had notice in writing of their respective arrivals *within twenty-[165] four hours thereafter. The wharves at Honolulu are under the control of a harbor master. The practice of such harbor master was to assign ships to berths at the wharves in the order of their respective arrivals, and this practice was followed by him in respect to the ships mentioned. Claimant paid said shipowners for delays $1,433.12 to the Harvester and $744.48 to the General Gordon. All coal delivered was paid for by defendant.

"V. The coal actually delivered under the second contract was 4,634 tons, completed October 7, 1898. About a month subsequent to this, claimant purchased 366 tons of coal of the barkentine Omega, then in the Honolulu harbor, and tendered the same to the defendant upon its contract of June 23, 1898, but the defendant refused to receive it, whereupon claimant sold the same in market, for the best price he could obtain, at $3.06½ per ton less than $9, the contract price with the defendant, equivalent to $1,120.87 in all, and to his loss in that amount.

"VI. At the time of the delivery of the coal mentioned in the foregoing findings the Honolulu harbor had eleven docks or wharves, three of which only were used for the discharge of coal. The docks were crowded, and several vessels were moored at the reef. By local regulations of the government, a harbor master had general supervision of all vessels in the harbor, and all vessels were anchored and assigned to berths, in the order of their arrival, by the harbor master. There were no lighters for public use, and defendant had none at the port, and it was usual or customary to discharge freight upon the wharves. The defendant had no authority over the wharves, and was subject to local regulations and the order of the harbor master, the same as individuals."

As a conclusion of law the court decided that appellant was not entitled to recover. 38 Ct. Cl. 590.

The question in the case is whether the delay at Honolulu in the delivery of the coal was caused by the United States or by appellant; or, in other words, whether it [166] was the duty of *the United States to designate and furnish a wharf for the discharge of the coal from the ships, or its duty only to receive the coal at the wharf when delivered there by appellant.

The question is one of law. Any fault in fact upon the part of the United States is excluded by the findings of the court. The cause of delay is expressly found to have been due to the conditions in Honolulu harbor, and that to these conditions the United States was as subordinate and subject as appellant. The liability of the United States is asserted, nevertheless, on account of the custom existing in San Francisco between shippers and shipowners.

But the terms of the contracts are explicitly opposite to the custom. The custom requires a consignee to designate a berth for the discharge of cargo, and is hence responsible, it is contended, for the delays to a ship in reaching the berth, though caused by the conditions existing at the port of discharge. The contracts have no such provision, nor do they refer to the charter parties entered into between claimant and the ships. The contracts require delivery to be "at wharf" (first contract); "on wharf as customary" (second contract). "As customary" meant the mode of discharging freight at Honolulu. Culver, Carriage by Sea, 696. The custom there was to discharge freight upon the wharves. The terms of the contracts, therefore, are reinforced by the custom at Honolulu, and the custom at San Francisco cannot prevail against them.

The effect of usage upon the contracts of parties has been decided many times. It may be resorted to in order to make definite what is uncertain, clear up what is doubtful, or annex incidents, but not to vary or contradict the terms of a contract. Various applications of this principle are presented in the following cases: Barnard v. Kellogg, 10 Wall. 383, 19 L. ed. 987; Hearne v. New England Mut. Marine Ins. Co. 20 Wall. 488, 22 L. ed. 395; Orient Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wright, 1 Wall. 456, 17 L. ed. 196 U. S.

505; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. 49, 16 L. ed. 534; Hostetter v. Park, 137 U. S. 30, 34 L. ed. 568, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1; First Nat. Bank v. Burkhardt, 100 U. S. 686, 25 L. ed. 766. We do not think it is necessary to make a detailed review of these cases or of the cases which appellant has cited in which *consignees have been charged with [167] demurrage. To trace and relate the various conditions upon which consignees have been held liable would extend this opinion to too great length, and discuss matters irrelevant to the case as we regard it. In all of the cases cited there was an omission of duty on the part of the consignees. In the case at bar there was no omission of duty, and, besides, the United States was not a consignee of the coal in any proper sense of that word. There was no privity between it and the ships. Its contract was to receive coal at the wharf, and pay for it on delivery there, after inspection. Its contract was not to receive coal in lighters, or to bear any expense in the transportation to the wharves. It is manifest that coal on board ships in a harbor is not in the same situation as coal on a wharf. The wharf, under the contract, was the place of destination, and the appellant took the chances, as observed by the court of claims, of obstacles which should intervene to delay the delivery of the coal at the wharf, as they did of other obstacles which might have intervened to prevent the coal reaching the harbor. It was not strictly the coal in the ships that the United States contracted to take. It was certain quantities of coal, and on account of this, in the exercise of their rights under the second contract, appellant bought coal in the open market and tendered it in fulfilment of that contract. The liability of the United States to accept we shall presently consider. We cite the fact now as illustrating the meaning of the contract. It is manifest, from these views, the court of claims was right in holding the United States was not liable for the delay caused to the ships by the conditions which existed in Honolulu harbor.

2. By the terms of the second contract (June 23, 1898) the appellant agreed to deliver and the United States agreed to "receive about 5,000 tons" of coal, delivery to commence with about 2,200 tons, to arrive at Honolulu on or about the 1st day of October, 1898. By the 7th of October delivery was made of 4,634 tons. About a month subsequently appellant purchased 366 tons of coal of a ship then in the harbor, *and tendered the coal to the United States [168] in fulfilment of the contract to deliver 5,000 tons. The United States refused to receive it, and appellant sold it in the open market for $3.06½ per ton less than $9, the contract price. This was the best price which could be obtained, and the loss to appellant was $1,120.87. The court of claims held that the appellant was not entitled to recover. We think this was error. The obligations of parties were reciprocal; one to deliver, the other to receive, about 5,000 tons of coal, and equally reciprocal is the liability for nonperformance of the obligations. The only question can be, Is 366 tons less than 5,000 tons, "about 5,000 tons?" We think not. The difference is too great. We said in Brawley v. United States, 96 U. S. 168, 172, 24 L. ed. 622, 624, that in engagements to furnish goods to a certain amount the quantity specified is material and governs the contract. "The addition of the qualifying words 'about,' 'more or less,' and the like, in such cases, is only for the purpose of providing against accidental variations arising from slight and unimportant excesses or deficiencies in number, measure, or weight." See also Cabot v. Winsor, 1 Allen, 546, 550; Salmon v. Boykin, 66 Md. 541, 7 Atl. 701; Indianapolis Cabinet Co. v. Herrman, 7 Ind. App. 462, 34 N. E. 579; Cross v. Eglin, 2 Barn. & Ad. 106; Morris v. Levison, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 155, 158; Bourne v. Seymour, 16 C. B. 337, 353; 38 N. Y. Supp. 341, 342.

The record does not inform us why the United States refused the tender, and we must assume that it had no other justification than its supposed right under the contract.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded with directions to enter judgment for appellant (claimant) in the sum of $1,120.87.

Mr. Justice Holmes concurs in the result.

[169] *THOMAS L. HARTIGAN, Appt.,
v.
UNITED STATES.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 169-174.)

Army—West Point cadet not an officer.

A cadet in the United States Military Academy at West Point is not an officer in the Army, within the meaning of U. S. Rev. Stat. § 1229, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 868, prohibiting dismissals from service in time of peace, except after trial and conviction by court-martial.

[No. 72.]

Submitted December 6, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

APPEAL from the Court of Claims to review a judgment dismissing a petition to recover the pay of a cadet in the United States Military Academy at West Point after his summary dismissal by order of the President. Affirmed.

See same case below, 38 Ct. Cl. 346.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. L. T. Michener and W. W. Dudley submitted the cause for appellant.

Assistant Attorney General Pradt and Mr. George M. Anderson submitted the cause for appellee.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Appellant filed a petition in the court of claims to have declared void his dismissal from the United States Military Academy at West Point, and for judgment for his pay as a cadet from July 27, 1883, to July 1, 1889, amounting to $3,417.

The appellant was duly appointed a cadet in the Military Academy on the 1st day of July, 1880, and served as such until the 27th of July, 1883, when he was summarily dismissed, by order of the President, upon charges of maltreating a new cadet upon guard, as well as other improper conduct. After the dismissal of appellant another cadet was appointed to succeed him, was duly graduated from the Academy, and appointed and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army, and subsequently a captain of the Twenty-fifth Regiment of Infantry.

The appellant, subsequently to his dismissal, presented petitions respectively to the Adjutant General of the Army and to the Secretary of War, in which he asserted his innocence of the charges made against him, and prayed for reinstatement or trial by court-martial. He also presented a petition April 21, 1888, to the President, asking for a revocation of the order of dismissal, a trial by court-martial, and for an order assigning and appointing him to the Army as of the date of the assignment of the last graduate of his class. The petitions were all denied.

The court of claims held that he was not entitled to recover, and dismissed his petition. 38 Ct. Cl. 346.

The contention of appellant is that, as a cadet, he was an officer in the Army, within the meaning of § 1229 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 868, and could only have been dismissed from the Academy upon trial and conviction by court-martial, as provided in that section.

That section provides as follows: "The President is authorized to drop from the rolls of the Army for desertion any officer who is absent from duty three months without leave; and no officer so dropped shall be eligible for reappointment. And no officer in the military or naval service shall in time of peace be dismissed from service, except upon and in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial to that effect, or in commutation thereof."

In the Articles of War, enacted by § 1342 of the Revised Statutes, the word "commutation" is changed to "mitigation." Art. 99, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 967.

The first impression of claimant's contention is that it ignores obvious distinctions, and makes a state of preparation for a position the same as the position itself, and [172] claims its *sanction for one who is not bearing its responsibilities or capable of discharging its duties. And an examination of the Revised Statutes relating to the organization of the Army confirms the impression.

Manifestly, it is impossible to reproduce all the sections of the Revised Statutes applicable to the military establishment, and we will only observe that they distinguish between the Army proper and the Military Academy, and make a distinction between an officer and a cadet. A few citations only are necessary.

Title XIV. of the Revised Statutes of the United States, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 942, provides "for the organization of the Army of the United States. The name, rank, and function of each officer is provided for, and § 1213, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 854, explicitly states when a cadet shall become an officer. That section enacts that when a cadet shall have regularly graduated from the Academy he "shall be considered a candidate for a commission in any corps for whose duties he may be deemed competent." He then becomes a commissioned officer. Prior to that time he is denominated a cadet, appointed as a cadet, and provision made for him under that name and state. He becomes an officer when he ceases to be a cadet; that is, when he has finished his pupilage; or, as § 1213 expresses it, when "he has gone through all his classes and received a regular degree from the academic staff" and commissioned. And his government while a cadet is provided for in chapter 5 of title XIV.

A cadet may be in the Army (§ 1094, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 783), may be an officer in a certain sense, as distinguished from an enlisted man, as it is contended by counsel for the government he is, but nevertheless § 1229 does not apply to him. That section is one of a number of provisions for the organization and government of the Army, distinct from, and having no relation whatever to, the provisions for the government of the Military Academy and the cadets. Section 1229 is made part of, 196 U. S.

and the word "officer" given exact definition by, § 1342, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 944, which provides as follows:

*"Sec. 1342. The armies of the United [173] States shall be governed by the following rules and articles: The word 'officer,' as used therein, shall be understood to designate commissioned officers; the word 'soldier' shall be understood to include noncommissioned officers, musicians, artificers, and privates, and other enlisted men, and the convictions mentioned therein shall be understood to be convictions by court-martial."

By article 99 it is enacted:

"No officer shall be discharged or dismissed from the service except by order of the President or by sentence of a general court-martial; and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial or in mitigation thereof."

It is only a commissioned officer, therefore, who is entitled to the protection of a general court-martial, and a cadet is not a commissioned officer.

The argument of appellant, contending against this construction of the statute, is not easy to reproduce or make clear, and it involves the anomaly that there can be an officer in the Army of the United States who is not covered by the Articles of War, notwithstanding the declaration of § 1342, that the Armies of the United States shall be governed by those articles.

The object of the argument is to make independent § 1229 of § 1342, and to give a cadet the protection expressed by the former, on the ground that a cadet is an officer, but not a commissioned officer. That a cadet is an officer is deduced from the fact that he is appointed by the President, takes an oath to obey his "superior officers," and receives pay. But, as we have already intimated, it is not necessary to dispute that a cadet is an officer. Whether he is or not is not the question in the case. The question is whether § 1229 applies to him, and to so construe it would seemingly give it no application except to cadets (and officers in the naval service), and transfer it from the government of the Army to the government of the Academy; and, we may observe, *would render the distinction im- [174] plied by it between a time of peace and a time of war almost meaningless. It is nevertheless contended by appellant that § 1229 is unaffected by § 1342 and the Articles of War, but is a part of § 1326, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 934, which gives the superintendent of the Academy the power to convene general courts-martial for the trial of cadets. In other words, the contention is that § 1326 is not merely a grant of power to the superintendent of the Academy to convene courts-martial for the trial of cadets, but commands him to do so, and, it would seem, necessarily, for every infraction of discipline. What, it may be asked, under the contention of appellant, is the relation between § 1326 and § 1325, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, pp. 933, 934? By the latter section there can be deficiency in studies as well as conduct. Can there be no discharge from the Academy for deficiency in studies except upon and in pursuance of a court-martial to that effect?

The cases cited by appellant do not conflict with these views. United States v. Morton, 112 U. S. 1, 28 L. ed. 613, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, decides only that the time of service as a cadet was actual time of service in the Army within the meaning of the statutes giving longevity pay to officers. In United States v. Baker, 125 U. S. 646, 31 L. ed. 824, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1022, and United States v. Cook, 128 U. S. 254, 32 L. ed. 464, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108, statutes giving longevity pay to officers in the Navy were construed, and it was held that a cadet midshipman was an officer of the Navy. The reasoning of the court, however, has no application to the construction of §§ 1229 and 1342.

The power of the President to dismiss a delinquent cadet we do not understand is questioned, except as that power is affected by §§ 1229 and 1342. We may, however, refer to Ex parte Hennen, 13 Pet. 259, 10 L. ed. 152; Blake v. United States, 103 U. S. 227, 236, 26 L. ed. 462, 465; Mullan v. United States, 140 U. S. 240, 35 L. ed. 489, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 788; Parsons v. United States, 167 U. S. 334, 42 L. ed. 188, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 880; Shurtleff v. United States, 189 U. S. 314, 47 L. ed. 831, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 535.

Judgment affirmed.

[175] *ADOLFO SIXTO, Plff. in Err.,
v.

LAUREANO SARRIA.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 175-192.)

Payment—effect of, to discharge liability when made pursuant to decree—trial—province of court and jury.

1. Payments by a mortgagor to the person who has been decreed the heir ab intestato of the mortgagee in proceedings under the Porto Rico Code, §§ 976-980, are not made at the risk of being required to respond to others who may subsequently be found to be coheirs because the decree expressly reserved the rights of third parties.

2. Payment of debts due an intestate to the legally declared heirs is not made at the risk of being required to respond to others who may within five years establish a right to the property, because the Porto Rico Mortgage Law provides that property acquired through inheritance or legacy cannot be cleared until five years from the date of recording; but the effect of the proceedings to designate the heirs ab intestato is, under the Porto Rico Code, §§ 1000, 1001, to permit them, after final decision, to receive and collect the estate.
3. Payment into court of sums due under a mortgage, pending proceedings under Porto Rico Code, §§ 976-980, to have the petitioner declared sole heir ab intestato of the mortgagee, discharged the obligation, where made under an order of the court and before any proceedings were begun to establish the rights of an alleged coheir.
4. The validity of a payment on the principal of a mortgage to the person who has been decreed the sole heir ab intestato of the mortgagee in proceedings taken under Porto Rico Code, §§ 976-980, is a question for the jury, where the evidence shows that it was made more than one month before maturity, and after an unsuccessful attempt by a son of the mortgagee, whose relationship was well known to the mortgagor, to establish his rights by invoking the "voluntary jurisdiction" of the court, and on the same day on which he began a "contentious" proceeding, which the court had held was his only remedy, making the adjudged heir a party defendant, and seeking an order requiring the registrar to make a cautionary entry concerning the mortgaged property, and requiring the mortgagor to retain, at the disposition of the court, whatever sums he owed to the mortgagee's estate.
5. After a judgment of an appellate court reinstating an order of the court below by which instalments due under a mortgage had been directed to be paid into court, pending the determination of the rights of a party claiming to be an heir of the mortgagee, who had died intestate, the mortgagor, acting with full knowledge of this decision of the higher court, cannot discharge his liability by obtaining an order from the lower court permitting the withdrawal of his deposit to pay an assignee of the mortgage, and by paying such assignee pursuant to a decree in a suit to which the alleged heir was not a party.

[No. 40.]

Submitted November 3, 1904. Decided January 3, 1905.

IN ERROR to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action of assumpsit. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

Statement by Mr. Justice Day:

This is a writ of error bringing in review the proceedings of the district court of the United States for the district of Porto Rico.

The original action was in assumpsit, brought by Adolfo Sixto, an alien and a subject of the King of Spain, against Laureano Sarria, a citizen of Porto Rico. The declaration set forth in substance:

[176] That on November 27, 1892, the defendant was indebted to one Manuel Sixto, since deceased, in the sum of $16,000, Spanish money, with interest from May 15 of the same year, which sum said Sarria had promised to pay in four annual instalments, *falling due respectively on the 15th day of May of each and every year from 1893 until 1896, inclusive. That the said Manuel Sixto departed this life on November 27, 1892, leaving two children, plaintiff and one Maria Belen Sixto Melendez, as his heirs at law. That as such heir the plaintiff was entitled to one half of the indebtedness of $16,000, Spanish money, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent from May 15, 1892. The declaration contained the usual averments in assumpsit, of promise and default. The defendant filed a plea and amended plea to this declaration, which set up the general issue, and for further plea averred:

"And for a further and second plea to the said declaration, the defendant says that on the fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, the defendant became indebted in the sum of sixteen thousand dollars (16,000) Mexican dollars, money then current in Porto Rico, to one Manuel Sixto, on account of the purchase price of a farm situated in the island of Vieques, district of Porto Rico, and called 'Monte Santo;' that on the said fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, the defendant made and constituted a mortgage upon the said farm in favor of the said Sixto, as security for the payment of the aforesaid amount of sixteen thousand (16,000) Mexican dollars, together with a certain interest as stipulated in the said instrument of mortgage; that thereafter the said mortgage was duly registered in the registry of property of Humacao, Porto Rico, on the eleventh day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-two; that the payment of the aforesaid sum of sixteen thousand (16,000) Mexican dollars, as provided for in the said instrument of mortgage, was to be made in the manner following, to wit: Four thousand (4,000) dollars on the fifteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, and four thousand (4,000) dollars on the fifteenth day of May of the years eighteen hundred and ninety-four, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, and eighteen hundred and ninety-six. And the defendant further says that the aforesaid Emanuel Sixto departed this life [177] on the twenty-seventh day of *November, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, before any of the instalments aforesaid had fallen due; that the said Sixto died intestate, and soon after his death, to wit, in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-three, judicial proceedings touching and respecting the settlement and inheritance of the estate of the said Manuel Sixto, deceased, and which said proceedings are known in the law of Porto Rico as 'proceedings ab intestato,' were instituted in the court of first instance of Humacao, Porto Rico, the said court being then and there a court of record and of general jurisdiction; and the said court in said proceedings by a decree dated the fifteenth day of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, ordered the said defendant to pay into and deposit with the said court all sums of money then due by the said defendant to the said estate of the said Manuel Sixto, deceased, by virtue of the aforesaid mortgage; and the defendant thereupon and in obedience to the said order of the said court did, on the twenty-second day of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, consign and deposit with the said court, and did place at the disposal of the same, the sum of four thousand (4,000) pesos of the money then current in Porto Rico, and the further sum of eight hundred twenty-two and fifty-two hundredths (822.52) dollars of the same kind of money, the first sum being the amount of the first instalment due May fifteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-three, and the second sum being the interest due on the aforesaid mortgage credit up to the first of June, eighteen hundred and ninety-three. And the said decree of the said court was duly entered before the commencement of this action, and still is in full force and effect.

"And the defendant further says, as to the third instalment above mentioned, that by judgment of the supreme court of Porto Rico, then known as the audiencia territorial, dated the eighteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, rendered and entered in certain foreclosure proceedings had before the said court on appeal from the court of first instance of Humacao; in which proceedings the *defend- [178] ant and one Antonio Roig y Torruellas were plaintiffs, and which said proceedings the said Roig, as owner of the third and fourth instalments of the mortgage before mentioned, sought to foreclose the same to the extent of the third instalment aforesaid, together with certain interest, the defendant was found to be indebted to the said plaintiff Roig in the amount of the third instalment aforesaid, together with the corresponding interest, and was ordered to pay the amount of said indebtedness so found due by the said judgment to the said Roig within the period of thirty days thereof; and the said judgment further provided for execution to issue upon the noncompliance with the terms thereof by the defendant. Said judgment was duly entered before the commencement of this suit, and is still in force and effect. And the said defendant thereupon, and in compliance with the said judgment of the said court, thereafter paid unto the said plaintiff Roig the amounts ordered to be paid by the said judgment, to wit, the amount of the third instalment of the aforesaid mortgage, together with the corresponding interest. And all of this the defendant is ready to verify."

The additional or amended plea sets forth:

"And the defendant, as to the second instalment aforesaid, says that he has paid the same, together with the corresponding interest, on the 4th day of April, 1894, to one Belen Sixto, who was then the record owner of said mortgage credit, and who had previously been declared heir ab intestato of said Manuel Sixto, deceased, by the order and decree of the proper court, to wit, the court of the first instance of Humacao, respectively on the 21st and 23d of the month of November, 1893.

"And as to the third and fourth instalments the defendant says that on the 11th day of September, 1894, the aforesaid Belen Sixto, for a valuable consideration, ceded and transferred the said two instalments to one Antonio Roig y Torruella; that thereupon the said transfer was duly recorded, and the said two instalments appeared up-[179] on the record to *be the property of the said Roig, and thereupon, to wit, on or about the 16th day of May, 1896, the defendant paid the said Roig the amount of said two instalments, together with all interest due."

The bill of exceptions brings into the case the testimony and the rulings and charge of the court. The facts developed are: Manuel Sixto sold a farm to the defendant Sarria for $16,000 Mexican money, payable in four equal instalments, with interest. A mortgage was taken upon the property to secure the payment of the purchase price. Manuel Sixto y Andino died November 27, 1892, leaving no issue except two natural children, a daughter by the name of Maria Belen Sixto y Melendez (hereinafter called Maria Belen), who lived in Vieques, and the plaintiff in error, a son, who lived in the island of St. Thomas. After the death of Manuel Sixto, the daughter, Maria Belen, filed her petition in the court of first instance of Humacao, Porto Rico, alleging that she was the only heir of Manuel Sixto, deceased, and praying the court to declare her heir ab intestato according to the provisions of §§ 980 and following of the Code of Porto Rico then in force. Upon June 22, 1893, the defendant in error, Sarria, paid into court, where the petition of Maria Belen was then pending, the first instalment due, with interest. On November 21, 1893, Maria Belen, by decree of the court, was adjudged heir ab intestato of Manuel Sixto, without prejudice to the rights of third parties. On the 25th of the same month the assets received by the administrator of Manuel Sixto, who had been appointed during the proceeding, and the money paid into court by defendant in error, by order of the court, were made over to Maria Belen as sole heir ab intestato. On November 24, 1893, the plaintiff in error, Adolfo Sixto, presented to the same court of first instance his petition to be declared the heir of Manuel Sixto, deceased (jointly entitled with Maria Belen), invoking the exercise by the court of "voluntary jurisdiction" under the section of the Code whereby Maria Belen had been adjudged heir. To *this petition Maria [180] Belen answered, alleging that she had been duly declared the only heir of Manuel Sixto, and that the plaintiff in error could only contest her right by a "contentious suit" (expediente contencioso).

The court sustained this contention, and Sixto appealed, but later abandoned the appeal, and on April 4, 1894, began a suit in the form of a contentious proceeding, making Maria Belen a party defendant, and praying the court to declare him (Adolfo Sixto) an equal heir with her in the estate of Manuel Sixto, and asking the court to issue an order to the registrar of property, requiring him to make a cautionary entry in the register concerning the property affected by this suit, and also requiring the defendant in error to retain, at the disposition of the court, the sums still owing to the estate of Manuel Sixto. On June 2, 1894, a notice was accordingly issued to Sarria and one to the registrar. The one to Sarria was issued on June 5, 1894, and the one to the registrar on June 4, 1894. The defendant, Maria Belen, being notified of these orders, on June 26, 1894, answered the plaintiff's petition, and in her answer prayed that the interlocutory order of June 2, 1894, be vacated and the notices canceled. On August 30, 1894, the prayer of defendant's answer was granted by the court, and orders issued accordingly to the registrar and to Sarria, and notice was given to the solicitor of the plaintiff. On September 1, 1894, the order reached the registrar, and the order of cancellation was made on the books on September 3, 1894. On September 3, 1894, the plaintiff filed a petition for an appeal from the court's order of August 30, 1894, praying that it be allowed "in both effects," that is (Code, § 383), with the effect of a review and stay of proceedings, but the judge granted the same with one effect only, that is, for a review of the judgment. In the appellate court, on November 17, 1894, that court held that the allowance of both effects had been wrongfully denied, and ordered that the appeal be considered as having been taken for both effects. On December 22, 1894, the appellate court granted [181] a further *order, that Sarria, the defendant in error, be notified of his obligation under the decree of June 2, 1894, which order was accordingly issued. On November 29, 1895, the appellate court (audiencia) rendered its decision on the merits of the appeal, and reversed the order of August 30, 1894, and re-affirmed the order of June 2, 1894, in its validity and regularity. The court used the following language:

"That which was ordered in the decree appealed from, regarding Mr. Laureano Sarria, is hereby set aside, leaving in force the requisition ordered and directed to said Sarria on June 2 by the judge of first instance, until the resolution of the pending appeal."

This decision was certified to the court below in January, 1896, and in March following the solicitor of the plaintiff requested the court to notify Sarria and the registrar that the order of June 2, 1894, was still in force, which was accordingly done, and the defendant in error made reply thereto as follows:

"Having received notice that the instalment of the mortgage had been transferred to Mr. Antonio Roig, who has recorded said transfer in the registry of property, and supposing that he will proceed to collect the same judicially as he did the previous instalment, he is unable to accept the notification, and he will appear before the audiencia in the premises."

The registrar refused to comply with the order for these reasons: "First, because, subsequent to the illegal cancelation of the cautionary notice, the property as well as the encumbrance had been transferred on the registry; and, second, because the mortgage law contained no provision regarding the form of carrying into effect such an order." Thereafter the plaintiff asked the court for a further order to the registrar, but this was denied.

The case proceeded to proof and argument, and on December 15, 1896, a final decision was rendered, adverse to the plaintiff, from which decree he took an appeal, which was allowed "in both effects." The appeal was [182] also allowed from *the order denying a further order to the registrar. On February 2, 1897, the appellate court consolidated the appeals and ordered the suspension of further proceedings until final decision.

In the meantime, on April 26, 1896, by an order of the court of the first instance, Sarria was allowed to withdraw his deposit of 196 U. S.

the third instalment. The order recited that one Roig had become the purchaser from Maria Belen of the third and fourth instalments, and had recovered judgment in the audiencia against Sarria for the third instalment, and found that Maria Belen had the right to transfer these instalments, and ordered a copy of the decree to be placed in the records by the actuary.

Thus the matter remained until after the conclusion of the war with Spain, resulting in a change of sovereignty of Porto Rico.

By the military government, an order was issued abolishing the territorial audiencia, the appellate court aforesaid, creating in its place the district court of San Juan. On September 29, 1899, that court rendered its final decision upon both appeals, reversing the action of the court below, and deciding the plaintiff to be legally proved the heir of Manuel Sixto. The trial in the United States district court in the present suit resulted in a verdict and judgment for the defendant.

Mr. N. B. K. Pettingill submitted the cause for plaintiff in error.

No counsel opposed.

Mr. Justice Day delivered the opinion of the court:

It is evident from the foregoing statement of facts that the controversy, as it appeared in the United States district court, was resolved into the question whether Adolfo Sixto, who had been duly adjudged the co-heir with Maria Belen of Manuel *Sixto, de- [183] ceased, was entitled to recover one half of the amount due on the mortgage debt which the defendant Sarria claimed to have discharged by legal payments. The recovery sought was for one half of the four instalments of purchase money due respectively on the 15th day of May in the years from 1893 until 1896, inclusive. The defendant interposed different defenses to different instalments of the debt. We will proceed to consider them, together with the charge and rulings of the court concerning the same.

Referring to the first and second instalments, we find it to be the contention of the plaintiff in error that Maria Belen, having been adjudged heir ab intestato under a decree which expressly reserved the rights of third parties, no payment could have been lawfully made to her as against the rights of the plaintiff in error, and that if any such payment was made it was subject to the risk that the subsequent-established rights of the plaintiff in error might entitle him to recover from Sarria one half of such payments. Upon this subject the court charged the jury:

"On February 15, 1894, she [Maria Belen] having been declared the heir, the entry was made of that fact in the registry (of property). I say to you, as a matter of law, that that declaration of her heirship was without prejudice to the rights of third parties.—and that meant that if any other person showed himself afterwards to be an heir he was entitled to a proper proportion of the estate; but so far as a collection of debts, and so far as a proper attention to the assets were concerned and the control of them, she became entitled to attend to that.”

Upon the same subject the plaintiff in error had requested the court to charge:

“As the ex parte decree declaring Belen Sixto the heir of Manuel Sixto expressly saved the rights of third parties, that was notice to the defendant that any payment made to her was made at his peril as against the other true heirs; and, as defendant was not required by any legal authority to pay the *first two payments to Belen Sixto, and as the plaintiff is shown in truth to have been an equal heir with Belen Sixto, the plaintiff is entitled to recover one half of those two payments.”

So far as this contention is concerned, we think the court below was right. The sections of the Code of Porto Rico (War Department translation) under which Maria Belen was declared the heir ab intestato of Manuel Sixto are as follows:

“976. After the measures indispensable for the security of the property prescribed in the foregoing section have been taken, and without prejudice to including in the same proceedings the making of the inventory, the designation of heirs ab intestato shall be proceeded with in a separate record.

“977. This designation may also be made at the instance of the interested parties, without the necessity of previously taking the steps mentioned, in cases in which they are not necessary and in which the institution of intestate proceedings is not requested.

“978. Heirs ab intestato, who are descendants of the deceased, may obtain a declaration of their rights by proving, with the proper documents or with the evidence obtainable, the death of the person whose estate is in question, their relationship to the same, and with the evidence of witnesses that said person died intestate, and that they, or the persons whom they designate, are his only heirs.

“The services of a solicitor or attorney are not necessary in order to present this claim.

“979. The deputy public prosecutor shall be cited to appear at said proceeding, to whom the record shall afterward be referred for the period of six days for his report thereon.

“Should he find the proof insufficient, a hearing shall be granted to the interested parties in order that they may cure the defect.

“When the deputy public prosecutor requests it, or the judge considers it necessary, the documents presented shall be compared with the originals.

“980. When the foregoing steps have been [185] taken, the judge shall, without further proceedings, make a ruling designating the heirs ab intestato should he deem it proper, or he may refuse to make such declaration, reserving the rights of the claimants to institute an ordinary action. This ruling may be appealed from both for review and a stay of proceedings. . . .

“1000. After the declaration of heirs ab intestato has been made by a final judgment or ruling, the proceedings shall be continued according to the procedure prescribed for testamentary proceedings.

“1001. The judge shall order that there be delivered to the heirs instituted all the property, books, and papers of the intestate, and that the administrator render an account of his administration to them, the judicial intervention ceasing.”

It is argued that this appointment of the heir ab intestato is subject to the limitation that the rights of the heir are not fixed until five years have elapsed from the date of the designation by the court proceedings, and in support of this contention certain articles of the Mortgage Law of Porto Rico are cited:

“2. In the registries mentioned in the preceding article shall be recorded:

“1. Instruments transferring or declaring ownership of realty, or of property rights thereto.

“2. Instruments by which rights of use, use and occupancy, emphyteusis, mortgage, annuity, servitudes, and any others by which estates are created, acknowledged, modified, or extinguished. . . .

“23. The instruments mentioned in articles 2 and 5, which are not duly recorded or entered in the registry, cannot prejudice third persons.

“The record of real property and property rights acquired through an inheritance or legacy shall not prejudice third persons until five years have elapsed since the date thereof, excepting in cases of testate or intestate inheritances, legacies, and additions thereto, when left to legal heirs.

“381. Property acquired through inheritance or legacy cannot *be cleared until five [186] years have elapsed from the date of their record in the registry.”

But we think this limitation of five years was intended to permit such heirs at law or parties beneficially interested in the estate to assert their rights as against the heir and the property in his hands, and to prevent its transfer except subject to the right of such persons to assert their claims within the permitted limitation. We are here dealing with the right to collect the assets, and the Code provides—§§ 1000, 1001—that after the designation of the heir or heirs ab intestato by a final judgment or ruling of the court the proceedings shall be continued according to the procedure prescribed for testamentary proceedings, and the judge may order that all the property, books, and papers of the intestate be turned over to the heirs, and that the administrator render his account of his administration of the estate, and thereupon judicial intervention shall cease. It seems to us manifest that the effect of these proceedings is to permit the heir ab intestato, after such final decision, to receive and collect the estate. It may be that others will establish an interest in the property for which the heir will have to respond, and it is specially provided that, for the purpose of transfer, property shall not be deemed clear until after five years have elapsed. But this does not require that the collection of debts shall be delayed for a like period, or that they shall be paid to the legally declared heir or heirs, upon pain of being required to respond to others who may, within the limitation permitted, establish a right to the property. Such construction would seem to be unreasonable, and we are cited to no authority that goes to that extent. It is opposed to the practice of the civil law, upon which the Code of Porto Rico is based, in which system the heir by intestacy corresponded with the common-law administrator, except that the Roman heir was entitled to administer both the real and personal estate. Story, Conf. L. § 508.

In the present case the first instalment [187] was due on May 15, *1893, and was paid into the court of first instance according to its order, and a receipt given therefor under the seal of the court, on June 22, 1893. This was done before any proceedings were instituted by the plaintiff in error. The payment was made under the order of the court, and we see no reason why the defendant in error should not be discharged thereby.

As to the second instalment, other considerations apply. Sarria testified that while this instalment fell due on May 15, 1894, he paid the same on April 1, 1894, to Maria Belen, which payment, he says, was solemnized by a notarial act duly acknowledged. As to this payment, the court in its charge took the view that the contentious suit of Adolfo Sixto was not commenced until April 4, 1894, of which fact Sarria was not notified until June 5, 1894, and therefore Maria Belen had the right to collect this payment. The suit of April 4, 1894, was the one begun by Adolfo Sixto after the decision against him in the court of first instance, holding that he could only contest the right of Maria Belen by a contentious proceeding, from which the plaintiff in error took an appeal, but abandoned the same, and on April 4, 1894, amended the suit to a contentious proceeding, making Maria Belen a party defendant, and seeking for an order to the registrar to make a cautionary order touching the property in controversy, and also an order to the defendant in error requiring him to retain at the disposition of the court whatever sums he owed to the estate of Manuel Sixto, deceased. On the day of the beginning of this contentious suit, Sarria paid to Maria Belen, anticipating the maturity of the instalment by more than a month, the amount which would have fallen due on the 15th day of May following.

We think that, in view of the testimony produced, the validity of this payment should have been submitted to the jury under proper instructions. The plaintiff testified that he was known to the defendant, and that the latter was well aware that he was a son of Manuel Sixto, deceased. The proceeding to declare his rights had been begun. It is evident *from a letter written to [188] him on November 11, 1892, by Maria Belen, that she recognized the plaintiff in error as her brother, for in this letter she announces the death of "our beloved father," subscribed herself as "sister," and requests Sixto to come over to Vieques at once, as his presence was necessary in order to collect money coming from the estate. Under these circumstances, the question of whether Sarria had notice of the plaintiff in error's rights and demands, and whether this was a valid payment, or was made in anticipation of the possible claims of Adolfo Sixto, with intent to deprive him of his rights, should have been left to the jury, instead of the instruction given, which practically required a finding for the defendant in error.

As to the third and fourth instalments, the defendant claims to have paid these to one Roig. It appears that these alleged payments to Roig were evidenced by certain notarial instruments, which became of record in the office of the registrar of deeds, and, as is recited in that record, Roig appears to have been the declared purchaser of the third and fourth instalments by assignment from Maria Belen, and the court of first instance, on April 25, 1896, at the instance of Sarria, permitted him to withdraw the third instalment, and declared Roig entitled to collect the third and fourth instalments. Upon this subject the court charged the jury:

"In this contentious suit by Adolfo Sixto against Belen, this defendant, Sarria, was ordered on June 2, 1894, to pay into court whatever money he might be owing. That order was served on Sarria on June 5, 1894, and afterwards that court decided that Sixto, the plaintiff in this suit, was not entitled to attach this money. He obtained an appeal from that judgment, but not from that portion of it that canceled the annotation made in the registry of deeds of the attachment of that fund. Subsequently, on November 17, 1894, an appeal was allowed in the upper court from that portion of it, but no notice was given as to Sarria, who was merely a garnishee in the suit, and who had received no notice not to pay over *the money until the lower court decided whether he had the right to pay it over. Between the time the court decided the attachment and the time the appeal was allowed in the upper court, Belen Sixto assigned to Roig the third and fourth instalments. I say to you, as a matter of law, that there was nothing to hinder her from doing that at that time; she had, in law, the right to do it."

The counsel for the plaintiff requested the court, upon the same subject, to charge:

"As it is shown by the uncontradicted evidence that the judge of the court of first instance of Humacao was entirely without authority or jurisdiction to issue his order on August 30, 1894, directing the registrar to make annotation on his books of said order, said order to the registrar was void, and the annotation made by the registrar was void, and the former annotation remained in force, which was notice to all the world, including this defendant, that the plaintiff had an interest in those payments such as might be declared by the court; and, the court having afterwards decided that the plaintiff here is entitled to a one-half interest in said estate, the plaintiff is now entitled to recover one half of the last two payments, with interest."

It appears that Adolfo Sixto was not a party to the suit between Roig and Sarria, in which it is declared that Roig was held entitled to recover the third instalment, and if Sarria had notice of the pendency of the suit to establish the rights of Adolfo Sixto, in such wise as to be bound by the result thereof, he could not prevent Sixto's recovering an interest in the property by wrongfully paying it over in the proceedings to which the plaintiff in error was not a party. The court below seems to have given its charge upon this subject upon the theory that the order of August 30, 1894, was not appealed from in such wise as to prevent Sarria from paying the third and fourth instalments to the assignee, Roig, and it is said that he was merely a garnishee in the suit, and had then received no notice not to pay over the money *until the lower court [190] had decided whether he had the right to pay it over. The payment of the third and fourth instalments was made to Roig by permitting Sarria, in the court of first instance, to withdraw the instalment which he had paid into court under the order of June 2, 1894. These instalments were paid to Roig on May 16, 1896, but in the attitude of the suit then pending to establish the rights of Adolfo Sixto, and Sarria's knowledge thereof, could the latter legally make these payments so as to conclude the rights of the plaintiff in error? It is true that the lower court on August 30, 1894, had held in favor of Maria Belen, vacating the notice sent to Sarria and the cautionary notices to the registrar, and the plaintiff in error had prayed an appeal "in both effects,"—i. e., for a review of the order and a stay of proceedings,—but was refused an appeal in the latter aspect, from which refusal he also appealed, and this was the attitude of the case at the time of the alleged purchase by Roig on September 11, 1894. On November 17, 1894, the audiencia considered the application of Sixto for the enlargement of the appeal, and held that such allowance was wrongfully denied in the lower court, and ordered that the appeal be "considered as having been taken for both effects." On the 8th of January, 1895, Sarria was notified of this order, and appeared and asked that a clear and detailed statement be given him "as to what he has to comply with." Thereupon a new explanatory order was directed to Sarria, informing him that the previous requisition meant the ratification of the one previously directed to him by the court, "in order that the sums which he owed from that time to Mr. Manuel Sixto should not be delivered by him except to the court in order to deposit the same in the royal treasury." This order was duly served on Sarria on February 5, 1895.

On November 29, 1895, the audiencia heard the appeal, and, reversing the order of August 30, declared the order of June 2, 1894, in full force, whereby the cautionary entry was ordered to be made by the registrar of property, and the notification *or- [191] dered to Sarria to hold the payments on the mortgage, or pay the same into the treasury, to abide the order of the court.

The registrar refused to comply, assigning as a reason that the encumbrance had been assigned to third parties, and that the mortgage law did not justify such an order. Subsequent proceedings resulted in the final decree of the military court deciding the merits of the controversy in favor of Sixto.

The decision of November 29, 1895, was also notified to Sarria, and on May 4, 1896, the entry of the court discloses:

"On May 4, 1896, appeared Mr. Laureano Sarria y Gonzalez and stated: That, having received notice that the instalment of the mortgage had been transferred to Mr. Antonio Roig, who has recorded said transfer in the registry of property, and supposing that he will proceed to collect the same judicially, as he did the previous instalment, he is unable to accept the notification, and he will appear before the audiencia in the premises."

Over the objection of the plaintiff in error, Sarria was permitted to testify that he paid the instalment to Roig by order of the audiencia. But the plaintiff in error was not a party to such proceeding, if it had been legally proved, and of course could not be concluded by it. On being notified that the order of June 2, 1894, was in full force, requiring him to hold the funds, while Sarria says he is unable to accept the notification, he declares "he will appear before the audiencia in the premises." Instead of so doing, unless the appearance in the Roig case can be so considered, he made application in the court of first instance for a release of the deposited instalment in order to pay it to Roig, and that court made the order, although it had been notified of the decision of the audiencia of November 29, 1895. This order could have no effect on the rights of the plaintiff in error, nor can it protect Sarria, who acted in the face of knowledge of the decision of the higher court, instead of appearing in that court at the suit of Sixto, and having the rights of Roig and the contesting heirs determined. We conclude that the plaintiff in error had the right to recover his share of the third [192] and fourth instalments, *notwithstanding the alleged transfers and payments to Roig, and the alleged decree of the audiencia in a proceeding to which Sixto was not a party.

For error in the court's charge as to the second, third, and fourth instalments, the judgment will be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

HARVEY FULLERTON, Plff. in Err.,
v.

STATE OF TEXAS.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 192-194.)

Error to state court—Federal question.

A certificate of the presiding judge of a state court that a Federal question which was first raised by a petition for rehearing was duly considered and decided cannot confer jurisdiction on the Federal Supreme Court of a writ of error to the state court, where, from the face of the record proper and from the opinions, the reasonable inference is that the court may have denied the application in the mere exercise of its discretion, or may have declined to pass upon the Federal question in terms because it was suggested too late.

[No. 112.]

Argued December 16, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

IN ERROR to the Court of Criminal Appeals of the State of Texas to review a judgment which affirmed a conviction in the County Court of Hunt County, in that state, of unlawfully dealing in futures. Dismissed for want of jurisdiction.

See same case below (Tex. Crim. App.), 75 S. W. 534.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. William W. Griffin argued the cause, and, with Mr. A. D. Englesman, filed a brief for plaintiff in error.

No brief was filed for defendant in error.

Mr. Chief Justice Fuller delivered the opinion of the court:

Fullerton was charged by information with unlawfully conducting, carrying on, and transacting the business of dealing in futures in cotton, grain, etc.; and unlawfully keeping a bucket shop, so-called, "where future contracts were then and *there [193] bought and sold with no intention of an actual bona fide delivery of the articles and things so bought and sold." He was found guilty as charged, and sentenced to a fine of $200 and imprisonment for thirty days. The case was carried to the court of criminal appeals of Texas, and judgment affirmed. The court, in its opinion, stated the contention to be that the evidence did not show a violation of the statute, namely, art. 377 of the Penal Code; and held, on a consideration of the facts, that Fullerton had clearly brought himself within and violated the statute. 75 S. W. 534. Fullerton thereupon moved for a rehearing, which motion was overruled. This application for rehearing assigned, among other grounds, that the statute, as construed by the court, was in violation of the Constitution of the United States, vesting in Congress the 42 L. ed. U. S. 998; and Re Buchanan, 39 L. ed. U. S. 884.

NOTE.—On the general subject of writs of error from United States Supreme Court to state courts—see notes to Hamblin v. Western Land Co. 37 L. ed. U. S. 267; Kipley v. Illinois, 196 U. S.

On what adjudications of state courts can be brought up for review in the Supreme Court power to regulate commerce among the several states. In overruling the motion, the court delivered a second opinion on the question of the sufficiency of the indictment, which was attacked, not in the motion for rehearing, but in an additional brief, presented after the submission of that motion. The court, however, held the indictment good, and, after stating that "the motion for rehearing was mainly devoted to an attack on the original opinion, wherein the evidence was held sufficient," adhered to that opinion. 75 S. W. 535. No reference to the Constitution of the United States was made by the court, nor does the record disclose any such reference except in the petition for rehearing, as before stated.

We have repeatedly ruled that it is too late to raise a Federal question by a petition for rehearing in the supreme court of a state after that court has pronounced its final decision, although, if the state court entertains the petition, and disposes of the Federal question, that will be sufficient. Mallett v. North Carolina, 181 U. S. 589, 45 L. ed. 1015, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730. In that case it was observed: "Had that court declined to pass upon the Federal questions, and dismissed the petition without considering them, we certainly would not undertake to revise their action."

[194] Some weeks after the denial of the motion for a rehearing, *this writ of error was allowed by the presiding judge of the court of criminal appeals, who certified that on that motion it was contended "that, under the evidence in the cause, plaintiff in error was engaged in interstate commerce and commerce between different states within the meaning of article 1, § 8, of the Constitution of the United States by writ of error to those courts—see note to Apex Transp. Co. v. Garbade, 62 L. R. A. 513.

On how and when questions must be raised and decided in a state court in order to make a case for a writ of error from the Supreme Court of the United States—see note to Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. McGrew, 63 L. R. A. 33.

On what the record must show respecting the presentation and decision of a Federal question, in order to confer jurisdiction on the Supreme Court of the United States on a writ of error to a state court—see note to Hooker v. Los Angeles, 63 L. R. A. 471.

As to what is the record for the purpose of showing the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States of a writ of error to a state court—see note to Home for Incurables v. New York, 63 L. R. A. 329.

On what questions the Federal Supreme Court will consider in reviewing the judgments of state courts—see note to Missouri ex rel. Hill v. Dockery, 63 L. R. A. 571.

On the practice and procedure governing the transfer of causes to the Federal Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal—see note to Wedding v. Meyler, 66 L. R. A. 833.

of the United States, and that the statutes of the state of Texas could not make such matters and transactions an offense, and that to do so would violate said constitutional provision." And further, "that said contention was duly considered by us and decided adversely to plaintiff in error."

But, on the face of the record proper, and from the opinions, the reasonable inference is that the court may have denied the application in the mere exercise of its discretion, or declined to pass on the alleged constitutional question, in terms, because it was suggested too late; and nothing is more firmly established than that such a certificate cannot, in itself, confer jurisdiction on this court. Henkel v. Cincinnati, 177 U. S. 170, 44 L. ed. 720, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573; Dibble v. Bellingham Bay Land Co. 163 U. S. 63, 41 L. ed. 72, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 939.

Writ of error dismissed.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA RAILWAY COMPANY, Plff. in Err., v.

A. O. MURPHEY and J. L. Hunt, Partners,
Doing Business as A. O. Murphey & Hunt.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 194-206.)

Commerce — state regulation — interstate freight shipments.

The imposition upon the initial or any connecting carrier by Ga. Code 1895, §§ 2317, 2318, as a condition of availing itself of a valid contract of exemption from liability beyond its own line, of the duty of tracing the freight, and informing the shipper, in writing, when, where, and how, and by which carrier, the freight was lost, damaged, or destroyed, and of giving the names of the parties and their official position, if any, by whom the truth of the facts set out in the information can be established, is, when applied to an interstate shipment, a violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution.

[No. 111.]

Argued December 16, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

NOTE.—On state regulation of interstate or foreign commerce—see notes to Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Com. 13 L. R. A. 107; McCanna & F. Co. v. Citizens' Trust & Surety Co. 24 C. C. A. 13; Ratterman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 L. ed. U. S. 229; Harmon v. Chicago, 37 L. ed. U. S. 216; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 38 L. ed. U. S. 1041; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 39 L. ed. U. S. 311.

As to police power as affecting commerce—see notes to People v. Budd, 5 L. R. A. 559; State ex rel. Corwin v. Indiana & O. Oil, Gas, & Min. Co. 6 L. R. A. 579.

IN ERROR to the Supreme Court of the State of Georgia to review a judgment which affirmed a judgment of the Superior Court of Pike County, in that State, in favor of plaintiffs in an action to recover from an initial carrier for the damages to an interstate freight shipment. Reversed and remanded for further proceedings.

See same case below, 116 Ga. 863, 60 L. R. A. 817, 43 S. E. 265

Statement by Mr. Justice Peckham:

The plaintiff in error brings this case here to review the judgment of the supreme court of Georgia, affirming a judgment of the trial court, in favor of the defendants in error, for the damages sustained by them on the shipment of certain grapes, as hereinafter more particularly stated. First reported, 113 Ga. 514, 53 L. R. A. 720, 38 S. E. 970, and again, on appeal from judgment on second trial, 116 Ga. 863, 60 L. R. A. 817, 43 S. E. 265.

The trial court gave judgment for the shippers of the grapes, who were plaintiffs below, for the amount of the difference between the market price of the grapes as shipped in good order and the amount they actually received for the same in their damaged condition, being the sum of $434.55. The action was commenced in the Pike county court, in the state of Georgia, and the petition averred that on July 31, 1897, the petitioner shipped a carload of grapes from Barnesville, Georgia, consigned to Rocco Brothers, Omaha, Nebraska, by way of the Central of Georgia Railway Company. The freight was to be conveyed by more than two common carriers, the initial carrier being the Central of Georgia Railway Company, and the freight was shipped under a contract of shipment in which it was provided that the responsibility of each carrier should cease upon delivery to the next "in good order." The grapes were greatly damaged on the route between Barnesville and Omaha, and the damage resulted from the negligence of the common carriers on the route. The petitioners applied to the plaintiff in error, the initial carrier on the route, and served it with an application in writing August 20, 1897, in which they requested that the railway company should trace the freight, and inform the petitioners, in writing, when, how, and by which carrier the freight was damaged, and also that the company should furnish the petitioners the names of the parties and their official position, if any, by whom the truth of the facts set forth in [196] the *information could be established. The railroad company failed to trace the freight and give the information in writing within the thirty days required by law, wherefore the petitioners averred that the railroad company became indebted to the petitioners to the amount of the damage to the grapes, as stated.

The plaintiff in error demurred to the petition, the demurrer was overruled, and it then put in an answer denying many of the allegations of the petition. Upon the trial it appeared that the grapes were shipped from Barnesville, Georgia, to Omaha, Nebraska, and they were "routed" by the shippers over the Central of Georgia, then the Western & Atlantic, then the Nashville, Chattanooga, & St. Louis, then the Louisville & Nashville, and then the Wabash Railroads. The initial carrier, the plaintiff in error, issued to the shippers, A. O. Murphey and Hunt, a bill of lading for the carload of grapes, which showed the routing as above stated, and the bill was signed by Murphey and Hunt, as the contract between the plaintiff in error and themselves. It contained a promise "to carry (the grapes) to said destination, if on its road, or to deliver to another carrier on the route to said destination, subject, in either instance, to the conditions named below, which are agreed to in consideration of the rate named." Omaha, Nebraska, is not on the road of the plaintiff in error. Paragraph 5 of the bill of lading, under which the shipment of grapes was made, reads as follows:

"5. That the responsibility, either as common carrier or warehouseman, of each carrier over whose line the property shipped hereunder shall be transported, shall cease as soon as delivery is made to the next carrier or to the consignee; and the liability of the said lines contracted with is several, and not joint; neither of the said carriers shall be responsible or liable for any act, omission, or negligence of the other carriers over whose lines said property is or is to be transported."

The grapes were carried under the contract contained in the bill of lading, and arrived at Omaha, in the state of Nebraska, in a damaged condition.

The law under which the action was brought is found in * §§ 2317 and 2318 of the Code of Georgia of 1895. Those sections are set forth in full in the margin.† [195]

On the 20th day of August, 1897, the †Sec. 2317. When any freight that has been shipped, to be conveyed by two or more common carriers to its destination, where, under the contract of shipment or by law, the responsibility of each or either shall cease upon the delivery to the next "in good order," has been lost, damaged, or destroyed, it shall be the duty of the initial or any connecting carrier, upon application by the shipper, consignee, or their assigns, within thirty days after application, to trace said freight, and inform said applicant, in writing, when, where, and how, and by which carrier said freight was lost, damaged, or de-shippers availed themselves of these provisions of the statute, and duly demanded of the plaintiff in error that it should trace the grapes, and inform the shippers, in writing, when, how, and by which carrier the grapes were damaged, and the names of the parties and their official position, if any, by whom the truth of the facts set out in the information could be established. They also demanded that the information should be furnished within thirty days from the date of the application. The plaintiff in error, although it endeavored so to do, failed to furnish the information within the time mentioned in the statute. It offered to prove on the trial that the car in which the grapes were originally shipped at Barnesville, on the road of the plaintiff in error, reached Atlanta, Georgia, the end of the line of the plaintiff in error, in due time, and that the grapes were then in good order, and the car was promptly delivered to the next connecting line, that is, the Western & Atlantic Railroad, and by that road it was delivered to the Nashville, Chattanooga, & St. Louis Railroad Company, at Nashville, Tennessee, with the grapes in like good order and condition. The evidence was rejected, the court holding that the [198] plaintiff in error had failed to comply with the conditions of the statute, and that it was therefore liable for the amount of the damage sustained by the petitioners on whatsoever road the damage actually occurred.

Mr. John I. Hall argued the cause, and, with Messrs. Henry C. Cunningham, Lloyd Cleveland, and Robert L. Berner, filed a brief for plaintiff in error:

Such legislation as that in question imposes a burden upon the carrier, and interferes with its full freedom to contract with the shipper with respect to confining its liability to its own line, and when applied to interstate shipments, as in this case, it is an interference with the right to contract for carrying interstate traffic, and is void.

Vance v. W. A. Vandercook Co. 170 U. S. 438, 455, 42 L. ed. 1100, 1106, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 674; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 282, 23 L. ed. 350; Hall v. De Cuir, 95 U. S. 485, 24 L. ed. 547; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 558, 30 L. ed. 244, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 31, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 4; Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465, 472, 24 L. ed. 527, 530; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Pendleton, 122 U. S. 347, 30 L.

ed. 1187, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 306, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1126; Fargo v. Michigan (Fargo v. Stevens) 121 U. S. 230, 243, 244, 30 L. ed. 888, 893, 894, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 51, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

The legislation in this case is an unreasonable interference with the rights of carriers engaged in interstate commerce, and is, for that reason, void.

Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Illinois, 177 U. S. 514, 44 L. ed. 868, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722.

Mr. William Wallace Lambdin argued the cause, and, with Mr. Hoke Smith, filed a brief for defendants in error:

Doubts are always resolved in favor of the constitutionality of the statute. The violation must be clear and palpable in order that the statute be held unconstitutional.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. pp. 216, 220; Odgen v. Saunders, 12 Wheat. 213, 270, 6 L. ed. 606, 625; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 125, 24 L. ed. 77, 84; Cooper v. Telfair, 4 Dall. 14, 19, 1 L. ed. 721, 723; Plumley v. Massachusetts, 155 U. S. 461, 479, 39 L. ed. 223, 229, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 590, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 154; Carey v. Giles, 9 Ga. 253.

The statute in question merely sets up a rule of evidence, and establishes a legal presumption to be deduced from the failure of the carrier to trace the freight and give the required information. This the state legislature may do without violating the Federal Constitution.

Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 116 Ga. 863, 60 L. R. A. 817, 43 S. E. 265; Jones v. Brim, 165 U. S. 180, 41 L. ed. 677, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 282; Southern R. Co. v. Ragsdale, 119 Ga. 773, 47 S. E. 179.

The contract under which the goods were shipped in this case was made in Georgia, and is governed by the laws of that state.

Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

The defendant railroad company, being affected with a public interest, and being a Georgia corporation, and being clothed with special privileges, is therefore subject to legislative control in the interest of the public.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Smith, 128 U. S. 174, 32 L. ed. 377, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 47; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 79, 90, 35 L. ed. 97, 101, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490; Smyth v.

stroyed, and the names of the parties and their official position, if any, by whom the truth of the facts set out in said information can be established.

Sec. 2318. If, the carrier to which application is made shall fail to trace said freight and give said information, in writing, within the time prescribed, then said carrier shall be liable for the value of the freight lost, damaged, or destroyed, in the same manner and to the same amount as if said loss, damage, or destruction occurred on its line.

Ames, 169 U. S. 466, 544, 42 L. ed. 819, 848, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418.

The statute under consideration does not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution, nor does it attempt to regulate interstate commerce. States may, in the exercise of their reserved powers, enact laws which, although they incidentally relate to and affect commerce between the states, yet are not to be considered as regulations of that commerce, within the meaning of the Constitution of the United States.

Sherlock v. Alling, 93 U. S. 99, 103, 23 L. ed. 819, 820; Peik v. Chicago, & N. W. R. Co. 94 U. S. 164, 24 L. ed. 97; Bagg v. Wilmington, C. & A. R. Co. 109 N. C. 279, 14 L. R. A. 596, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 803, 26 Am. St. Rep. 569, 14 S. E. 79; Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 16, 32 L. ed. 346, 348, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6; Fry v. State, 63 Ind. 552, 30 Am. Rep. 238; Williams v. Fears, 179 U. S. 270, 45 L. ed. 186, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 128; Smith v. Alabama, 124 U. S. 465, 31 L. ed. 508, 1 Inters. Com. Rep. 804, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 564; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Alabama, 128 U. S. 96, 100, 32 L. ed. 352, 354, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 238, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 28; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 626, 42 L. ed. 878, 882, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. New York, 165 U. S. 628, 631, 632, 41 L. ed. 853, 854, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 418; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 137, 42 L. ed. 688, 692, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335; St. Joseph & G. I. R. Co. v. Palmer, 38 Neb. 463, 22 L. R. A. 335, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 494, 56 N. W. 957; Hart v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 69 Iowa. 485, 29 N. W. 597; McCann v. Eddy, 133 Mo. 59, 35 L. R. A. 110, 33 S. W. 71; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755.

The statute in question comports with sound public policy, and with the responsibility placed upon carriers by the common law and by the statutes and decisions of the various states and of the United States. The shipper and the carrier are on an unequal footing, and the carrier is therefore held to rigid responsibility.

Central R. Co. v. Hasselkus, 91 Ga. 382, 44 Am. St. Rep. 37, 17 S. E. 838; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hughes, 191 U. S. 477, 489, 48 L. ed. 268, 272, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 132; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 498, 505, 507, 44 L. ed. 560, 564, 565, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627; Bank of Kentucky v. Adams Exp. Co. 93 U. S. 174, 23 L. ed. 874; Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655, 24 L. ed. 535; Missouri, 196 U. S.

K. & T. R. Co. v. McCann, 174 U. S. 580, 43 L. ed. 1093, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 755; Brockway v. American Exp. Co. 168 Mass. 257, 47 N. E. 87; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Tabor, 98 Ky. 503, 34 L. R. A. 685, 32 S. W. 168, 36 S. W. 18; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Central R. Co. v. Lippman, 110 Ga. 665, 50 L. R. A. 673, 36 S. E. 202.

In construing a statute of Virginia somewhat similar to the one in question, this court said that the concluding sentence of the statute, imposing upon the carrier a duty, where the loss has not happened on the carrier's own line, to inform the shipper of this fact, is but a regulation manifestly within the power of the state to adopt.

Richmond & A. R. Co. v. R. A. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 316, 42 L. ed. 759, 761, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335.

The United States Supreme Court will generally adopt the construction placed upon a statute of a state by the court of last resort of such state.

Sioux City, O. N. & W. R. Co. v. Manhattan Trust Co. 172 U. S. 642, 43 L. ed. 1180, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 879; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 39 L. ed. 311, 5 Inters. Com. Rep. 1, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 268, 360; Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed. 793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600; Railroad Tax Cases (Taylor v. Secor) 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663.

The statute under consideration facilitates the safe transportation of goods, and is therefore constitutional.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 635, 42 L. ed. 878, 885, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Ohio, 173 U. S. 285, 297, 299, 43 L. ed. 702, 706, 707, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 465; Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53; Cooley, Const. Lim. 6th ed. p. 715.

Mr. Justice Peckham, after making the foregoing statement of facts, delivered the opinion of the court:

The supreme court of Georgia has held in this case that the statute applies to shipments of freight destined to points outside, as well as to those inside, the state, and we must accept that construction of the state statute. The question for us to decide is whether the statute, when applied to an interstate shipment of freight, is an interference with, or a regulation of, interstate commerce, and therefore void.

We think the imposition upon the initial or any connecting carrier, of the duty of tracing the freight, and informing the shipper, in writing, when, where, how, and by which carrier the freight was lost, damaged, or destroyed, and of giving the names of the parties and their official position, if any, by whom the truth of the facts set out in the information can be established, is, when applied to interstate commerce, a violation of the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. The supreme court of Georgia has held that a carrier has, in that state, the right to make a contract with the shipper to limit its liability, as a carrier, to damage or loss occurring on its own line. Central R. & Bkg. Co. v. Avant, 80 Ga. 195, 5 S. E. 78; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Shomo, 90 Ga. 500, 16 S. E. 220.

[203] Whether the state would have the right to prohibit such a *contract with regard to interstate commerce need not therefore be considered. It has not done so, but, on the contrary, its highest court has recognized the validity of such a contract. Without the provisions of the statute in question, the plaintiff in error would not be liable to the shippers in this case, if, without negligence, they delivered the consignment in good condition to the succeeding carrier. This they offered to prove was the case. But if this statute be valid, this limitation of liability can only be availed of by the railroad company by complying with its provisions. In other words, before it can avail itself of the exemption from liability beyond its own line, provided for by its valid contract, the initial or any connecting carrier must comply with the terms of the statute, and must, within thirty days after notification, obtain and give to the shipper the information provided for therein. This is certainly a direct burden upon interstate commerce, for it affects most vitally the law in relation to that commerce, and prevents the exemption provided by a legal contract between the parties from taking effect except upon terms which we hold to be a regulation of interstate commerce. It is said that the reason for the passage of such an act lies in the fact that, as a general rule, shippers under such a contract as the one in question are very much inconvenienced in obtaining evidence of the loss or damage, where it occurred on another road than that of the initial carrier. It is contended that, under such contracts, there being great difficulty in identifying the particular carrier upon whose road the loss occurred, it is reasonable to make the initial or other connecting carrier liable therefor, unless such carrier furnish the information provided for in the statute.

We can readily see that a provision, such as is contained in the statute in question, would be a very convenient one to shippers of freight through different states. And a provision making the initial or any connecting carrier liable in any event for any loss or damage sustained by the shipper, on account of the negligence of any one of the connecting lines, would also *be convenient [204] for the shippers; but it would hardly be maintained, when applied to the interstate shipment of freight, that a state statute to that effect would not violate the commerce clause of the Federal Constitution. The provision of this statute, while not quite so onerous, is yet a very plain burden upon interstate commerce. It is also said that it is so much easier for the initial or other connecting carrier to obtain the information provided for in the statute than it is for the shipper, that a statute requiring such information to be obtained, under the penalty of such carrier being liable for the damage sustained, ought to be upheld for that very reason.

Assuming the fact that the carrier might more readily obtain the information than the shipper, we do not think it is material upon the question under consideration. We are not, however, at all clear in regard to the fact. The loss or damage might occur on the line of a connecting carrier, outside the state where the shipment was made (as was the case here), and we do not perceive that the initial carrier has any means of obtaining the information desired, not open to the shipper. The railroad company receiving the freight from the shipper has no means of compelling the servants of any connecting carrier to answer any question in regard to the shipment, or to acknowledge its receipt by such carrier, or to state its condition when received. And when it is known by the servants of the connecting company that the object of such questions is to place in the hands of the shipper information upon which its liability for the loss or damage to the freight is to be based, it would seem plain that the information would not be very readily given, and the initial or other carrier could not compel it. The effect of such a statute is direct and immediate upon interstate commerce. It directly affects the liability of the carrier of freight destined to points outside the state, with regard to the transportation of articles of commerce; it prevents a valid contract of exemption from taking effect except upon a very onerous condition, and it is not of that class of state legislation which has been held to be rather an aid to *than a burden [205] upon such commerce. The statute in question prevents the carrier from availing itself of a valid contract unless such carrier comply with the provisions of the statute by obtaining information which it has no means of compelling another carrier to give, and yet, if the information is not obtained, the carrier is to be held liable for the negligence of another carrier over whose conduct it has no control. This is not a reasonable regulation in aid of interstate commerce, but a direct and immediate burden upon it.

The case of Richmond & A. R. Co. v. Patterson Tobacco Co. 169 U. S. 311, 42 L. ed. 759, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 335, is not an authority against these views, but, on the contrary, it supports and exemplifies them. The section of the Virginia Code (1295 of 1887) was held not to be a regulation of interstate commerce, because it simply established a rule of evidence ordaining the character of proof by which a carrier might show that, although it received goods for transportation beyond its own line, nevertheless, by agreement, its liability was limited to its own line. The statute left the carrier free to make any limitation as to its liability on an interstate shipment beyond its own line as it might deem proper, provided, only, the evidence of the contract was in writing and signed by the shipper. The provision of the Virginia statute that, although the contract in writing provided for therein was made in fact, yet "if such thing be lost or injured, such common carrier shall himself be liable therefor, unless, within a reasonable time after demand made, he shall give satisfactory proof to the consignor that the loss or injury did not occur while the thing was in his charge," is a materially different provision from the one under consideration. A provision in a statute may be deemed a reasonable one, and not a regulation of interstate commerce, where the statute simply imposes a duty upon the carrier, when the loss has not happened on the carrier's own line, to inform the shipper of that fact within a reasonable time, and this court has said in the above case that such a provision is manifestly within the power of the state to adopt. This is very different [206] from the duty imposed upon the carrier by the statute in question here, which is much more onerous, and imposes a liability unless the detailed information provided for in the statute is obtained and given to the shipper.

The case of Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Solan, 169 U. S. 133, 42 L. ed. 688, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 289, holds the same general principle as that involved in the case just cited. To the same effect are the cases referred to in the opinion of Mr. Justice Gray in the Solan Case. It is idle to attempt to comment upon the various cases decided by this court relating to this clause of the Federal Constitution. We are familiar with them, and we are certain that our decision in this case does not run counter to the principles decided in any of those cases. The statute here considered we think plainly imposes a burden upon the carrier of interstate commerce, and is not an aid to it, but, in its direct and immediate effect, it is quite the contrary.

The power to regulate the relative rights and duties of all persons and corporations within the limits of the state cannot extend so far as to thereby regulate interstate commerce. The police power of the state does not give it the right to violate any provision of the Federal Constitution. Being of the opinion that the statute in question, when applied to an interstate shipment, is a regulation of interstate commerce, we must hold the statute, so far as it affects such shipments, to be void on that account. The judgment of the Supreme Court of Georgia is reversed and the case remanded for such further proceedings as may be consistent with this opinion.

Reversed.

*UNITED STATES, Appt.,

[207]

v.

UNITED VERDE COPPER COMPANY.

(See S. C. Reporter's ed. 207-217.)

Public lands—use of timber for domestic purposes—effect of regulations of Secretary of Interior.

The use of timber taken from unsurveyed mineral land in the territory of Arizona in roasting ore at a mine in that territory, whether roasting ore be considered a part of mining or of smelting, is authorized by the permission given by the act of June 3, 1878 (20 Stat. at L. 88, chap. 150, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1528), § 1, to fell and remove such timber for "building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes," notwithstanding a regulation of the Secretary of the Interior, promulgated under the supposed authority of that statute, that no timber can be used for smelting purposes, since the words of the statute, that the felling and use of the timber shall be "subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe for the protection of the timber and of the undergrowth growing upon such lands, and for other purposes," cannot confer upon him the power to take from the industries designated the permission given by Congress.

[No. 68.]

Argued December 2, 1904. Decided January 9, 1905.

APPEAL from the Supreme Court of the Territory of Arizona to review a judgment which affirmed the judgment of the District Court of the Fourth Judicial District of that Territory, sustaining a de-murrer to a complaint in an action to recover the value of timber cut and removed from the public lands, and entering judgment for defendant upon plaintiff's refusal to amend. Affirmed.

See same case below, 71 Pac. 954.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Marsden C. Burch argued the cause and filed a brief for appellant:

The regulation promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior, that no timber cut from unsurveyed mineral lands can be used for smelting purposes, is within the authority granted to him by the act of June 3, 1878.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Lewis, 162 U. S. 376, 40 L. ed. 1006, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 831; United States v. Williams, 6 Mont. 379, 12 Pac. 851. See Williams v. United States, 138 U. S. 514, 524, 34 L. ed. 1026, 1031, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 457; Marshall Field & Co. v. Clark, 143 U. S. 649, 680, 692, 36 L. ed. 294, 306, 309, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 495; Caha v. United States, 152 U. S. 211, 218, 220, 38 L. ed. 415, 417, 418, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 513; Re Kollock, 165 U. S. 526, 41 L. ed. 813, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; United States v. Ormsbee, 74 Fed. 207; United States v. Moline, 82 Fed. 592; Wilkins v. United States, 37 C. C. A. 588, 96 Fed. 837; Dastervignes v. United States, 58 C. C. A. 346, 122 Fed. 30; Cincinnati, W. & Z. R. Co. v. Clinton County, 1 Ohio St. 77; Locke's Appeal, 72 Pa. 491, 13 Am. Rep. 716; State ex rel. Port Royal Min. Co. v. Hagood (Port Royal Min. Co. v. Hagood), 30 S. C. 519, 3 L. R. A. 841, 9 S. E. 686.

The construction of an act of Congress by those charged with its execution should not be disregarded by the judiciary, unless the construction be clearly wrong.

United States v. Johnston, 124 U. S. 236, 31 L. ed. 389, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 446; Heath v. Wallace, 138 U. S. 573, 34 L. ed. 1063, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 380; Hawley v. Diller, 178 U. S. 476, 44 L. ed. 1157, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 986.

If there be a doubt as to the meaning of Congress, the construction given by the executive department should control.

Pennoyer v. McConaughy, 140 U. S. 1, 35 L. ed. 363, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 699; United States v. Hill, 120 U. S. 169, 30 L. ed. 627, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 510; United States v. Philbrick, 120 U. S. 52, 30 L. ed. 559, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 413.

Roasting ore is not a mining purpose.

Standard Dict. Smelt; Century Dict. Smelt.

"Mining," in its general sense, comprehends and includes the digging and searching for precious and economic metals and minerals.

1 Snyder, Mines, § 134.

Statutes which grant property privileges are to be construed most strictly in favor of the government, and a use not unequivocally authorized by the language of the act must be excluded.

Sutherland, Stat. Constr. § 378; Slidell v. Grandjean, 111 U. S. 412, 437, 28 L. ed. 321, 329, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 475; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 139 U. S. 24, 49, 35 L. ed. 55, 64, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 478; United States v. Dastervignes, 118 Fed. 199; Endlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 354.

Mr. Alfred B. Cruikshank argued the cause and filed a brief for appellee:

The phrase "domestic purposes," in the act, means the same as "local purposes."

United States v. Richmond Min. Co. 40 Fed. 415; United States v. Copper Queen Consol. Min. Co. 185 U. S. 495, 46 L. ed. 1008, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 761.

The roasting of ore is a mining purpose within the meaning of the act.

Encyclopedia Britannica, Mining.

The difference between roasting and smelting is not merely technical, but substantial. In smelting, a chemical change in the ore itself is produced; in roasting, there is no such process or result. Smelting includes fusion; roasting does not.

Webster, Smelt; roast; Worcester Dict. Smelt, Roast.

Mr. Justice McKenna delivered the opinion of the court:

Action brought by the United States against the appellee, which we shall call the copper company, for the sum of $38,976.75, the value of timber cut and removed from certain unsurveyed mineral land in the territory of Arizona.

The timber or wood was alleged to have been cut by one Rafael Lopez, a resident and citizen of Arizona, and amounted to 6,496½ cords, of the value of $6 per cord, or the sum of $38,976.75.

It is alleged that the timber belonged to the United States, and "was used and consumed by the said defendant for the purpose of roasting ore at the United Verde Copper mines, said mines being the property of defendant herein, at Jerome, Yavapai county, Arizona territory, in violation of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878 [20 Stat. at L. 88, chap. 150, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 1528], and of the rules and regulations of the Secretary of the Interior, promulgated under the authority of said act of Congress."

The copper company demurred to the complaint. The demurrer was sustained. The United States refused to amend, and judgment was entered for the copper company. It was affirmed by the supreme court of the territory.

Section 1 of the act of June 3, 1878, upon which the action is based, is as follows:

[211] "That all citizens of the United States, and other persons, bona fide residents of the state of Colorado or Nevada, or either of the territories of New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Wyoming, Dakota, Idaho, or Montana, and all other mineral districts of the United States, shall be, and are hereby, authorized and *permitted to fell and remove, for building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes, any timber or other trees growing or being on the public lands, said lands being mineral, and not subject to entry under existing laws of the United States except for mineral entry, in either of said states, territories, or districts of which such citizens or persons may be at the time bona fide residents, subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe for the protection of the timber and of the undergrowth growing upon such lands, and for other purposes: Provided, The provisions of this act shall not extend to railroad corporations."

Section 2 makes it the duty of registers and receivers to ascertain whether any timber is being cut in violation of the provisions of the act, and, if so, to notify the Commissioner of the General Land Office thereof.

Section 3 makes violations of the act or of the rules and regulations made by the Secretary of the Interior misdemeanors, punishable by fine, not exceeding $500, "to which may be added imprisonment for any term not exceeding six months."

Among the regulations promulgated by the Secretary of the Interior were the following:

"4. The uses for which the timber may be felled or removed are limited by the wording of the act to 'building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes.'

"5. No timber is permitted to be felled or removed for purposes of sale or traffic, or to manufacture the same into lumber, or for any other use whatsoever, except as defined in § 4 of these rules and regulations.

"7. No timber is permitted to be used for smelting purposes, smelting being a separate and distinct industry from that of mining.

"10. These rules and regulations shall take effect February 15, 1900, and all existing rules and regulations heretofore *prescribed under said act by this Department are hereby rescinded."
[212] 196 U. S.

The contention of the United States is that roasting ore is smelting, and that smelting is not a purpose permitted by the act of Congress, and is besides forbidden by the regulations of the Secretary of the Interior.

Roasting ore is defined by the supreme court of the territory in its opinion as follows:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that in this territory the roasting of ore at the mines from which it is taken is ordinarily accomplished by piling the ore and the wood mingled with it in piles in the open air, and by igniting the wood the fire is communicated to the sulphurous or other combustible ingredients in the ore, and thus, by the heat generated by its own combustion and that of the wood mingled with it, the volatile substances are driven off in vapor, smoke, and gases from the ore thus treated. By this treatment the ores that are extremely sulphid or highly charged with other volatile substances are relieved from a large portion thereof, and are the more readily treated by smelting or other processes of reduction, and besides require less fluxing material for such reduction, and are also lighter in weight, and for that reason, when shipped to other points for smelting or further treatment of any kind, cost less for freight."

The court distinguished this process from smelting, and decided that it is, in practice, a part of mining. It is a step, the court reasoned, in the extraction of the ore from the mine, and the separation of the ore from the rock enclosing it. Roasting ore, therefore, is preparation for smelting, but not smelting, which, according to all of the definitions, is something more than melting,—it is obtaining the metal by heat and such reagents as develop it. Roasting is done crudely in the open air by burning wood and ore mingled in a pile. Smelting is the function of an organized plant. But roasting ore, regarding the production of metal only, is a preliminary step to smelting, and counsel for the government makes much of *that circumstance. If this were [213] all that is necessary to consider, the deduction would be easy that wood used for roasting ores is used for smelting purposes.

But the dependence of industries, one upon another, does not make them the same, and the division of labor between them is not as marked in new as in old communities, having a more varied industrial development. Regarding, therefore, the conditions which existed in the mining states and territories, roasting ore was more naturally a part of mining than of smelting. The assignment, however, is unimportant in the view we take of the statute, and whether roasting ore be considered a part of mining or of smelting, the use of timber for it has the sanction of the statute.

The statute provides "that all citizens of the United States . . . shall be and are hereby authorized and permitted to fell and remove for building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes, any timber." The special enumeration of industries is "building, agricultural, and mining." But the permission of the statute is not confined to these. It extends to "other domestic purposes." The limitation of the other purposes is in the word "domestic."

Counsel for the government recognizes this, and substitutes for "domestic" the word "household," and contends that the word "other" should be treated as an intruder, and eliminated from the statute, and making the latter read that timber may be felled for "building, agricultural, mining, or domestic purposes." But we are not permitted to take such liberty with the statute if "domestic" has a meaning consistent with the intentional use of the word "other." It has such meaning. It may relate, it is true, to the household. But, keeping its idea of locality, it may relate to a broader entity than the household. We may properly and accurately speak of domestic manufactures, meaning not those of the household, but those of a county, state, or nation, according to the object in contemplation. So in the statute the word "domestic" applies to the locality to which the statute is [214]directed, and *gives permission to the industries there practised to use the public timber. This definition of "domestic" gives the word an apt and sensible meaning, and we must regard the association of the word "other" with it as designed, not as accidental.

The statute was passed on in United States v. Richmond Min. Co. 40 Fed. 415, in 1889. In that case the United States sued in replevin for 10,000 bushels of charcoal made from wood which was cut on mineral land in the state of Nevada. The Richmond Mining Company was engaged in the business of mining, purchasing, and reduction of ores, and bought the charcoal "to be used in the reduction of ores and refining the product thereof." The court held that such use was a domestic purpose within the meaning of the statute. The court said that if reducing ores by melting or furnace process, and refining the bullion, is not properly a part of mining, "it is certainly incident to it, and closely connected with it." The court, however, did not dwell on that point, but put its judgment in favor of the mining company upon the ground that reducing ores was "a domestic industry of the highest importance to the miner and to the public," and was within "the benefits conferred by the statute." It will be observed that the industry which was given the benefits of the statute was more than smelting in the strictest sense, and the decision was acquiesced in for eleven years by the Interior Department. It was a rule of rights and conduct for that time, and its overturn might involve civil liability for acts which were done under the sanction of the statute as judicially construed. We should hesitate, therefore, to reverse that construction, even if it were more doubtful than it is.

But the government relies on the rules and regulations of the Secretary of the Interior, promulgated under, as it is contended, the authority of the statute since United States v. Richmond Min. Co. was decided. No. 7 of those regulations provides that "no timber is permitted to be used for smelting purposes, smelting being a separate and distinct industry from that of mining." By this the Secretary of the Interior may *have intended to supersede the [215] ruling in United States v. Richmond Min. Co., but to which industry the roasting of ore shall be assigned the Secretary does not say, and the considerations which we have expressed apply as well to the regulation as to the statute. But there is a more absolutely fatal objection to the regulation. The Secretary of the Interior attempts by it to give an authoritative and final construction of the statute. This, we think, is beyond his power. Smelting may be a separate industry from mining, but that does not deprive it of the license given by the statute. As we have already said, the general clause, "other domestic purposes," is as much a grant of permission to the industries designated by it to use timber as though they had been especially enumerated, and their rights are as inviolable as the rights of the industries which are enumerated. The industries meant by the general clause may receive indeed limitation from those enumerated; in other words, be limited to the conditions existing in the mining states and territories when the statute was enacted; but there can be no doubt that smelting has such relation. If rule 7 is valid, the Secretary of the Interior has power to abridge or enlarge the statute at will. If he can define one term, he can another. If he can abridge, he can enlarge. Such power is not regulation: it is legislation. The power of legislation was certainly not intended to be conferred upon the Secretary. Congress has selected the industries to which its license is given, and has intrusted to the Secretary the power to regulate the exercise of the license, not to take it away. There is, undoubtedly, ambiguity in the words expressing that power, but the ambiguity should not be resolved to take from the industries designated by Congress the license given to them, or invest the Secretary of the Interior with the power of legislation. The words of the statute are that the felling and use of timber by the industries designated shall be "subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe for the protection of the timber and of the undergrowth growing upon such [216] lands, and for other purposes." *The ambiguity arises from the words which we have italicized. They express a purpose different from the protection of the timber and undergrowth, but they cannot, we repeat, be extended to grant a power to take from the industries designated, whether by the general clause or the specific enumeration, the permission given by Congress.

Judgment affirmed.

Mr. Justice Brown, dissenting:

I am unable to concur in the construction put by the court upon the statute of June 3, 1878. Bearing in mind that the policy of the government has been to preserve its rapidly diminishing areas of forest lands for the benefit of the whole people, any statute which permits timber to be cut by individuals should be narrowly construed.

In my view, the license given to citizens of the United States and residents of the states and territories named, "to fell and remove, for building, agricultural, mining, or other domestic purposes," timber and trees growing upon the public lands, should be confined to timber intended to be used for structural or household purposes, and not be extended so far as to authorize the consumption of timber in manufacturing or other business operations. The word "building" explains itself. "Agriculture" would include timber used for houses, barns, tools, furniture, and fences. The word "mining" was doubtless intended to include not only the buildings necessary for mining operations, but such timber as is used in shoring up the walls of the mine, and perhaps, also, in operating the hoisting engines; but not that used for consumption in the treatment of ores.

It is true the words "other domestic purposes" are susceptible of two constructions. The word "domestic," when used in connection with the words "commerce, manufactures, or industries," is significant of locality, and is contradistinguished from "foreign;" but when used in connection with the

